THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TO THE DAMASK ROSE.

Loveliest flow'r that scents the morning,
Pride of summer, beauteous rose;
Purest gem the plumes adorning,
Which on Nature's bosom grows.

Thine the drapery most alluring,
Which in splendid gardens shine;
Thine the fragrance most enduring,
Nor can death thy sweets confine.

Where young gales are gently breathing,
There thou shed'st thy rich perfume;
Or thou weep'st the dews of ev'ning,
O'er some hapless maiden's tomb.

Sacred thou to lovers' passion,
When in mystic rites they meet;
Or to health's unrival'd station,
Mantling on the blooming cheek.

But tho' thus thy praise we render,
Tho' such charms thy fame adorn;
Yet beneath thy brilliant splendor,
Lurks the poison'd, piercing thorn.

Emblem clear of ev'ry pleasure,
And confirms the truths I sing—
They who sweets luxurious treasure,
Ever find the envenom'd sting.

Yet, not this shall soil each blessing,
Nor my hours of comfort stain;
Pleasures are not worth possessing,
Unalloy'd by some kind pain.

Then let smiles & frowns enwreathing,
Fortune's varied gifts combine,
Joys and sorrows jointly weaving,
And no thornless rose be mine.

PETRARCH.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr. Editor,

The following verses are selected from a monthly publication, of some years ago, entitled "The Village Museum." They have no signature and appear to have been a selection in that work, but certainly, stanzas like these, would do discredit to no Poet. They breathe no less the spirit of truth, than of Poetry. By one, who has lost all that Love ever rendered dear to him, they will be read with Joy,—but it will be the "JOY OF GRIEF." If the peculiar aptitude of the third verse to my case, prepossessed me too much in their favour, I presume they will be read, with pleasure, by all lovers of genuine Poetry. Under this impression I have transmitted them to you for republication in the "Parterre."

Respectfully yours,
ARDELIO.

STANZAS.

The dew-drop is never so clear,
As when the morning's first ray sees it glisten:
And music is never so dear,
As when to its last notes we listen.

Though bright may be rapture's first mean—
And its parting adieu even sweeter;
The enjoyment existing between—
Is a vision—and vanishes fleeter.

We never know how we have lov'd,
Till what we most lov'd has departed,
For strength of affection is prov'd
By the joyless and desolate hearted.

Our pleasures are born but to die,
They are link'd to our hearts—but to sever;
And like stars shooting down a dark sky—
Shine loveliest when fading forever!

From the Western Recorder.

"Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion; for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee." Isaiah xii, 6.

Zion was a hill, within the walls of ancient Jerusalem. It was fortified by the Jebusites, and called a strong hold. David conquered this place, and strengthened and embellished it, and it became the residence of the kings of Judah. "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion. Walk about Zion, and go round about her; tell the towers thereof; mark ye well her bulwarks; consider her palaces."

On another hill, and not far from this, the temple was built by Solomon. Now Moses had commanded—"Three times a year shall all your males appear before the Lord, in the place which he shall choose." This ordinance was eminently calculated to promote the piety and patriotism of the people. Of this Jeroboam was aware, when he set up his golden calves; for he said—"If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again to their Lord, even to Rehoboam."

It must have been cheering to see the thousands of Israel, at the appointed times advancing on every side towards Jerusalem, and increasing in numbers as they advanced, till suddenly, the city would be filled with people. Such a visit would be very interesting, especially to those who had never been there before. Here they would see its lofty walls and towers. Here they would see Mount Zion in all her beauty, with her king in the midst of her surrounded by his princes and nobles. Here they would see the majestic temple with all its furniture; the priests in their sacred vestments, the bleeding victim, and smoking incense. All these things would furnish abundant topics for conversation after they returned home, and naturally strengthen their attachment to their king and country.

Such was the temporal Zion. But by Zion, in the spiritual sense, we are to understand the church and people of God, who are redeemed from among men, and bought with a price. All Christians are citizens of this Zion; all have their names enrolled in the books of the King's records, all may have access, at any time, to the royal presence, and present their petitions with the utmost freedom; for her King is in the midst of her. "Ye are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem."

The King of Zion is a person of indescribable beauty and excellence.—He is fairer than the children of men. Grace is poured into his lips; he is anointed with the oil of gladness, and all his garments smell of myrrh, aloes and cassia. He has a great multitude of sons and daughters, which no man can number, who were once all poor. He has a special regard for the poor in spirit. When he adopts any into his family, he discharges all their debts, and becomes surety for them in future; for his riches are inexhaustible. He washes them in the purest fountain, and makes them whiter than snow. He then clothes them with a robe of righteousness, and with garments of salvation, which he wrought with his own hands. He sets a distinguished mark upon them, and seals them with his own royal signet, so that they resemble the children of a king. He gives them angels' food, even the hidden manna; and the water which he gives them to drink, will be in them a well of water springing up into everlasting life. He now says to them—Go work in my vineyard, and what is right I will give thee. This vineyard is a most delightful place. The trees were all planted by the King himself. Here is to be seen the glory of Lebanon, and the excellency of Carmel and Sharon. Here grow the cedar and the myrtle, and the oil tree; the fir-tree, and the pine, and the box-tree, together. The plants are an orchard of pomegranates, with pleasant fruits; camphor with spikenard; spikenard with saffron; calamus and cinnamon; with all trees of frankincense; myrrh and aloes, with all the chief spices. Here flourish the rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley.—The King himself visits every part of his vineyard, and superintends every thing; and he liberally rewards every labourer.

"We are a garden wall'd around,
Chosen and made peculiar ground;
A little spot enclos'd by grace,
Out of the world's wide wilderness.
Like trees of myrrh and spice we stand;
Planted by God the father's hand;
And all his springs in Zion flow,
To make the young plantation grow."

D.

REVOLUTIONARY REMINISCENCES.

[From the Elkton Press.]

"In the progress of this work (Lee's Memoirs), reference was frequently had to the authority and reminiscences of Col. Howard, and he suggested, on one of these occasions, that captain Oldham should be mentioned during the siege of Augusta, instead of captain Handy. He repeated the same suggestion recently to me. The author, however, adhered to his own impression, and the result of my inquiries having justified my impression that captain Handy was distinguished in the affair, I have not felt myself at liberty, highly as I respect the authority of Col. Howard, and the memory of Capt. Oldham, to vary the reading. To the name of Capt. Oldham, too much praise cannot be given. He was engaged in almost every action in the south, and was uniformly distinguished for gallantry and good conduct. With the exception of Kirkwood of Delaware, and Rudolph of the legion infantry, he was probably entitled to more credit than any officer of his rank in Greene's army. A distinction which must place him high on the rolls of fame. In the celebrated charge on the British at Eutaw, of thirty-six men, whom he led, all but eight were killed or wounded; yet he forced the enemy." * * *

"On the succeeding night Browne renewed his attempt, and for a long time the struggle was continued with mutual pertinacity, till at length Capt. Rudolph, by a combined charge of the bayonet, cleared the trenches, driving the enemy with loss to his strong hold."—page 243. * * *

Captain Rudolph, who had been charged with the destruction of the British galley in the Ashley river, although often interrupted by other duties, had never intermitted his attention to that object. Early in March, some time after the dispersion of the militia near the Santee, the captain presented his plan to Lieut. Colonel Lee, who communicated it to the General. It was founded on the facility he had discovered with which boats going to market with provisions passed the galley.

Rudolph proposed to place in one of these boats an adequate force, disguising himself in a countryman's dress, and disguising three or four of his soldiers in the garb and color of negroes. The boat was to be stored with the usual articles for Charleston market, under the cover of which he concealed his armed men, while himself and his four pretended negroes should conduct the boat. His plan was approved; and Lieut. Smith, of the Virginia line, who had been very instrumental in acquiring the intelligence on which the project was grounded, was united to the captain in its execution. Every thing being prepared with the most profound secrecy, Rudolph and Smith embarked with their parties at a concealed landing place, high up the Ashley, on the night of the 18th March. Between three and four in the morning, Rudolph got near to the galley, when the centinel hailed the boat. He was answered in the negro dialect that it was a market boat going to Charleston, and permission was asked to proceed. In reply the boat was ordered to haul alongside, as the captain of the galley wished to purchase some provisions. Rudolph obeyed, and as soon as he got alongside, threw some of his poultry on deck, his seeming negroes at the same time taking fast hold of the galley.

On the signal from Rudolph, Smith and his soldiers rose and boarded the galley. The sentinel and a few others were killed: Some escaped in the darkness of the night, by throwing themselves into the river; and the captain, with twenty-eight sailors, were captured.

The galley mounted twelve guns besides swivels, and was manned with forty-three seamen. Rudolph did not lose a man; and after taking out such stores as he found on board the galley, he burnt her, and returned to his place of embarkation. Thus the tone of enterprize continued high and vigorous on our side; while low and languishing with the enemy. The novelty of this successful attempt attracted notice in Charleston; and such was the state of despondency which prevailed in its garrison, as to give currency to opinions calculated still further to depress the already humbled spirit of the British soldier. When it was found that even their floating castles, the pride and bulwark of Englishmen, were successfully assailed by landsmen, the quarter of the town which was accessible by water, necessarily became an object of jealousy. Every alarm in the night excited dire apprehensions; sometimes Greene was moving to force their lines, at other times he was floating down the Ashley; and in one way or other he was ever present to their disturbed imaginations."—page 397.

(From the Vermont Aurora.)

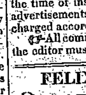
HEMP.

The cultivation of this valuable plant has not, until recently, engaged the attention of the American farmer, and that on a limited scale in particular sections of the country. In Vermont and the northern parts of the state of New York, the raising of hemp has not, since the close of the last war, and then only by a few individuals, been attempted. The causes which have generally operated to retard its introduction, are, upon a correct investigation, attributable to the hardship and expense of dressing it, rather than the difficulty in raising or the want of a profitable market for vending whatever amount of it may be produced. The crop raised the last season in several counties upon the North river in New York, and some time since on the lands near Onion river, in Vermont, prove incontestibly, that our soil is of the first order for a large growth and easy cultivation.—Perhaps no vegetable, except grass, takes and grows more readily than hemp. In Europe, where hemp is extensively and profitably cultivated, the climate corresponds with the northern parts of the United States: hence it does not require to be acclimated to a high northern lattitude in order to ripen and coat the first year's planting. The comparative advantage of raising hemp, may be easily estimated on calculating the quantity produced on an acre, the price for which it sells in market, the expense for seed, the use of the land, and the value of the labour in raising the crop. If the land is fresh and well prepared, half a ton on an acre may be a fair estimate; but if it is rather inferior, an acre will yield upon an average, one-third of a ton; and the clearing it of the seed, when taken green from the field, will cost one third part of the product, if done by a machine. Now, if half a ton can be raised on an acre, and it will cost one-third of this quantity after it is cut and removed to the manufactory to fit it for market, that will leave to the grower six hundred and sixty lbs., which will sell, if of a middling quality for sixty-six dollars—that is at the rate of two hundred dollars per ton.—The seed required to sow an acre in the present scarcity, will cost eight dollars; the expense for labour in sowing gathering and conveying the same to the place of manufacturing, will probably amount to ten dollars more, making an aggregate of twenty four dollars. It is evident from this statement, that the cultivation of hemp, so long as it bears a price any thing like the present, is the most profitable crop that can be raised. The common produce of the fields (taking into the account the uncertainty of the seasons,) and the present reduced prices, do not more than pay for the labour in raising; leaving the finances of the farmer, at the end of the year, not more, if so prosperous as they were at the commencement. But if the cultivation of hemp be generally introduced, the northern states will be able to compete, in the productive opulence of the field, with the cotton growing states in the south. The embarrassments of commerce will then be removed and the hand of industry and frugality will receive the rewards of plenty. Russia and the north of Europe have been abundantly supplied upon their frosty mountains and arid plains, by raising this productive vegetable, and should it be ever so generally cultivated, there is no probability of overstocking the market. The quantities used in different kinds of business, and particularly for ropes and canvass in shipping, are almost incalculable. The farmers in this vicinity will make a fair experiment this season, of the utility in raising it, whether it answers public expectation or not. Considerable quantities will be sowed and planted, and a machine for cleaning it is immediately to be erected on the falls in this place. Should the business be prosperous, the farmers of Vermont may congratulate themselves upon the value of the acquisition and the prospect of profitable employment.

Mr. William Keller died in Kentucky the other day, who weighed 582 lbs. He was forty-five years old, and six feet high.

VILLAGE HERALD.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance, or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.
☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.
No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.
No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.
☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.
ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.
☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.
☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.
☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

FELIX JENKINS,



Saddle, Harness,
AND Trunk Maker,
No. 10, South Street,
BALTIMORE,

Respectfully informs his friends, customers, and the public generally, that he continues to carry on the Saddlery, Harness, and Trunk Making Business, in all its variety, and on the most extensive scale. He has lately received from England, per the ship Philip Tabb, an assortment of articles in his line. Country merchants will find it to their interest to call at No. 10 South street, and to examine the qualities and prices of his goods, as he is determined to sell as low as they can be purchased in Philadelphia.
☞A liberal discount will be made for cash or town acceptances.
April 15 jdm

Late Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Venditioni Exponas issued by the Clerk of Somerset county court and to me directed, the State of Maryland for the use of George Hopkins of Stephen against John S. Evans, Ralph Lowe and William Harris, will be sold at public sale on Wednesday the 21st day of May next at the court-house door the following property, to wit: part of a tract of land (name not known) containing 200 acres, more or less, one horse, gig and harness, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to pay and satisfy the above mentioned writs.—Sale to commence at 2 o'clock P. M.
ROBERT STEWART,
April 26—29 Late Shff.

Late Sheriff's Sale.

BY virtue of a writ of Venditioni Exponas issued by the Clerk of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Isaac Nichols, adm'r. of Joseph R. Russom against Samuel Badly, will be sold at public sale on Wednesday the 21st day of May next, at the court-house door between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock P. M. the following property to wit: part of a tract of land called Cold Stream, 170 acres more or less, and one yoke of oxen, to the highest and best bidder for cash to pay and satisfy the above mentioned writ. ROBT. STEWART,
April 25—29 Late Shff.

FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of disposing of his real estate, being and lying in Worcester county, Md. and situated on Dividing-Creek. The landed estate consists of 2000, or more acres. The improvements are a dwelling house and out buildings with a good SAW and GRIST MILL, both in excellent order; also a young orchard. About 100 acres of the land is in a good state of cultivation.

There is, on one part of the above property, an abundance of Iron Ore, which would warrant the erection of a Forge, and prove an object of value to a purchaser acquainted with, and calculated for, such an undertaking.
The terms of sale will be—one third down, and 3 years for the payment of the balance. For further particulars apply to
JOHN MORRIS.
April 22 kd

Samuel & William Meeteer,
PAPER
MANUFACTURERS.
No. 8 Market Street, Baltimore.
CASH OR GOODS GIVEN FOR RAGS,
IN LARGE OR SMALL PARCELS.
☞It is recommended to those who bring Rags to market, to apply at our Store, as the surest way of obtaining the highest market price.
May 6, 1828. mm

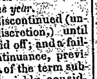
LOST.

THE subscriber lost on Saturday 3d instant, two Notes of Hand drawn in favour of him against William Wilson, sen. one for $20.00, and one against George Goddard for $30.00.—He supposes he lost them near White-Haven. Any person finding said notes and returning them to the subscriber shall have ample compensation.
JOSHUA DONOHO.
May 6th. waw

Timbered Land For Sale.

I am requested by John H. Bayly, Esq. to offer for sale a tract of land commonly called "Pine Pole," situated about two miles from Princess-Anne. This tract of land is valuable for the excellent timber now standing on it, and its contiguity to navigation. For terms apply to
GEO. HANDY.
Princess-Anne, Md. April 22, 1828. §

FOR SALE,



A new and fast-sailing VESSEL, of 31 tons burden, well built, of the best materials, and well rigged.
Also, a WINDMILL, the materials of which are of the best quality, (post cap and cog wheel black walnut,) stands about 50 feet from the water, and may be easily removed.
Also, 2 new MASTS, 45 feet long, ready dressed to put into a vessel—All of which the subscriber will sell on easy terms, if application be immediately made to
HENRY MADDUX.
Potato-Neck, May 6. mv

PROPOSALS
For publishing in the City of Philadelphia, Pa.
THE PRACTICAL
FARMER'S MAGAZINE,
OR
Agricultural and Literary Gazette.

THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE is designed to contain information drawn from Authentic Sources relative to the improvement and management of remarkable Farms, sources of manure, number and kind of Stock, farming utensils, labourers, dairies, &c.; Agricultural Improvements; drawings and descriptions of Useful Inventions; critical notices and reviews of such publications as may tend to the interests of the Husbandman; improvements in the breed of Domestic Animals; accounts of such Foreign and Domestic trees, shrubs, vines, plants, seeds and grains, as are considered necessary or useful for subsistence, comfort or ornament, with Information relative to their treatment, growth, requisite kinds of soil, &c., and in short, whatever may tend to increase the product of the soil, and advance the Rural Economy of the country.
Insertion will always be given to such Reports, Addresses and Papers, as may be communicated for publication, by the several Agricultural Societies of this and other states.
A Land Register will contain as far as practicable, a list of farms, which are now, or may hereafter be, For Sale, account of their size, situation, quality and such other particulars as may be deemed Useful.
Space will be afforded the Solid and Sterling Beauties of Literature, the useful arts and science, Chemistry, Natural History and Philosophy, Biography and Travels, states of the Markets in the principal Sea Ports, &c. &c.

TERMS.
The Farmer's Magazine will be published semi-monthly, the price is three dollars, payable either at the time of subscribing, or on receipt of the first number. That form and size has been adopted, which is deemed most convenient for binding, while the quality of the paper, the beauty of the type, (entirely new,) and the general execution of the work, will be such, as it is hoped will reflect credit on the Publishers, and gratify its patrons.
☞Address (post paid) Thomas C. Clarke, agent for the Proprietors, No. 48, Market St. Phil'a.

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY
OF
AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,
At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public, that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast & wrought Shares, with & without Coulters; Hillside, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs; a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows; Swingletrees, double & single; Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual; his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes, Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.
His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 3 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his implements, that he will continue to merit the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.
Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.
JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.
N. B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. FRUIT TREES will be furnished to orders. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders. March 11. tx

JOB PRINTING,
SUCH AS
Handbills, Cards, Blanks,
PAMPHLETS, &c.
Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,
At the Office of the Village Herald.

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suits of the Union Manufacturing Company and Zadock Long use of Henry Langford, use of William Roach, use of Thos. K. Carroll against Robert J. Henry, will be exposed to public sale, on Thursday the 29th day of May next at Rehoboth, the following property, to wit: Four lots at Rehoboth—Manlor's lot, Mary's lot, Glascow's lot, Limerick's lot, containing 977 acres more or less; Dickerson Hope, containing 125 acres, more or less; Goose Marsh, containing 50 acres, more or less; Cow Marsh, containing 50 acres more or less, and Convenience, 30 acres, more or less. Also negroes, man Ben, 1 do. George, 1 do. Jacob, 1 do. Tom, 1 boy Stephen, 1 do. John, 1 do. William, 1 do. Edmund, 1 do. Joe, 1 negro woman Susan, 1 do. Bridget, 1 girl Milly, 1 man Titus, 1 do. James, 1 boy Charles, 1 girl Rachel, 1 do. Betsey, 4 yoke of oxen, 40 head of cattle, 45 head of sheep, fifty head of hogs, one horse, two yoke of mules, 1000 bushels of corn more or less, 2000 weight of pork and bacon more or less, and I give notice that on the day above mentioned I shall proceed to sell the same to satisfy the above claims with the interest and cost due and to become due.
Attendance by
JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
May 6, 1828.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by James Moore & Jas. E. Waller, Justices of the Peace for Somerset county and to me directed at the suit of Thomas Smith use of George Malcomb & John W. Leatherbury against Thomas Roberts, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: part of a tract of land called Nelzy containing 15 acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises, on Monday the 2nd of June next, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writs.
JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
May 12th 1828.

This is to give Notice,

THAT the Subscriber of the city of Baltimore, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Baltimore county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of MARY WARD late of said county deceased.
All persons having claims against said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, on or before the 8th day of November next, to JAMES M. BUCHANNAN, Esq. my attorney, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate; and all persons indebted to the said estate are requested to make immediate payment to my attorney as aforesaid. Given under my hand, this 7th day of April, 1828.
HOWES GOLDSBOROUGH.
April 15 jdm

PROPOSALS BY BENJ. EDES
FOR PUBLISHING IN BALTIMORE,
THE EMERALD,
And Baltimore Literary Gazette.

The Emerald and Baltimore Literary Gazette will be published every Saturday, in quarto form, super royal sheet, with new long primer type, and in superior style—the editorial department to be under the direction of several gentlemen of acknowledged talents.
The want of a paper of the nature proposed, will be allowed by every citizen of this metropolis; nor has the proprietor, in his efforts, been so much prompted by a desire of gain, as by a hope of encouraging literature throughout this section of the Union. Confident of the approbation of all persons of taste, he therefore proposes the publication of the Emerald, & pledges himself that no effort shall be wanting on his part to please the public in general.
The Emerald shall contain the choicest selections of miscellaneous literature, from the most esteemed periodicals of this country and Europe, and the strictest attention shall be observed as to their moral tendency. Its contents shall be—Tales, original and selected; moral, humorous and scientific Essays; original and selected Poetry; Biographical Sketches of distinguished worthies; Anecdotes, &c. The original matter will be furnished by individuals who have, through the medium of our best literary productions, established themselves in public favor. Also, interesting items of foreign and domestic intelligence; critical notices of passing events, the drama, new publications, and a correct description of the prevailing fashions both abroad and at home.
It may be worthy of notice that the Emerald shall be in no way whatever connected with either of the great political parties; and that no communication that has a tendency, either directly or indirectly, to invade the sanctuary of domestic retirement, shall be admission into its columns; though they will always be open to an honest discussion of any question that does not tend to inflame personal party animosity.
TERMS.—Price of subscription four dollars per annum, one half to be paid on delivery of the first number and the balance at the expiration of six months. Postmasters and other persons of the inland towns procuring six subscribers and becoming responsible for the payment, will be entitled to one copy gratis. When 400 subscribers are obtained the Emerald will be issued.
☞Subscribers will be received at the Office of the Village Herald.
March 25 tcm

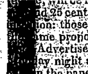
Village Herald.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY MORNING, BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
VOL. II. PRINCESS-ANNE, MD., MAY 27, 1828. NO. 9.

VILLAGE HERALD.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance, or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.
☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.
No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.
No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.
☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.
ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.
☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.
☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.
☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

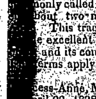
Timbered Land For Sale.
I am requested by John H. Bayly, Esq. to offer for sale a tract of land commonly called "Pine Pole," situated about two miles from Princess-Anne. This tract of land is valuable for the excellent timber now standing on it, and its contiguity to navigation. For terms apply to
GEO. HANDY.
Princess-Anne, Md. April 22, 1828. §

FOR SALE,



A new and fast-sailing VESSEL, of 31 tons burden, well built, of the best materials, and well rigged.
Also, a WINDMILL, the materials of which are of the best quality, (post cap and cog wheel black walnut,) stands about 50 feet from the water, and may be easily removed.
Also, 2 new MASTS, 45 feet long, ready dressed to put into a vessel—All of which the subscriber will sell on easy terms, if application be immediately made to
HENRY MADDUX.
Potato-Neck, May 6. mv

FELIX JENKINS,



Saddle, Harness,
AND Trunk Maker,
No. 10, South Street,
BALTIMORE,
Respectfully informs his friends, customers, and the public generally, that he continues to carry on the Saddlery, Harness, and Trunk Making Business, in all its variety, and on the most extensive scale. He has lately received from England, per the ship Philip Tabb, an assortment of articles in his line. Country merchants will find it to their interest to call at No. 10 South street, and to examine the qualities and prices of his goods, as he is determined to sell as low as they can be purchased in Philadelphia.
☞A liberal discount will be made for cash or town acceptances.
April 15 jdm

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of the Court of Appeals and directed, at the suit of Benjamin [illegible]shiell, use of Ara Spence, Irving [illegible]nce and William U. Purnell, Executors of James B. Robbins against [illegible]ld E. Jones, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: All the buildings, improvements and implements used and employed as a tanyard, all the tans, hides, tanned and untanned, and [illegible] cart and horse, now occupied by [illegible]uel McBryde, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-house door, Princess-Anne on Saturday the [illegible] instant, between the hours of 2 [illegible] o'clock P. M. for cash, to the [illegible] best bidder, to satisfy the above mentioned writ.
JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
[illegible] 8th—18 sgh

SHERIFF'S SALE.
BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by James Moore & Jas. E. Waller, Justices of the Peace for Somerset county and to me directed at the suit of Thomas Smith use of George Malcomb & John W. Leatherbury against Thomas Roberts, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: part of a tract of land called Nelzy containing 15 acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises, on Monday the 2nd of June next, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writs.
JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
May 12th 1828.

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY
OF
AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,
At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.
THE subscriber would inform the public, that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast & wrought Shares, with & without Coulters; Hillside, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs; a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows; Swingletrees, double & single; Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual; his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes, Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.
His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 3 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his implements, that he will continue to merit the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.
Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.
JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.
N. B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. FRUIT TREES will be furnished to orders. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders. March 11. tx

LOST.
THE subscriber lost on Saturday 3d instant, two Notes of Hand drawn in favour of him against William Wilson, sen. one for $20.00, and one against George Goddard for $30.00.—He supposes he lost them near White-Haven. Any person finding said notes and returning them to the subscriber shall have ample compensation.
JOSHUA DONOHO.
May 6th. waw

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.
Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.
10th May, 1827.
I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.
(Signed) S. MOORE.
The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us, that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."
The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an anodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.
Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by
JOHNSTON & SUDLER,
Princess-Anne, Md.
Nov. 20, 1827.

PROPOSALS
For publishing in the City of Philadelphia, Pa.
THE PRACTICAL
FARMER'S MAGAZINE,
OR
Agricultural and Literary Gazette.
THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE is designed to contain information drawn from Authentic Sources relative to the improvement and management of remarkable Farms, sources of manure, number and kind of Stock, farming utensils, labourers, dairies, &c.; Agricultural Improvements; drawings and descriptions of Useful Inventions; critical notices and reviews of such publications as may tend to the interests of the Husbandman; improvements in the breed of Domestic Animals; accounts of such Foreign and Domestic trees, shrubs, vines, plants, seeds and grains, as are considered necessary or useful for subsistence, comfort or ornament, with Information relative to their treatment, growth, requisite kinds of soil, &c., and in short, whatever may tend to increase the product of the soil, and advance the Rural Economy of the country.
Insertion will always be given to such Reports, Addresses and Papers, as may be communicated for publication, by the several Agricultural Societies of this and other states.
A Land Register will contain as far as practicable, a list of farms, which are now, or may hereafter be, For Sale, account of their size, situation, quality and such other particulars as may be deemed Useful.
Space will be afforded the Solid and Sterling Beauties of Literature, the useful arts and science, Chemistry, Natural History and Philosophy, Biography and Travels, states of the Markets in the principal Sea Ports, &c. &c.
TERMS.
The Farmer's Magazine will be published semi-monthly, the price is three dollars, payable either at the time of subscribing, or on receipt of the first number. That form and size has been adopted, which is deemed most convenient for binding, while the quality of the paper, the beauty of the type, (entirely new,) and the general execution of the work, will be such, as it is hoped will reflect credit on the Publishers, and gratify its patrons.
☞Address (post paid) Thomas C. Clarke, agent for the Proprietors, No. 48, Market St. Phil'a.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, April 15th 1828.

ON application of Elizabeth S. J. Evans, Adm'x. of James Evans, late of Somerset county dec'd, it is ordered, that she give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.
True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,
Notice is hereby given,
That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of James Evans late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th of November next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of May, 1828.
E. S. J. EVANS, Adm'x.
of J. Evans, dec'd.
May 20, 1828. k

FOR SALE.
THE Subscriber is desirous of disposing of his real estate, being and lying in Worcester county, Md. and situated on Dividing-Creek. The landed estate consists of 2000, or more acres. The improvements are a dwelling house and out buildings with a good SAW and GRIST MILL, both in excellent order; also a young orchard. About 100 acres of the land is in a good state of cultivation.

There is, on one part of the above property, an abundance of Iron Ore, which would warrant the erection of a Forge, and prove an object of value to a purchaser acquainted with, and calculated for, such an undertaking.
The terms of sale will be—one third down, and 3 years for the payment of the balance. For further particulars apply to
JOHN MORRIS.
April 22 kd

From the African Repository.

THE UNFORTUNATE MOOR.

A gentleman in Natchez has communicated the following account of an individual, who is now offered as an emigrant to the Colony of Liberia.—The Society has every disposition to aid the unfortunate man, and it is hoped that he may take a passage in the next expedition.

Natchez, (Miss.) Dec. 13, 1827.

Dear Sir:

I address you in behalf of an unfortunate man, a native of Africa, who has been held in slavery, in this State, for thirty-nine years. A letter has been addressed to the Department of State concerning this person, under the hope that the General Government might consider him a fit subject for their interposition. As yet, however, I believe nothing has been done. Believing he might be of incalculable importance to the Colony at Liberia, I have no hesitation in offering you the suggestions of my own mind.

The person to whom I allude, we familiarly call Prince. His real name is Abduhl Rahhahman. He was born in 1762, at Tombuctoo, where his uncle, Abu-Abrahim, was at that time king. The father of Prince was sent out, as Governor, to Footah Jallo, which was, at that time, a colony of, or in some manner tributary to, Tombuctoo. This country afterwards became independent of the mother country, and Almam Abrahim was made king. Prince, after completing his education, entered the army. He very soon rose to distinction, and at the age of twenty-six was appointed to the command of an army of about two thousand men, to be employed against the Hebohs, a tribe of negroes at the north of Footah Jailo. He marched into their country, and succeeded in putting them to flight, and laid waste their towns. Believing his object accomplished, he commenced his retreat. The Hebohs, however, rallied, and by a circuitous rout and rapid marches, ambushed themselves in a narrow defile of the mountain thro' which Prince was to pass. He fell into the snare, and, with almost his entire army, was made prisoner and sold to the Mandingoes, and by them put on board a slave ship then upon the coast.

Prince has been the proprietor of Col. James F. of this place, during his whole captivity. During that time, Col. James F. states he has never known him intoxicated, (he makes no use of ardent spirits)—never detected him in dishonesty or falsehood—nor has he known him guilty of a mean action; and though born and raised in affluence, he has submitted to his fate without a murmer, and has been an industrious and faithful servant.

The story of this man's life is eventful and interesting. Did my conviction of the truth depend exclusively on my confidence in the fidelity of his own narrative, I could scarcely entertain a shadow of doubt. Fortunately however, the most incredulous may be satisfied.

Dr. C. a highly distinguished physician of this place, now deceased, knew Prince intimately at Teemboo, in Footah Jallo. He was taken by prince to his own house, where, during a long and painful illness of the disease peculiar to that climate, he was treated with kindness and humanity. They were recognized by each other in this country, and Prince now relates their first meeting here as deeply affecting. Exertions were made on the part of Dr. C. to emancipate him, and enable him to return to his native country. From causes altogether inexplicable to me, it was never effected.

That Prince is a Moor, there can be but little doubt. He is six feet in height; and though sixty-five years of age, he has the vigour of the meridian of life. When he arrived in this country, his hair hung in flowing ringlets far below his shoulders. Much against his will, his master compelled him to submit to the sheers, and this ornament, which the Moor would part with in his own country only with his life, since that time he has entirely neglected. It has become course, and in some degree curly. His skin, also, by long service in the sun, and the privations of bondage, has been materially changed; and his whole appearance indicates the Foolah rather than the Moor. But Prince states explicitly, and with an air of pride, that not a drop of negro blood runs in his veins. He places the negro in a scale of being infinitely below the Moor.—His prejudices, however, have been so far overcome as to allow him to marry; and he now has a numerous offspring.

At my own request, Prince often visits me. He is extremely modest, polite, and intelligent. I have frequently examined him in the geography of his own contiguous countries—their political condition, forms of government, manners and customs, religion, &c. &c. His knowledge is accurate to the minutest degree, so far as I have compared it with the best authorities. He possesses a large stock of valuable information of the countries south of the Great Desert. North of that he has never travelled.

Prince was educated and perhaps is still, nominally at least, a Mohamedan. I have conversed with him much upon this subject, and find him friendly disposed towards the Christian religion. He is extremely anxious for an Arabic Testament. He has heard it read in English and admires its precepts. His principal objections are, that Christians do not follow them. His reasoning upon this subject is pertinent, and, to our shame, is almost unanswerable. I can only remind him of the fallibility of man, and, from his own position, endeavour to show him the necessity of the great Atonement, and the mercy of God through Christ to erring man.

The father of Prince died soon after the capture of his son.—His brother Almam Abduhl Gahdric succeeded to the throne, and, I believe, is the present reigning monarch. Prince states that he himself is entitled to the throne from this circumstance. His brother is of the half blood; his mother being an African. This circumstance, it appears, provided there is no disparity in mortal qualities, creates a preference. But he has no wish to enter again the bustle of public life. Many years of servitude have entirely subdued his ambition for power. He will be happy—he speaks to me upon this subject with a countenance beaming joy—if he can return to his native country, live the friend of the white man, and die in the land of his fathers.

I would here mention that Col. F. is ready to give him up without an equivalent. I have also explained to Prince the object of the establishment at Liberia. He speaks with gratitude of the benevolent design; and, taking into view the very short distance between that place and his own country, he feels assured he can be of great service to that colony.

I now communicate him to the favourable consideration of your Society. I cannot but persuade myself but that you will seize with avidity an instrument that appears so completely adapted to your wants. It is impossible—is it improbable that Abduhl Rahhahman may become the chief pioneer of civilization to unenlightened African—that, armed with the Bible, he may be the foremost of that band of pilgrims who shall roll back the mighty waves of darkness and superstition, and plant the cross of the Redeemer upon the furthermost mountains of Kong! Wishing, Rev. Sir, the human Society of which you are the able organ, all the success that so noble a cause merits, and commending it to the guidance of Him who doeth all things well, I remain with the highest respect, &c.

The captive African restored to Liberty.

[Letter from a gentleman in Natchez to a lady in Cincinnati.]

"Natchez, April 7th, 1828.

This letter will be handed to you by a very extraordinary personage—no less than your old acquaintance Prince, (or Ibrahim,) who is now free, and on his way to his own country; where he was captured in battle, nearly forty years ago, and has been in slavery nearly the whole of that long period, upon the plantation of Mr. Thomas Foster, of this county. I am much gratified to have been the instrument of his emancipation—altho' from his advanced age (sixty-six years) he can but possess merely a glimpse of the blessings to which he was entitled from his birth.

"As I happen to have a leisure half hour, I will give you a sketch of the manner in which his liberation has been brought about; you may recollect, that I frequently suggested to him, that if he would write a letter to his country I would have it conveyed for him to his own country. I think it was early in the spring of 1826, that he wrote his letter in my office, which I directed to the care of our Consul at Tangier, (Captain John Mullowny.)—Thomas B. Reed, Esq. one of our Senators, took charge of the letter to Washington, from whence it was sent by the Department of State to its destination. During last summer I received a letter from the Department of State, informing me that the letter had been forwarded, and a translation of it returned, and I was requested to inquire on what terms Mr. Foster would liberate Prince, to the intent that he might be returned to his own country. On applying to Mr. F. he agreed to give him up without any compensation, conditioned that he should not enjoy his liberty in this country. I informed the President of the result of my inquiry, and a few weeks ago, received a letter from Mr. Clay, asking me to complete the agency, and to send Prince on to Washington City; for which purpose I was authorized to draw for a sum of money necessary to defray the expenses of his journey, and to clothe him if necessary.—But the poor old man, when this was communicated to him that he was to be free and return to his native country, where he is, we have no doubt, a lawful king, (of a country called Timboo) he looked at the old companion of his slavery—the mother of his nine children:—he could not agree to part with her; she too—how could she part with him!—She wished to follow him to the end of the world. What was to be done? I had no authority to interfere as to her, and I felt almost grieved that I had taken a solitary step in the business, believing that the separation of the old couple would no doubt accelerate the death of both. However, it rejoices me to tell you Isabella is with Prince—they will both call and see "Miss Jane," as the old man, you recollect, always called you. I applied again to Mr. Foster, who is a truly amiable and worthy man; he could not find in his heart to separate his old and faithful servants, and for a very small sum, (compared with the value of Isabella as a servant) he agreed to give her up. So soon as his intentions were known, I requested a young getleman of the bar to head a subscription paper for Prince, asking of his friends to assist him to purchase his wife. Two hundred dollars was the sum required.—In a very few days he had the surplus of 93 dollars. Several gentlemen gave him $10, one gave him $15, many gave him $5, and very few less than 1 dollar.

"Prince has also several certificates voluntarily given to him, of his uncommon good conduct for twenty-four years. N. A. Ware, Esq. has kindly undertaken to see him safe to Washington City. I expect he will remain three or four days in Cincinnati, and as he will call on you in all his finery, (I have had an elegant Moorish dress made for him) and perhaps attract some attention, I write you this long history, that you may be enabled to give some account of your distinguished visiter.

Prince is really a most extraordinary man—born to a kingdom—well educated, for he now writes Arabic in a most elegant style—brought a slave into a foreign country, he has sustained a character for honesty and integrity which is almost beyond parallel; he has been faithful, honest, humble, and industrious; and although he adheres strictly to the religion of his country (Mahometanism) he expresses the greatest respect for the Christian religion, and is very anxious to obtain a Testament in his own language, that he may read the history of Jesus Christ. I wrote to the President to request one for him, but that part of my letter was not answered. I am, however, in hopes, if one is to be had at Washington City, he will be gratified on his own application for it.

"Prince called to see us yesterday, with his wife and sons, who are really the finest looking young men I have seen. They were all genteelly dressed; and although they expressed themselves pleased with the freedom of their parents, there was a look of silent agony in their eyes I could not bear to witness. I hope the old man will be able to realize his prospects and regain his property; which if he does, he says he can buy them at ten prices.

Method of Salting Butter.—Take of sugar, one part—nitre one part, and clean salt two parts; beat them well together and put it by for use.—To every pound of butter, [when it is freed from the butter milk] take one ounce for the preparation, and mix it thoroughly together. Butter salted in this manner and put down in tubs with a little melted butter poured over the surface, to fill every vacuity, before the top is put on, will keep for many years.

Prodigious!—The Coalition absolutely claim credit for having applied the appropriations made by law for the reduction of the Public Debt, to that purpose!—Congress passed a law—the President executes it—and his pensioners all sing hosannas to him. What an excellent, wise, able, and virtuous Chief Magistrate!—He has absolutely suffered the law to be executed—Suffered the money raised by act of Congress, and appropriated to a specific purpose by act of congress, to be applied to that purpose. He only squandered away Eight and a half millions of funds not thus appropriated!—What an excellent President!—What consummate blockheads the Adams printers take the people to be, when they attempt to palm such stuff upon them. The President had just as much to do with paying the public debt as the man in the moon, who looked down upon the silver—not a whit more. Tren. Emp.

A Small Sign.—The United States' Gazette, an Adams paper says, "may the king live forever." Will his honor the Mayor of Washington be pleased to notice this?—Maine Republican.

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, MAY 27, 1828.

PEOPLE'S TICKET.

For President.

ANDREW JACKSON.

For Vice President.

JOHN C. CALHOUN.

For Elector of President and Vice President of the U. S. for the District composed of Worcester, Somerset, and part of Dorchester counties:

Thomas K. Carroll.

SECRET SERVICE.

Two weaknesses in human nature, says an eminent writer, have produced bribery, corruption, and many other wicked arts, viz: The Love of Power and the Love of Money. When we see a man straining after power, and ready to put every thing into operation to forward his own views, the rational conclusion is, that he is an ambitious man. A reference to the pages of history will teach us this salutary lesson, never trust a person with power who shows in his actions a carelessness for strict integrity, and who is ever ready to adopt such means as will secure his own aggrandizement. Every man who possesses common understanding can form some idea of an ambitious man vested with power. This power may be limited or it may be unlimited. But, for the sake of argument we will take the former position, and say it is limited. Now, an ambitious man vested with limited power, will of course, direct, turn, and twist that power to the accomplishment of his own ends. But perhaps some persons would ask the question, How can a President of the U. S. make use of any unfair means in order to ensure his own aggrandizement, when the power of the Executive is strictly limited by the law of the land? To this interrogative we would make the following observations: Every government is more or less subject to corruption; but none to less than ours, which is so small indeed, in comparison to that of other governments, that our eagle-eyed politicians have not much difficulty in discovering it, because a mistake in a small calculation is sooner discovered than one in a much larger. In choosing a person to fill the highest office in the gift of the nation, it would be always policy, to select a man of the purest political integrity, such as Jefferson, Madison, or Monroe—for then the nation would have nothing to fear. But if we are so unfortunate as to select a man whose high sense of political integrity was no greater than that of a great number of other men in the world, then it would be highly necessary to guard him with a watchful eye. For instance, if they did not, how easily might he make use of the secret service for his own support? If the people had cause sufficient to be displeased he might take eight or ten thousand dollars from that stock, and establish a press to deceive the people. Has not this been the case with our present Chief Magistrate? We know there are many persons who are firmly impressed that it has been the case. For, say they, why should John Q. Adams spend more secret service money in thirteen days than Monroe did during his whole administration, viz: from the 8th to the 21st Nov. last, Mr. Adams expended $8,958 for secret service; being $3,328 more than Mr. Monroe expended in eight years!!! The reason of this, say they, is obvious— The Marylander press was put in motion and distributed gratuitously, very soon after the above exorbitant sum was taken from the People's money by J. Q. Adams for secret service, to wit, about the 5th December. It is also remarked that, just before the Marylander went into operation a Baltimore gentleman, the initials of whose name we sometimes see underneath the British crown, was at this place and stated, that previous to his arrival here he had been in Washington and had an interview with their highnesses, president Adams and secretary Clay, (this was in November, the time when said sum of $8,958 was drawn for secret service!) And also, that the Marylander, about which he seemed much concerned, would go into operation immediately—that they were in possession of ample funds, and that an abundant emission would take place in order for distribution.— These things concur and agree so exactly, that all combined produce very strong circumstantial proof, that the said press was erected at the expense of secret service money. This was our impression for some time past—but since the development of the above facts we most religiously believe that the Marylander was established with Secret Service money. Would that we could persuade ourselves that this is the only instance where the public money is made subservient to deceive the people. We may add that such is the received opinion here, and will continue to be so, until that large sum of secret service money spent in thirteen days is accounted for.

Let us now enquire, What is Secret Service? It is, (says Burgh in his Political Disquisitions, London edition of 1774, p. 277,) "A HUGE CLOAK thrown over an immense scene of Corruption, under which we must not peep." Why must we not 'peep under it'? "Because," continues he, "courtiers and court men tell us, there must be immense sums expended in this way, and which must not be accounted for." Why not account for them? "Because the services done for them must never be known." This doctrine is transplanted from England into America. Is it consistent with the principles of republican government, to reserve a clause that has an immediate tendency to corruption? Certainly not; the people never understood the nature of this secret service. "The services done must not be known"!! Why not be known? Because they are Corrupt!!! Strange doctrine for the meridian of America, and yet some of our politicians preach up the very same doctrine in relation to it as those of Great Britain.

The Coalition editors, despairing of success through forgery and calumny, are now turning their attention to making Scriptural quotations concerning military chieftains. These are particularly designed to catch the Methodist people, to whose attention they appear directed, and who, they must think, have never so much as heard that there was a Washington. Well, we shall not say that it is out of character for them to do thus while tempting that respectable body to forsake a just and honest cause to join a corrupt one, but we will here remark that it is not quite the first instance of the kind that ever met our eyes—We believe there is something like it recorded in Matt. iv. 5 & 6.

[COMMUNICATED.]

MR. CLAY

In his late speech in Baltimore among other things has said, "If indeed we have incurred the Divine displeasure, and it be necessary to chastise this people with the rod of His vengeance, I would humbly prostrate myself before Him and implore his mercy to visit our favoured land with War, with Pestilence, with Famine, with any Scourge other than military rule or blind and heedless enthusiasm for mere military renown."

Now the plain meaning of the above is this, that he (Mr. Clay) had rather that our country should be visited with War, Pestilence, Famine or Scourge than that he should not be continued as Secretary of State, and thereby bid an everlasting farewell to all hopes of being made President of the U. States. Is this patriotism or selfishness? But why invoke chastizement by War? Now this word "War" is rather malapropos—for, admit for a moment that Gen. Jackson is a military chieftain only—can he do more injury by war than the Almighty Creator of Heaven and Earth, to whom the Orator Clay, in his ninth appearance before the public, alludes, and who looks upon Mr. Clay in the same light as he does any other worm of the dust?

From the Richmond Enquirer.

Mr. Walsh says some very good things—but many of them are thrusts under the fifth rib. He agrees with Mr. Clay against Gen. Jackson; but Mr. Clay himself does not escape animadversion for his late speech in Baltimore. Mr. W. deems "in general such effusions unsuitable for a principal member of the government." He "continues to think that a Secretary of State, or any other of the heads of the administration, violates decorum and starts from his sphere when he takes a public and gratuitous" (and he might have added, an interested) "part in the electioneering process."

The Baltimore Republican, however, handles Mr. C. with gloves off.

"There is surely something in the atmosphere of the city of Baltimore unfriendly to demagogues—something that acts like a spell upon them—depriving them of all their electioneering tact. Mr. Adams came here last year, and his adherents here flattered themselves his visit would gain them 500 votes, but before he was done with his "Ebony & Topaz," his cold "How do you do, Sirs," and his pump-handle shake of the hand, we believe the worthy managers who got up the affair, and indeed, the whole party, were sick enough of him, and found they had gained a loss. Mr. Clay now comes here, and known to be the most finished demagogue of the age, much is expected by the party from his visit—the matter is so managed as to give him an opportunity to make a speech. And such a speech! His friends, if they too, had not, in the violence of their party feeling, lost their discretion, would surely never have allowed it to be published. A speech in which, while he is professing devotion to liberty and republican government, while he is complaining of persecution, he wishes his country to be visited with WAR, with PESTILENCE, and with FAMINE sooner than that General Jackson shall be elected President!! A speech which extends in violence and abuse any thing that the pensioned [illegible] before the public. We believe that the [illegible]

[illegible] Commerce street [illegible] evening, until that [illegible] Address would be delivered, having been published three times only, in this paper and once in each of the other papers, the Jackson Central Committee expected that some four or five hundred of the brother Jacksonians would probably meet them on that occasion, and accordingly prepared for their accommodation a very large room (the old Exchange room in Commerce street, which at a moderate calculation, we think would hold six hundred men;) but by the time the meeting was organized, this room was crowded to suffocation—the door opening into the yard was then thrown open, and the yard was soon filled from the room, and the vacuum created in the room as soon filled from the street. Still there were thousands in the street—Commerce street from Water street down to Crowl's stable presenting one solid mass of honest true Jacksonians. The meeting which the Central Committee had intended should be a private one, having swollen into such an immense concourse, as to make it impossible for them to assemble in any house, the Address which was to have been delivered, was omitted, and, on motion, the meeting adjourned. The recent electioneering visit of Henry Clay, the Secretary of State, to our city, and the boastful exhibition of the farces of our opponents, their public gathering at the wharf to receive him, and the impudent and incendiary speech delivered by him while here at a private dinner and circulated through our city, would have justified our commencing an open and public campaign at once; but unwilling to set the example of public, street meetings at this early period of the season, the Committee suggested, and the meeting cheerfully acquiesced in an adjournment."

WAR, PESTILENCE AND FAMINE.—That pink of piety, purity and patriotism; Mister Henry Clay, talks about humbly prostrating himself before God, and imploring his mercy, to visit our favoured land with war, with pestilence, with famine, with any scourge other than military rule, or a blind and heedless enthusiasm for mere military renown. The idea he meant to convey was doubtless, that to elect General Jackson to the Presidency would be subjecting the country to military rule, and that his advocates are influenced by an enthusiasm for military renown.

This is Mister Henry Clay's moderation. He knows that his insinuations are totally and unqualifiedly false.— He knows full well that the country, with Jackson in the chair of Chief Magistrate, would be no more under military rule than it now is; and he knows full well that the advocates of General Andrew Jackson are no more influenced by an enthusiasm for mere military renown than those who are devoted to himself. And he has the hardihood to assert, with a view to his own advantage, what he knows to be false, and to connect the assertion, too, with the great and sacred name of the Deity!

In his speech upon the subject of the Seminole war, in reference to Gen. Jackson, and his services to the country, Mister Henry Clay said, "Towards that distinguished captain, who has shed so much GLORY on our country, whose renown constitutes so great a portion of its moral property, I never had, I never can have any other feelings than those of the most profound RESPECT, and of the utmost kindness." When he uttered this expression was he under the influence of enthusiasm for mere military renown? Has any of the present supporters of General Jackson said that they never can have any other feelings than those of the most profound respect; and of the utmost kindness?— No, this has been left as the exclusive property of Mister Henry Clay.— Should he ever attempt to violate his country's rights, as Mister Henry Clay has done, and declare his disposition to beard the people in their own hamlets with his electioneering manoeuvers, as Mister Henry Clay has done, with all their present respect and support turned into contempt and opposition.

Mr. Clay very well knows that the supporters of General Jackson are generally influenced in their support by a very different consideration than that of an enthusiasm for mere military renown; and that it flows from a thorough conviction that the safety, honour and glory of the country, one intimately connected with his election [illegible] reference that of Mr. Adams, [illegible] is used for no other purpose than to blind the eyes of the weak and mislead the judgement of the ignorant. But by this pretended fear of military rule under Jackson? Does the [illegible] of his having, in the hour of danger, taken the command of the militia of his country, to protect her frontier and defend her shores from invasions render him dangerous? Then are we reduced to a pretty pass. Any man who risks his life in defence of his country, immediately becomes her enemy; yet the coward who skulks from his duty when his country demands his services to assist in defending her against the assaults of her enemies, until the storm of war is past, is the essence of patriotism and is the only one who is fit to preside over, and [illegible] affairs! What perfect stupidity or knavery it must require in a man to advance such an ideal Mister Henry Clay must rest assured that the people of this country are too wise to be caught in his gull trap. He is not apprehensive of military rule under Jackson, nor does he consider the [illegible] of him the result of an enthusiasm for mere military renown, but a great difficulty with him is, that if Jackson is elected, his own high-own hopes of political advancement, must first, like Wolsey's under him, and the whole amount of the matter is that he would prefer that we should have war, pestilence or famine, or any other, or all other judgements poured upon us, rather than Jackson should succeed, and that his own hopes should perish. This the majority of the people understand, perfectly; and all Mister Henry Clay's balderdash about military rule, and the enthusiasm for mere military renown, will not alter their views, or arrest his fate. Delaware Gazette.

"A TENNESSEAN."

Under this signature, one Dr. Armstrong, of Tenn. or Kentucky, who was Surgeon in Jackson's Army during the late war, and who skulked like a coward from his duty whenever danger was nigh, has been publishing in a Kentucky paper edited by a nephew of Mr. Clay, a series of numbers attacking General Jackson's private character. The facts—we should say the falsehoods, upon which these numbers are based, have been acknowledged by A. Erwin, of Tenn., to have been furnished by him! This same ERWIN, has been proved by Mr. WIRT, the Attorney General of the United States to have been engaged in smuggling negroes into this country, and to have PERJURED himself. These, Mr. Wirt proved, beyond all doubt, in one of his official Reports. Yet with such names as these for vouchers, the Administration papers here, are republishing the numbers of "A Tennessean" and an address or letter to the public from this Erwin!

The following on this subject, we copy from the latest Nashville Republican:

"DOCTOR ARMSTRONG.—The very patriotic son of Æsculapius, has avowed the authorship of the pieces published under the signature of "A Tennessean," and has obtained the insertion of the second number, in the Banner and Whig of this place. All and every allegation in it, going to impeach the honour or honesty of Gen. Jackson, is wholly and entirely untrue. We shall very speedily give a full history of the facts connected with the law suit of which the Doctor speaks, and it will then most conclusively appear, that throughout the whole transaction General Jackson's conduct was characterised by the strictest integrity and the greatest generosity." B. Repub.

JACKSON & MANUFACTURES.

The following extract of a letter from Gen. Jackson to Col. R. Patterson, with the excellent comments upon it, we copy from the Maryland Advocate, a well conducted Jackson paper, published in Cumberland, Allegana county, Md.

"It must appear needless to say another word, to prove that General Jackson is the friend to Domestic Manufactures and Internal Improvements. But the following letter from him to Col. Robert Patterson, is so plain, so conclusive & irresistible, that we cannot help publishing it, in addition to the above; which will 'nail to the counter' the falsehoods that the Administration men have been so busy in propagating, that Jackson was opposed to those measures. Here it is.

Extract of a letter from General Jackson to Col. R. Patterson.

"Upon the success of our domestic Manufactures, as the hand maid of agriculture and commerce, depends, in a great measure, the independence of our country; and I assure you, that no man can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them."

In addition to this, Gen. Jackson's name stands recorded in favour of every measure of Internal Improvement and Domestic Manufactures that was agitated in Congress whilst he was a member of that body; whilst John Q. Adams, has never in the whole course of his life given a single vote in favour of either of those great measures.— But on the contrary, wherever we find his name recorded, it is in opposition to them. It is true, in his first message to Congress he came out a most furious advocate for Internal Improvements; astonishing every person at the lengths he was willing (affectedly) to go. But what has he said or done since then? Nothing at all. Not one word has he said on the subject of Domestic Manufactures, since his inauguration. For two years Mr. Adams had a majority in Congress, and might, therefore, have had any appropriation made for Internal Improvements that he would have asked for. But nothing was ever said or done after his first message. We will resume this subject; but before we close the present paragraph we repeat that John Q. Adams has never given a vote in favour of either Internal Improvements or Domestic Manufactures, but has always been found in the opposition. While Gen. Jackson has constantly advocated and voted for every measure tending to promote or encourage those objects. We challenge the Adams men to contradict us, and show the proof."

GEN. JACKSON.—The Charleston Mercury relates the following interesting anecdote of Gen. Jackson "At the period of the greatest embarrassment during the Creek campaign, when despondency clouded the brow of every American soldier in the field, with the exception of the commanding general, a delegation of officers from their fellow associates in arms were selected to apply to Gen. Jackson to abandon the war and retreat to the settlements. After portraying in impressive language the almost hopeless condition of the army, with a vindictive savage foe ambushed on their march, not an article of subsistence save a few acorns to administer to the demands of hunger, and an almost trackless wilderness in their rear, the committee in the language of despair exclaimed,—Great God, General what is to become of us? "Put your trust, replied the immortal chieftain, in God, and confide in me, and as Moses did the Israelites, I will lead you through the wilderness."

Mr. Clay sooner than see a rival—and one too, who, at the last election received a larger number of votes than any other candidate, elected to the Presidency, would see our happy country convulsed with War, the hardy, healthful and industrious population of this fair garden of the world, swept away by loathsome Pestilence, or sink under the slow and painful death by Famine. Isn't this impious, infamous, shocking? What! that a man, who mouths about patriotism, and talks of prostrating himself before his Maker, should invoke upon his country War, Pestilence, and Famine! The idea is almost too monstrous, too horrible to be conceived! Yet, such has been the language of Mr. Clay, the Secretary of State! ! It is true, he did not mention the name of Jackson in his speech, but the whole of it was directed at him. But since Mr. Clay has invoked War, Pestilence and Famine, upon the country, let us suppose that some one of these scourges should be visited upon us. Suppose we were to be involved in War! To whom would the people look to carry them honorably and gloriously through it? Think you it would be John Q. Adams, or his spouting Secretary? No! No! the eyes of the nation would turn to him, who closed the last war in a blaze of glory;—they would look to the old Farmer of Tennessee—they would point, as with one hand, to ANDREW JACKSON! Suppose our fair country were to be afflicted with Pestilence!— Who would be seen, at the risk of his own life attempting to save the lives of others? Would it be John Q. Adams, or his demagogue of a Secretary? No! It would be he, who, when disease had weakened him & hard service had worn him down almost, encountered the pestilential vapours of the marshes and the scorching sun of a Southern country in the cause of the people. It would be ANDREW JACKSON? Suppose Famine should blight our land! Who should we see sharing his private fortune with his fellow citizens? Think you it would be John Q. Adams! No! He has hung like a leech upon the body politic, sucking from the treasury the hard earnings of the poor, and his appetite seeming "to increase by what it fed on."—Baltimore Republican.

LATE FROM EUROPE.

The packet ship Henry at New York, brings advices from Havre to the 19th and Paris papers to the 18th ult. both inclusive. These papers, we learn from the New York American, contain accounts from Odessa, that Russia had declared war against Turkey; and in that of the 18th there is an article, dated Bucharest, 26th March, which states that a report prevailed there that a division of Russian troops had crossed the Danube, near Reni, and taken possession of several Turkish vessels—among which was one loaded with provisions for the fortresses on the Danube, and afterwards re-crossed the river.

As it now seems to be ascertained beyond doubt that the Russian armies will pass the Pruth, and as the tone of all the foreign journals leads us to suppose that this occupation of the two Principalities will be made with the concurrence of the Allies; the next point of moment is, to what extent is Russia to proceed without being understood to violate her understanding of the Treaty of the 6th of July? We have learned from a source at Washington which we consider authentic, that it is within the contemplation of the parties to that treaty, that Russia should cross the Danube, and bring Turkey to reason by dispersing her forces in that quarter. If Russia, in the event of success, should keep her faith to her allies by seeking no accession of territory, we presume she is to be rewarded by retaining the Principalities, and the acquisition of commercial and other privileges. Her prevalence in the contest would expose her moderation in so delicate a test, that it is no wonder the French ministry propose a loan, in order to be ready to meet all contingencies.—B. American, May 20.

Bank of Wilmington and Brandywine. We understand that a report has been, and perhaps still is in circulation, in some neighbourhoods, against the standing of the Bank of Wilmington and Brandywine; for which there is not the slightest reason. The public at a distance may rest assured that in this place there is no distrust of the bank whatever.— Del. Gazette.

Counterfeits.—A merchant of New York received on Tuesday from a customer in Virginia, four ten dollar notes of the Manhattan Company, and took a fifth at his store from a stranger, all of which are counterfeit. They are dated Jan. 3d and 4th, 1827, and payable to D. Le Roy. This is a new emission from a plate which was, we believe, first used with the date of July, 1825.

Appointments by the President.—Albert Gallatin, of Pennsylvania, and William Pitt Preble, of Maine, to be severally agents in the negotiation and upon the umpirage relating to the northeastern boundary of the United States.

John Savage, of New York, to be Treasurer of the United States, in the place of Thomas T. Tucker, deceased.

MINISTER TO ENGLAND.

A letter from Washington under date of Tuesday, from a source on which we have full reliance, communicates the following information.—

"The Secretary of War, Governor Barbour, will be nominated to-morrow to the Senate, as Minister to London. Gen. P. B. Porter, of New York, succeeds him as Secretary of War. General Harrison goes to Columbia." American.

THE TARIFF.

This bill with the amendments of the Senate, passed the House of representatives on Thursday the 15th inst. It now wants only the signature of the President to become a law.

☞Aware of the general and anxious solicitude produced by the news of the sickness of General Lafayette, the following extract is taken from the last letter received from that constant friend of America, to J. S. Skinner, Esq. of Baltimore, dated "Paris, March 28, 1828.

"It is with a lively and deep regret that I have heard the death of General Brown—a few days before we have been informed of the loss of Governor De Witt Clinton. Distance does not soften the feelings of friends on those melancholy occasions. I have been very sick for upwards of two months. A bronchial inflammation, with the addition, for a few days, of a pleurisy has confined me to my bed. I now am a convalescent and begin to attend the Chambre des Deputes, where some, very inadequate to be sure, but real ameliorations are likely to take place. Remember me most affectionately to our friends at Baltimore and Washington."—A. Farmer.

CONTENTS

Of the American Farmer of May 23.

Answers to some of the Queries relating to Agriculture, &c., concluded—Notice of Maryland Cotton—On Reaping Grain—Sketch of the Character of the late Colonel John Taylor of Caroline, Virginia—Potatoes—Prospect of Crops—Extracts from the Manual on the Culture and Manufacture of Silk, with remarks; continued—Dentition, Teething; continued—Useful Hints, relative to Bed-clothes, Mattresses, Cushions, &c.—Pedigrees of Thorough-bred Horses; President, Eclipse, Porto Bello, Commutation, and Herod—Wildair, Figure, &c.—Liverwort, Table of Inspections of Wheat Flour—Indian Cure for the Bite of Snakes—Editorial—Steam Printing Presses; Letter from General Lafayette; Communication, Neat Farming, on a large scale, at Harewood—Trade on the Susquehanna—Prices.

Baltimore Prices Current.

Baltimore, Friday, May 23.

FLOUR—white wheat family, $[illegible] a 6 50—superfine Howard-st. 4 75 a 4 87½; city mills, 4 50; Susquehanna 4 37½ a 4 50—GRAIN, best red wheat 87 a 92; best white wheat 95 a 1 0[illegible]; ordinary to good 80 a 85—CORN, [illegible] a 34—RYE, 50—OATS, 20 a 22—CLOVER SEED, 3 a 3 50—TIMOTHY, 1 25 a 2 00—BARLEY, [illegible] a 62—FLAXSEED, 75 a 80.

☞The Ladies' Bible Society will meet on Monday the 2d of June next, at 3 o'clock P. M. in the Methodist Church at Princess-Anne.

☞The Levy Court of Somerset county will meet on Tuesday the 10th of June next, to elect Constables.

☞An error occurred in the communication published last week, signed 'A Subscriber.' The weight of the sheep there given was the live weight.

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that I have appointed Benjamin J. Jones my agent to collect all money due me, and to adjust and settle all claims against me, therefore all persons owing me, or having claims against me will please call on him.

JOHN JONES, (of Ben.)

May 27, 1828.

Constable's Sale.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by George M. Wil[illegible] a justice of the peace, and to me directed, one, James Dorman use of Jery. Mezzick use of Hooper & J[illegible]kins against Louda Riggin and James Powell, and one George Wright against Louda Riggin, I have seized taken in execution as the property of the said Louda, one negro girl named Sarah, which said negro girl I shall sell on the 17th day of June next, to the highest bidder for ready cash, at the Court-House door, in Princess Anne, between 2 and 3 o'clock P. M. to satisfy the above claims.

SAML. McBRYDE, Const.

May 26—27. dk

From the W. Telegraph.

COALITION LITERATURE.

Had not the coalition and its adherents assailed Gen. Jackson with the most intemperate abuse, for alleged literary deficiencies, we should never have urged such deficiencies against any one of them. We consider the writing and speaking of our mother tongue correctly, a species of knowledge worth acquiring, because through that tongue are ideas exchanged with our countrymen; and the nearer we approach to verbal and oral precision, the less are we in danger of misunderstanding or being misunderstood. Still, one may speak his own language ungrammatically, and write it without regard to correctness in grammar or orthography, without danger of misinterpretation. To may say that, "the Americans is a well educated people," and write that, "vigilence is the preservativ of liberty," without being misunderstood by a single person of common sense, conversant with the English language. On the contrary, he may spell with critical accuracy, every word in this inconveniently copious language, and be perfectly conversant with every rule which rhetoricians & grammarians have prescribed; and still, in negotiating a treaty, or settling contested claims, express himself so indistinctly as to concede the principal points of the controversy. Therefore, while conceding to literary precision its just importance, we deny that it is any test of ones qualifications for difficult and complicated public trusts. We have viewed the late attacks upon the literary character of General Jackson as exceedingly contemptible; suggested by minds exceedingly narrow and grovelling, and utterly incapable of enlarged and liberal views; and have therefore denounced them, things of which authors ought to be ashamed.

But while protesting against such attacks, we contend that, those who make them are obnoxious to all the censure they cast on others, if perchance, their own literary labours should not be without blemish. Retaliation is just; and should be severe, in proportion to the baseness of the aggressor. These remarks are suggested by a letter from a member of Congress to one of his constituents, which has been sent to us for publication, and which we here give, verbatim et literatim et punctuatim.

Washington April 4th 1828.

Dr. Sir: Yours is read and trust although we may differ as to the person who aspires to the Chief magistracy of this Country. It will not in the least interfere with our feelings as friends

I enclosed you the addresses you mentioned from a belief they contain important truths and should they not meet your views you would give to them a candid perusal and would have you, (as I know you would) act according to your best Judgment— You have long known my Sentiments as it respects the two great parties in this Country, Republican and Federal my sentiments are not changed I prefer Mr. Adams—you Mr Jackson— Mr. Adams is the Son of a Federalist, but his first acts as a politician was in support of Jeffersons administration, He possessed his Confidence until the death of that eminent Statesman not only his but Madison and Munroe. And I know of no one act to Change the opinion they formed— Jackson—His military Character has been that of a brave and successful officer—His Political life and his fitness to fill the high Station which his friends ask—is the only question—About the first act of his Political life was his vote in Congress which he gave against the vote of thanks to Washington, This I have referred to the then Journal of Congress to be correct—He voted with Tim Pickering and other federalist, and indeed a leading federalist in Congress now is his Supporters—I will not speak of his civil or military life, in its various lights which has been drawn before the public and from dockuments on record it does appear to me they are sufficient to satisfy any one that he is totally unqualified for that Station—But I have still stronger objections if possible—I consider him the candidate of the South who are opposed to the American System I see enough daily to convince me of this— You will not be surprised at the course I take—and pardon me for giving so briefly my reasons—And excuse me for sending you another dockument it is the official record from the War office of the trial and conviction of Six Militiamen—Let me ask an attentive perusal and an answer in the same friendship which address you——

Yours truly

D WOODCOCK.

Z. WHITNEY Esq.

(Mr. Whitney's reply to the above.)

Cayuga County, New York,
Genoa, April 28, 1828.

Dear Sir: I duly received yours of the 4th inst. together with the pamphlet you mentioned. It afforded me satisfaction to see that you are willing to tolerate an honest difference of political opinion, for I suspect we must continue still to differ, unless some more powerful reasons than I have yet seen, operate to change my mind, as to the subject of your letter. I think you must be mistaken as to the first part of Mr. Adams' political career. "About" the first of his public life, I believe, was in the legislature of Massachusetts. Then he was the principal leader of the federal party, a supporter of his father's administration and re-election, and consequently an opponent to the election of Jefferson. He continued in the same political course until his noted disclosure of the "treasonable designs," as they are called, of the New-England federalists, which was in the latter part of Mr. Jefferson's last term of office. After his recantation of federalism, I never could perceive any great support he gave Jefferson's or the succeeding administrations, unless it was in accepting offices under them, in the capacity of foreign minister, he has done the same as any other man of common abilities would have done, except in a few instances. His patriotic letter to Levitt Harris, however, I hope no other man in his station would have been guilty of writing.— One of those cases was one which I referred to in my last, that is his wish to cede to England the privilege of the Mississippi in exchange for the fishing privilege of Newfoundland.— This I do not think, at the present time, can admit of a doubt. Now this appears to me to show too much sectional feeling for any man (let him be north or south) who is the representative of a nation; nor do I believe any friend to his country will justify it, unless party spirit has carried him entirely beyond the bounds of reason and judgement. His demands for outfits, salaries, contingent expenses and constructive journeys, are other instances which prove to me that, personal interest was more his object than the public good. Now I would ask you as a man, not as a politician, how his conduct in this last respect compares with that of General Jackson, when the citizens of New Orleans voluntarily urged upon him the amount which Judge Hall fined him. I must acknowledge that considering the exalted station of the two, it makes Mr. Adams look very contemptible in my view. Another very strong objection to Mr. Adams, which we have in this quarter, is the manner in which he came into office. His election resulted, without a doubt in my mind, from corrupt bargain with an old political opponent, one whom he had opposed on almost every important subject for a long time. Even the conduct of Jackson in the Seminole war, he defended against the attacks of this new made friend. The same conduct of Jackson, which he and you then supported, his consistent followers now holding up to the public as deserving reprobation. You will undoubtedly deny this, and say if such a bargain existed, it would admit of proof. So I think and further I believe it has been sufficiently proved to satisfy every honest and intelligent man in the Union, whether he will acknowledge it or not.

With this opinion of Mr. Adams, you cannot be surprised that I should be opposed to his re-election, for I do not believe the time has yet come, when the greatest political intriguer is to be considered the most proper manager of our national concerns. As to his administration, my opinion is decidedly against it. Our national concerns are not in that prosperous condition which we might expect from a vigorous administration in time of peace, particularly, as it regards our relations with foreign governments. The increase of the expenses of government is such as to convince one that, there must be deficiency of honesty or economy some where, and gives rise to the fear that, if this administration and increase of expenses continue, our finances may become seriously embarrassed. You must pardon me if I do not attach so much importance to your objections to General Jackson as you seem to. Of his opposition to the vote of thanks to Washington, I am not sufficiently informed to give an opinion. It seems, however, it was no barrier to his exposing his life in fighting in defence of the liberties of his country. But at the worst, it cannot be worse than Mr. Adams' vote against a resolution of respect to the memory of Samuel Adams, in the legislature of Massachusetts. But your strongest objection to General Jackson, you say, is, that he is the candidate of the South, who are opposed to the "American System." What grounds you have to believe he is opposed to the "American System" I know not. For my part, I have seen nothing which would lead to that conclusion—but on the contrary, the whole course of his life, I think, proves that he would be the President of the nation and not of a section. By the by, how happens it, if Mr. Adams is so much in favor of the "American System," that he entirely omitted it in his message to Congress. Of the trial and execution of the six militia men, the "official record" of which you sent me, I have but little to say. I consider the pamphlet as deceptive and intended to mislead, and the conduct of Jackson in relation to that affair as no more than the necessary discharge of an official duty, which the circumstances of the times imperiously demanded. This conclusion I have come to from a careful examination of all the sources of information within my reach, not omitting your "official record from the War office."

Yours, &c.,

ZERAH WHITNEY.

D. WOODCOCK, Esq.

Allowing for the sake of argument, all his enemies have alleged against Gen. Jackson, and which is wantonly untrue; admitting all their distortions and misrepresentations of his letters, for the contemptible purpose of shewing that he does not always write with literal or grammatical accuracy, we can find nothing so truly ridiculous, so indicative of gross ignorance of grammatical or orthographical rules, as this letter of the honorable Representative. It is a literary curiosity, which no one can read without smiling, if not laughing outright. What adds to the stigma of the Honorable member's ignorance, is the fact that, he has received what is called a collegiate education, and was a schoolmate at Yale College, of the Vice President. How could his time have been employed at his Alma Mater? Certainly not in the studies usually pursued there; for it is impossible to conceive that, any person who had ever learned to write his own language with tolerable accuracy, and had never been in the habit of writing or speaking any other, should so utterly forget its most common forms. It is also difficult to conceive that, any one should have passed through an American College and obtained a diploma, without learning something of the structure of his own language. But admitting that the Honorable member was a proficient in his academical and collegiate studies, among which are English grammar, and spelling and composition in English, how could he have been employed since his departure from the halls of learning? The mere fact of reading newspapers, to say nothing of books, would be sufficient for retaining some knowledge of grammar and spelling. He must then, either have been a dunce in college and have obtained a degree without being able to pass the slightest examination, a reflection upon the government and faculty of Yale College which is utterly inadmissible; or he cannot have read a book in English since that period. In either case, how eminently must he be qualified for a legislator of this great country!! We say nothing of the Honorable members ignorance of American political history; for gross must be his ignorance, who could say that, the first acts of Mr. Adams' political life were in support of Mr. Jefferson's administration. We have left that to his correspondent, whose letter we publish, and who has answered the Honorable gentleman thoroughly. We may venture to assert, however, that, no one of the gentleman's constituents would have committed a blunder so ridiculous. We confine our remarks to his literature; and would advise him, if he would not commit wilful murder by causing us to die of laughing, to say no more against the civil qualifications of General Jackson. David Woodcock, who cannot write a sentence of pure English, nor spell even his blunders correctly, and who knows less of his country's history than any school boy over ten years of age, talking of General Jackson's unfitness for a civil station! Bah!!

NO DENIAL.

We called upon Mr. Warfield last week, to meet fairly and fully the queries propounded to him; and we were assured, immediately after the publication of our paper, that he would meet them with a pointed and unequivocal denial. The Examiner made its appearance, but it contains no denial. On the contrary a most unfair and suspicious attempt is made to blink the question by evading the first issue. Instead of denying that he ever made the statement embraced in the queries, he denies that ever Mr. Adams held any communication like the one mentioned. This kind of shuffling will never do, and we again call upon Mr. Warfield to meet the queries as they are put, and say distinctly whether he did or did not state what is contained in the queries.

The following is his communication to the public. It will be seen he denies that ever Mr. Adams sent for him and asked him for his vote, &c. This is not the point at issue. The question is, did not Mr. W. make such a statement? This he does not deny— he dare not deny.

"My personal acquaintance with Mr. Adams is extremely limited. I never did receive from him any letter, note, or written communication, at any time or upon any business public or private—nor did he ever request in writing or verbally any private conversation with me. I never held with Mr. Adams any conversation upon the subject of my vote on the presidential election. He never made to me any overture of any character on that subject. If it had been possible for him to have been so lost to all feeling of delicacy and propriety as to have made any overture, I would have indignantly repelled the insult. Since the close of the session of 1824—5, I have not seen Mr. Adams, nor did I ever before or since that time receive any communication from him on the subject of a foreign mission. Of the nine representatives from Maryland, four being for General Jackson and five having voted for Mr. Adams, as one of them, I may have said I gave the casting vote of the state. In voting for Mr. Adams I was influenced by a conscientious belief of his decided superiority to General Jackson, and under a clear conviction that the safety and best interests of Maryland, and the safety and welfare of my country would (as they have been) be emphatically subserved and promoted.— Moreover, during the contested election in the district I represented, in the summer of 1824, the public mind was much agitated on the subject of the presidential election, which was to take place in this state soon after the election of members to congress. In my private conversation and in my public addresses I avowed my decided preference for Mr. Clay—that my next choice would be Mr. Adams, but that I would be governed in my vote on that question, should it devolve upon the House of Representatives, by what might be the ascertained wishes of a majority of the citizens of the district. The result of the election proved that there was a large majority of the voters in that district in favor of Mr. Adams' election. I was bound under those circumstances, by the pledge which I had both privately and publicly given to my constituents to vote for Mr. Adams. The facts which I have stated are now in the distinct recollection of the most respectable citizens of this state. Wherefore then, the necessity of any conference with Mr. Adams on the subject?

HENRY R. WARFIELD.

Frederick-town, May 9th, 1828.

Is this a negative to our queries? Is this saying that he never made the statement alleged? No—nothing like it. We will not be satisfied with such a subterfuge. A plain denial is what we demanded—what the public have a right to demand—or the bill will be taken pro confesso against him."—We have said, and we again say, we have the most respectable testimony to sustain the fact of Mr. Warfield having made the statement, and his artful evasion of the question, is proof presumptive that he is afraid to deny it. We have in our possession, and can at any time produce, the certificate of a man of high standing, a man whose veracity has never, to our knowledge, been impeached—a man whose honesty of motives in making the disclosure, we do not think will be questioned. Although he is not the only witness on whom we rely to prove the allegations Mr. Warfield has not ventured to deny, we attach more importance to him on account of the relation in which he stood to Mr. Clay & Mr. Warfield. He was a candidate for elector in favor of Mr. Clay at the last presidential election and was supported as such by the friends of Mr. Clay in this electoral district. This gentleman was the decided friend of Mr. Clay up to the election in the House of Representatives, and we presume to the time of Mr. Warfield's disclosure. He is a native of Maryland, distinguished as a scientific physician, and has contributed much to medical literature. It will at once be perceived that we allude to Doctor WILLIAM ZOLLICKOFFER. He is one of the persons to whom Mr. Warfield made the statement. The doctor certifies to every tittle involved in the queries, and Mr. Warfield has not denied, and we perceive he will not venture to deny the doctor's certificate—Mr. Warfield having evaded the question, and by his silence on the direct issue, impliedly admitted that he did make the statement, the only conclusion that can be drawn from his answer to the queries, are, that he told Dr. Zollickoffer what was not true, or that his answer to the queries involves falsehood. One of the two is inevitable.—We shall pursue this subject in our next.—Fredericktown Citizen.

THE CONTRAST, OR A PILL FOR THE ELECTIONEERING SECRETARIES.

The original, of which the following is a copy, is in our possession. It is in the hand writing of THOMAS JEFFERSON, late President of the United States, and will be submitted to the inspection of any gentlemen, belong to which party he may, who will call at this office. It will be observed there is no date to it, but it was probably written during the Presidency of Mr. Jefferson, for we found it among a parcel of his papers endorsed '1804—5—6,' It is evidently the rough draught—having many erasures and interlineations. We presume it to have been the form of a circular put into the hands of the head of each Department, to be addressed to its subordinate officers.

We ask the public to mark the difference betwen the course here chalked out by Mr. Jefferson for the officers of the General Government, and that pursued by the present President, his Secretaries, and all "officers depending on the Executive of the Union." We have seen Mr. Adams since he became President of the United States coming among us, endeavouring to throw off his natural reserve, to be very "condescending," to use a word which was applied to his conduct at the time by one of the loyal prints of this city, and devoting two or three days to the purpose of electioneering. We have seen Mr. Clay, the Secretary of State of Mr. Adams' choice—no not choice—appointment,—making annually a tour to the West electioneering for the administration—making speeches at barbacues, taverns, crossroads, &c.—extolling himself and his friends, and Mr. Adams and his friends, and abusing General Jackson and his party—we have seen him using his official influence and the patronage of his Department to effect elections both in the General and State Governments,—we have seen him, in a word, neglecting his public duties to the great loss of the public, and openly and shamelessly electioneering! We have seen Mr. Barbour, the Secretary of War, pushing into Virginia and attending the election where his own son was a candidate, and electioneering for him so openly as to disgust the proud freeholders of Virginia—and we have seen him too in our own state electioneering—and we have seen him under the pretence of visiting the Bedford Springs making an electioneering demonstration on Pennsylvania. We have seen Mr. Southard, Mr. Adams' Secretary of the Navy, at one time, at the Virginia Springs, at another, in New Jersey, again, on "a tour of observation to the lakes." We have seen all these trips of the Honorable Secretaries of Mr. Adams made at such peculiar crises,—at, or just before elections— that we cannot doubt their objects.— But, to the Circular, the correctness of the sentiments of which every man will admit, and whose cutting application to the present officers of the General Government will strike every one.

"CIRCULAR."

"The President of the U. S. has seen with dissatisfaction officers of the General Government taking on various occasions active parts in elections of the public functionaries whether of the General or of the State Governments. Freedom of election being essential to the mutual independence of governments, and of the different branches of the same government so vitally cherished by most of our constitutions, it is deemed improper for officers depending on the Executive of the Union to attempt to control or influence the free exercise of the elective right. This I am instructed therefore to notify to all officers within my department holding their appointments under the authority of the President directly, and to desire them to notify to all subordinate to them. The right of an officer to give his vote at elections as a qualified citizen is not meant to be restrained, nor, however given shall it have any effect to his prejudice: but it is expected that he will not attempt to influence the votes of others, nor take any part in the business of electioneering, that being deemed inconsistent with the spirit of the constitution and his duties to it."

☞We repeat it—any gentleman may see the original of the above Circular, in the hand-writing of Mr. Jefferson, who will call at this office. Balt. Rep.

Mr. Clay is in terrible alarm now, for the safety of the Republic. He talks of "impending perils," and "the existing crisis." General Jackson is about to be made President, and "Mister Henry Clay" as Mr. Adams would —did—say, fears we are all about to be undone!

The same gentleman, "Mister Henry Clay," in his speech on the Seminole war, in 1819, said—

"He was far from intimating that General Jackson cherished any designs inimical to the liberties of the country. He believed his intentions PURE and PATRIOTIC. He thanked God that he would not, but he thanked him still more that he could not, if he would, overturn the liberties of the Republic."

Mr. Clay did not then anticipate that General Jackson would ever stand in his way to the Presidency.— Times have changed, and Jackson is now a Sylla, a Cæsar, a Marius, a Cromwell. It won't do Mr. Clay. Why not just say at once, General Jackson is a candidate for the Presidency—if he is elected I am thrown out of office, with no possibility of ever coming in again. This is the truth of the whole matter, and the people understand it. They know very well that you have no fears for the liberties of the people, or the preservation of the constitution under Jackson; and it is idle for you to attempt to make any man believe that speechifying is for any thing but yourself. You are in office and you want to stay there. Ib.

EXTRACT of a Letter from Mr. Wm. C. Rives of the House of Representatives, to his Constituents in the county of Amherst, Va.

"In relation to that portion of the expenditure out of this fund, which is most liable to abuse (I mean expenditures for secret service) we have now the authority of the public and uncontradicted statement of a member of Congress (Mr. J. S. Barbour,) who also a member of the standing committee on Public Expenditures, for the fact that the amount of this kind of expenditure since the commencement of the present administration had exceeded all bounds of proportion to the same kind of expenditure under former administrations, in like circumstances. You will see from Mr. Barbour's speech, a copy of which I sent you, that the amount of secret service expenditures during two years and 6 months of Mr. Adams' Administration has been $10,624 68, while the whole amount expended for secret service from the beginning to the end of Mr. Monroe's eight years, was only $5,630, and that in the short interval of thirteen days indeed, to wit, from the 8th to the 21st November last, Mr. Adams expended $8,958 for secret service, being 3,328 dollars more than Mr. Monroe expended, during the whole period of his administration.— Having seen and examined the official vouchers on which Mr. Barbour's statement is founded, I know it to be entirely correct. * * *

"Indeed, is not the fact, which has not and cannot be controverted that the whole current expenditures of the government under the present administration exceed the aggregate amount of similar expenditures, during an equal period of the last administration by near SEVEN MILLIONS of dollars, at the lowest calculation, (according to the estimate in my speech this excess is $6,703,833. Mr. Barbour, in his speech, makes it $8,685,307 in consequence of excluding the item of military pensions, which I did not exclude,) and the reluctant admission of the President in his message to Congress at the commencement of the Session that "the expenditures of the last year exceed its receipts," by the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, which he calls a small excess—Are not these facts sufficient in themselves to stamp with utter reprobation and discredit all the vain pretensions of economy on the part of the friends of the present administration? * * * *

"W. C. RIVES."

The following is among a number of able and spirited resolutions, adopted at a late meeting of the citizens of Fayette county, Pa. The facts therein stated are matters of public record, and are so plainly and broadly set forth, that the most subdulous casuistry cannot alter its meaning—

Resolved, That ANDREW JACKSON, is entitled to our support as the decided and OPEN friend to Domestic Manufactures, and Internal improvements. Having voted whilst lately a member of Senate, for the Tariff of 1824, which is now the only law on the subject, and FIVE TIMES in favour of Internal Improvements in the same year, and in no case against them, whilst J. Q. Adams, when a member of the same body voted SEVEN TIMES against Internal Improvements and never once for them; and who HAS NEVER, before or since he became President, said one word to congress in favour of the tariff.

We select the following from among a number of able resolutions, passed at a meeting held at Zanesville, Ohio, a short time since.

Resolved, That we view with astonishment and regret, the repeated assertions and acts of designing politicians to delude the people into the belief, that General Jackson is opposed to the encouragement and protection of domestic manufactures and internal improvements.

Resolved, That, as western citizens friendly to the "American System"— to domestic manufactures and internal Improvements—we recommend all true friends to manufactures and internal improvements to support the election of Gen. Andrew Jackson to the Presidency.

The editor of the Boston Daily Advertiser is a member of the Senate of Massachusetts, and on the list of Candidates for the lower house from Boston, we discover five names that belong to the editorial corps. The politicians of the literary emporium seem to be liberal. In this portion of the Union —they make the press and its conductors young ambition's ladder—and having gained the top, they are occasionally disposed to turn their back and kick down the means whereby they did ascend.—U. S. Gaz.

We are authorized to announce

Anthony B. Bennett, Esq.

as a Candidate for the next General Assembly of Maryland.

May 27, 1828. jw

We are authorized to announce

John C. Wilson, jr. Esq.

as a candidate to represent Somerset county in the next House of Delegates of Maryland.

May 13, 1828. mt

We are authorized to announce

Levin D. Jones, Esq.

as a candidate to represent Somerset county in the next House of Delegates of Maryland.

We are authorized to announce

William H. Waters, Esq.

as a candidate to represent Somerset county in the next House of Delegates of Maryland.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
May 20, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Edward Fowler & Levisa Kennerly, Administrators of Orrell Kennerly, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that they give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscribers, of Somerset county, have obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Orrell Kennerly, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th of November next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 20th of May, 1828.

EDWARD FOWLER, &
LEVISA KENNERLY,
Adm'tors of O. Kennerly, dec'd.

May 27, 1828. k

NOTICE.

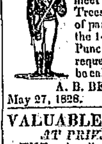
ALL persons indebted to the subscriber are respectfully requested to come forward and settle their accounts by paying the cash, before the 15th of June next. The subscriber is compelled to this course from the peculiar situation of his affairs. He returns his grateful acknowledgements for the very liberal encouragement he has received from the public, in his line of business, and solicits a continuance of the same, as he will continue to exert himself to render universal satisfaction. The public's ob't. serv't.

THOS. L. DISHAROON.

Snowhill, May 27th, 1828.

N.B. Those of my customers, whom I may not see during Somerset Court, are requested to remit me the amount of their accounts and thereby prevent the addition of cost. T. L. D.

MILITARY NOTICE.



THE Ferry Company of Militia are ordered to meet at the Walnut-Trees, their usual place of parade, on Saturday the 14th of June next.— Punctual attendance is requested. The roll will be called at 2 o'clock P.M.

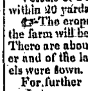
A. B. BENNETT, Capt.

May 27, 1828.

VALUABLE PROPERTY

AT PRIVATE SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM, situated at the mouth of Wicomico Creek, in Somerset county, Md. containing about 300 acres and known by the name of "Kibble's Destiny." The improvements are an excellent two story frame house, with necessary outbuildings—A peach orchard containing nearly 1000 trees—Also, a good apple orchard.



Vessels of a large burden can come within 20 yards of the house.

☞The crops of corn and wheat on the farm will be sold with the land— There are about 175,000 of the former and of the latter about forty bushels were sown.

For further particulars and terms apply to JOSHUA MORRIS.

May 20, 1828.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

STANZAS, addressed to Lelia.

Dear Girl, how oft my mind revives
The luscious moments, spent with thee;
How oft my fleet thought pursues
The glances, thou hast given me!

Tho' absent, I behold thy form,
Tho' absent, I can see thee smile,
Tho' absent, thou my heart dost warm,
Dost cheer my bosom, all the while.

I speak not Flat'ry's wily words;
True love will not its object mar:
Since Flat'ry false delight affords,
To Virtue, Candour's dearer far.

I call thee not the fairest flow'r,
That ever grac'd the gay parterre;
I say not, thine's the only pow'r,
Which can my weary bosom cheer.

But thou hast charms, delightsome charms,
Which grace thy person and thy mind,
Which calm life's turbulent alarms,
And make thy smiles so sweet and kind.

Love beams in ev'ry artless glance,
And Modesty adorns thy mein;
Love does thy virgin worth enhance,
And Virtue holds, in thee, her reign.

EDMUND.

Bellavilla, May 22, 1828.

[SELECTED.]

THE WINGS OF LOVE.

Translated from the French.

'Tis said Love flies; whence came his wings?
The boy was born with no such things,
For innocence would never rove,
And wings were useless then to Love:
Nor did they shoot up as he grew,
For Infancy is fond and true:
Thus, still unfledg'd, he reach'd the age
When tender sighs the heart engage,
For Constancy will ever prove
The sister fair of youthful Love:
But soon as e'er one balmy kiss,
From Chloe's lips, had seal'd his bliss,
And taught his little heart to leap,
The callow points began to peep.
Another kiss!—the callow points
To pinions sprout with downy joints.
Kiss follows kiss!—two days, 'tis said,
Full plumage o'er the pinions spread.
In fine, he talk'd and woo'd so well,
He gain'd much more than I shall tell.
Soon as his power the Urchin knew,
He proudly clapt his wings and flew.

FROM THE BIJOU.

YOUTH AND AGE.

By S. T. Coleridge, Esq.

Youth, a breeze mid blossoms straying,
Where Hope clings feeding like a bee,
Both were mine! Life went a Maying
With Nature, Hope and Poesy.

When I was young—
When I was young!—Ah! woful when!
Ah, for the change 'twixt now and then!
This house of clay not made with hands,
This body that does me grievous wrong,
O'er hill and dale and sounding sands,
How lightly then it flashed along:
Like those trim boats, unknown of yore,
On winding lakes and rivers wide,
That ask no aid of sail or oar,
That fear no spite of wind or tide!
Nought cared this body for wind or weather,
When youth and I lived in't together.
Flowers are lovely; Love is flower-like,
Friendship is a sheltering tree.
O the joys, that came down shower-like,
Of Beauty, Truth and Liberty.

Ere I was old—
Ere I was old?—Ah, woful ere!
Which tells me youth's no longer here!
O youth, for years so many and sweet,
'Tis known that thou and I were one:
I'll think it but a false conceit,
It cannot be that thou art gone!
Thy vesper bell hath not yet toll'd
And thou wert aye a masker bold.
What strange disguise hast now put on,
To make believe that thou art gone?
I see these locks in silvery slips,
This dragging gait, this altered size;
—But spring tide blossoms on thy lips,
And tears take sunshine from thine eyes:
Life is but thought, so think I will
That Youth and I are house-mates still.

FROM ZION'S HERALD.

PASTIME.

"Like as the damask rose you see,
Or like the blossom on the tree,
Or like the daisy flowers in May,
Or like the morning to the day,
Or like the sun, or like the shade,
Or like the gourd which Jonah had;
E'en such is man, whose thread is spun,
Drawn out and cut, and so is done.—
The rose withers, the blossom blasteth,
The flowers fade, the morning hasteth,
The sun sets, the shadow flies,
The gourd consumes, and man dies."

Man dies! alas, how soon he dies!—
The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet their strength, labour, and sorrow; for it is soon cut off and we fall away,—
O that unfathomable sea!
These deeps without a shore!
Where living waters gently play,
Or fiery billow roar."

It has been the belief of all nations, from time immemorial, that there is a principle in man, which exists after the dissolution of the body. This principle is what Christians term the soul: it is an immaterial, vital, active substance, whereby we perceive, remember, will, and reason. This soul is destined to exist for ever, and eternity is to be its dwelling place.

The general dissatisfaction which mankind have always manifested with this present state of existence, is an evidence, that there is another world to which Deity has disposed their minds to look forward; in this point of view, it may be said, all men speak one universal language—"man never is—but always to be blest." It is a natural propensity of the soul, to look forward to another state of being; it has desires implanted in its very nature, which immortality alone can satisfy. The conciousness, fears, and hopes which constantly pervade the minds of rational beings, are sufficient to demonstrate the immortality of the soul. But let us turn to the scriptures. The Saviour in Luke xx. 35. speaks of that world, referring particularly to another state of existence, contradistinguished from this present, mortal life, where they shall be as the angels of God—never die. And in Matt. x. 28, he gives us to understand, that though it is possible for the soul to become extinct by death. The author of the book of Job believed the soul to be immortal, Job xix. 24. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God. Jesus said to the dying penitent upon the cross—This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise. The Saviour could not with propriety have said this, if it were true, that the soul ceases to retain its conciousness at the hour of death. Again, St. Paul says—2 Cor. v. 8. We are confident, and willing, rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord. It is very evident from these words, that St. Paul did not believe, that when the body died, the soul fell into a state of dormancy, and so continued to sleep, until the resurrection—but he speaks of the soul's existing separately, and distinctly from the body in a state of felicity—with the Lord.

Man is an inexplicable being—and if he possess not an immortal spirit, capable of loving and serving his Creator, he is one of the most miserable. He trembles while reflecting on the shortness of human life, and the nearness of death; the present is filled up with innumerable pangs and sorrows, and his fearful apprehensions of the future, complete such a sum of misery as is not to be found in any other part of creation. In rectitude of conduct, and in hope of a glorious immortality, he may notwithstanding, find real and permanent felicity.

AN EXTRACT.

Looking over the face of society around me, I fancy I may correctly divide it into two general classes; those who have trouble enough of their own, without going from home for it—and those whom heaven has been pleased for some wise purpose to send into this world for the business of eating and drinking, and looking after the ways of other people—to the utter neglect of their own. The first class are business doing people, and working people, and so forth, who earn their bread, or get it by what the Connecticut folks call "hook and crook"—"the Lord knows how;" the second, those who have wherewithal to live and be fed, independent of "the Lord knows who."

That the last class should not content themselves with minding their own business, is not, perhaps, among the most extraordinary things in the world. Ever since the days of our great grandmother Eve, her species have imitated her in their disposition to meddle with other concerns than their own. But I do confess it is somewhat of a problem that those of my neighbours who have really found or might without wonderfully tasking either their ingenuity or gentility, find something wherewith to occupy their minds and bodies, which would be more edifying and profitable, should forever be looking after all the movements, and peeping into the most minute affairs of those around them.

ARABIAN DELICACY.

The extreme delicacy of Arab manners could not be better illustrated than by the following lively anecdote: "Among the numerous instances which we observed during our stay at Bengazi illustrative of Arab character and prejudices, we may notice one which occurred in the skeefs (or entrance halls) of our house, where a select party of the inhabitants of the town usually assembled themselves when the weather permitted. On this occasion the women of England formed the principal subject of conversation, and the reports of their beauty, which had reached some of our visitors, appeared to have made a great impression in their favour. One of our party then produced a miniature from his pocket, which chanced to be the resemblance of a very pretty girl; and he roundly asserted, as he handed it to the company, that every woman in England was as handsome. The first Arab of our party who was favoured with the sight of the lady in question, started back in dismay and confusion; and all his worthy countrymen who cast their eyes upon the picture withdrew them, on the instant, in the greatest alarm, exhibiting the strongest symptoms of astonishment and shame. The fact was, that the young lady who had caused so much confusion was painted in a low evening dress; and her face was only shaded by the luxuriant auburn curls, which fell in ringlets over her forehead and temples. Every Arab who saw the picture actually blushed and hid his face with his hands, exclaiming—w'Allah haram—by Heaven 'tis a sin to look upon such an exposure of charms!"

COSMOGONY.

Xenophanes took the stars to be patches of clouds lighted up at night and extinguished in the morning.

Anaxagoras considered the firmament to be an arch of stone, the sun an immense inflammable body, and the stars to be stones whirled up from the surface of the earth by the circumambient air and so ignited.

Biogenes declared the stars to be hot pumice stones fixed in the sphere of the heavens, serving as lamps in the night, but chiefly designed as ventilators of the world.

Others maintained that the sun was globular, hollow, and containing fire; that the light streamed through a cavity on one side, and, when this was stopped, the sun was eclipsed.

Aristotle thought the universe to have eternally existed in its present state. Leucippus originated the Epicurean plan, that the universe was created by atoms. Democritus laid down that these "first magnitudes" were eternal, and that they had possessed an uniform motion and celerity. Epicurus completed the structure by the theory that the world sprung from a collision of these atoms. Descartes's world was formed by vortices. Burnet, Whiston, Leibnitz, Kepler, Cuvier, and a multitude of others, have been popular for their several theories, and our own country may claim a high share of distinction for the novel and ingenious discoveries of John Cleves Symmes and Ira Hill.

APOTHEGM.

"A Shoemaker must not go beyond his last."

The moral instruction of this proverb is, that persons, though skilful in their own art, ought not to meddle or make with things out of their own sphere and not presume to correct or amend what they do not understand. It took its authority from the story of the celebrated painter Apelles, who, having drawn a famous piece, and exposed it to public view, a cobler came by and found fault with it, because he made too few latchets to the shoes. Apelles mended it accordingly, and set it out again, and the next day the cobler coming again, found fault with the whole leg, upon which Apelles came out, saying—Cobler, go home, and keep to your last.

STATE.

Madame de Maintenon, who enjoyed all the distinctions and flatteries of the splendid Court of Louis XIV. until she at length became the wife of that illustrious Monarch, has given the following impressive testimony to the vanity and hollowness of her enjoyments, in a letter to Mad. Maisonfort.

"O that I could give you my experience! that I could make you see the ennui which devours the great, and the trouble which they have to fill up their days! Do you not see that I am dying of sadness, in a fortune that it would be difficult to conceive of? I have been young and handsome; I have tasted pleasure; I have been loved by every one.—In a more advanced age, I have passed my years in the intercourse of genius. I have come to favor, and I protest to you my dear child, that every condition leaves a frightful void."

From the Cherokee Phœnix.

SCANDAL.—"There are people," continued the Corporal, "who can't even breathe without slandering a neighbour."

"You judge too severely," replied my aunt Prudy; "no one is slandered who does not deserve it."

"That may be," retorted the Corporal, "but I have heard very slight things said of you."

The face of my Aunt kindled with anger; "Me" she exclaimed—"me: slight things of me! what can any body say of me?"

"They say," answered the Corporal, gravely, and drawing his words to keep her in suspense, that ——— you are no better than you ought to be."

Fury flashed from the eyes of my Aunt: "who are the wretches?"

"I hope they slander no one who does not deserve it," remarked the Corporal, jeeringly, as he left the room.

The feelings of my Aunt may well be conceived. She was sensibly injured. True, she had her foibles. She was peevish and fretful, but she was rigidly moral and virtuous. The purest ice was not more chaste; the Pope himself could not boast more piety. Conscious of the correctness of her own conduct, she was wounded at the remark of the Corporal. Why should her neighbors slander her? She could not conjecture.

Let my Aunt be consoled. A person who can live in this world, without suffering scandal, must be too stupid or insignificant to claim attention.

THE LAY PREACHER.

Ecclesiasticus. 28th ch. 32d & 33d verses.

Take not pleasure in much good cheer, neither be tied to the expense thereof.

Be not made a beggar by banqueting upon borrowing, when thou hast nothing in thy purse.

This text was made for the present times: and had the son of Sirach lived in our days, he never would have dismissed this subject with two short verses. A long and full chapter would have been the least he could have done for us. Let us improve what he has left us.

"Take not pleasure in much good cheer." This you will say is a hard precept. The other part of the verse, "neither be tied to the expense thereof," is well enough—give us the good cheer, and we feel indifferent as to those upon whom the expense falls.—Again, Mr. Preacher, does not Solomon somewhere say, that there is nothing better than that a man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of his labour? Yes, of his labour, but not of the labour of others. Mark the distinction.

Your good cheer gentry are not the most remarkable for their labour; and they are not always so "tied to the expense" of good cheer, but that they sometimes break away and leave others "tied to the expense thereof."

All the good things we enjoy in eating, drinking and clothing, are the fruits of labour with the blessing of God upon them. They come from the earth—the earth, to be made productive, must be cultivated. This requires labour.

We pass to the remaining part of our subject."

"Be not made a beggar by banqueting upon borrowing, when thou hast nothing in thy purse."

This comes home to our purpose. But why are we in greater danger of becoming beggars "by banqueting upon borrowing?" Answer. Because in that case we realize and expend what we have not yet earned. It comes easily—it goes easily. The man who acquires good cheer, or any other good thing by his own industry and labour, makes a more correct estimate of the value of it, and enjoys more in the use of it.

Borrowing is really in itself a species of begging; but at the present day very fashionable. We borrow of the banks—we borrow of other public institutions—we borrow of individuals, and indeed, wherever we can, we borrow. First, we borrow money—when that's out, we borrow credit; and when that fails, we-we-what! why we beg in good earnest, if not too much ashamed. Hard times! hard times! alas, what shall we do?

IMPROVEMENT.

Go to work. All of us have something to do. Bestow your time and talents upon some honest and profitable employment—live within the bounds of your income—borrow less—banquet less—visit less, but labour more. The fault is not in the times, but in ourselves. Who among us remembers a better season than the present? More abundant crops?—More universal peace and tranquility?

For shame, then, my friends, talk no more of hard times, until you have reformed yourselves; and when that period arrives, the times will be better.

From the Connecticut Courant.

RATIONAL LOVE.

We all know the power of beauty, but to render it permanent and make human life more happy and agreeable, it must have the beauties of the mind annexed. For, as Dr. Blair very justly observes, "Feeble are the attractions of the fairest form, if nothing within corresponds to the pleasing appearance without. Love and marriage are two words much spoken of, but seldom found united. To be happy in the choice of the fair one we admire, is to cultivate that regard we experience for her, into lasting esteem. The connubial state was certainly designed to heighten the joys, and to alleviate the miseries of mortality. To cherish and admire her, who came into your arms, the object of joy and pleasure; and to comfort the same dear object of your affections, when the clouds of adversity surround her. Happy within yourself, and happy in your connections, you ought to look up to the Author of all good gifts, and to give him praise, in the liveliest hour of social enjoyment." What avail all the pleasures of this sublunary state, if when we shift the flattering scene, the man is unhappy, where happiness should begin, at home! An uninterrupted interchange of mutual endearments among those of the same family, impart more satisfaction, than outward show, with inward uneasiness. Love is a tender and delicate plant; it must be guarded from all inclement blasts, or it will droop its head and die. To enliven our hours, to pass our life agreeably let us enrich our mental soil; for this, joined with love, will forever adore this happy state. A young lady, being asked her opinion of love, said, "If youth and beauty are the objects of your regard, love founded on youth and beauty cannot possibly endure longer than youth and beauty last. Love should be sincere and generous, as heaven first inspired it, and courtship void of mean dissimulation. But love at this time of day, is raising the imagination to expectations above nature, and laying the sure foundation of disappointment on both sides, when Hymen shifts the scene." Love then, according to this amiable young lady's opinion, is a passion founded on esteem. A sincere regard for the object of our affections, joined with a love, the most pure, rational, and dignified.

We are much pleased with the following article from the Literary Gazette.

Servants.—There is one foible among housekeepers, that cannot be too severely reprobated. It is a contemptible itching for a knowledge of their neighbors' affairs. This curiosity leads them to encourage and listen to the scandalous prattle of their own servants, concerning the domestic affairs of other families in which they have been employed.

Servants are always ready to take advantage of the slightest advance towards familiarity on the part of a mistress; and where they find one weak enough to relish a relation of the vices or follies of others, the appetite will be always administered to so long as prolific brains can coin a lie. Mistresses should recollect, while encouraging this practice, that their own household affairs will probably be served up, with no little exaggeration of defects, whenever their domestics pass into another family. Two or three instances have lately come under our knowledge, where comfort and reputation have been sacrificed by lies that have been propagated by menials.

And where is the remedy for this evil? It lies in the hands of every head of a family.—This tattling tendency should be stopped in its very commencement, and if a refusal to listen to the scandalous catalogue of private weakness or error were accompanied by severe reprimand, the state of society would be very much benefited.

Boston Literary Gazette.

From the American Farmer.

WASHING SHEEP.

Steubenville, May 1st, 1828.

J. S. Skinner, Esq.—Dear Sir,—I have just received yours, enclosing a letter from one of your subscribers, on the subject of washing wool on the sheep's back, a task performed in this country with very little trouble or expense.

We make a pen, of boards or fence-rail, large enough to hold the flock, (of three or four hundred sheep) immediately on the margin of some running stream, which is made to form one line of the enclosure. The men employed to wash the animals, take them, one at a time, (each man taking one) from this fold into the water, about waist deep, or nearly to their arm-pits, where they rub and press the wool with their hands and arms, until the water runs out entirely clear, which, generally speaking, will occupy from three to five minutes. They are then taken to the shore, either above or below the pen, as most convenient; and after the water is carefully pressed from the wool, are turned loose upon a dry spot, leading, if practicable, to the pasture fields. On the fourth or fifth day they should be shorn.

Four or five active men, beginning at an early period in the morning, will wash from six to eight hundred by five o'clock in the afternoon, at which hour the washing should cease, in order that the sheep may, in some measure, become dry before sun-set. I need hardly add, that the utmost care should be taken to keep the mouths of the poor animals above water, and that they should be handled carefully and gently in all respects.

We use no material but cold water in this operation, the natural grease in the wool possessing a saponaceous quality, which renders the washing perfectly easy. Pray tell your correspondent that he need not fear washing money out of his pocket into that of the poor manufacturer, who requires, at the present juncture especially, all the aid that can be given; and that it adds greatly to the reputation of his flock, to have the fleeces well washed, well tagged, and well up!

Very respectfully,
Your friend and ob't servant,
W. R. DICKINSON.

Frequent Ploughing and Ploughing in Ridges.—A writer in the London Gardener's Magazine, says, "when a soil is tenacious, or abounding in stubborn vegetable matters, as in heath lands, it cannot be too completely exposed to the action of the air; but in light soils, which are in general deficient in organic decomposing matters, chemistry would say that ridging is accompanied by evils more injurious than can be compensated by the benefits obtained; for such light soils are easily pulverized whenever occasion requires, are so porous as at all times freely to admit the pervasion of the atmosphere; and therefore, by this extra-exposure, the vegetable and animal remains are hastened in decomposing, and much of their fertile constituents evolved in the state of gas; or carried away by the rains &c. without there being any crop upon them to benefit by them. Thus theory argues, and practice certainly seems to support, in this instance, her doctrines." Switzer, one of our horticultural classics, says, 'rich heavy ground cannot well be ploughed too often, to make it light, and the better manure by killing the weeds; as light poor ground cannot be ploughed too seldom, for fear of impoverishing it.'

N. E. Farmer.

CATTERPILLARS.

This is one of the worst enemies to an orchard when neglected, but easily destroyed with a little attention, in the spring when the nests are small, and the insects are small and tender. They never venture abroad in the early part of the day, when the dew is on the trees, or in bad weather; they may then be effectually destroyed by crushing them in the nest. This attention continued for a short time every spring, will destroy those in existence and will prevent their increase in future years. If left till growing strong, they wander from their nests, and cannot be effectually overcome without great trouble and expense.

[Coxe on fruit trees.]

Improvement by plantation is at once the easiest, the cheapest, and the least precarious mode of increasing the immediate value, as well as the future income of estates; and it would be well for the lords of the soil to remember the exhortation of the dying Scotch laird to his son; "Be aye sticking in a tree, Jock; it will be growing whilst you are sleeping."

There are in the human body no less than 500 muscles, for the purpose of performing its various functions; but these are few compared to the number assigned to the minute animals; a particular species of catterpillar was ascertained by the naturalist Lyonet, to possess 4,000 muscles in the different parts of the body.

Bonapart. An ignorant plebeian having entered the apartment where the late Emperor Napoleon was shaving himself, in a little town in Italy, he said, "I want to see your great Emperor, what are you to him?" The Emperor replied, "I shave him."

E. T. J. Woodward,
Corner of Dugan's wharf & Pratt St.
BALTIMORE,

Informs his friends and customers that he will sell on COMMISSION, Wheat, Rye, Corn, Oats, and Tobacco, and all other articles of Country Produce, and will make liberal advances on the same.

He has on hand a large supply of Groceries, Liquors, &c.
CONSISTING OF
Teas, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Family Flour, Brandy, Wine, Gin, Spirits, Whiskey and Cordials. Spices, Soap & Candles, Shad, Mackerel, Herrings, Oil and Salt, together with every other article in his line.
ALSO,
Glass Ware, Queen's Ware,
Stone and Earthen Ware, &c.
And a general assortment
Of Garden Seeds of approved kinds, which he will sell on the most liberal terms.
DRY PINE OR OAK WOOD
Will be taken in exchange for Goods. on fair terms.
May 13, 1828. mw

PROPOSALS BY BENJ. EDES
FOR PUBLISHING IN BALTIMORE,
THE EMERALD,
And Baltimore Literary Gazette.

The Emerald and Baltimore Literary Gazette will be published every Saturday, in quarto form, super-royal sheet, with new long primer type, and in superior style—the editorial department to be under the direction of several gentlemen of acknowledged talents.

The want of a paper of the nature proposed, will be allowed by every citizen of this metropolis; nor has the proprietor, in his efforts, been so much prompted by a desire of gain, as by a hope of encouraging literature throughout this section of the Union. Confident of the approbation of all persons of taste, he therefore proposes the publication of the Emerald & pledges himself that no effort shall be wanting on his part to please the pulibe in general.

The Emerald shall contain the choicest selections of miscellaneous literature, from the most esteemed periodicals of this country and Europe; and the strictest attention shall be observed as to their moral tendency. Its contents shall be—Tales, original and selected; moral, humorous and scientific Essays; original and selected Poetry; Biographical Sketches of distinguished worthies; Anecdotes, &c.—The original matter will be furnished by individuals who have through the medium of our best literary productions, established themselves in public favor. Also, interesting items of foreign and domestic intelligence; critical notices of passing events; the drama, new publications, and a correct description of the prevailing fashions, both abroad and at home.

It may be worthy of notice, that the Emerald shall be in no way whatever connected with either of the great political parties; and that no communication that has a tendency, either directly or indirectly, to invade the sanctuary of domestic retirement, shall find admission into its columns; though they will always be open to an honest discussion of any question that does not tend to inflame personal or party animosity.

TERMS.—Price of subscription four dollars per annum, one half to be paid on delivery of the first number, and the balance at the expiration of six months. Postmasters and other persons of the inland towns, procuring six subscribers and becoming responsible for the payment, will be entitled to one copy gratis. When 400 Subscribers are obtained the Emerald will be issued.

☞Subscribers will be received at the Office of the Village Herald.
March 25 eow

WEAVERS' BRUSHES,
Reeds and Shuttles,
Wash and cake boards,
Sifters, Lamp and candlewick,
Muddlers, and lime squeezers
Pound, half pound and and quarter pound Butter Prints, of various patterns
Weaver's slays or reeds
Shoe, sweeping, dusting and other brushes
Twine and cord, patent taps
Cane, for reed makers
Humming and common tops
Boot & shoe blacking, towel rollers
Lamp wicks, assorted sizes, by the dozen or gross
Spiggots and fossets, suitable for hogsheads, barrels, kegs, and hydrants
Fancy and common bellows
Fishing lines and rods, butter bowls and trays, Baskets
Nests of sugar boxes and tubs
Potato & turnip mashers, rolling pins
Carpenters' or joiners' chalk lines, etc

The above articles are offered for sale on reasonable terms, by
VALERIUS DUKEHART.
No. 101½ Baltimore, between South and Calvert Streets.
May 13th, 1828.

JOB PRINTING,
SUCH AS
Handbills, Cards, Blanks,
PAMPHLETS, &c.
Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,
At the Office of the Village Herald

Blank Warrants for sale at this office.

Village Herald.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY MORNING, BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

VOL. II. PRINCESS-ANNE, MD., JUNE 3, 1828. NO. 10.

VILLAGE HERALD.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance; or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

☞No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

☞No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1; and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞All communications addressd to the editor must come POST PAID.

Timbered Land For Sale.

I am requested by John H. Bayly, Esq. to offer for sale a tract of land commonly called "Pine Pole," situated about two miles from Princess-Anne. This tract of land is valuable for the excellent timber now standing on it, and its contiguity to navigation. For terms apply to
GEO. HANDY.
Princess-Anne, Md. April 22, 1828. §

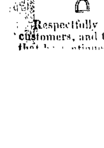
FOR SALE,

A new and fast-sailing VESSEL, of 31 tons burden, well built, of the best materials, and well rigged.

Also, a WINDMILL, the materials of which are of the best quality, (post caps and cog wheel black walnut,) stands about 50 feet from the water, and may be easily removed.

Also, 2 new MASTS, 45 feet long, ready dressed to put into a vessel—All of which the subscriber will sell on easy terms, if application be immediately made to
HENRY MADDUX.
Potato-Neck, May 6. mv

FELIX JENKINS,



Saddle, Harness,
AND Trunk Maker,
No. 10, South Street,
BALTIMORE.

Respectfully informs his friends, customers, and the public generally, that he continues to carry on the Sad-

...he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.
JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.
N.B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low.
FRUIT TREES will be furnished to orders. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders. March 11. tx

JOB PRINTING
Neatly executed at this office.

PROPOSALS BY BENJ. EDES
FOR PUBLISHING IN BALTIMORE,
THE EMERALD,
And Baltimore Literary Gazette.

The Emerald and Baltimore Literary Gazette will be published every Saturday, in quarto form, super-royal sheet, with new long primer type, and in superior style—the editorial department to be under the direction of several gentlemen of acknowledged talents.

The want of a paper of the nature proposed, will be allowed by every citizen of this metropolis; nor has the proprietor, in his efforts, been so much prompted by a desire of gain, as by a hope of encouraging literature throughout this section of the Union. Confident of the approbation of all persons of taste, he therefore proposes the publication of the Emerald & pledges himself that no effort shall be wanting on his part to please the pulibe in general.

The Emerald shall contain the choicest selections of miscellaneous literature, from the most esteemed periodicals of this country and Europe; and the strictest attention shall be observed as to their moral tendency. Its contents shall be—Tales, original and selected; moral, humorous and scientific Essays; original and selected Poetry; Biographical Sketches of distinguished worthies; Anecdotes, &c.—The original matter will be furnished by individuals who have through the medium of our best literary productions, established themselves in public favor. Also, interesting items of foreign and domestic intelligence; critical notices of passing events; the drama, new publications, and a correct description of the prevailing fashions, both abroad and at home.

It may be worthy of notice, that the Emerald shall be in no way whatever connected with either of the great political parties; and that no communication that has a tendency, either directly or indirectly, to invade the sanctuary of domestic retirement, shall find admission into its columns; though they will always be open to an honest discussion of any question that does not tend to inflame personal or party animosity.

TERMS.—Price of subscription four dollars per annum, one half to be paid on delivery of the first number, and the balance at the expiration of six months. Postmasters and other persons of the inland towns, procuring six subscribers and becoming responsible for the payment, will be entitled to one copy gratis. When 400 Subscribers are obtained the Emerald will be issued.

☞Subscribers will be received at the Office of the Village Herald.
March 25 eow

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court.
April 15th 1828.

ON application of Eliza S. J. Evans, adm'x of James Evans, late of Somerset county dec'd, it is ordered, that she give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess Anne.

True copy, Test.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,
Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of James Evans late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th of November next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13st day of May, 1828.

E. S. J. EVANS, Adm'x of J. Evans, dec'd
May 20, 1828. k

LOST.

THE subscriber lost on Saturday 3d instant, two Notes of Hand drawn in favour of him against William Wilson, sen. one for $20,00, and one against George Goddard for $30 00.—He supposes he lost them near White-Haven. Any person finding said notes and returning them to the subscriber shall have ample compensation.
JOSHUA DONOHO.
May 6th. wsw

FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of disposing of his real estate, being and lying in Worcester county, Md. and situated on Dividing-Creek. The landed estate consists of 2000, or more acres. The improvements are a dwelling house and out buildings with a good SAW and GRIST MILL, both in excellent order; also a young orchard. About 100 acres of the land is in a good state of cultivation.

There is, on one part of the above property, an abundance of Iron Ore, which would warrant the erection of a Forge, and prove an object of value to a purchaser acquainted with, and calculated for, such an undertaking.

The terms of sale will be—one third down, and 3 years for the payment of the balance. For further particulars apply to
JOHN MORRIS.
April 22 kd

Constable's Sale.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by George M. Willing, a justice of the peace, and to me directed, one, James Dorman use of Jery. Mezzick use of Hooper & Jenkins against Louda Riggin and James Powell, and one George Wright against Louda Riggin, I have seized & taken in execution as the property of the said Louda, one negro girl named Sarah, which said negro girl I shall sell on the 17th day of June next, to the highest bidder for ready cash, at the Court-House door, in Princess-Anne, between 2 and 3 o'clock P. M. to satisfy the above claims.
SAML. McBRYDE, Cons.
May 26—21 ok

THE CONTRAST:
OR,
Military Chieftains & Political Chieftains.

Amongst the many stratagems to which the secretary of state has resorted, to justify himself to the people which he represented, for betraying their interests, defeating their wishes, and defying their instructions, the most extraordinary has been the pretence that the election of a "Military Chieftain" to the presidency would endanger the safety of the republic, and place our constitution in hazard.

The presses which are branded with this mark—the political charlatans who imitate his example, and who have instinct or knowledge enough to perceive the power of words in alarming the fears of the timid, and in bewildering the understanding of the weak, have repeated the word so often that it begins to disturb the repose of some whose intellects are frail as their nerves and whose perceptions are as dull as the speech of the president, when explaining his ebony and topaz toast.

That a military chieftain with the command of twelve hundred thousand armed men, ready to do "his bidding," regardless of the laws of the constitution, might be a dangerous personage, none can deny: but if that force be composed of the whole people between eighteen and forty-five—all citizen soldiers, whose general pursuits are pacific; who are the proprietors of the soil, and whose interests are the common interests of the country; who follow every employment, professional, mechanical, commercial; and a vast majority of whom, when assuming the sword, abandon the plough, and quit the field of labour for the field of battle: can it be believed that such men can be persuaded to commit treason against themselves, for ever blast their prospects in life, destroy their own liberties, and voluntarily enslave themselves, their children, and their remote posterity? The assertion is so monstrous that the boldness of the man who makes it, is as astonishing as the overweening credulity that believes it.

Should it be said that the secretary intended to apply his remarks only to the regular force of the nation when commanded by an aspiring military chieftain, that assertion would be still more astonishing. If any one can really believe that any danger is to be apprehended from the regular army of the United States, never mustering more than five thousand effectives, scattered in small bodies from Cape Cod to the Council Bluffs—from Eastport to Baton Rouge—from Lake Superior to St. Augustine—without a possibility of concentration in a period less than eighteen months, he must be not only absurd, but ridiculous; not only ridiculous, but insane.

If such an assertion should come from one who boasts that he is exempted from the ordinary weakness of humanity, and is totally insensible of fear, we should be compelled to suppose (if we believe him,) that some strange delusion had seized his mind. Had he lived a century ago he would have been supposed to have been under the influence of witchcraft.—that by the force of diabolical spells his imagination converted broomsticks into race horses, and that like Don Quixote, he saw a huge army in a flock of sheep!

But the secretary really entertains no such apprehensions. He is willing to alarm the fears of others; but his sentiments are on record. When alluding to the army in one of his speeches, he says: "But the standing army is the great object of the gentleman's apprehensions. And those who can bravely set at defiance hobgoblins, the creatures of their own fertile imaginations, are trembling for the liberties of the people, endangered by a standing army of 10,000 men.—Those who can courageously vote against taxes, are alarmed for the safety and constitution of the country, at such a force scattered over our extensive territory." Again; "I said the other day, I would rather vote for the compensation than the reduction of the army. When returning to my country from its foreign service, and looking at this question, it appeared to me that the maximum was twenty thousand, the minimum ten thousand of the force we ought to retain. And I again say, that rather than reduce, I would vote to increase the present force." "Again! But between ten thousand men or any number under ten thousand, it could not be a question of principle: for unless gentlemen were afraid of spectres, it was utterly impossible that any danger could be apprehended from ten thousand men dispersed on a frontier of many thousands of miles."*

The conclusion inevitably must be, that it is the militia which is to work all the woes which fill the teeming imagination of the secretary. At first, he proceeded cautiously; he hinted his alarms; he insinuated his suspicions; but during the glowing conviviality of the Pittsburg dinner, he threw off the mask, "opened wide his heart," and with his characteristic dashing resolution, he, this man of peace, who dreads a military chieftain as he dreads a convulsion of nature, raised his bloody standard, and proclaimed war, and no ignoble war either. He dared his heroes to the combat. Like Hector, he could say—

"Me glory summons to the martial scene;
The field of combat is the sphere for men;
Where heroes war, the foremost place I claim,
The first in danger, as the first in fame."

He intends that no military laurels shall shade his path; he intends to dispose of heroes in the same way as the Spartans disposed of Helots. He means to make them a subordinate class, and denies them equal privileges. He is a generous statesman and has a taste for the fine arts. He would place all those who have had the ill fortune to serve their country in arms—who have undergone cold, hunger, labour and poverty without repining—who have encountered the dangers of many battles, and on fields stained with blood of their country's enemies and their own, have acquired immortal names, so far as it respects popular favour and popular gratitude, in the same grade with mountebanks and players and all those who do queer things for the public amusement. He would give them money, pictures, statues, songs and historical notices. But he would deprive them of the equal privileges of freemen, the right of being elected, as well as of electing. Because they loved liberty and fought for it and won it, to them he would deny it. Because their claim to the gratitude of the people is undeniable, he would banish them from the confidence of the people.—Because they have proved their patriotism and their worth they must be made the victims of unrelenting jealously, of cold, unfeeling malignant suspicion!

In this heartless manner would he dispose of those patriot heroes who have fought for equal rights, without which this lofty statesman who now shares the imperial power, would have been the humble retainer of some proud provincial aristocrat, and instead of advancing before the American people, his own high claims to their highest office, would have been contented to have performed the electioneering drudgery of his arrogant patron.

He boasts of his generosity; he is willing to give money for military services, and yet he has contradicted his own profession. The mother of Oliver H. Perry, by his lamented death, was deprived of the "means whereby she lived," those means being the bounty of the son. In the extremity of her distress she appealed to the compassion of congress. The speaker descended from the chair, and exerted all his eloquence to deter the American people from giving her the little that she asked (and that little could not have been given long ‡ Yes—he refused the beggar's alms to the indigent mother of a hero, who saved the West, "the poor West," from the horrible desolation of Indian warfare, and could have left this venerable woman to have sought her support in a poor-house! And yet he would lavish treasures on Fayette, because his name associated with one so renowned, would be sounded in every climate, and the world would admire the generous orator who advocated this veteran son of liberty, no less than the extent of republican gratitude, and magnificence of republican liberality. The advocate of Fayette would be associated with his honours; the name of Sarah H. Perry, would scarcely be mentioned beyond the walls of the capitol. On this question he cannot plead his conscientious scruples. The cases were parallel.—But were appeals to the public gratitude. The conscience which could sanction the one and reject the other, must be as elastic as the pavillion of the fairy in the Arabian Nights, so small that it could be held in the hand, and large enough to cover whole armies!

One would think from the animated denunciations of "military chieftains," which are constantly issuing from the lips of the secretary, that he was a Christian philosopher, or at least a member of the peace society; yet where is the man who is more distinguished for rash intemperance and for deeds of violence? It is true he has never met his country's foes in the field of battle, it is only his neighbor's and his countrymen he encounters on the field; he levels his weapon with deadly aim against the person of a senator of the United States, and in the same breath with which he declares that his pistol shall regulate debate, he calls upon the people to beware of the violence of a military chieftain.

The artifice is as ancient as civil society. It has not even the poor merit of originality. Every loud talking demagogue, from Thersites to Henry Clay, has called upon the people to beware of military chieftains. The danger of military chieftains was the continual watchword of every factious tribunal in Rome. It excited those ungenerous suspicions which stained the annals of Carthage with blood. It arrested the glorious progress of Marlborough. It enabled the horrible Robespierre and the assassin Marat, to defile the squares of Paris with the blood of republican generals. With what revolting instances of national ingratitude has it blemished the bright pages of history. It subjected Miltiades, the saviour of Greece, to a fine, and confined him to a dungeon. It devoted Aristides to the ostracism. It banished Camillus, and Scipio the conqueror of Antiochus, of his whole estate by a fine. It elevated the thirty tyrants, and transformed Clodius and Cataline into patriots and public benefactors, and defenders of popular rights. And is it for us, in this age of intelligence and of manly and liberal feeling, to supply the future historian with materials of our own dishonour! Is it for us to foster that vile feeling of ingratitude, the bane, the curse and the ruin of ancient republics? Is it for us to cherish that wicked and detestable envy, which regards illustrious services and glorious deeds with dark suspicion and sullen hatred, or working on exceptable passions, brings forth the vain glorious orator to cover the fair fame of heroes and patriots with foul and malignant slanders? Go not to the sword of the orator Cæsar, to find the cause of the destruction of Roman liberty; seek it not in the camp; but go to the forum thronged with inflammatory orators and aspiring demagogues, with souls dead to their country's honour, and spotted with corruption. The unbounded power, the uninterrupted prosperity of the Roman people, had destroyed the purity of ancient manners, and their reverence for law and liberty.

Amidst the darkness of the middle ages, the deep foundation of English liberty was laid. It was laid by men who lived and moated in turretted castles; whose banners streamed defiance in the daily breeze; who while their vessels watched, snatched their feverish sleep still grasping their arms, and awoke at the blast of the foeman's trumpet. These "military chieftains," these men clad in armour—the barons of England—wrested from king John the great charter of English liberty, sword in hand. And when the clergy, too often clinging to the ancient tyranny; too often striving to unite the chain which had been severed by the ponderous battle axe of the warrior, would have changed the whole system of an English law, these stern and high spirited chiefs, laying their hands on their swords, exclaimed with one voice, "Nolumus leges Angliæ mutare."

In the contest between Charles I. and the parliament of England, who discovered the greatest devotion to liberty, Vane, Martin, Hazelrig, Bradshaw, Coke, St. John, and the other parliamentary leaders; or Fairfax, Waller and Essex, always honourable, honest and sincere? But abusive epithets have been lavished on Cromwell, the "tyrant, usurper and military despot!" It is true he transferred the usurped power of the parliament to himself!—And where is the difference between the rule of Cromwell, and the drivelling despotism of the rump parliament? But did he subvert the liberty of England? The star chamber of king Charles, his arbitrary assumption of power, his endeavours to raise money without the consent of parliament, and the no less unconstitutional acts of the parliament itself, had deprived her of its substance, and scarcely left the shadow. But when "the line of safe precedents" was adopted, and the legitimate monarch was restored; when a new tyrant was placed on the throne of his father, and Shaftsbury and Buckingham, and other civilians and statesmen, undertook to manage the government, and brought forth their endless plots: when England was united in a base league with France to ruin republican Holland, when Charles II. debased his royal dignity by becoming the wretched pensioner of the king of France: when the fountains of justice were polluted; when the royal palace was filled with profligates and prostitutes: when the most enormous vices were the passports of royal favour: when a tribe of licentious poets and wits fluttered in the train of the monarch, and seduced and debauched and poisoned the minds of the people: when every modest and virtuous man was driven from the court with scorn and reproach: when the assassin blood was pardoned and pensioned, and the patriot Russell was doomed to that scaffold: what thinking or moral men would not have preferred the sober and vigorous government of Cromwell? Of Cromwell the patron of the illustrious Hale, under whose wise and just administration of the laws the humblest Englishman felt secure in property and in person, the friends and patron of that immortal republican poet, the virtuous Milton, the mightiest genius of the age, the divine bard,

"Who passed the bounds of flaming space,
Where angles tremble while they gaze."

Who would not have preferred his government to that of the arbitrary and bigoted James II.? Of James II., who essayed to bend the necks of the proud people over whom he ruled to the yoke of prelatical power, and who would have chained England in fetters, and laid her bound and manacled at the feet of the pope?—If the savage Colonel Kirk, gave full license to military execution, the victims who fell under the legal tyranny of the more savage chief justice Jeffries covered England with deeper mourning, and filled her with more universal sorrow. And in that dark hour, when "hope for a season bid the world farewell, and freedom shrieked at her agony: in that disasterous day, when the glory of England was eclipsed, when the heart of the patriot was filled with sadness; when the souls of the brave were shaken with apprehension; when the wise despond, and the timid despaired, when the Jesuites controlled the royal councils, and announced, with savage triumph the approaching woes of Protestants,—who appeared in the midst of the gloom, the harbinger of hope and peace of brighter and happier days? That "military chieftain," the prince of Orange, the deliverer of England. And where was the army? To a man on the side of the country. They disdained to wear the tyrant's livery, and protected the rights and the religion of the English people, sword in hand. Who were the dangerous and desperate conspirators of the succeeding reign? Who plotted in the dark cabal the ruin of English liberty? Who were the defenders of the divine rights of kings, the advocates of the doctrine of passive obedience and non-resistance, the enemies and slanderers of the great "military chieftain" who humbled the pride of Louis XIV. arrested his march to universal dominion, drove him back to his capitol, shorn of his laurels and covered with shame, and saved the liberties of Europe? The statesmen and orators and poets and philosophers who formed the tory administration of Queen Anne, with that fell spirit at the head, Henry St. John secretary of state.

Will Conway, Townsend, Wolfe, Hawke, Boscawen or lord Chatham, (originally in the army,) suffer in comparison either as to intellectual attainments, moral worth, statesman-like qualities, or honest patriotism, with the venal Walpole, the miser Pulteney, the idiot duke of Newcastle, the narrow minded and arbitrary Bute, the feeble and profligate duke of Grafton, the versatile Charles Townsend, lord Holland "defaulter of uncounted millions," the "Wary" Wedderburn, pronounced by Junius "too base for treachery itself to trust," and the whole united by their coalition both fragments of the English oligarchy, and endeavoured to over awe the crown and to trample on the people?

I abstain from times more recent, but certainly none can say that Wellington, Stewart, Moore, Hope, Graham, Hill, lord Howe, Jervis, Nelson, Duncan or Warren, who have fought the battles of England by sea and by land, were more to be feared by the friends of liberty, than the Percivals, Butes or Castlereaghs.

JUNIUS BRUTUS.

(To be continued.)

* Vide Mr. Clay's speech on the direct tax, in 1816, Walsh's Am. Reg., vol. 1, p. 209.

‡Captain Perry's mother was, at the time she petitioned Congress for a pittance of one hundred dollars during her life, in the eighty-fourth year of her age.—Ed. E. P.

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JUNE 3, 1828.

PEOPLE'S TICKET.

For President.

ANDREW JACKSON.

For Vice President.

JOHN C. CALHOUN.

For Elector of President and Vice President of the U. S. for the District composed of Worcester, Somerset, and part of Dorchester counties:

Thomas K. Carroll.

☞On our first page will be found the first number of "The Contrast," as copied from the N. Y. Evening Post. It will be concluded in three numbers. "We can assure our readers, that in the perusal of this article, they will find the most interesting and valuable matter, conveyed in a forcible and elegant style—ornamented with classical allusions the most pertinent; enlivened by corruscations of wit, occasionally light and ironical, but oftener severe and caustic—and sometimes tearing away the very flesh from the bones, and laying the skeleton bare in all its naked deformity."

A SHORT CALCULATION.

Give General Jackson the votes he got at the last Presidential election, viz: 99, and the 24 of Virginia and 9 of Georgia, which he did not get before, but it is admitted he will get at the next election and he will have 132, or one more than enough to elect him. But, say our opponents, Jackson won't get the votes he got before. Well, what votes will he lose now that he got before? Why, 8 in New Jersey—Your reason for supposing New Jersey has deserted him is, because the Jackson party were beat in that state at the last Congressional election. This is the only evidence you have of the change.—Agreed then, that it is evidence of her falling off from Jackson; on the same ground we have a right to claim Kentucky, for we beat you in the Congressional election of that state last summer. You take N Jersey then, and we'll take Kentucky. We gain 6 by the exchange. What other votes has Jackson lost since the last election? Why, 5 in Indiana, and 3 in Louisiana. Well, you admit that we will have 7 more in New York than we had the last time, and 1 in Illinois, which we did not get before. Take then; from the 132 above, New Jersey 8, Indiana 5, and Louisiana 3, in all 16—and you leave us 116, to which add 14 in Kentucky, 7 in New York, and 1 in Illinois—in all 22; and we shall have 138, or 7 more than enough to elect the General. You see you must claim some more of Jackson's votes, or you are gone. Well, (say you) we claim 4 of the votes he got in Maryland. It won't do yet gentlemen, he has 3 to spare still.

These calculations are made to show our friends that even with the most liberal allowances to our opponents, they have no chance of success. It will be seen that we have allowed them votes which there is no sort of reason to believe they'll get, as, for instance, 8 in Maryland, 28 in New York, 3 in Missouri, 5 in Indiana, 3 in Delaware, 3 in Louisiana. Now, we would ask, upon what "signs of the times' they can claim more in Maryland than they got before, or the 3 in Missouri and 5 in Indiana which were not given to Mr Adams before, or the 8 which Jackson got in Louisaina, or more than 10 in New York? They merely claim these votes because they see that without them they are double distanced. There have been no evidences of public opinion which justify the belief that they'll get them. Yet, even if they do get them, we have shown that they will still be beaten.

Baltimore Republican.

[From the N. Y. Enquirer, May 9.]

MORE ECONOMY.—A few days ago, we published some extracts from the Contingent Black Book, laid before Congress, which did not bear Mr. Adams out in his declaration that every dollar of the people's money was expended "with an eye to the strictest economy." We now make a further extract, in order to show the people how shamefully their money is wasted by the administration.

United States Indian Department to Mority Furst, Dr.

For his expenses in coming to Washington City to take President Adams' likeness, and returning,	$125 00
For loss of time and service in taking said likeness.	120 00
For three lead dies, at $250 each,	750 00
Received payment,	$1,000 00

N. Y., 15th Jan. 1826.
MORITY FURST

Recommended for payment—charge to contingencies of Indian Department. (Remit to N. Y.)

(J. B.) THOS. L. M'KINNEY.
Jan. 19, 1826. Debt of War Office of Ind. Affairs.

One thousand dollars for taking the likeness of President Adams; besides $10 for a gold medal of his excellency. Truly, we are going on swimmingly—it is true, we cannot afford to pay the pittance due the surviving officers of the revolution, but we can find $1,000 for painting the President's likeness; and if it is difficult to find an appropriation, it may be set down in the Indian department. But this is not the extent of the shameful waste of public money; we have something further in the way of the fine arts:

"C. B. King, and A. Ford, for painting portraits of Indians.	$1,591 50
Another—C. B. King, for painting Indian portraits.	527 75
Isaac Cooper, for 33 picture frames,	147 62
	$2,266 87

Two thousand two hundred and sixty-six dollars and eighty seven cents, for painting potraits of savages, who have no more idea of the fine arts, nor should have, then a herd of Buffaloes. What are we to think of our public men who sanction such a waste of public money? Had the Indians received ploughs—agricultural utensils—cattle—garden and vegetable seeds, any thing, in short, calculated to be of service to them, no objection would be made—but to set them in a chair, befeathered and bespangled, and be painted with red ocre, rings in their noses and ears, and peacock-tails in their heads, and have their portraits drawn at a national expense of $2,266 87, is undoubtedly a stain on our character as a prudent and wise people. But this is not all the cost to which the nation is subjected.

"T. Tennison, for boarding Indians,	$1,040 00
Jessy Brown, for boarding Creek Indians	3,273 88
	$4,313 88

These people come to Washington on their own business—they are accustomed, at home, to the deer of the forest, and the fish of the lakes; but our aristocracy at Washington will have them fed on turtle and campaign, vitiating and demoralising their habits, and introducing debauchery and excess among these children of nature—no matter, as long as the people's money is to be used for the purpose, and their friends benefitted.

ADAMS, JACKSON, AND THE TARIFF.

From the Ithaca Journal.

The friends of Mr. Adams have not presented, nor can they present, a solitary expression of his sentiments in favor of protecting American manufactures. On the contrary, there are many circumstances which lead fairly to the inference, that he is opposed in sentiment to protecting duties. He has never in any of his messages spoken decisively on the subject. His eastern friends in congress unanimously opposed the tariff of 1824; and they lately opposed the general provisions of the bill under consideration in the United States House of Representatives. But the following article, from the Democratic Eagle, is a clear demonstration of the views of

PRESIDENT ADAMS.

Article II. section 1, clause 8, of the constitution of the United States declares that the President shall swear or affirm that he will "faithfully execute the office of President of the United States."

Article II. section 3, enjoins the president to "recommend to the consideration of congress, such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient."

Mr. Adams in his message does not recommend a revision of the tariff; he does not recommend any measure for the encouragement of domestic manufactures; he does not recommend any measure for the encouragement of wool-growers; he does not recommend the American system; he does not say one word on the subject of the tariff; or domestic manufactures, or wool, or American system.

The case, then, stands thus: Mr. Adams, under the obligation of an oath, to "recommend to the consideration of congress, such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient;" does not recommend the American system, a tariff, the encouragement of domestic manufactures, or the growth of wool.

On his oath, then, he does not consider the encouragement of domestic manufactures, wool, a tariff, or the American system, "necessary and expedient."

The basis of Mr. Adams' support in Pennsylvania has been alleged devoted attachment to those great interests, which are vital to the prosperity of her citizens.

His friends can no longer pretend that he is a friend of those primary and essential interests of Pennsylvania, without charging him with a disregard of the sacred obligation of his oath. Of course, they will, in either alternative, withdraw their support from him.

The friends of Gen. Jackson, far from charging Mr. Adams with the heinous crime of violating his oath, are perfectly willing that entire credit be given him for the utmost sincerity, and only complain that certain designing politicians have craftily imposed upon a number of honest and patriotic citizens, and induced them to believe that he is in favor of what, on his oath, he virtually disavows.

Doubt on this subject can no longer exist. Every man can now, wide awake, take his side.

General Jackson has repeatedly and publicly, in congress by his votes, and out of congress, as a citizen, manifested his friendship for the American system; Mr. Adams, never: but in the public discharge of an imperious and all important duty, Mr. Adams, in effect, proclaims to the whole nation, that he does not consider the American system "necessary and expedient."

GENERAL JACKSON,

We will add, was in the senate of the United States when the tariff law of 1824 was passed, and voted for it throughout. In adition to this the following extract from his letter to Doctor Coleman, declares unequivocally his sentiments in favour of protecting American industry and manufactures; and proves that JACKSON is the TRUE friend of the TRUE American system.

"So far as the tariff before us embraces the design of fostering and preserving within ourselves, the means of national defence and independence, particularly in a state of war, I would advocate and support it. Providence has filled our mountains and our plains with minerals; with lead, iron and copper; and given us climate and soil for the growing of hemp and wool. These being our grand materials of our national defence, they ought to have extended to them adequate and fair protection, that our own manufactories and labourers may be placed on a fair competition with those of Europe, and we may have within our own country, a supply of those leading and important articles so essential in war. Beyond this, I look at the tariff with an eye to the proper distribution of labour and to revenue; and with a view to the discharge of our national debt. I will ask, what is the real situation of the agriculturist? Where has the American farmer a market for his surplus products? Except for cotton, he neither has a foreign nor a home market. Does not this clearly prove, when there is no market either at home or abroad, that there is too much labor employed in agriculture, and that the channels for labour should be multiplied? Common sense points out, at once, the remedy. Draw from agriculture this superabundant labour; employ it in mechanism and manufactures; thereby creating a home market for your bread stuffs, and distributing labour to the most profitable amount, and benefits to the country will result. In short, sir, we have been too long subject to the policy of the British merchants. It is time we should become a little more Americanized."

'Contingencies.'—Uncle Sam's pockets are made to sweat prodigiously!—The Ithaca Journal has the following humorous remarks on the "contingences" of the session of Congress for 1826 and '27:—

"Among the items we observe "528 lbs. sealing wax, $395 75"—nearly two pounds to a man. "20,650 quills and pens, $695 50," two thirds of which must have been used for tooth picks! and "202 1-2 doz. penknives $423 25"—a very convenient way of pocketing the people's money!—A little on, are 'five razors, hone, soap and bowl' bought for the express purpose of shaving Uncle Sam; and the very moderate charge of $322 22 cents for "soda water," to restore the tone of his stomach and $56 worth of "towels" to wipe the sweat from the old gentleman's face! Five hundred and 28 pounds of sealing wax! My eyes! as they say in the play, what could Congress do with such a quantity? A thought has struck us—we have it—a part of it was used to stick the "unprincipled opposition" more firmly together, and the remainder was given to Mr. Senator Wright, of Ohio, to seal "coalition circulars."

But the last item 'beats the Dutch.' $322 22 worth of "soda water!" My conscience! O! Uncle Sam, what a dry old fellow you are! The printers would call you a "wet soul."

Another of the Coalition rewarded!

We have before us a copy of the Report of the committee on Retrenchment. Among other evidences of abuse of office and waste of the public money, we find that Daniel P. Cook, of Illinois, who had in his hand the vote of that state, gave it to J. Q. Adams, and was then cashiered by his constituents, received in the spring of 1827, compensation from the Secret Service Fund, for a secret mission to Cuba!—R. Enq.

The Albany Advertiser (an Administration paper) vindicates Mr. M'Lean with great spirit against the attacks of "the notorious John Binns"—affirms that "though friendly to the elevation of Gen. Jackson, he has never performed any act to advance his interests, by a misuse of his official patronage—and deals the following pulpable bit:

"In the article above spoken of, Binns says that "nothing would so promptly and powerfully re-unite and re-invigorate the friends of the Administration, as the prompt dismissal of the Post Master General." In our opinion, "nothing would so promptly and powerfully re-unite and re-invigorate the friends of the administration as the prompt" abandonment of, and opposition to, its cause, by such editorial libellers as John Binns."

☞We have just received the four first numbers of John Quincy Adams' celebrated letters, published in the year 1791, under the signature of "PUBLICOLA." We shall in due season make some extracts if we do not publish the numbers entire. There are in the whole 11 numbers.

TO A JACKSON CONGRESS

Are the people indebted for a new Tariff Law, giving ample protection to all the various branches of domestic industry, including manufacture, mechanics and agriculture.

To a Jackson Congress are the people indebted for a law to erect a Breakwater at the mouth of the Delaware; for the security and protection of the Commerce of the whole country.

To a Jackson Congress are the people indebted for rescuing the national fame from degradation, by bestowing relief to the surviving soldiers of the revolutionary war: thus preserving the gratitude of republics from contempt, and free government from ignominious imputations of heartless selfishness.

To a Jackson Congress are the people indebted for the republican example of economy and simplicity in government, by instituting reform into the public expenditures, on a scale of honesty and utility.

To this list, we shall shortly add other public blessings for which the people are indebted to a Jackson Congress.—Philadelphia Mercury.

A SINKING SHIP.

Rats, they say, desert a sinking ship. The Intelligencer of Saturday, says—"James Barbour, of Virginia, (now Secretary of War) has been appointed, by the President of the United States, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to be Minister to Great Britain." Adams and Clay are glad to get rid of Barbour, and Barbour, we have no doubt, is equally glad to quit the Cabinet hulk, which he finds is sinking. But, bless us! what an appointment! Why, we haven't heard a man, whether Jackson or Adams, that knew any thing of James Barbour, who didn't laugh at the idea of his being sent Minister to England. And to be the successor of so distinguished and, indeed, unsurpassed diplomatist as ALBERT GALLATIN!! James Barbour! Why, he's the merest bladder of bombast that the world ever saw—a vox et preterea nihil. However people may differ about the propriety of Mr. Barbour's conduct since he became Secretary of War, there can be, with those who know him, but one opinion as to his fitness—we should say unfitness for the office of Minister to England. Adams and Clay wanted his present place for another.

Baltimore Republican.

The "Frederick Citizen" again throws down the gauntlet to Mr. Warfield—charges him with equivocation, avers that its allegations are not a "recent "development," nor unsupported by the most respectable evidence—defies Mr. W. to deny them directly, and awaits only his unequivocal contradiction to come out with its overwhelming proofs; and declares that Dr. Zollickoffer is ready to confirm its charges by "a solemn oath."—And still Mr. W. suffers himself to be bearded at his very door!

The waves in Maryland are beginning to run mountain high. Both parties are organizing with great activity for the ensuing campaign. Meetings are holding for the purpose of appointing Delegates to the Convention about to meet in the different districts for the nomination of Electors. In one meeting of the friends of the Administration in Frederick county, a Committee of vigilance was appointed of 278 persons. A Jackson meeting in the same county, however, surpassed them—having constituted a Committee of vigilance of four hundred and seventy-eight, whose names are displayed in alphabetical order.

Richmond Enquirer.

NEW YORK.

An election took place last week in the Fourth ward of the city of Albany for a Supervisor. This was the only ward in the city in which the Adams party pretended to have a majority. Great exertions were made by them for some time previous to the election, and their papers confidently predicted the success of their ticket. The parties in the State of New York, our readers are aware, are marked pretty generally, by the old distinctions of Democrat and Federalist—the former being generally for Jackson, the latter chiefly for Adams. Upon this occasion however, the Adams party brought out a Democrat for their candidate. The election came on, and Mr. Mayell, the Jackson candidate received 320 votes, and Mr. Gould, the Adams candidate received 289. Among Mr. Gould's votes were 9 tickets with the Jackson caption, eagle, &c. "These (says the Albany Argus) were artfully folded with the words "Jackson ticket" outside, whilst within, the name of Mr. Mayell was erased, and Mr. Gould's inserted. The deception was undoubtedly practised upon unsuspecting friends of Jackson.

Thus it appears that whenever it has been lately tested in New York, it has been shown that where the strength of Jackson has not increased, the party have at least held their own. Yet the Adams party hold out the idea that they will get a large majority of the electoral votes of New York. But so it has been from the beginning—when beat at one election, though stunned for awhile, they soon begin to tell us "we'll beat you at the next election"—"you'll see how it will be next fall," &c. But when "the next election" and the "next fall" come, they are invariably beaten.

ANOTHER COINCIDENCE.

Mr. John Adams in his Cunningham Correspondence, said: "A powerful family when fallen into decay, would sooner annihilate Heaven and Earth, than fail to carry their Point."

Mr. Clay, in his Baltimore speech, says: He would rather "see our Land visited with War, with Pestilence, with Famine, with ANY other Scourge"—than fail of carrying His Point.

The bill for authorizing a subscription of a million of dollars to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal has passed both Houses of Congress. It has filled the citizens of the District of Columbia with joy. Alexandria was partially illuminated—a Canal Ball is on foot—the Mayor of Washington proposes to hoist the flag of the Union on the City Hall, "upon authentic information of the bills on this subject receiving the sanction of the President"—but suggests the postponement of whatever public rejoicings should be deemed expedient" to the actual commencement of the work, upon the canal, which, it is hoped, will not be deferred beyond the 4th of July next." To those who do not see any objection to this bill in the constitution and particularly to the citizens of the District, and to all the border country of Virginia and Maryland, and Ohio, the proposed enterprise, must be a source of the greatest satisfaction.—R. Enq.

KENTUCKY.

The fate of the Adams party is admitted by them, to hang upon the election of Governor in Kentucky, in August. It cannot be concealed that, if that election goes against Messrs. Adams and Clay, the game is up with them—they'll give up, or at least their friends will. If Mr. Clay gains that election, he will hope that it may influence other sections of the country, and he will brag on boldly. The fact of the great importance they attribute to the Kentucky election shows how closely they are pushed—if that goes against them, they are gone. But the Jackson party, even if Kentucky should elect the Adams candidate, Governor, entertain no fear of the general result, for the election of Gen. Jackson does not depend upon the vote of that State.

But, while we feel perfectly confident of the election of General Jackson without the vote of Kentucky, we have n't the least fear of losing the vote of that State. Our Western papers speak most confidently of Barry, the Jackson candidate's election, and a well informed Kentucky friend, in a letter received from him within a day or two, assures us there is no doubt of it.

Those of the Adams party, who count upon the vote of Kentucky, count too largely upon the influence of Clay. He lost that influence when he disregarded the request of the Legislature, violated the will of his constituents, disappointed the expectations of the people of Kentucky, and, by a corrupt and selfish bargain, bartered away her vote to his and her ancient enemy. The people of Kentucky are intelligent, highminded and independent and will not disappoint the expectations of the world by giving their support to one, who has betrayed them, and yet, vainly thinks he can control them.

[Baltimore Republican.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The state of Pennsylvania is represented in congress by twenty-one democrats and five federalists. Of the democrats, eighteen are friendly to General Jackson, and three viz: Messrs. Stewart, Lawrence and Wilson, in favour of Mr. Adams. Of the federal members three are in favour of Mr. Adams, and two supporters of Gen. Jackson. The three democratic members, in this particular misrepresent their constituents, and, we desire Binns to record it, will not be re-elected.

An election was held on Monday last in Reading for borough officers. Tickets were formed by the friends of General Jackson and Mr. Adams respectively, and resulted in the success of the Jackson ticket by an average vote of about 440 to 150. This affords pretty strong evidence of what Jackson's majority will be in Berks county; for it is well known, that nearly the whole force of the Adams party is concentrated in the county towns and boroughs. Berks, which is one of our heavy German counties, will give an overwhelming Majority for the hero of New-Orleans.

[Phil. Am. Sentinel.

NEW JERSEY.—The friends of Gen. Jackson in this republican state, are preparing in earnest for the great contest which is to take place in November.

In many places in the eastern section of the state, they are planting hickory trees, as the republicans in the reign of terror, under the elder John Adams, raised liberty poles, and forming associations to concentrate the force and stimulate the exertions of the friends of free government, and of the people's rights. Every where, the approaching election seems to be regarded by republicans as involving the same principles as were contended for by Jefferson and his associates in 1800—[Idem.

A Sign—A glorious sign.—All the Jackson candidates for representatives in Charlestown, the Bunker Hill town, are triumphantly elected—notwithstanding all the efforts of the administration party. We request the Lord Mayor of Washington to place this sign from Bunker Hill, with the late sign from New Orleans, the Alpha and Omega of the American alphabet of glory. They will make the GEMINI of signs in the political Zodiac.—[Boston Statesman.

Another Sign.—The hon. Francis Baylies, the only representative in congress from New Orleans, and the able orator and statesman who took the lead in our legislature last February, in opposition to the white washing administration resolutions,—is elected from Taunton to our house of representatives. The Lord Mayor of Washington will be so good as to notice this.—Idem.

[COMMUNICATED.]

OBITUARY.

DIED, on the 13th day of May, Mrs. Sarah Ann Furniss, consort of Littleton Purnell Furniss, of Somerset county. The circumstance which occasioned her death was calculated to excite the deepest sympathy in those who witnessed the extreme suffering with which it pleased divine Providence to visit her—She having given birth to a stillborn child several days before her death. They now occupy one grave. Her husband found in her a friend ever disposed to oblige, to cheer, to assist and make any sacrifice to promote his happiness. The of her friends with whom she was most intimate know best how to estimate the loss sustained by her relatives. In the morning of youth, full of health and flushed with the anticipation of many days, has the subject of this notice been suddenly summoned to the world of spirits—but, severe as is the stroke which has thus severed all the ties of life, her surviving friends may console themselves with the hope that her spirit is at rest.

Errata.—The first 3 lines of "Edmunds's" Stanzas, published in our last paper, should have been printed as follows:

"Dear Girl, how oft my mind reviews
The luscious moments, spent with thee;
How oft my fleeting thought," &c.

And in the "Soliloquy," by the same writer, on the last page of to-day's paper, read "to her sweet accents" instead of "to her rich accents."

☞The Levy Court of Somerset county will meet on Tuesday the 10th of June inst., to elect Constables.

CONTENTS

Of the American Farmer of May

New Tariff Law, An Act in alteration of the several acts imposing Duties on Imports—comparative View of the Tariff Laws up to 1824, and 1828, with Notes—Cotton Bagging, recommended to be manufactured in the Southern States—Curious instance of the germinating properties of Red Clover—The Angora, or Cashmere Goat, Late destructive Frosts, Kitchen Garden for June—Essay on the Indland Navigation of the United States, from a late London Journal—The Soldier's Child, an affecting T—Valuable invention—Pedigrees of thorough-bred Imported Horses, continued—On Animal Poisons—Indemnity for Slaves—Manufacture of Cotton Goods in Philadelphia—Editor, Admiral Coffin; Mr. Jacob's second Report on the Agriculture, &c. of the Continental States—Prices.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber being about to move from the county, will offer at PUBLIC SALE, on Tuesday the 10th of June,

All his remaining Stock of GOODS.

The sale will continue from day to day until the whole is sold. He also avails himself of this mode earnestly to request, that those who are indebted to him make it convenient to pay the same immediately.

SEVERN TEACKLE.
Princess-Anne, June 3d.

Constable's Sale.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by George M. Willing, a justice of the peace, and to me directed, at the suit of Levin D. Jones against Adam Horsey, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro girl named Sarah, which I shall proceed to sell for a term of years, at Back-Creek Store on Wednesday the 2nd day of July next to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ with interest and cost.

SAML. McBRYDE, C.
June 3, 1828. kd

From the Journal of Commerce.

DISPUTED BOUNDARY.

The last number of the North American Review, just received, contains among other things, a good article on the disputed north-eastern boundary of the U. States. The interest displayed on this national question appears the more reasonable, as the territory in dispute is said to be equal in extent to the whole area of Massachusetts; nor is it strange that our British neighbours should look with an evil eye upon a claim, which it is stated would bring the American boundary within 12 miles of the St. Lawrence, and only 40 to the south of Quebec. We believe that the claim of our Government in this case, is perfectly just, and we shall take this opportunity to state it, very briefly, for the information of our readers, along with some of the reasons by which it is supported

The boundaries between the United States and the British possessions in North America, were described by the definite treaty of peace in 1783. The beginning of the north line is thus fixed; "from the north-west angle of Nova Scotia, viz. that angle which is formed by a line drawn due north from the source of St. Croix river to the highlands, along the said highlands, which divide those rivers that empty themselves into the river St Lawrence from those that fall into the Atlantic ocean, to the north-westernmost head of Connecticut river," &c. Again, the eastern line is thus defined, "East by a line to be drawn along the middle of St. Croix, from its mouth in the Bay of Fanday to its source, and from its source directly north to the aforesaid highlands which divide the rivers that fall into the Atlantic Ocean from those which fall into the river St. Lawrence," &c. It is plain from the first of these extracts from the treaty, that our northern boundary line begins at the north-western angle of the province of Nova Scotia, as that province was defined in 1783; for it has since been divided, and the north-westerly part forms the present province of New Brunswick. That angle is formed by our eastern boundary line, just described, and the highlands. The question is, where does that line strike the highlands, or which are the highlands intended by the treaty? That chain of mountains which appear, on most maps of the United States, to be a continuation of the Green Mountains, holds a northeasterly course from the sources of the Connecticut, drawing gradually nearer to the St. Lawrence, and extends to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, at Cape Rosiers, separating the rivers that flow into the ocean from those that flow into the river St. Lawrence. But at some distance short of that termination of the chain, just pointed out, a branch of these highlands is thrown off to the east, which separates the waters of the St. John, which flow into the Bay of Fund, and thence into the ocean, from these of the Penobscot, Kennebec, and other rivers, which empty more directly into the ocean. The last elevation of this branch towards the north-east is called Mars Hill, and this is the point at which the British would have our northerly line to begin; whilst we follow our eastern boundary 141 miles farther to the north, crossing the St. John, and leaving all the upper part of its course within our limits, and find the north-western angle of Nova Scotia (now New Brunswick) at the intersection of that eastern boundary with the main and more northern chain of highlands.

Having thus ascertained what is the precise matter in dispute, we next come to the reasons which show that the Americans are right. The British came into quiet possession of all the French territories in North America, of which the province of Nova Scotia, the same boundaries must be adhered to in the explanation of our treaty of 1783. Now a proclamation was issued by the king in October 1763, erecting four distinct governments within the ceded territories. One of these was the government of Quebec, and its boundary to the south and east is clearly drawn along the more nothern of the above-mentioned chains of highlands. A royal commission was issued about the same time to a new governor of Nova Scotia, in which that province is described as bounded on the north "by the southern boundary of our province of Quebec, as far as the western extremity of the Bay des Chaleurs." The western boundary is then marked out, and thereby the northwestern angle of Nova Scotia (now New Brunswick) clearly fixed, not at Mars Hill, but at the more northern highlands.

By an act of Parliament of 1774, the southern boundary of the province of Quebec, which by the last mentioned document had been designated as the northern boundary of Nova Scotia, was again defined with a clearness that, one would think, should place the matter beyond all dispute. The words are, "south by a line from the Bay of Chaleurs, along the highlands which divide the rivers that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence from those which fall into the sea," &c. This is a description which can never be made to apply to the more southern chain of highlands; it can only suit the more northern.—What the British had thus distinctly recognized as the north-western angle of Nova Scotia, they must naturally be supposed to have intended in the treaty of 1783.

This alone would be sufficient, but there are other circumstances which tend to establish the justice of our claim. By the words of the treaty, that we have italicised above the north-western angle of Nova Scotia is described as formed by the eastern boundary of the United States, and the highlands; but on the British supposition that our northern boundary begins at Mars Hill, this hill being the last of the chain towards the north-east, no angle at all of Nova Scotia can be formed by the highlands of which it is a part. Those highlands could only help to form a northeastern angle for the U. S. If, however, getting over the difficulty of these highlands not being continued to a northeasterly direction into the British province, we do consider the north-western angle of Nova Scotia as being here formed by continuing the line from these highlands into the British possessions, such a line would not be the northern boundary of Nova Scotia, but would divide that province into two parts. The authorities of that province have exercised jurisdiction far to the north of such a line. Here then, it suits the convenience of the British to create a northeastern angle, however, for all other purposes than settling our boundary line, they find somewhere else. It should also be carefully borne in mind, that by treaty of 1783, our northern line is drawn "along the (said) highlands, which divided those rivers that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence, from those which fall into the Atlantic ocean." But the British claim would draw a very different line, viz. along the highlands that separate the waters of the St. John, from those which fall more directly into the Atlantic ocean. Such a line of separation as this latter, it is manifest, never entered the minds of the commissioners who made the treaty. They meant that our eastern boundary should cross the St. John, the course of which river is quite accurately laid down on the map they are known to have used. If this had not been their meaning, they would have caused the line to take a southwest direction from the source of the St. Croix, instead of a northern one.

Many other reasons might be given in support of our claim, but we think it unnecessary to adduce them here, since we believe that those which we have already stated will be amply sufficient to establish its justice in the mind of any impartial person, who will take the trouble to consider them, with the aid of a good map before him.

BANGOR, (Maine,) May 13.

Quarter Master Russell has returned to this place and brings information, that British Officers from Fredericton are laying out ground for a military entrenchment on an eminence upon the provincial side of the line, about two and a half miles distant from the spot selected for erecting barracks for the U. S. troops.

Lieut Gallagher, with the company of U. S. Light Infantry from N. York, arrived here on Saturday, and will shortly proceed to Houlton. They are fine looking fellows, under high discipline, and will meet with a most welcome reception from our citizens on the frontier.

From the Baltimore Republican.

War, Pestilence and Famine.—"If indeed we have incurred the Divine displeasure, and it be necessary to chastise this people with the rod of His vengeance, I would humbly prostrate myself before HIM and implore his mercy, to visit our favored land with war, with pestilence, with famine, with any scourge other than military rule, or a blind and heedless enthusiasm for mere military renown."—[Clay's Baltimore speech.

Amen! says we; and to this sentiment, in the abstract, the whole Jackson party cheerfully respond. amen! But Mr. Clay's application of it to Gen. Jackson and the immense body of freemen, who advocate his election to the Presidency, we pronounce to be slanderours, foul and malignant. The great party in this country, who support General Jackson are as high minded, free and independent and intelligent as their opponents at least.—They would deprecate as much as Mr. CLAY, "the scourge of military rule." They are as far above the "enthusiasm for mere military renown" as he or his friends. What! are at least one half of the free born citizens of these United States, because they will not believe Henry Clay and John Quincy Adams are the purest patriots and most honest politicians in our land, to be denounced as the advocates of "military rule," governed by "enthusiasm for mere military renown?"

At the last Presidential election General JACKSON received the unbought, honest suffrages of more than ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND freemen, while Mr. CLAY received little more than forty-six thousand And dare Mr. Clay, tell this people, that this mighty mass of American citizens, who by their votes, declared GENERAL JACKSON fit to fill the office of President of these United States, was governed by "a blind and heedless enthusiasm for mere military renown." Does Mr. CLAY arrogate to himself and his friends all the patriotism of the country? Mr. CRAWFORD recived, at the last election, upwards of FORTY SEVEN THOUSAND votes. Have they no intelligence no integrity? Eight tenths of them are now in favour of the election of General Jackson, and at the head of them is WM. H. CRAWFORD himself. Are these men too, led away by "a blind and heedless enthusiasm for mere military renown?"

The true meaning of Mr. Clay's speech—for it is the idea which he meant to convey—is, WAR, PESTILENCE, FAMINE, and any other scourge, sooner than JACKSON President. Yet, Mr. Clay, we have no doubt would cheerfully see our country the victim of War, Pestilence and Famine, sooner than ANDREW JACKSON should be elevated to that station to which he was destined by the people, and to which he would have attained, but for——but it is useless to name it—you know how to fill up the blank. You would sooner see constitution, country and all whelmed in one general ruin, than see Andrew Jackson, President; not because you would apprehend injury to constitution or country from him, or his party; but because, in his elevation, you see your own political ruin—you see place and its power to which you have aspired with such undreamed, and which you, no doubt, enjoyed in anticipation when you bartered your vote and betrayed your friends, to place yourself in what you vainly hoped to be "the line of safe precedents:"—You see the Presidency, for which you have so ardently longed, and for which you have risked honor and all, as soon as ANDREW JACKSON is elevated to it, forever and forever, beyond your reach. This love of country, this devotion to the cause of liberty and our constitution, is all affected—put on, paraded off, to catch the ignorant and conceal the deep source of all your feeling—self. It is not the ruin of the country, which you see in the election of General Jackson, but the ruin of HENRY CLAY. The people of this country are sitting in judgment on the conduct of yourself and your co-bargainer in the last Presidential election, and you cannot await their verdict with the calmness and resignation of conscious integrity, but betray your guilt in the restlessness and uneasiness of your demeanor.

THE PUBLIC DEBT.

Certain newspapers in the service of the malignants, are giving Mr. Adams credit for great financial skill in the reduction of the public debt. His Secretary of the Treasury, in his last annual report, has so stated the account as to lead some honest, well meaning men to believe that, $21,297,210 93 of the principal of the debt was discharged between the 1st of January, 1825 and the 1st of January 1828; when in truth, but $16,297,210 93 was paid within that period. Under the act of 26th May 1824, five millions of dollars were borrowed by the Government at 4½ per cent interest, to redeem a like sum standing at 6 per cent. These five millions are, by Mr. Rush, added to the $16,297,210 93, actually paid, with which they had no natural connection; thus making the gross sum of $21,297,210 93 on the credit side; and then to balance the account, these five millions are charged on the debt side as so much new debt.

Whether this was awkwardness or design on the part of the Secretary, is not material to enquire; certain it is that many honest people have been misled by it; and some of their idolatrous Editors, no doubt, believe that Mr. Adams, by his wonderful learning and talents, has discovered the Philosopher's stone, by which he can not only convert wine into Ebony and Topaz, but the leaden brain of his Secretary into pure gold. The truth is that in the three years of Mr. Adams' administration, there has not been as much of the public debt paid by $13,702,789, as was required by law. That this sum is now due to the sinking fund, the Editors of the National Intelligencer must know; and yet they have copied into their paper of the 29th ult. a silly article from the Marylander, stating that, by July next, Mr. Adams will have paid more than thirty eight millions of the public debt, and therefore, recommending him, in the strongest terms of panegyric, for President again. Call you this honesty and fair dealing gentlemen? It is but little better than the spurious documents concerning the six militia men, now advertised in your paper for sale by Jonathan Elliott, or the coffin hand-bills. Like those disgraceful documents, when properly understood, this pitiful trick will serve to swell the vote of Gen. Jackson a few thousand more; that's all

U. S. Telegraph, of May.

GENERAL JACKSON AND THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

General Jackson having been represented by his enemies as inimical to Universal Suffrage, the Nashville Committee, (appointed at a public meeting for the purpose of detecting and exposing the numerous falsehoods circulated against him;) published an Address, which contained the subjoined paragraph, noticing this charge. The gentlemen who signed the address, and whose names are attached to the extract stand among the most respectable citizens in this country.—One of them is brother to our present Minister to Russia.

"It is alleged that General Jackson, when a member of the Tennessee Convention voted for a property qualification in a voter. This the Committee positively assert is UNTRUE. It is notorious that he advocated the provision appointed in the Constitution of our State which secures the Right of Suffrage to every Freeman.

John Overton, chr'm.	Robert Foster
G. W. Campbell	Wm. L. Brown
John Catson	Robert White
Thomas Claiborne	Joseph Philips
Daniel Graham	Wm. B. Lewis
Jessy Wharton	Edward Ward
Alfred Balch	Felix Robertson
John Shelby	Josiah Nicholl
Wm. White	John M'Nairy.

Thus the matter is settled with regard to Gen. Jackson; and it is shown that the allegation is absolutely false.

But how stands it with Mr. Adams? We shall show, by undeniable testimony, that Mr. Adams has voted, not only for a property qualification in voters, but for other provisions equally repugnant to the principles of a republican government. While Mr. Adams was a Senator in congress the following will be found upon the Journal of that body:

"Friday, February 10th, 1804—on the second reading of the bill to erect Louisiana into two territories, an amendment was offered containing the following provisions:

1st. That no person should be eligible to a seat in the territorial legislature unless he owned ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND, or a HOUSE and LOT in the city of New Orleans.

2d. That no person should be qualified to vote for a representative unless he owned FIFTY ACRES OF LAND.

3d. That the Governor of the territory should have power to PROROGUE the Legislature.

4th. That he should have power to DISSOLVE it.

5th. That he should have power to NEGATIVE all the bills passed by the Legislature.

Mr. Adams voted for the amendment containing those five provisions, in a minority of five, as may be seen by referrence to the Journal of the Senate, vol. 3, page 354.

MR. WEBSTER!

If Secretary Barbour goes Minister to England, what becomes of Mr. Webster and the pledge, the written contract which he exacted from Mr. Adams, to take care of the Federal Party, alias—himself? Does he find that Mr. Adams having reaped the benefit of the bargain, does not think fit to perform his part of the contract? We suspect, great a lawyer as Mr. Webster is, that in the interlineations which he suffered Mr. Adams to make in the letter, he left himself a way to get out. He would have been more on his guard if he had remembered the case of the turnpike from Thompson's Pond to the Braintree Weymouth Turnpike, reported in 8th Massachusetts Reports, 138.—We have n't the book before us, but the case, we believe, was this: (If we are mistaken the Report can be referred to as the book is in some of the lawyer's offices.)

Some years ago, Mr. John Quincy Adams associated with a number of gentlemen for the purpose of making a turnpike from Thompson's Pond, to the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike. By mutual agreement, they divided the expense of the enterprize into 500 shares, & each associate entered into a written agreement with the rest, to take a certain number of shares. The contemplated road, it was expected, would run near the estate of the father of Mr. Adams, and probably increase the value of that estate, which he expected to inherit. He subscribed the agreements and engaged to take ten shares. Relying on these agreements and on each other's moral honesty and honor, the associates proceeded in the work and completed it, at an expense of about $50,000. He was call upon to fulfil the engagement and pay his proportion of this expense. He absolutely refused—His subscription was produced in black and white, made "with his own pen," but all in vain. The engagement was not written in such a form as to make him legally responsible, and not one cent would he pay. His duped associates were obliged to advance the money and seek an indemnity as they could.—Balt. Rep.

MR. ADAMS' ECONOMY.

It will be seen by reference to the Report of the Standing Committee of the House of Representatives on the Expenditures of the State Department, that the expenses of that Department since Mr. Clay came into it, have averaged more than $32,000 a year, whereas, under Mr. Monroe's administration they averaged only $17,000. So that they have been under this 'economical' administration. How has this immense increase been occasioned? This is a question which the people of this country cannot fail to ask, and should require to be answered. Does not the failure on the part of the friends of the present administration to explain this matter, justify the worst suspicions. If General Jackson, when an officer of the Government, had expended nearly double what any other officer of equal grade did, would he not have been held up, by the Adams party, to the world as a swindler of the public?

Ib.

Extract from Mr. Adams' reply to the Committee appointed to inform him of his election to the Presidency:

"It has been my fortune to be placed, by the division of sentiment prevailing among our countrymen on this occasion, in competition, friendly and honourable, with three of my fellow-citizens, all justly enjoying, in eminent degrees, the public favour, and of whose worth, talents and services, no one entertains a higher and more respectful sense than myself. The names of two of them were, in the fulfilment of the provisions of the Constitution, presented to the election of the House, in concurrence with my own; names closely associated with the glory of the nation: and one of them (General Jackson) further recommended by a larger number of the primary electoral suffrages than mine."

In Massachusetts, says a Boston paper, nearly three times as much money is spent annually, for spiritous liquors, as for literature and religion together; for the two latter conjointly, $650,000, and for the former alone $1,500,000.

The fable, says Dr Rush, of Prometheus, on whose liver a vulture was said to prey constantly, as a punishment for his stealing fire from heaven, was intended to illustrate the painful effects of ardent spirits upon that organ.

Value of a Glass eye.—The principal duty of a "book-keeper" in a West India Plantation, is watchfulness. A person of this description who had lost an eye somehow or other, the want of which he supplied with a glass one, whence originated his superiority; for when he was awake, he was in the habit of placing his hand over his superficial eye, but when he went to sleep in his chair in the boiling-house, he uniformly covered his seeing eye, leaving the other open and uncovered. This caused the negroes; who are altogether ignorant of fictitious eyes. to say. "Dat cunning buckra, for him one eye sleeps, while toder keeps spell."—Marley; or a Planter's Life of Jamaica.

Baltimore Prices Current.

Baltimore, Friday, May 30.

FLOUR—white wheat family, $6 a 6 50—superfine Howard-st. 4 75 a 4 87½; city mills, 4 50; Susquehanna 4 37½ a 4 50—GRAIN, best red wheat 87 a 92; best white wheat 95 a 1 00; ordinary to good 80 a 85—CORN, 32 a 34—RYE, 50—OATS, 20 a 22—CLOVER SEED, 3 a 3 50—TIMOTHY, 1 25 a 2 00—BARLEY, 60 a 62—FLAXSEED, 75 a 80.

We are authorized to announce

Anthony B. Bennett, Esq.

as a Candidate for the next General Assembly of Maryland.

May 27, 1828. jw

We are authorized to announce

John C. Wilson, jr. Esq.

as a candidate to represent Somerset county in the next House of Delegates of Maryland.

May 13, 1828. mu

FOR RENT,

FOR the ensuing year or for a term of years, the FARM on Little-Monie, now occupied by Mitchell Phœbus. For terms apply to

JAMES POLK.
June 3, 1828. kw

SINCLAIR & MOORE,

Pratt-St. Wharf, Baltimore,

HAVE in store—Millet, Lucerne, early Corn, bunch, pole & soup Beans, a large assortment for planting, and garden seeds generally.

PLOUGHS,

amongst which are the much approved self-sharpening point Plough—By turning and reversing said point, the share lasts much longer than the cast share of any other plough, in as much as the point is of steel, and when worn bevelling it is sharpened, if turned over. The CULTIVATORS made by Sinclair & Moore, pulverize the ground more effectually, and much deeper than the old fashioned three hoed kind—and by the use of these in the culture of corn, it will save nearly two-thirds of the ploughing.

ALSO, Socket Shovels, Scythes, Mattocks and Picks, with handles;—spring steel Hay and Manure Forks, WHEAT FANS, & GRAIN CRADLES, with best Waldron Scythes; Garden Tools generally; Wove Wire for Seives, and Mill Screens.

☞They have received from on board the brig Hyperion, capt. Forbes, just from Liverpool, a quantity of grain and grass Scythes, (Waldron's prime) Sickles, Maleable trace Chains; Straw and Hay Knives; Grass Hooks, and Garden Tools, amongst which are turnip and other Hoes; Edging Tools; budding and pruning Knives, &c. &c.

☞Messrs. Johston & Sudler, of Princess-Anne, have just received at their store, a number of the PLOUGHS manufactured by Sinclair & Moore. June 3.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court. May 28th, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Levin Walter, Adm'r. d. b. n. of Wm. Walter, late of Somerset county dec'd. it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of William Walter, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 9th of December next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of May, 1828.

LEVIN WALTER, Adm'r. of W. Walter, dec'd.

June 3, 1828. ||

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, May 27th, 1828.

SEAL. ON application of Jacob W. Bayly, administrator of David Vance, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of David Vance late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 9th day of December next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of May, 1828.

JACOB W. BAYLY, Adm. of D. Vance, dec'd.
June 3d, 1828. k

NOTICE.

ALL persons indebted to the subscriber are respectfully requested to come forward and settle their accounts by paying the cash, before the 15th of June next. The subscriber is compelled to this course from the peculiar situation of his affairs. He returns his grateful acknowledgements for the very liberal encouragement he has received from the public, in his line of business, and solicits a continuance of the same, as he will continue to exert himself to render universal satisfaction. The public's ob't serv't.

THOS. L. DISHAROON.
Snowhill, May 27th, 1828.

N.B. Those of my customers, whom I may not have seen during Somerset Court, are requested to remit me the amount of their accounts and thereby prevent the addition of cost. T.L.D.

MILITARY NOTICE.

THE Ferry Company of Militia are ordered to meet at the Walnut-Trees, their usual place of parade, on Saturday the 14th of June next.—Punctual attendance is requested. The roll will be called at 2 o clock P.M.

A. B. BENNETT, Capt.
May 27, 1828.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, May 20, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Edward Fowler & Levisa Kennerly, Administrators of Orrell Kennerly, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that they give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscribers, of Somerset county, have obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Orrell Kennerly, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th of November next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 20th of May, 1828.

EDWARD FOWLER, & LEVISA KENNERLY,
Adm'tors of O. Kennerly, dec'd.
May 27, 1828. k

E. T. J. Woodward,

Corner of Dugan's wharf & Pratt St. BALTIMORE,

Informs his friends and customers that he will sell on COMMISSION, Wheat, Rye, Corn, Oats, and Tobacco, and all other articles of Country Produce, and will make liberal advances on the same.

He has on hand a large supply of Groceries, Liquors, &c.

CONSISTING OF

Teas, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Family Flour, Brandy, Wine, Gin, Spirits, Whiskey and Cordials, Spices, Soap & Candles, Shad, Mackerel, Herrings, Oil and Salt, together with every other article in his line.

ALSO,

Glass Ware, Queen's Ware,

Stone and Earthen Ware, &c.
And a general assortment
Of Garden Seeds of approved kinds, which he will sell on the most liberal terms.

DRY PINE OR OAK WOOD
Will be taken in exchange for Goods, on fair terms.

May 13, 1828. mw

WEAVERS' BRUSHES,

Reeds and Shuttles,

Wash and cake boards,
Sifters, Lamp and candlewick,
Muddlers, and lime squeezers
Pound, half pound and and quarter pound Butter Prints, of various patterns
Weaver's slays or reeds
Shoe, sweeping, dusting and other brushes
Twine and cord, patent taps
Cane, for reed makers
Humming and common tops
Boot & shoe blacking, towel rollers
Lamp wicks, assorted sizes, by the dozen or gross
Spiggots and fossets, suitable for hogsheads, barrels, kegs, and hydrants
Fancy and common bellows
Fishing lines and rods, butter bowls and trays, Baskets
Nests of sugar boxes and tubs
Potato & turnip mashers, rolling pins
Carpenters' or joiners' chalk lines, etc.

The above articles are offered for sale on reasonable terms, by

VALERIUS DUKEHART.
No. 101½ Baltimore, between South and Calvert Streets.
May 13th, 1828.

Samuel & William Meeteer,

PAPER

MANUFACTURERS.

No. 3 Market Street, Baltimore.

CASH OR GOODS GIVEN FOR

RAGS,

IN LARGE OR SMALL PARCELS.

☞It is recommended to those who bring Rags to market, to apply at our Store, as the surest way of obtaining the highest market price.

May 6, 1828.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

SOLILOQUY. Addressed to Lelia.

What matchless charms of person and of mind!
How sweet her voice, her words how mild, how kind!
Her touching tone electrifies the soul,
Her modest mein throws grace around the whole.

But 'tis n't that form of Nature's skilful hand,
'Tis not those eyes, so beautiful and bright,
'Tis not those cheeks, so blooming and so bland,
Which fills my mind with such intense delight;

'Tis not those tempting lips, nor winning smiles,
Nor artless glance, which every care
 beguiles;
'Tis not that beauteous, bounding bo-
 som's heave,
Which makes my mind, to her rich accents cleave.

Oh no! It is that highly cultur'd mind,
Those just ideas so critical and free;
Those wreaths of virtue, in her tho'ts
 entwin'd,
Which wraps my soul in richest ecstasy.

Oh Lelia, could I ever dwell with thee,
And ever drink thy Music's melody,
What Joy sublime, would fill this panting breast!
—But man on earth, was ne'er with HEAVEN blest!

EDMUND.

Bellavilla, May 29, 1828.

Selected from Weems' life of General Marrion.

In the spring of 1779, Marrion, and myself [Horry,] were sent, with our commands, to Purisburg, to reinforce general Lincoln, who was there on his way to attack the British in Savannah, which a few months before had fallen into their hands. As the Count D'Estang, who was expected to co-operate in this affair, had not yet arrived, general Lincoln thought it advisable to entrench and wait for him.

While we were lying at Purisburg, a couple of young men of our regiment achieved an act of generosity and courage, which, in former days, would have laid the ground-work of a heroic romance. One of the actors in this extraordinary play was the brave sergeant Jasper, whose name will forever be dear to the friends of American liberty.

Jasper had a brother who had joined the British, and held the rank of sergeant in their garrison at Ebenezer.—Never man was truer to his country than Jasper, yet was his heart so warm that he loved his brother though a tory, and actually went over to see him. His brother was exceedingly alarmed at sight of him, lest he should be seized and hung up at once as a spy, for his name was well known to many of the British officers. But Jasper begged him not to give himself much trouble on that head, for, said he, "I am no longer an American soldier."

"Well, thank God for that, William," replied his brother, giving him a hearty shake by the hand, "and now only say the word, my boy, and here is a commission for you, with regimentals and gold to boot to fight for his majesty."

Jasper shook his head and observed, that though there was but little encouragement to fight for his country, yet he could not find in his heart to fight against her. And there the conversation ended.

After staying with his brother some two or three days, inspecting and hearing all that he could, he took his leave, and by a round about, returned to camp and told general Lincoln all that he had seen.

Having wasted several weeks longer of tiresome idleness, and no news of the French fleet, Jasper took it into his head to make another trip to Ebenezer.

On this occasion he did not, as before, go alone; but took with him his particular friend, sergeant Newton, son of an old Baptist preacher, and a young fellow for strength and courage, just about a good match for Jasper himself.

He was received as usual, with great cordiality by his brother, to whom he introduced his friend Newton, and spent several days in the British fort, without giving the least alarm. On the morning of the third day his brother had some bad news to tell him.

"Aye! what is it?" he asked, "what is it?"

"Why," replied his brother, "here are some ten or a dozen American prisoners, brought in this morning, as deserters from Savannah, whither they are to be sent immediately. And from what I learn it will go hard with them, for it seems they have all taken the king's bounty."

"Let's see'em," said Jasper, "let's see'em."

So his brother took him and Newton to see them. And indeed it was a mournful sight to behold them where they sat, poor fellows! all handcuffed, on the ground. But all pity of them was forgot, soon as the eye was turned to a far more doleful sight hard by, which was a young woman, wife of one of the prisoners, with her child, a sweet little boy of about five years old. The name of this lady was Jones. Her humble garb showed that she was poor, but her deep distress, and sympathy with her unfortunate husband, showed that she was rich in that pure conjugal love, that is more precious than all gold.

She generally sat on the ground opposite to her husband, with her little boy leaning on her lap, and her coal black hair spreading in long neglected tresses on her neck and bosom. And thus in silence, she sat, a statue of grief, sometimes with her eyes hard fixed upon the earth, like one lost in thought, sighing and groaning as if her heart would burst—then starting as from a reverie, she would dart her eager eyes, red with weeping, on her husband's face, and there would gaze, with looks so piercing sad, as though she saw him struggling in the halter, herself a widow, and her son an orphan. Straight her frame would begin to shake with the rising agony, and her face to change and swell; then with eyes swimming in tears, she would look around upon us all for pity and help, with cries sufficient to melt the heart of a demon. While the child, seeing his father's hands fast bound, and his mother weeping, added to the distressing scene by his artless tears and cries.

The brave are always tender-hearted. It was so with Jasper and Newton, two of the most undaunted spirits that ever lived. They walked out in the neighboring wood. The tear was in the eye of both. Jasper first broke silence. "Newton," said he, "my days have been but few; but I believe their course is nearly done."

"Why so, Jasper?"

"Why, I feel, said he, "that I must rescue these poor prisoners, or die with them: otherwise that woman and her child will haunt me to my grave."

"Well, that is exactly what I feel too," replied Newton—"and here is my hand and heart to stand by you, my brave friend, to the last drop.—Thank God, a man can die but once; and there is not so much in this life that a man need be afraid to leave it, especially when he is in the way of his duty."

The two friends then embraced with great cordiality, while each read in the other's countenance that immortal fire which beams from the eyes of the brave when resolved to die or conquer in some glorious cause.

Immediately after breakfast, the prisoners were sent on for Savannah, under a guard of a sergeant and corporal with eight men. They had not been gone long, before Jasper accompanied by his friend, Newton, took leave of his brother, and set out on some errand to the upper country.—They had scarcely, however, got out of sight of Ebenezer, before they struck into the piny woods, and pushed hard after the prisoners and their guard, whom they closely dogged for several miles, anxiously watching an opportunity to make a blow. But alas! all hope of that sort seemed utterly extravagant; for what could give two men a chance to contend against ten, especially when there was found no weapon in the hands of the two while the ten, each man was armed with his loaded musket and bayonet. But unable to give up their countrymen, our heroes still followed on.

About two miles from Savannah there is a famous spring, generally called the Spa, well known to travellers, who often turn in thither to quench their thirst. "Perhaps," said Jasper, "the guard may stop there." Then hastening on by a near cut through the woods, they gained the Spa, as their last hope, and there concealed themselves among the bushes that grew abundantly round the spring.

Presently the mournful procession came in sight, headed by the sergeant, who, on coming opposite to the spring, ordered a halt. Hope sprung afresh in our heroes' bosoms, strong throbbing, too, no doubt, with great alarms, for "it was a fearful odds." The corporal, with his guard of four men, conducted the prisoners to the spring, while the sergeant with the other four, grounded their arms near the road, brought up the rear. The prisoners wearied with their long walk, were permitted to rest themselves on the earth. Poor Mrs. Jones, as usual, took her seat opposite to her husband, and her little boy, overcome with fatigue, fell asleep in her lap. Two of the corporal's men were ordered to keep guard, and the other two to give prisoners drink out of their canteens. These last approached the spring where our heroes lay concealed, and resting their muskets against a pine tree, dipped up water: and having drank themselves, turned away, with replenished canteens, to give the prisoners also. "Now! Newton, now is our time!" said Jasper. Then bursting like two lions, from their concealment, they snatched up the two muskets that were rested against the pine, and in an instant shot down the two soldiers that kept guard. And now the question was, who should first get the two loaded muskets that had just fallen from the hands of the slain. For by this time the sergeant and corporal, a couple of brave Englishmen, recovering from their momentary panic, had sprung and seized up the muskets; but before they could use them, the strong swift-handed Americans, with clubbed guns, levelled each at the head of his brave antagonist, the final blow. The tender bones of the scull gave way beneath the furious strokes, and with wide scattered blood and brains, down they sunk, pale and quivering to the earth, without a groan.—Then snatching up the guns which had thus a second time fallen from the hand of the slain, they flew between the surviving enemy and their weapons, grounded near the road, and ordered them to surrender, which they instantly did.

Having called the prisoners to them, they quickly with the points of their bayonets, broke off their handcuffs, and gave each of them a musket.

At the commencement of the fray, poor Mrs. Jones, half frightened to death, had fallen to the ground in a swoon, with her little son piteously screaming over her. But when she came to herself and saw her husband and friends around her, all freed from their fetters and well armed, she looked and behaved like one frantic with joy. She sprung to her husband's bosom, and, with her arms around his neck, sobbed out "Oh, bless God! bless God! my husband is safe, my husband is not hung yet," then snatching up her child, and straining him to her soul as if she would have pressed him to death, she cried out—"O praise! praise! praise God forever! my son has a father yet!" Then wildly darting round her eyes in quest of her deliverers, she exclaimed, "where are those blessed angels that God sent to save my husband?"

Directing her eyes to Jasper and Newton, where they stood, like two youthful Sampsons, in the full flowing of their locks, she ran and fell on her knees before them, and seizing their hands, kissed and pressed them to her bosom, crying out vehemently—"dear angels! dear angels! God bless you! God Almighty bless you for ever."

Then instantly, for fear of being overtaken by the enemy, our heroes snatched the arms and regimentals of the slain, and with their friends and captive foes, recrossed the Savannah, and in safety rejoined our army at Purisburg, to the inexpressible astonishment and joy of us all.

REMEDIES FOR INDIGESTION.

Of indigestion, two of the prominent features are flatulence and acidity; and the remedies for these states are clearly indicated. They are the alkalies and magnesia; and the advantages which the latter, in the general way, possesses over the former, is this: that, as containing an alkaline principle, the stomach acidity is neutralized by its administration; and a purgative salt being formed, in some measure, by the combination, the double purpose is thus effected of a corrective and an apperient. A tea-spoonful or two of magnesia, thrown into a glass of water, and then taken before going to rest, will often anticipate, as it were, the acid formation in the stomach, which would otherwise be consequent upon a little irregularity of eating or drinking; and will destine the individual to a good, who otherwise would pass a restless, uncomfortable night. When a more positive purgative is required it will be right to combine the sulphate of magnesia (epsome salts) with the carbonate (common magnesia.) Two large tea-spoonsful of the former, with one of the latter, will constitute a good aperient; and, for a gouty invalid, one tea-spoonful of the carbonate of ammonia (sal volatile) will be found useful, or, if the habit be cold, two or three spoonsful of tincture of rhubarb may be advantageously mixed with the salts and magnesia.—Uwins on Indigestion.

Irish indirectness of answer.—'Macklin and I (says O'Keefe in his Memoirs) were walking through the Little Green in Dublin; (at that time the market for fruits and vegetables;) he seemed much pleased with the good humor of the sellers; 'Ay (said he) they're comical and good-natured, and ready witted, and obliging—this is, I mean, what we call the lower order; but you never can get a direct answer from them.' 'Oh (I said) that's not fair, but your question first.' 'Well (said Macklin, coming up to an old woman who had a basket of vegetables before her,) what's the price of that cauliflower?' 'That cauliflower (said she taking it up in her hand,) Sir, that's as fine a cauliflower as ever was seen, either in a garden or out of a garden.' 'Well but what's the price of it?' 'The price! the devil a prettier cauliflower could you see of a long summer's day.' 'Well it's pretty enough, but what's the price of it?'—'What's the price of it?' 'What's the price of it! arrah, Sir, you may talk of tulips and roses, and pinks and wallflowers, and, gilliflowers, but the flower of the flowers is a cauliflower as this, Sir all over the market—here, feel the weight of it Sir.' 'There, O'Keefe,' said Macklin, 'if you had a wager with me that I could get a direct answer when I put a question to them, you'd have lost it.''

From the American Farmer.

AGRICULTURE IN MISSISSIPPI.

City of Washington
May 12, 1828.

Dear Sir,—The period is fast approaching, when the staple of our state, (Mississippi,) will not be worth the culture. A serious inquiry presents itself to the people—to what other culture will they resort?

The Pearl river country, from experiments made on a small scale, will produce the grape in abundance. in the neighbourhood of Mount Carmel, a beautiful and elevated country, I have been informed by Mr. Reagan, that the grape never rots. In the town of Monticello, I have seen the native grape growing in great perfection at Colonel Blair's, equal almost to the foreign grape, and which will no doubt improve by proper culture. All that part of the state, on the sea-board, will produce the olive, grape, data, sea-island cotton, and sugar; and I have been much surprised, that so few enterprising individuals have not resorted, for settlement, to that country. The Islands of the coast of Mississippi, will no doubt be settled, so soon as their value is ascertained. All that portion of the state, below the 31st degree of latitude, is supposed to be as healthy as any country in the world.

With regard to sheep, they need no attention in our climate, and they increase to a greater extent amongst us, than in any other state. Our hills are covered, winter and summer, with an everlasting verdure, and in a few years, we could raise a sufficient quantity of wool to supply our own wants. With respect,

W. HALL, of Mississippi.

Great Product of Corn and Hemp—on Two Acres.

York, (Pa.) April 28, 1828.

Sir,—Permit me, through the medium of the American Farmer, to communicate the produce of two acres owned and cultivated by Jacob Dritt, Esq. of this borough.

The lot lies in the neighbourhood of this town, and the statement has been given by its owner, a gentleman of respectability and character. It was cultivated in Indian corn and in hemp last season. The corn was planted in drills about two and a half feet apart—the hemp seed was sown at the same time—the plants were thinned about two feet apart. These two acres produced one hundred bushels of corn, and forty-five bushels of hemp seed. This seed was sold at two dollars and twenty-five cents per bushel. The whole expenses of cultivation and gathering did not amount to more than twelve dollars. Some of this seed was purchased at Baltimore by Sinclair & Moore. This lot had been cultivated the year before in corn and hemp. The corn was better the first year, but the hemp not so good in consequence of the season. As soon as the female plants were discovered to be in seed, the male plants were removed. The farmers of this county are beginning to raise hemp in considerable quantities. The result has been very profitable: Several acres of land put in fine order, if cultivated in this article, are really more productive than many poor farms tilled in wheat and corn.

Some beautiful samples of cotton have been shown here. It was raised in Washington township, York county. The seed was distributed by General Forman, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland—some of it was obtained by me, and given to our farmers for experiment. Yours, &c.

WM. B. DONALDSON.

A REMEDY FOR SMUT IN WHEAT.

The original cause of smut in Wheat, is easily discerned and explained. It is found in the effect of heat generated in the grain at the time, and immediately following its being harvested. As a demonstration of this, let two bundles of wheat be gathered, the seed of which shall have been perfectly pure; bind one up, either not fully ripe or with any green substances that may be intermixed with it, and immediately stow it in a place as much confined from air as possible, and where it must necessarily become heated so as to smoke when disturbed, and let it remain thus several weeks before threshing;—gather the other in the same manner, let it be thoroughly dried, after which, place it under cover and thresh it immediately. In pursuing the above process, you will find in the former instance, the wheat produced will almost infallibly prove to be smutty, while in the latter it shall be totally free from smut.

The above simply exhibits the cause and the preventive, which I have proposed to discover. But it may be important also to show a remedy for injured wheat, that has already become partially smutty, and which from necessity is to be used for seed. Various prescriptions have been followed to effect this by different agriculturalists, some of which have sometimes proved effectual, and at other times not so. The method that I should prescribe, similar to what is generally used, is as follows:—First, wash your wheat in clear water thoroughly and repeatedly, until the last water that you apply shall come from it as pure as when first poured upon it. In many places where the soil is light and warm, seed washed as above will be sufficiently prepared, but to have it more sure in all places, a further process is necessary. Therefore, after washing as above, take three quarts of good lime, or six quarts of ashes, with which make a lie, in which put the wheat, frequently stirring it till it sprouts, or until you can rub off the outer hull between the thumb and the finger, and immediately sow it. This process will be effectual, and no danger will accrue from it.

Many farmers complain that they have found, by experience, washing seed, both with and without, liming to prove ineffectual. I am confident that they must attribute their ill success to their not thoroughly performing the operation. A partial washing is much worse than none. By this the smutty kernel becomes dissolved in the water, and the particles thereof gather again on the hollow part of the kernel, the place of germination, and there adhere, unless by repeated washing they are displaced. The product of such seed must necessarily become smutty.

JOHN BICKNEL.

Buckfield, (Me.) July 1, 1819.

N. B. To render seed wheat perfectly pure and sound, it is important that it should be thoroughly, dried and threshed early and put up in small bundles, when gathered. Much bad grain arises from its too long continuance on the sheaves.

REAPING GRAIN.

The French claim the merit of a new discovery of great importance to agriculture, in the advantages which, according to them, result from the practice of reaping grain before it is perfectly ripe. This theory, which has just been promulgated by M. Cadet de Vaux, originated with M. de Salles, of the agricultural society of Beziers. The following are the particulars:

Grain reaped eight days before the usual time is, in the first place, secured from the dangers which threatened it at that time—this is only accidental: but a positive advantage is, that the grain is fuller, larger, finer, and that it is never attacked by the weevil.

The truth of these statements has been proved by the most conclusive, comparative experiments upon a piece of grain, one half of which was reaped before the usual time, and the other half at the degree of maturity fixed by the ordinary practice. The first portion gave a hectolitre of grain more for half a hectare of land. Afterwards, an equal quantity of flour from the wheat of each portion was made into bread; that of the grain reaped green, gave seven pounds of bread more than the other in six decalitres. Lastly, the weevel attacked the grain which was cut ripe, the other was exempt from it. The proper time for reaping is, that when the grain, on being pressed between the fingers, has a dough appearance, like the crumb of bread just hot from the oven, when pressed in the same manner.

A KING AT THE PLOUGH.

The subjoined extract from the Philadelphia Advertiser, presents a beautiful picture of the rural pursuits and republican habits of Joseph Bonaparte, ex-king of Spain. In his case, the sword has almost literally "been beat into the plough share, and the spear into the pruning hook." How enviable is his lot compared with that of the distracted and wretched monarch upon the throne once occupied by himself!

"His estate occupies a large territory. His house is in the French style, but not so splendid. His lands, on which immense sums have been expended, are well cultivated. In all public improvements he contributes liberally—something like 4000 dollars, I am told, he paid on one road.

"He is much beloved, and his memory will be ever dear to the villagers. There is scarcely now a poor family in the village, so many does he employ on his lands. He pays liberally, punctually fulfilling all his contracts—no lawsuits, no disputes, and the intemperate and immoral are at once discharged. He is constantly, in the season of agriculture, in the field with his men, and is constantly, with an elegant pruning hatchet in his hand. Strangers who are introduced, partake liberally of his hospitality. He has thus exchanged a coronet of thorns for that of a graceful agriculturist, and becomes a citizen of our happy republic."

From the Gazetta di Napoli, March 21.

Eruption of Mount Vesuvius.—On the 14th inst. a new orifice, about 15 feet in circumference, was opened in the crater of Mount Vesuvius, on the eastern side, from which issued an immense quantity of smoke, in the form of a globe; this burst with a tremendous explosion, and scattered around a quantity of boiling liquid. After some days these explosions ceased, but the new aperture continued to discharge a great deal of smoke, and occasionally some flames. On the 17th and 18th these phenomena were renewed with increased force, the detonations became more frequent, and a slight flow of lava was perceptible.—It was observed that, on the 20th, the new opening was increased to 60 feet; that the matter ejected piled round it in a pyramidical form to the height of 50 feet; that stones were occasionally thrown up into the air, and that the explosions were continued at intervals of ten minutes. In the opinion of the inhabitants near Vesuvius, an eruption is at hand.

March 22.—Since yesterday two other openings have been made in the crater, and they are of larger dimensions than the first; from them issue quantities of smoke and flame. After a variety of explosions a tremendous shock forced the three apertures into one, and a column of smoke and ashes arose from it, and presented to the city of Naples the appearance of a pine tree of gigantic dimensions.—The rays of the sun reflecting against it, presented one of the most extraordinary spectacles ever seen. Stones were thrown up in great numbers, and one among the rest of immense dimensions, which was thrown over the side of the crater, and rolled down the mountain.

The violence of the eruption began to diminish about 8 o'clock, and the wind having changed, caused the volcanic column to incline towards Ottojano, and it began gradually to diminish in size. At 5 o'clock the summit of Vesuvius displayed only a small cloud of smoke. The road of Portici is crowded with carriages and pedestrians.

Eight o'clock.—As the column of smoke diminishes the explosions in the interior of the mountain increase, and symptoms of earthquake threaten another violent eruption. Shocks have been felt at Calabria; in the districts of Riggio and Palmi. No damage of importance has been done.

VALUABLE PROPERTY
AT PRIVATE SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM, situated at the mouth of Wicomico Creek, in Somerset county, Md. containing about 300 acres and known by the name of "Kibble's Destiny." The improvements are an excellent two story frame house, with necessary out-buildings—A peach orchard containing nearly 1000 trees—Also, a good apple orchard.

Vessels of a large burden can come within 20 yards of the house.

☞ The crops of corn and wheat on the farm will be sold with the land—There are about 175,000 of the former and of the latter about forty bushels were sown.

For further particulars and terms apply to JOSHUA MORRIS.
May 20, 1828.

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that I have appointed Benjamin I. Jones my agent to collect all money due me, and to adjust and settle all claims against me; therefore all persons owing me, or having claims against me will please call on him.

JOHN JONES, (of Benj.)
May 27, 1828.

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC.

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthma, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.
10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable stage, and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne, consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for, and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—It is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER,
Princess-Anne, Md.
Nov. 20, 1827.

PROPOSALS

For publishing in the City of Philadelphia, Pa.

THE PRACTICAL
FARMER'S MAGAZINE,
OR
Agricultural and Literary Gazette.

THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE is designed to contain information drawn from Authentic Sources relative to the improvement and management of remarkable Farms, sources of manure, number and kind of Stock, farming utensils, labourers, dairies, &c.; Agricultural Improvements; drawings and descriptions of Useful Inventions; critical notices and reviews of such publications as may tend to the interests of the Husbandman; improvements in the breed of Domestic Animals; accounts of such Foreign and Domestic trees, shrubs, vines, plants, seeds and grains, as are considered necessary or useful for subsistence, comfort or ornament, with information relative to their treatment, growth, requisite kinds of soil, &c.; and in short, whatever may tend to increase the product of the soil, and advance the Rural Economy of the country.

Insertion will always be given to such Reports, Addresses and Papers, as may be communicated for publication, by the several Agricultural Societies of this and other states.

A Land Register will contain as far as practicable, a list of farms, which are now, or may hereafter be, For Sale, account of their size, situation, quality and such other particulars as may be deemed Useful.

Space will be afforded the Solid and Sterling Beauties of Literature, the useful arts and science, Chemistry, Natural History and Philosophy, Biography and Travels, states of the Markets in the principal Sea Ports, &c. &c.

TERMS.

The Farmer's Magazine will be published semi-monthly; the price is three dollars, payable either at the time of subscribing, or on receipt of the first number. That form and size has been adopted, which is deemed most convenient for binding while the quality of the paper, the beauty of the typo, (entirely new,) and the general execution of the work, will be such as it is hoped will reflect credit on the Publishers, and gratify its patrons.

☞ Address (post paid) Thomas C. Clarke, agent for the Proprietors, No. 48, Market St. Phila.

JOB PRINTING,
SUCH AS
Handbills, Cards, Blanks,
PAMPHLETS, &c.
Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms.
At the Office of the Village Herald.

Village Herald.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY MORNING, BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

VOL. II. PRINCESS-ANNE, MD., JUNE 10, 1828. NO. 11.

To secure the continued attention of the reader, it will be only necessary to assure him that in the present number he will find that there is no falling off from the first. The same elegant, lively and finished style; the same just and pointed reflections; the same wise and salutary lessons prevail throughout. "O quanta gemma!"—N. Y. Evening Post.

THE CONTRAST;
OR,
Military Chieftains & Political Chieftains.

One who reads the history of republican France, is compelled to admire the high and heroic character, devoted patriotism, and sublime virtues of the generals, "the military chieftains," who continued to serve the nation; the success and popularity were most certain to make them the victims of the orators and statesmen of the convention and the tribunals—while they repelled united Europe from the frontiers, and deemed no sacrifice too great, no hardship too severe, no danger too appalling, if the glory of France could be sustained and its independence protected; their reward was the guillotine. Even Fayette, the pure and virtuous Fayette, could only escape the common fate of all who were faithful to France, by finding his shelter and his safety in the dungeon of Olmutz. During the agony, the "long agony," of the revolution, how were the orators and statesmen of France employed? Either denouncing in the convention, all whom liberty loved, or who loved virtue, the rich, the moderate, and the good; or at the tribunals, in selecting new victims, or in watching the bloody axe as it descended on priests and women; or on their own fellows and comrades, whom like sharks raging with hunger, they had seized when the exhausted prisons refused other victims. Mirabeau, whose eloquence sapped the foundations of the throne, sold his talents to the court, and engaged to restore what he had overthrown. Danton never rested till he was satiated with plunder and gorged with blood. Marat was counting the number of victims whose blood was daily requisite to moisten the roots of the tree of liberty. Some of the statesmen occasionally performed electioneering tours through the provinces, and as commissioners, recreated themselves in the country, and did some professional business. Lyons, Nantz, and the Loire can furnish many memorials of an energy far surpassing that of "military chieftains." The horrors of battle dwindled into nothing when compared with the greater horrors of noyades and fusillades of the south of France.

At last appeared on this bloody stage, the dictator Robespierre, wearing the red bonnet for a crown, and wielding a bloody dagger for a sceptre. Robespierre, the orator and statesman who in the day of his power spoke as long and as loud as Mr. Clay, and denounced military chieftains in language no less severely eloquent. A philanthropist too, who wrote a treatise against inflicting the punishment of death in any case; and yet the most dreadful minister of death that ever appeared in this world. Like the Azrael of the Orientals, his blows fell on all, on age, on infancy, on woman.—Had not the efforts of this great statesman, orator and philanthropist been arrested, France would have become a vast desert, where he had wandered a solitary demon, howling for more victims—a vampyre, maddened with a raging thirst for blood, which his unsparing cruelty had deprived him of the means of assuaging.

Compared with such wretches, Napolean appears an angel of mercy.—The despotism of the sword became a necessary evil to control the more horrible despotism of the tribune. And who called him to the exercise of this despotism? Who placed on his head the imperial crown, after the royal crown "had been thrown into the ditch?" Those practised and celebrated statesmen, the Abbe Seiyes, Arch Bishop Talleyrand, and the republican Fouche, duke of Otranto!

Those, who fear and hate the military character, have constant recourse to the French revolution, to prove the dangerous character of military chieftains in a republic; and that revolution certainly presents many striking instances of the moderation, forbearance, disinterestedness, obedience to the civil authority, and exalted patriotism, of the military. At one period, all that was left in France of public virtue was confined to the army. A succession of Generals, commencing with Fayette, at any time could have overthrown the civil authority; but all remained obedient to the laws, although those laws were frequently under the administration of the vilest wretches, and many a felon face was seen on the judgment seat.

When Bonaparte seized the sovereign power, France was in a state of frightful anarchy. A century must elapse before the character of that extraordinary man can be viewed free from rancorous dislike or overweening partiality. The mighty fabric of his power is overthrown, and he rests in his quiet grave in that lone island which kept his mighty spirit in—which witnessed his humiliation and his end.

"He left a name at which the world grew pale,
To point a moral or adorn a tale."

That his ambition disturbed and desolated the nations of Europe, cannot be denied. They were certainly fulfilling the prime duty of man, self preservation, in annihilating his power. But if the power of Bonaparte was employed in subverting the independence of nations, that independence was preserved by the Kutusoffs, Swartzenburgs, Wellingtons and Bluchers, all "military chieftains," who contended with him and subdued him. However formidable he might have been to Europe, France will long look back to his reign as the most brilliant era in her national history.—His troops are now laid in the dust.—His existence almost seems a dream.

"I dreamed there was an Emperor Anthony:
His legs bestrid the ocean; his rear'd arm
Crested the world; his voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake
 the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't; an autumn
 'twas
That grew the more by reaping. His delights
Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above
The elements they liv'd in. In his livery Walk'd crowns and crownets; realms and islands were
As plates from his pocket."

Fame has wound her wreaths around the brows of the revolutionary statesmen of New England, and they have received their rewards. If they deserved well of their country, what do those daring men deserve, who commenced the conflict in arms at Lexington, Concord, and on that immortal Height crimsoned with the richest blood of the sons of freedom? It is not so much their unyielding firmness while witnessing the hostile approach of the bravest veterans of the [illegible] was in flames, while the clang of arms was resounding in their ears, and the gleam of bright steel was flashing on their eyes,—it was not their steady courage in that hour of deadly peril,—on which their claim to the gratitude of posterity is founded. It is on their disinterested love of country; their deep, unwavering devotion to the cause of liberty. It was something more than the love of glory which induced them to dare the peril of such conflicts.—True it is, they had arms in their hands, but the halter was around their necks. True it is, they might have received the felon's death, and instead of a monument rising to the heavens to tell, and tell forever, the illustrious story of their deeds, the rank grass of those now consecrated spots might have waved over a rebel's grave.

"Rebellion, foul dishonouring word,
Whose wrongful blight so oft has stain'd
The holiest cause, that tongue or sword
Of mortal ever lost or gain'd,
How many a spirit born to bliss,
Has sunk beneath that withering name,
Whom but a day's, an hour's success,
Had wafted to eternal fame!"

It is not my purpose to repeat the oft-told story of our revolutionary contest. I hasten to the closing scene, when the army, that army which had endured and had suffered so much; whose officers and soldiers had sacrificed the best years of their lives and had received nothing; had undergone physical evils far more fearful than the dangers of the field; watched through the long night-storms of winter, and when worn down with fatigue and cold and hunger, found their couch on a rock, with a snow bank for a pillow, what was their conduct when their sufferings were brought home to them by an eloquent and able incendiary, in this soul-stirring language—when they were told that after a pursuit of seven long years, the object for which they set out was at length brought within their reach? "Yes (says the writer,) yes my friends that suffering courage of yours was active once; it has conducted the United States of America through a doubtful and bloody war. It has placed her in the chair of independency, and peace returns again to bless, whom? a country willing to redress your wrongs cherish your worth, and reward your services? a country courting your return to private life, with tears of gratitude, and smiles of admiration; longing to divide with you that independency which your gallantry has given, and those riches which your wounds have preserved? Is this the case? Or is it rather a country that tramples on your rights, disdains your cries, and insults your distresses? Have you not more than once suggested your wishes and made known your wants to congress? wants and wishes which gratitude and policy should have anticipated rather than evaded; and have you not lately, in the meek language of entreating memorials, begged from their justice, what you could no longer expect from their favour? How have you been answered? Let the letter which you are called to consider to-morrow reply. If this then be your treatment while the swords you wear are necessary for the defence of America, what have you to expect from peace, when your voice shall sink and your strength dissipate by division? When those very swords, the instruments and companions of your glory, shall be taken from your sides, and no remaining mark of military distinction left but your wants, infirmities and scars? Can you then consent to be the only sufferers by this revolution, and retiring from the field, grow old in poverty, wretchedness and contempt? Can you consent to wade through the vile mire of dependency, and owe the miserable remnant of that life to charity, which has been spent in honour? If you can, go—and carry with you the jest of tories, and the scorn of whigs—the ridicule, and what is worse, the pity of the world. Go—starve, and be forgotten! But if your spirit revolt at this; if you have sense enough to discover, and spirit enough to oppose tyranny under whatever garb it may assume, whether it be the plain coat of republicanism, or the splendid robe of royalty; if you have not yet learned to discriminate between a people, and a cause, between men and principles, awake! attend to your situation, and redress yourselves. If the present moment be lost, every future effort is in vain, and your threats then, will be as empty as your entreaties now."

One would have thought that this high wrought address would have kindled a flame of indignation in the most apathetic bosoms. It did; but it was counteracted by that strong love of country which was cherished by these brave men, their deep veneration for the laws and government.—Not one among them hesitated or doubted, and when urged to turn their swords against that congress which had neglected their claims, turned a deaf ear to their complaints, treated them not only with injustice, but with scorn; instead of assailing that congress, too weak to resist, and too mean to be just; they would have defend it. And yet such men are to be feared, suspected and hated! The sublime virtue of Washington, of Washington the "military chieftain," devoted to military employment from his earliest youth, educated in the tented field, resisted an attempt, which if unresisted would have placed a crown on his brows and a sceptre in his hands. When the gratitude of the American people called him to the highest place in their government, where is the man who will not say that their affairs during his administration were not conducted with consummate wisdom? Where is the man who will undertake to compare the Ebony of John Q. Adams with the Topaz of Washington, or will presume to measure the intellectual giant of the field and the cabinet, with the pedant from the university.

Hamilton and Knox, two "military chieftains," were called to aid in the councils of Washington, when he deliberated on a nation's destiny. Can the most bigoted of the coalition dream of instituting a comparison between Alexander Hamilton, the first secretary of the treasury, the mighty spirit which reduced its chaos to order, restored the public credit, created a system which has stood the test of time and trial,—with Richard Rush, who writes mazy nonsense in blank verse and calls it a treasury report! One would as soon think of comparing a Corinthian column with an "empty barrel," as the bold, judicious and manly Knox, with the loud-talking declaimer of the war office,

"That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows more than a spinster."

Those great, but modest and disinterested characters, who composed the cabinet council of Washington, were always at their bureaux. They were not to be found scouring the country to gain personal partisans.—They were not to be found revelling at taverns, paper-mills, and cross-roads, pronouncing convival panygerics upon their own surpassing honesty, and wisdom. Can the human imagination conceive the possibility, that George Washington could have been found at a public dinner, toasting Ebony and Topaz!

Another "military chieftain," Gen. Marshall, has presided over the jurisprudence of the United States for twenty-five years. Has this great jurist developed a powerful perception of justice, great purity of intention, and profound legal science, in the discharge of the duties of his high office, or has he not? The coalition shall answer.

In the period between the peace of 1783, and the establishment of the federal constitution, when the absolute sovereignty was in the state governments, General George Clinton was called to the government of New York, General Mifflin to that of Pennsylvania, General Smallwood governed Maryland, General Moultrie and General T. Pinckney, South Carolina, and General Sullivan, New Hampshire. Was there any misrule in those states? Did these military governors discover any improper ambition? Did they commit any acts transcending the laws and constitutions of their respective states? Was not the government of each ably and impartially administered? Were not disorders repressed; and the laws protected and executed? But the government of the civil Bowdoin, in Massachusetts, was distinguished by an alarming and dangerous insurrection, which was quelled by the energy, firmness and prudence of that veteran "military chieftain," General Lincoln. And what governor in the latter state has been more popular, or caused so little reproach, as that celebrated "military chieftain," colonel Brooks? "A military chieftain," one of the last of the revolutionists, now governs New Hampshire, prudently and wisely.

It would be unpardonable in this discussion, not to allude to one transaction during the last war, and that is the defence of New Orleans, by the western militia. Between the city and the invincibles of Wellington, twelve thousand in number, was a ditch, an embankment, four thousand militia, and a few regulars. It was filled with wealth. The entire property of many anxious and despairing men, throughout the nation was deposited at that place. It was almost in a state of mutiny. The intercourse of some of its inhabitants with the enemy was in the face of day; that intercourse had for its object the surrender of the city.—The commander of the Americans was a hero. He saw the extent of the danger; he estimated his means, and he resolved on defence. He proclaimed martial law, and compelled the mutinous, who in this hour of peril, had forgotten their country, to assist in their own defence. The trumpets sounded; the banner of St. George was unfurled. On came the embattled host of England: On they came, the conquerors of the conqueror of Europe. Little did they think that their countless laurels were to be torn from their veteran brows by American militia. On they came in the proud anticipation of a bloodless victory. The cannon were unmasked. The battle fell like grass before the scythe of the mower. Fresh columns succeeded: the death-dealing rifle soon laid them in the dust. Again they advanced.—Again they were repelled. "A republican militia-man speeded a bullet to the heart" of the British commander. He fell, full of honour, gallantly fighting" in the fore front of the battle." The enemy retreated. The stars and stripes waved in triumph over this field of blood.*

An honourable foe may be permitted to lament the fall of an honourable adversary. This feeling may be tolerated in military chieftains, whose patriotism is not of that exalted character which exults for years in the fall of an individual, and sneers at the posthumous honours with which a grateful country solaces the grief of the mourning family of a gallant soldier! The deep and bitter sorrow which filled the bosom of Colonel Hamilton for the fate of Andre, the spy, was not charged upon him, even in revolutionary times, as a fault. But Hamilton was a military chieftain, and of course his patriotism was not of that stern and vindictive character, which was required in the statesman. There are some whose petulance is excited by the augmentation of a coat of arms; but who can view the "innocent riband," the badge of aristocrat distinction, with complacency. There are some whose warfare is confined to the dead, who run no tilts with the living, but whose vampyre tracks are on the graves of honourable men.

What honours were offered, what rewards were bestowed upon him who had wrought this great work for his country? Did the bounty and the gratitude of the nation come to him in the shape of a magnificent pension? Did a superb monument arise to perpetuate the remembrance of this unparalleled victory? The man who had preserved the law, the constitution, and the American dominion over this opulent region, was accused of violating the law and the constitution, at a time, when all men were put on the elementary principles of society, the paramount law of nature self-preservation. He was arrested on the process of a wretched judge, brought to his bar, and sentenced to an ignominious fine. In the pride and flush of his victory, with his triumphant army about him, he submitted to the sentence, obeyed the law, and paid the fine.—This has not been a sufficient expiation. Neither the sanctity of the senate chamber, nor the lonely retirement of his farm, can shield him from calumny: Wherever he is, he is pursued with every tale which falsehoods can devise, and credulity believe.

It is a question deserving examination how far General Jackson is liable to the charge of military ambition, in the offensive sense in which the term has been applied by the secretary of state. He first appeared in military employment as the commander of the Tennessee militia, in the Creek war, when of mature age, and after he had holden the highest civil offices which his state could give him. His conduct in that war received the unqualified approbation of the government, and of president Madison. Did his success in that war excite any feelings of lawless ambition? Did he devise any scheme to possess himself of any part of the national funds, to further the purposes of ambition? Did he not undertake to defend the southwestern region of the confederacy, when the invader was on his soil; when an enemy disciplined in twenty campaigns, was in his front, outnumbering his raw and undiciplined militia in the proportion of three to one: when so far from having at his disposal the resources of government, the government was literally without credit, and his means were created on his own responsibility, and his whole fortune staked on the issue: when in the face of the foe, he was compelled to "create his defences;" when the wisest heads were confounded, and the stoutest hearts desponded? What object could he have had but to save the south-western states, which the enemy must have conquered, had not this gallant attempt succeeded? But, says his enemies, he proclaimed martial law. Did he proclaim martial law for his own benefit? No; he intended to use the means of the country in defence of the country. He intended that every man should be compelled to fight, not for his aggrandizement, but for his 'hearths and his altars,' his friends, his wife, his parents and his children. He intended to compel those who were interested, to defend that interest. He intended to prevent that horrible desolation, which must have fallen on the city of New Orleans, when beauty and booty were the watchwords to a licentious soldiery. And when the coward was skulking from the danger, or devising plans for its surrender, his was that moral alchymy which transformed treachery into patriotism, into heroism! Had he been a "military chieftain," of deep and dark designs, cherishing an unholy ambition in his heart, would he have engaged in this desperate enterprize? No; he would instantly have made his [illegible] states, formed a new confederacy, & at the head of an armed force, and aided by Great Britain, controlled all the regions of the upper Mississippi, secured his fortune, and established his power. Never was there a more hopeful opportunity for self-aggrandizement, than that period presented, when Jackson, Decius like, devoted himself for his country.

And where at this terrible period, were our worthy President and his prime minister, Mr. Secretary Clay? Enjoying the gala days of Europe, after the overthrow of Napoleon. Mingling with kings and nobles, parading at courts with laced coats and feathers, interchanging friendly greetings with the "military chieftains," of Europe, (as no military chieftains are hateful to these gentlemen, excepting such as have found favour with the people of America for their services to America.) The President was writing letters to Leavitt Harris, denying the ability of self-defence to his country, complaining of her penurious government, fattening on the public calamities, and drawing from the exhausted coffers of a suffering people, in less than two years, more than $60,000.

JUNIUS BRUTUS.

(To be concluded next week.)

*Vide the president's speech at a public table at Baltimore.

VILLAGE HERALD.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance; or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞ Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞ Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞ Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞ Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞ All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

Blank Warrants for sale at this office.

FELIX JENKINS,
Saddle, Harness,
AND Trunk Maker,
No. 10, South Street,
BALTIMORE,

Respectfully informs his friends, customers, and the public generally, that he continues to carry on the Saddlery, Harness, and Trunk Making Business, in all its variety, and on the most extensive scale. He has lately received from England, per the ship Philip Tabb, an assortment of articles in his line. Country merchants will find it to their interest to call at No. 10 South street, and to examine the qualities and prices of his goods, as he is determined to sell as low as they can be purchased in Philadelphia.

☞ A liberal discount will be made for cash or town acceptances.
April 15 jdm

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY OF AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public, that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast & wrought Shares, with & without Coulters; Hill-side, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs; a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows; Swingletrees, double & single; Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual; his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes, Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil-Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.

His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 8 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his [illegible] continue to which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.

JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.

N. B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. FRUIT TREES will be furnished to orders. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders. March 11. tx

CAMBRIDGE HOTEL,
Sign of the Steamboat & Stages

THE Subscriber continues to keep this handsome establishment, a few doors above his old stand, in a very central part of the town, where he is prepared at all times for the reception of travellers, and others, who may please give him a call. His house is well furnished; the rooms private and comfortable; his bar supplied with a choice selection of the best liquors; his stable stored with good provender, and his prices regulated by the times. By strict attention to his business, he flatters himself with a continuation of those customers who have been so liberal heretofore, to whom he gratefully acknowledges himself indebted.

The public's obt. servant.
WM. C. RIDGAWAY.

N. B. His hack runs to the Cambridge wharf to meet the Steamboat Maryland, on her arrival from Baltimore every Tuesday and Friday evening. Also for the conveyance of passengers from his house to the boat on her departure every Wednesday and Saturday morning, free of charge. He has, for the accommodation of persons who are going on to Baltimore, rented a private stable with a fine grazing lot, well enclosed, for the purpose of taking at livery horses at a low price, which shall be regulated by the price of grain, hay, &c. he is prepared at all times with fine horses and carriages, for the conveyance of Travellers to any part of the Peninsula. W. C. R.

Cambridge, June 3, 1828.

The "Iris" and the "Snowhill Messenger" will each please insert the above tawfow and forward their ac'ts. to this office for collection.

JOB PRINTING,
SUCH AS
Handbills, Cards, Blanks,
PAMPHLETS, &c.
Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms.
At the Office of the Village Herald.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JUNE 10, 1828.

PEOPLE'S TICKET.

For President.

ANDREW JACKSON.

For Vice President.

JOHN C. CALHOUN.

For Elector of President and Vice President of the U. S. for the District composed of Worcester, Somerset, and part of Dorchester counties:

Thomas K. Carroll.

[ADVERTISEMENT.]

CELEBRATION OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE.

The fifty-second Anniversary of American Independence will be celebrated at B. C. Springs by a number of gentlemen from different parts of the Electoral District. An Oration will be delivered on the occasion, at 11 o'clock A. M. by WESLEY SLOAN, Esq after which the company will be addressed by Messrs. DENNIS and CARROLL, the candidates for Elector of President of the U. S.

June 10, 1828.

We shall here present our readers with several extracts which are taken from the Report of the Select Committee appointed in the House of Representatives, for the purpose of enquiring and reporting, if any, and what, retrenchment could be made, &c.

"The committee do not intend to recognize the principle which a comparison [of the expense of the late and present administration] seems to imply, that the last administration is to be appealed to as a standard of economy; on the contrary, they are aware that that administration was thought by many to be profuse in its expenditures; and the committee themselves are of opinion, that, for many years past, there has been far too little regard to economy in the operations of the government, in several of its branches.

Your committee will now proceed to exhibit some statements respecting particular heads of expenditures thro' the State Department, confided exclusively to the discretion of the President.

That portion of the contingent fund for foreign intercourse, which has been ..., as was deemed by him expedient to disclose, generally denominated "secret service money," is found, by reference to the document No. 8, greatly to exceed, in amount, the expenditure of the last three years of the late administration.

Expenditure for—

1822, nothing	For 1825, $1,700 00
1823, $3,000	1826, 1,666 66
1824, 2,130	1827, 8,958 01
$5,130	$12,324 67

"Your committee, considering that the Constitution has, with a wise jealousy, especially exacted publicity in the fiscal transactions of the government, are of opinion that this secret fund, from the abuses to which it is liable, ought to be abolished in time of peace; and that, if allowed during a war, it should be regularly accounted for by the President, in a message, on the termination to hostilities of both Houses, which they may, or may not, consider confidential; and your committee, for this purpose, report a bill.

Your committee find, by an examination of the fund for the contingent expenses of foreign intercourse, that the expenses of bearing despatches have been greatly increased during the three years of the present, when contrasted with the last three years of the late administration, as appears by the following exhibit:

For		For
1822,	$ 375	1825,	$4,727 68
1823,	3,822	1826,	9,131 69
1824,	2,630	1827,	5,026 75
Total,	$ 6,827	Total,	$18,886 12
			6,827 00
		Excess,	$12,059 12

INDIANA ERECT!!

Of the vote of Indiana for General Jackson, no doubt is now entertained by men acquainted with the politics of the state. The following communication, (says the Louisville Advertiser,) is alike accurate and interesting:

Paoli, May 9.

Dear Sir:—On Monday last our listers of taxable property, made their returns, and 5 out of 6 had made it their business to ascertain the strength of the parties on the Presidential question, which stands as follows, to wit:

	Jackson.	Adams.
Northeast township,	200	100
Southeast do	164	11
Greenfield do	139	600
Southwest do	80	4
Northwest do	118	10
Paoli do	159	159

The above you may rely upon as much as tho' the vote was taken. Old Hickory will get all that is claimed in this statement, in this county.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.

W. HOGGATT.

A letter from Col. Lee states that he was present at Martinsville, at a battalion muster on the 8th ult. a vote was taken on the presidency, and the result was:

For Jackson 103 For Adams 29

On the 9th, a similar vote was taken at Mooreville, and stood thus:

Jackson 135 Adams 49

At a battalion muster at Greenville, in Floyd county, on the 10th May, a vote was also taken on the Presidency. The result was:

Jackson 136 Adams 11

The question was taken on the Presidency at Columbus, Bartholomew county, on the 10th May, and the result was:

Jackson 217 Adams 90

At a battalion muster of the militia of Warrick county, at Booneville, on the 3d of May, the vote on the presidential question was taken, and resulted as follows:

Jackson 330 Adams 53

At a muster of Capt. Joseph McReynolds' company, in Posey county, on the 5th April, they agreed to try the presidential question, when there appeared for

Jackson 80 Adams 1

The same day, in the same county, the question was tried in capt. Rogers' company, and the result was:

Jackson 50 Adams 7

Here are 1956 votes—1651 for A. Jackson, 295 for J. Q. Adams—this is considerably more than 5 to 1, yet the Coalition editors put down Indiana for Adams. Poor souls! their day of misrepresentation will soon be past.

The interesting letter which we give below is copied from the Signs of the Times, of May 24. The following beautiful eulogy on its author, delivered by a distinguished member of Congress, several years ago when the compensation law was under discussion, will be peculiarly acceptable:

"No man in the United States has been more misunderstood—no man more reviled, and that is a bold declaration for me to make, than Alexander Hamilton; unless, perhaps, the venerable gentleman from Massachusetts, (Mr. Pickering,) who generally sits in that seat, and whom, whatever may be said of him, all will allow to be an honest man. The other day, when on the compensation question, he was speaking of his own situation. When his voice faltered, and his eyes filled at the mention of his poverty, I tho't I would have given the riches of Dives himself, for his feelings, at the moment—for his poverty was not the consequence of idleness, extravagance, or luxury, nor of the gambling spirit of speculation—it was an honourable poverty, after a life spent in a laborious service, and in the highest offices of trust under government during the war of independence, as well as under the present constitution. Sir, I have not much, although it would be gross affectation in me to plead poverty.—What I have, however, such as it is, I would freely give, to the venerable ... it said over my grave as it may with truth over his—Here lies the man who was honoured with the confidence of Washington, and the enmity of his successor."

The following is the letter to which we have above alluded.

"SALEM, April 18, 1828.

"Dear Sir—Since closing my letter in answer to your inquiry, I have thought it might not be unacceptable to you, to have a short account of the defence of New Orleans, derived from a source which you may not have seen.

"All admit that General Jackson deserved well of his country for that defence. I have read the details of it, as given by an English officer, "who served with the British army there, and witnessed all that passed. The first body of British troops, sixteen hundred strong, advanced and rested some miles below the city. There were two American armed vessels on the river, at Jackson's command.—One of these took a station on the opposite side of the Mississippi, and with her shot raking the position of the British troops, soon caused them to flee to the bank (called by the French the Levee) raised on the brink of the river, to prevent an inundation, which in time of freshets, would otherwise deluge the flat, or intervale land on its border. Jackson marched down and attacked the enemy, in the evening of the same day; and after several hours of hard fighting returned to the city. The officer states, that in this action five hundred of the British troops had fallen. The first battle on the 23d or 24th December, was a momentous check to the enemy; and in my view laid the foundation of the final victory of the 8th of January. Jackson without delay began to throw up a breast-work across the whole flat, or intervale, from the river to an impassable swamp, erecting at the same time one or two batteries for cannon. On these, in their unfinished state, the British made an attack and were repulsed.

"About this time arrived General Packenham, and one or two other British Generals, with the remainder of the troops composing the British Army. The British work, with the ditch in its front, then appeared so formidable that Packenham judged it necessary to make a breach in it, before he should attempt to surmount it. Accordingly, in one night he raised six batteries, mounted with heavy cannon, to batter in breach, but Jackson had erected a battery on t'other side of the river, the shot from which enfilading these batteries, rendered that project of the enemy vain. Thus disappointed, the British general, with great labour and some days delay, essayed other means to attack his enemy to advantage. At length he made his last and gallant but desperate effort to pass over Jackson's lines. In this fruitless attempt he persevered until he was slain—until the second in command received a mortal wound, and about a thousand of their troops had fallen. This is the number stated in the narrative of the British officer. The remainder of the army then withdrew, and after obtaining a truce, to enable them to bury their dead, they departed, and re-embarked on board their ships.

"You my friend, are an old soldier of the revolution, and if you place any value on my opinion as a fellow soldier, you will permit me to express it in relation to Gen. Jackson. And, after an attentive examination of his measures for the defence of N. Orleans, as they appear in the narrative of the British officer, I assure you, that they exhibit to my mind that quick discernment—prompt decision—and energetic execution, which characterise a man fitted to command an army. And is a man thus endowed, incompetent to discern and adopt the measures calculated to promote the welfare of his country in its civil administration? The idea is absurd. A strong mind will soon grasp a new subject to which it turns its attention. But Politics, the most common subject of conversation and reading among American citizens, cannot be new to Gen. Jackson. He has lived, I suppose sixty years or more—was (as I understood) attorney general of Tennessee, and assisted in forming its constitution—was a judge of its supreme court—a member of the house of Representatives when congress sat in Philadelphia—and of late a senator in congress at Washington. With these advantages, and all the additional light and information which he will derive from heads of departments whom he will select for those offices, I entertain not a shadow of doubt, that under his presidency, the government would be wisely and faithfully administered.

"But I have heard it said that Gen. Jackson was an illiterate man; and in evidence of it, a short letter or note to a printer in Washington is adduced, in which there are two or three letters of the alphabet misplaced or superfluous. And of what moment is this? Deep reading and scholarship, it is well known in the U. States, are not essential in the head of our government, to insure its faithful administration. An immense quantity of learning may be acquired, much to the pleasure of the individual; but to little purpose as respects the public. The elder Adams, in his learned Defence of the American Constitution, long since avowed a truth,—alas but too well known that KNOWLEDGE, is by no means necessarily connected with WISDOM or virtue."

Mr. Clay called General Jackson a "Military Chieftain." But with what view? Did Mr. Clay believe that the liberties of our country would be endangered, if this "Military Chieftain" were raised to the Presidency? Not at all. If ever so ambitious of military glory, how would he raise an army; and how obtain a revenue to support it? Where would he find a sufficient ... of his countrymen ready to become traitors, to destroy the public liberty? Mr. Clay perfectly well knew, that neither General Jackson, nor any other American citizen, could effect such wild projects. Why, then, did he so emphatically call Jackson a "Military Chieftain?" Obviously, to excite the fears of the uninformed and unreflecting portion of our citizens for their liberties,—and to rouse and inflame the prejudices of others. Gen. Jackson is a citizen of the west. Had he been chosen president instead of Mr. Adams, the political pendulum, in its next vibration, would probably swing to the East or South; and thus deprive Mr. Clay of the chance of rising to the Chair of State—the object of his supreme ambition. In voting himself, therefore, and persuading his friends to vote for Mr. Adams, of the remote East, he was preparing the way for his own elevation, when Mr. Adams' term should expire; in effect, voting for himself. Especially may his management be so viewed; since by securing Mr. Adams' election, he must have confidently expected to be appointed Secretary of State, an office which three successive elevations had shown to be the stepping stone to the presidency.

"Pardon me, my good sir, one word more. I do not know that in a single act of my public life, I ever considered, before hand, whether any advantage would result to myself. Adverse results, indeed, I have repeatedly contemplated; and I was willing to encounter them. I am now almost 83 years old; and I have nothing to fear or to hope, "at aught this world can threaten or indulge." If you, or your friend at Albany, shall think this letter and my other of the same date, may contribute to the removal of prejudices and errors, they are at your and his disposal. For you called on me for information which had relation to General Jackson, as a candidate for the Presidency; and I was willing to lend my aid to remove some groundless objections. I do not know that gentleman; nor is it at all probable that I shall ever see him. But I have no apprehensions for my own rights, for the few years I may yet live, nor for those of my children and grand-children; all of which, indeed, are involved in the rights of our country; and I shall consider them as perfectly secure, should Gen. Jackson be raised to the Presidency.

"With pleasure and respect I return your salution—"your old revolutionary friend."

TIMOTHY PICKERING.

Gen. PHILIP VAN CORTLANDT."

*This letter, we are positively assured by a gentleman of the first respectability was pronounced a sheer fabrication, by Gen. Jackson himself, in the hearing of our informant.—Editor of the Eve. Post.

One brief remark on the above only shall be indulged.—We call on every high spirited, honest federalist in the United States, be he who he may, to read the above, from "the man who was honoured with the confidence of Washington," and say if the appeal it contains is not irresistible.

From the Balt. Republican, June 3.

LATEST COALITION FALSEHOOD.

The following paragraph from that mint of forgeries and falsehoods, the Democratic Press, is going the rounds of the Administration papers. It appeared in the Baltimore Patriot of Saturday last.

"In the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session, in Pittsburg, there are 197 members, including six Bishops. In that highly respectable body of men, the last number of the Crawford Messenger informs us there are but seven in favour of General Jackson, and the remaining, one hundred and ninety, are in favour of Mr. Adams. This, as the Messenger remarks, "is no ordinary sign of the Times."—Dem Press.

Now, a gentleman of the highest respectability, well known to the people of Baltimore, a friend of the present administration, and a member of the General Conference alluded to in the above paragraph, on hearing that such a statement had found its way into the newspapers, expressed great regret, said that the subject of the Presidential election was not (as every body ought to have known) agitated by the conference, and that so far from its being true, that from what he could learn from the expression of opinion by the individuals composing the conference—we mean the private expression of their individual opinions—there was a majority of them in favour of General JACKSON; for that almost every member from the West preferred him.

It cannot but be a source of deep regret with every true republican to see at any time an attempt made to bring the influence of the church to bear upon the affairs of the state. We are sure there is no enlightened professor of religion, of any denomination, but must feel deeply mortified to witness any attempt on the part of politicians, to use the holy subject of RELIGION for the purposes of electioneering. In this country the independence of state and church has been guaranteed by that monument of the wisdom of our ancestors, the CONSTITUTION; and every attempt to connect them should be frowned upon by both churchman and layman.

The attempt to bring the subject of religion to bear upon the politics of the country, we believe, was never made but once before in this country since the adoption of the constitution; and that was by the party which supported the elder ADAMS against Mr. JEFFERSON. We are sure no good man wishes to witness a recurrence of the scenes of that day. Then Mr. Jefferson was denounced, in some instances, from the pulpit, as a deist, an unbeliever, an atheist—it was predicted that ... to stables, high example would be set of disrespect to religion, and the impious systems of the French Philosophers encouraged by the executive, if Mr Jefferson were elected President. A long life of purity, charity, and benevolence, and a quiet, unpretending discharge of the duties of father, friend, neighbor and citizen, proved to the world, that he whom party spirit had represented as a mammon of unrighteousness was a virtuous and amiable man and practical christian. Isn't there reason to believe that those, who are now denouncing General JACKSON, are doing him equal injustice? If he is the monster that his political opponents represent him to be, why is it that every minister of the Gospel, whoever visited the Hermitage bears such unequivocal testimony to his kindness to his neighbors, his attention to the embassadors of Christ who pass through his country on their missions of peace? If General Jackson is this bad man,—so bad that a whole sect of religious professors, so large and respectable as the Methodist, should set their faces against him, why is it, that all the members of that society from the West, who know him best, are attached to him, and bear such honorable testimony to the excellence of his character, his respect for religion, his kindness to its Ministers, and to his discharge of his duties as citizen, neighbor and friend? But the people of this country understand the object of all this calumny which issues now against Gen. Jackson, from the lips and the presses which but few years ago, were loud in his praise. A large body of his fellow-citizens have selected him as their candidate in opposition to John Quincy Adams. The mortal sin he has committed, the offence not to be forgiven is, that he has suffered his name to be placed before the people as a candidate in opposition to the late enemy and new ally of Henry Clay—JOHN Q. ADAMS. If this is a sin which interested politicians cannot forgive, it is one which the People, at least, will not think so unpardonable, and it is one to the punishment of which, we are sure the Reverend Clergy will not lend their aid.

CLAY'S SPEECH.

This travelling politician, though he declined a public dinner at Baltimore, for obvious reasons, contrived to get up a kind of a barbacue, to enable him to make a speech—the season for making speeches having arrived. Upon the health of the President being drank by his old federal friends, Mr. Clay rose and said, though his physicians had actually prohibited him from participating in the enjoyments of the table, yet he could not leave Baltimore without saying a few words. He then proceeded to speak of his being proscribed, denounced, calumniated, injured, decried, and his "public character, dearer than life," assailed by "a thousand profligate or deluded tongues and presses."

We have heard all that before, and at every barbacue throughout the country. The man who bargained away the presidency, who brought into that high office a person whom he himself had denounced as a profligate politician and who accepted in return, from his ancient enemy, the office of Secretary of State, has no right to complain of the indignant expressions of an honest and betrayed people.

Mr. Clay proceeded to denounce the republican party opposing the administration, as "a heterogeneous party," containing Cromwells and Cæsars; a party in which the Ethiopian is washed white: and after much slang of the same character, he falls to praying that the Almighty will visit us with pestilence, famine, with any scourge other than "military rule and military renown."

The following is the extract:—

If indeed we have incurred the Divine displeasure, & it be necessary to chastise this people with the rod of His vengeance, I would humbly prostrate myself before HIM and implore his mercy, to visit our favored land with war, with pestilence, with famine, with any scourge other than military rule, or a blind and heedless enthusiasm for mere military renown.

This hypocritical display he has imitated from Parson Mason's old federal speech.

If thou wilt chastise us for our sins, make the heavens that is over our heads brass the earth that is under our feet iron—turn the rain of our land into powder and dust; smite us with pestilence until thou hast consumed us from off the land; destroyed our cattle by murrain; but O, save us from the most terrible of all curses—the friendship of Napoleon Bonaparte!

We shall not find fault with Mr. Clay, in turning religious and renouncing cards, dice, and women—it is time for him to do so, but his daring and infamous aspersions of the republican party should not go unchastised. He calls the Republicans "Cæsars, the Cromwells, the Scyllas and Mariuses," of former times? he: Henry Clay, politically and personally associated with the traitors and knaves who attempted to break down the union during the late war? He, who by base bargain, brought into the Presidential Chair the head of the old aristocracy—the reviler of Jefferson, and who now has attempted to palm upon a free and injured people the Hartford Convention, Essex Junto and Dartmoor agents as rulers? Fallen as he justly is, in the estimation of every honest man, dare he asperse the character of the defenders of their country? He says he would go every where—speak to every body—travel through the union, if his health permitted him. No doubt he would—he is only good as a stump orator—a speaker at dinners and annual elections. Who are his followers—who are his echoes—who applauds him?—The very men who, for years have denounced and persecuted him—driven by his conduct from the confidence of honest politicians, he has no alternative but to join the party which he himself has so long and bitterly assailed—but let him go—he sinks with an administration which is obnoxious to the people, and can no longer sustain itself.—N. Y. Enq.

An old federalist requests us to ask Mr. Clay, who it was went to Mr. Madison, and told him if he would not agree to a declaration of war against Great Britain, he must not expect to be nominated by the caucus of democratic members of congress,—in other words, must not expect to be made president of the United States for a second term.

The old federalist is one, who, from religious principle, is opposed to war in every form. He, however, judges of the conduct of other men by their professions or principles.

The last war, he believes to have been as just as nine wars out of ten, on the principles which wars are attempted to be justified: but he always considered it very inexpedient,—and, above all very, impolitic to rush into it unprepared. Mr. Madison, and many other statesmen of the dominant party of that day, entertained, it appears, the same opinion. But Mr. Clay's rhetoric was an overmatch for their reason. The cry then was, "war, pestilence and famine," or Madison shall not be president. The cry now is "war, pestilence and famine" rather than Jackson shall be President.

The old federalist thinks the evils which wars occasion are properly attributable to the legislators, diplomatists, and others, who bring on the wars,—not to the sailors and soldiers who fight their country's battles. As a man of peace, he consequently prefers Gen. Jackson to Mr. Clay and his associates.—Philadelphia Gaz.

Another old federalist, who, also is from religious principle, opposed to war in every form, says at the last election he could not vote for Adams because he could place no confidence in his integrity, not for Jackson because he feared the warmth of his temper. His views of General Jackson are now, however, materially changed, simply by the patience he has evinced under the numberless attacks made on his character and conduct, and his forbearance towards the enemies who have assailed him with a violence and virulence unprecedented in the annals of party warfare.

Ib.

The report of the congressional committee respecting the affair between Mr. John Adams, is not quite as satisfactory as it probably might have been. We refer to the committee now commonly called the Nose Committee. They appear to have differed much upon the subject of their inquiry, and though undoubtedly they have had a long pull, they have not had a strong pull, nor a pull altogether.

The circumstance of the assault upon the Nose are but slightly adverted to:—and we are left in the dark as to what sort of a blow this prominent feature had received, or whether it had received, from either puller or pullee any blow at all. These circumstances though threatened with contempt, by the committee, are in common estimation, not to be sneezed at. To touch a nose with a thumb and fingers is, as every body knows, prima facie evidence of an intent to have a blow out. This nasal presumption may, however, be repelled by explanatory evidence: as, for instance, a Barber may handle the projection, as the seaman does the tiller, to guide the hulk, and the innocency of the act be as plain as the nose in your face. Yet he who would take it for granted that every tweaker of a nose was a barber, would certainly be on a wrong scent. Hence, the propriety of ample details, whence each man may determine for himself the quo animo of the digital compression.

Nor do the committee dwell, for even a moment upon the character of the Nose:—whether Roman, acquiline tapering chubby, Congo, or turned up:—whether it curves like a sickle, pointing to the earth—or pertulantly started for the skies—or indolently luxuriated in expanded repose upon the cheeks—or elegantly, like Mr. Clay (see his Baltimore speech) "stood erect and firm amid all the bellowing of the storm." And yet these are points of some moment, to enable us to determine the extent of the injury inflicted. One nose may be benefited by a process which would wholly ruin another:—that of an ancient Scipio, (aye, even Nascia) would scarcely feel a squeeze which to a modern Pompey would be worse than—War, Pestilence and Famine. Some noses are so smooth, that an effort to pull them would do as little harm as the catching an eel by the tail:—others, again are so diversified with hill and valley, so pimplified and tumulous, that the slightest jirk would disarrange the whole physiognomy and produce a convulsion of absolute despair. The nose that is peering to the clouds may, by a resolute pull, be restored to less indecent exposure: and the one that is prying into the secrets of the mouth may be snatched from the punishment of curiosity.

The committee, indeed, seem to have thought, as the rest of mankind are apt to think, whatever may be the structure of this organ, that the commercial principle is the nasal principle, and that all noses, like all merchants, cry aloud, "let us alone." They, therefore, pay no attention to the manner in which the nose of Mr Adams was seized, nor to the quantum of pain it endured:—and this we consider altogether unsatisfactory.

American Sentinel.

MR. WARFIELD.

This gentleman continues to maintain the most mysterious silence in relation to the interrogatories. He has had every opportunity to reply and has had sufficient time to reflect upon what course he will take, in the unfortunate and perplexing dilemma in which he is placed. It is very evident that he is afraid to deny that he told Dr. Zollickoffer, he could get any foreign appointment he wanted; but that it would not do now, lest the people might discover the manner in which things were conducted, &c. The proof of it and all the other charges in the queries, can be produced, and Mr. Mr. Warfield knows it well. The question now is, when was Mr. Warfield to be believed—at the time he made the disclosure of the manner in which things were conducted; or now when he denies that some of the facts mentioned in that disclosure, are not so? Mark the distinction—he does not deny that he made the disclosure, because that can be proved; but he denies that some of the circumstances embraced in the disclosure ever occurred, because they rest as he thinks exclusively upon the credibility of his communication to the doctor.

The first question is—Did Mr. Warfield make the disclosure to Dr. Zollickoffer? The affirmative is proved not only by the doctor, but by Mr. Warfield's tacit assent that he did.

The next question is—Did Mr. Warfield state facts to Dr. Zollickoffer? The presumption is that he did; and we shall hereafter prove by various concurrent circumstances that his statement to the Doctor is entitled to belief.

Since the disclosure of one responsible name has not had the effect of drawing out Mr. Warfield more distinctly, we shall now gratify him with a copy of Dr. Zollickoffer's certificate which we hold in his own hand writing attached to the queries which have been propounded to him.

"The above is the substance of a conversation I held with the Honourable Henry R. Warfield, after he returned from the city of Washington, and shortly after the election of John Q. Adams as President of the United States. WM. ZOLLICKOFFER.

Fred. Citizen.

A Milledgeville paper states, that the price of corn is rising in different parts of Georgia, particularly in the new counties. This price at Columbus is said to be two dollars and a half per bushel—which is partly ascribed to the great influx of population, and partly to the scarcity among the neighboring Creeks, which approaches to a state of famine. The price at Milledgeville does not exceed from 62½ to 75 cents per bushel.

The Methodist General Conference which meets once in four years, has just closed its session at Pittsburg—we understand that the Rev. Wm. Capers of the South Carolina Conference, is appointed a delegate from the general conference to England. The convention was very harmonious.

[From] the Argus of Western America.

WASTE OF PUBLIC MONEY.

We have received a document containing a detail of the "expenditures [of] the department of state." It is the report of the committee of the house of representatives, accompanied by accounts made out in the department itself, showing for what objects the public money placed at the discretion of the secretary of state has been paid, and has been printed by order of the house. This document contains many extravagant expenditures, and some most curious items. We have not now time to analyse the whole document, but we shall give a few specimens, both for the instruction and amusement of our readers.

There seems to have been several thousand dollars paid for "books." In most instances, the kind of books for which the money was paid, is not specified; but from the following our readers may judge for themselves upon that point.

[Feb.] 19. To cash paid B Chapman for Burns' work,	$3 00
April 8. James Thomas, for Edinburg Review & Pha. Medical Journal,	10 00
[...] Overall, Adain's church History,	4 00
[...] C. F. Catbush, a work on Pyrotechny,	5 00
[...] S. Bernard, for a Polyglot Grammar,	8 00
[Aug.] 25. John Overall, four nos. Church History,	1 00
[...] H. Clay, for books,	52 00
[...] Carey and Lea, memoirs of R. H. Lee,	5 00
[18]26.
[Jan.] 10. Kellogg, 1st volume Bonaparte's Ornithology,	15 00
[M]ay 23. N. White, Biographical Dictionary,	3 00
[Ju]ly 10. J. S. Skinner, 7th and 8th vols. of the American Farmer,	10 00
[S]ept. 4. Robert Ellis, Lives and Portraits of eminent Englishmen,	40 00
[D]ec. 5. David Yates, 1st volume Goodman's Am. Nat. History,	4 54
[...] G. Batterton, 1 copy Edmondson's Heraldry and Caton's Peerage,	75 00
[...] Alston Mygatt, American Mechanics' Magazine & Celestial Planisphere,	9 00
[1]827.
[S]ept. 12. James Ewell, one copy of Medical Repository,	5 00

Thousands of dollars have been laid out for books not specified; but here we have poetry, criticism, medicine, biography, natural history, the dead languages, agriculture, mechanics, science, the planisphere, ornithology, pyrotechny, &c. &c. all for the use of the state department. Here too is $75 republican money paid for a work on heraldry and peerages! What have all these things to do with the business of the State Department—the people's business? Can any clerk, when he wants to amuse himself, go and buy Burns' works, Don Quixotte, Robinson Crusoe or Tom Thumb, and charge to the government? Does every department at Washington buy out of the contingent fund allowed to it by Congress, just what books its incumbents please, and make the people pay for all?—Poor "Uncle Sam" has a broad back and a long purse!

We believe it has not been generally understood, that there are Horses as well as Clerks in the department of state. By this account, however, such appears to be the fact. In supporting these said beasts, in sundry purchases, horse swaps, mishaps, &c &c. that befel them, our good Uncle Sam seems to have come off pretty much as usual.

To J. Waring, was paid, in 1824, for keeping "the horse," $186! besides $60 for "petty expenses," such as currying him, riding him to water, &c. &c., we suppose.—So, Uncle Sam paid for his horse in one year no less than $246! In the third quarter of this year, the old gentleman seems to have had another horse upon his hands, in the care of R. W. Fenwick, to whom he paid, for horse-keeping during the balance of the year, $50; so that he paid, in 1825, for horsefeed, &c. in the state department, $296.

In 1826, there was paid J. Warren for horse-keeping, $168, and to R. W. Fenwick $112, besides $60 to the former for "petty expenses," making in all $370. This year the old gentleman seems to have branched out in the horse line, as appears from the following items:

1826.
Feb. 10. Cash paid to J. Dougherty for medicine and attendance on the horse,	$7 12
April 15. C. W. Boteler, for a horse for the patent office,	70 00
June 1. W. Brown, for saddlery,	27 00
7. R. W. Fenwick, difference in exchanging horse,	7 00
July 12. A. W. Beall, for a saddle,	15 00
Aug. 12. J. D. Murphy, horse-shoeing,	4 37
5. W. Brown, bridle and martingale,	10 50
Oct. 11. J. D. Murphy, for horse-shoeing,	3 00
Nov. 1. W. Brown, for a saddle,	11 00
Dec. 30. J. P. Latruite, a riding whip,	1 75
	$159 74
Add from above,	370 00
	$529 74

So Uncle Sam's two horses, trimmings, doctoring, &c. cost, for this one year, only $529 74! When he bought this first horse of Boteler at $70, we wonder what became of the old horse? Was he sold? If so, who pocketed the money? Did the buzzards eat him, after he had been feeding at the rate of $142 per year? To all appearance, the old gentleman must be well stocked with saddlery, &c. In addition to the old stock, here was $66 50 paid for those article in 5 months, besides a whip and —no, we do not perceive any spurs in the account.

In 1827, there was paid to J. Warren $168, and to R. W. Fenwick $168, for horse keeping, making $336, besides at least 40 for "petty expenses," making in all $376. In addition to this we have in this year's account, the following items:

1827.
Jan. 11. M. Higgins, horse-feed,	$25 64
J. W. Murphy, horseshoeing,	4 94
Feb. 17. Elisha Johnson, securing, &c. horse belonging to patent office, which had been stolen,	10 00
April 4. J. Bosworth, horse shoeing,	3 61
12. John Bittinger, a mate for the use of the messenger,	70 00
June 1. R. W. Fenwick, his expenses in endeavouring to recover the horse belonging to the patent office, which had been stolen,	2 50
July 18. W. Young, horse shoeing,	5 75
26. C. Polkinghorn, saddlery,	6 10
Aug. 14. C. Byrns, horse shoeing,	5 69
20. Saml. A Childs, difference in exchange of horses,	30 00
27. R. W. Fenwick his expenses in recovering the horse from W. Ma[...]l,	5 00
C. W. Boteler, do do	10 80
Oct. 1. H. M'Gee, difference in exchange of horses,	10 00
	$189 13
Add from above,	376 00
Cost of horses in 1827,	$565 13

There are two things particularly remarkable in Uncle Sam's economy, viz.

1. He frequently buys horses, but he never sells one.

2. When he swaps horses, he always gives boot.

In the year 1827, he was remarkably unfortunate with his beasts. He not only gave $70 for a mare and 40 boot in his swaps, but the rogues about the city stole his horses two or three times, and compelled him to pay $27 50 to get them back! Poor fellow, must he not have a long purse to stand all this!

The aggregate cost of the old gentleman's horses attached to the department of state, during the three years of the present administration has been:

For 1825	$246 00
1826	529 74
1827	565 13
Only	$1340 87

How many horses he has, attached to the other departments and the president's house, we know not. Old John Adams, when he decamped, left sundry old horses and carriages behind him as the property of the government, and from appearances, John Q will do the same thing, unless, indeed, possession gives right, as in the case of his Ghent outfit, and he takes them all off to Quincy!

When Uncle Sam sees this account, we doubt whether he will think much worse of the thieves who stole his horses, than of the faithless stewards who have so strangely spent his money.

The following items in this account would be laughable, did they not fill the reader with indignation.

1827.
June 1. P. Frazier and Chas. Hawkins cleaning the grass from the pavements,	$11 50
15. Chas. Hawkins, destroying the grass about the pavements with hot ley,	2 25
July 20. Chas. Hawkins, cleaning grass from the pavements,	3 75
Aug. 23. Chas. Hawkins, clearing grass from the pavements,	3 75
	$21 25

Now, this must have been most obstinate grass! Pulled up on the 1st June, scalded with hot ley on the 15th, it had still to be exterminated again on the 20th July and 23d of August! We wonder whether Uncle Sam can flatter himself with the hope that it is dead now? Put a little hickory ley on it, and it will never again be heard of! This pavement is nothing more, we suppose, than a brick pavement of no very great dimensions, around the Secretary's office.

This document contains numerous other curious items, such as $5 for a wheelbarrow, $6 for repairing and cleaning two guns, &c. &c. but we cannot analyse it any further at this time.

If the people tolerate such extravagances and follies as are exhibited in this paper, they are ready to give up their money and their liberties.

☞The Daily Advertiser the Adams paper at Albany, speaking of the recent election of Supervisor in the 4th ward of that city, says:—

"Fourth ward.—The election for Supervisor in this ward, was held yesterday, and Wm. Mayell, the Jackson candidate, is elected by thirty-one majority over James P. Gould the Adams candidate. Of course, we have to acknowledge that we are beat—but not routed."

[From the Waterloo (Sen. co.) Republican Observer.]

It is worthy of remark that the very acts of General Jackson during the late war, which crowned the American arms with honour and success—which retrieved their character, and established the fact in the opinion of the European governments, that republican troops are not altogether "inefficient" in war—are now referred to by the General's opponents, to prove that he is unworthy the confidence of the people! The peculiar impropriety of such efforts to injure the man who did infinitely more for the good of his country during the late war than any other, arises from the fact that many of those who are now foremost in abusing him for these acts, at the time advocated the propriety of his conduct throughout, and defended him against all charges of impropriety.

An editor says, that "the bill for the revolutionary survivors only wants the signature of the president to become a law." To this Alderman Binns says, "that it shall have." What a prodigious fellow the Alderman is.—He has only to say to John Quincy—do this, and he doth it.—N. Y. Enq.

☞Let the Poor Man look at the following Picture.

GEN. JACKSON AND THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

General Jackson having been represented by his enemies as inimical to Universal Suffrage, the Nashville Committee, (appointed at a public meeting for the purpose of detecting and exposing the numerous falsehoods circulated against him;) published an Address, which contained the subjoined paragraph, noticing this charge. The gentlemen who signed the address, and whose names are attached to the extract stand among the most respectable citizens in this country.—One of them is brother to our present Minister to Russia.

"It is alleged that General Jackson, when a member of the Tennessee Convention voted for a property qualification in a voter. This the Committee positively assert is UNTRUE. It is notorious that he advocated the provision appointed in the Constitution of our State which secures the Right of Suffrage to every Freeman.

John Overton, chr'm.	Robert Foster
G. W. Campbell	Wm. L. Brown
John Catson	Robert White
Thomas Claiborne	Joseph Philips
Daniel Graham	Wm. B. Lewis
Jessy Wharton	Edward Ward
Alfred Balch	Felix Robertson
John Shelby	Josiah Nicholl
Wm. White	John M'Nairy.

Thus the matter is settled with regard to Gen. Jackson; and it is shown that the allegation is absolutely false.

But how stands it with Mr. Adams? We shall show, by undeniable testimony, that Mr. Adams has voted, not only for a property qualification in voters, but for other provisions equally repugnant to the principles of a republican government. While Mr. Adams was a Senator in congress the following will be found upon the Journal of that body:

"Friday, February 10th, 1804—on the second reading of the bill to erect Louisiana into two territories, an amendment was offered containing the following provisions:

1st. That no person should be eligible to a seat in the territorial legislature unless he owned ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND, or a HOUSE and LOT in the city of New Orleans.

2d. That no person should be qualified to vote for a representative unless he owned FIFTY ACRES OF LAND.

3d. That the Governor of the territory should have power to PROROGUE the Legislature.

4th. That he should have power to DISSOLVE it.

5th. That he should have power to NEGATIVE all the bills passed by the Legislature.

Mr. Adams voted for the amendment containing those five provisions, in a minority of five, as may be seen by referrence to the Journal of the Senate, vol. 3, page 351.

Baltimore Prices Current.

Baltimore, Friday, June 6.

FLOUR—white wheat family, $6 a 6 50—superfine Howard st. 4 75 a 4 87½; city mills, 4 50; Susquehanna 4 37½ a 4 50—GRAIN, best red wheat 87 a 92, best white wheat 95 a 1 00, ordinary to good 80 a 85—CORN, 31 a 33—RYE, 50—OATS, 20 a 22—CLOVER SEED, 3 a 3 50—TIMOTHY, 1 25 a 2 00—BARLEY, 60 a 62—FLAXSEED, 75 a 80.

We are authorized to announce

Anthony B. Bennett, Esq.

as a Candidate for the next General Assembly of Maryland.

May 27, 1828. jw

We are authorized to announce

John C. Wilson, jr. Esq.

as a candidate to represent Somerset county in the next House of Delegates of Maryland.

May 13, 1828. mu

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County, Orphans Court,

May 28th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Levin §SEAL.§§ Walter, Adm'r. d. b. n. of §§§§§§§§§ Wm. Walter, late of Somerset county dec'd, it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of William Walter, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 9th of December next they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 29th day of May, 1828.

LEVIN WALTER, Adm'r. of W. Walter, dec'd

June 3, 1828.

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of the State of Maryland against Peter Bell, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: part of a tract of land called Casqua, containing 200 acres, more or less—part of Casqua and part of Woodfield containing 250 acres, more or less; also a horse and gig, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises on Friday the 27th instant, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. for cash, to the highest and best bidder to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

June 5—10 jh

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed at the suit of Sarah Huston use of William W. Handy against James W. Dashiell, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro man Sampson, one do. Shadrick, one do. Huett, one do. Moses, one do. Albert, one do. John, one woman Betty, one do. Harriet, one do. Sally, one do. Sophiah, and one child Milly, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, in Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the first day of July next, at the hour of 2 o'clock, P. M. for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

June 10 nk

COHEN's OFFICE—Baltimore.

3d class Maryland State Lottery, for 1828. To be drawn in the city of Baltimore on WEDNESDAY, 25th JUNE, inst.

THE HIGHEST PRIZE,

Ten Thousand Dollars.

SCHEME.

1 prize of	$10,000	is	10,000 Dolls.
1 prize of	2,000	is	2,000 Dolls.
1 prize of	1,000	is	1,000 Dolls.
2 prizes of	500	is	1,000 Dolls.
2 prizes of	200	is	400 Dolls.
10 prizes of	100	is	1,000 Dolls.
20 prizes of	50	is	1,000 Dolls.
30 prizes of	20	is	600 Dolls.
100 prizes of	10	is	1,000 Dolls.
200 prizes of	5	is	1,000 Dolls.
4000 prizes of	4	is	16,000 Dolls.

4367 pr's. amounting to 35,000 Dolls.

Only 10,000 Tickets in the Scheme. The 10,000 dollar prize will be payable by 1000 tickets, Nos. 1 to 1000 inclusive, valued at 3500 Dolls.

Whole Tickets,	$4	Quarters,	$1 00
Halves,	2	Eighths,	50

To be had in the greatest variety of Nos. at

COHEN'S OFFICE

114 Market-street, Baltimore,

Where were the Great Prizes of One Hundred Thousand Dollars each were sold in former Lotteries, and where more Capital Prizes have been sold than at any other office in America.

☞ ORDERS either by mail (post paid) or private conveyance, enclosing the Cash or Prizes, will meet the same prompt and punctual attention as if on personal application.

Address to

J. I. COHEN, Jr. & BROTHERS,

Baltimore.

Balt. June, 1828. j16k

$35 REWARD.

STOLEN or ran away from the subscriber's, on the 16th day of May, 1827, negro BETTY—about 19 or 20 years of age, of dark chestnut colour, speaks quick, when spoken to, and lisps in her speech. She has a scar from the kine pock on her arm, also a scar on the top of her right foot, in the shape of a heart, quite notable. The said girl was pregnant when she went off, and if her child be living, it is nearly five months old at this time. It is thought unnecessary to describe her clothing as they probably were changed before this time. This girl was conveyed to me, as security for the payment of money by Henry I. Riggin, and it is expected that she is either in the neighbourhood of Princess Anne or Wetipquin. Any person taking up said negro Betty, and lodging her in Somerset county jail, shall the above reward and all charges paid by

WILLIAM WHITE,

near Snowhill, Md.

June 10 kf

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

May 27th, 1828.

ON application of Jacob W. Bayly, administrator of David Vance, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county in Maryland letters of administration on the personal estate of David Vance late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 9th day of December next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of May, 1828.

JACOB W. BAYLY, Adm. of D. Vance, dec'd

June 3d, 1828. k

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber being about to remove from the county, will offer at PUBLIC SALE, on Tuesday the 10th of June,

All his remaining Stock of GOODS.

The sale will continue from day to day until the whole is sold. He also avails himself of this mode earnestly to request, that those who are indebted to him make it convenient to pay the same immediately.

SEVERN TEACKLE.

Princess-Anne, June 3d. tt

FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of disposing of his real estate, being and lying in Worcester county, Md. and situated on Dividing-Creek. The landed estate consists of 2000, or more acres. The improvements are a dwelling house and out buildings with a good SAW and GRIST MILL, both in excellent order; also a young orchard. About 100 acres of the land is in a good state of cultivation.

There is, on one part of the above property, an abundance of Iron Ore, which would warrant the erection of a Forge, and prove an object of value to a purchaser acquainted with, and calculated for, such an undertaking.

The terms of sale will be—one third down, and 3 years for the payment of the balance. For further particulars apply to

JOHN MORRIS.

April 22 kd

Constable's Sale.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by George M. Willing, a justice of the peace, and to me directed, at the suit of Levin D. Jones against Adam Horsey, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro girl named Sarah, which I shall proceed to sell for a term of years, at Back-Creek Store on Wednesday the 2nd day of July next, to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ, with interest and cost.

SAML. McBRYDE, Con.

June 3, 1828. kd

FOR RENT,

FOR the ensuing year or for a term of years, the FARM on Little-Monie, now occupied by Mitchell Phœbus. For terms apply to

JAMES POLK.

June 3, 1828. kw

NOTICE.

ALL persons indebted to the subscriber are respectfully requested to come forward and settle their accounts by paying the cash, before the 15th of June next. The subscriber is compelled to this course from the peculiar situation of his affairs. He returns his grateful acknowledgements for the very liberal encouragement he has received from the public, in his line of business, and solicits a continuance of the same, as he will continue to exert himself to render universal satisfaction. The public's ob't serv't,

THOS. L. DISHAROON.

Snowhill, May 27th, 1828.

N.B. Those of my customers, whom I may not have seen during Somerset Court, are requested to remit me the amount of their accounts and thereby prevent the addition of cost. T.L.D.

PROPOSALS

For publishing in the City of Philadelphia, Pa.

THE PRACTICAL

FARMER'S MAGAZINE.

OR

Agricultural and Literary Gazette.

THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE is designed to contain information drawn from Authentic Sources relative to the improvement and management of remarkable Farms, sources of manure, number and kind of Stock, farming utensils, labourers, dairies, &c.; Agricultural Improvements; drawings and descriptions of Useful Inventions; critical notices and reviews of such publications as may tend to the interests of the Husbandman; improvements in the breed of Domestic Animals; accounts of such Foreign and Domestic trees, shrubs, vines, plants, seeds and grains, as are considered necessary or useful for subsistence, comfort or ornament, with information relative to their treatment, growth, requisite kinds of soil, &c.; and in short, whatever may tend to increase the product of the soil, and advance the Rural Economy of the country.

Insertion will always be given to such Reports, Addresses and Papers, as may be communicated for publication, by the several Agricultural Societies of this and other states.

A Land Register will contain as far as practicable, a list of farms, which are now, or may hereafter be, For Sale, account of their size, situation, quality and such other particulars as may be deemed Useful.

Space will be afforded the Solid and Sterling Beauties of Literature, the useful arts and science, Chemistry, Natural History and Philosophy, Biography and Travels, states of the Markets in the principal Sea Ports, &c. &c.

TERMS.

The Farmer's Magazine will be published semi-monthly, the price is three dollars, payable either at the time of subscribing, or on receipt of the first number. That form and size has been adopted, which is deemed most convenient for binding, while the quality of the paper, the beauty of the type, (entirely new,) and the general execution of the work, will be such, as it is hoped will reflect credit on the Publishers, and gratify its patrons.

☞Address (post paid) Thomas C. Clarke, agent for the Proprietors, No 18, Market St. Phil'a.

SINCLAIR & MOORE,

Pratt-St. Wharf, Baltimore,

HAVE in store—Millet, Lucerne, early Corn, bunch, pole & soup Beans, a large assortment for planting, and garden seeds generally.

PLOUGHS,

amongst which are the much approved self-sharpening point Plough—By turning and reversing said point, the share lasts much longer than the cast share of any other plough, in as much as the point is of steel, and when worn bevelling it is sharpened, if turned over. The CULTIVATORS made by Sinclair & Moore, pulverize the ground more effectually, and much deeper than the old fashioned three hoed kind—and by the use of these in the culture of corn, it will save nearly two thirds of the ploughing.

ALSO, Socket Shovels, Scythes, Mattocks and Picks, with handles;—spring steel Hay and Manure Forks, WHEAT FANS, & GRAIN CRADLES, with best Waldron Scythes; Garden Tools generally; Wove Wire for Seives, and Mill Screens.

☞They have received from on board the brig Hyperion, capt. Forbes, just from Liverpool, a quantity of grain and grass Scythes, (Waldron's prime) Sickles, Maleable trace Chains; Straw and Hay Knives; Grass Hooks, and Garden Tools, amongst which are turnip and other Hoes; Edging Tools; budding and pruning Knives, &c. &c.

☞For the greater convenience of those who use our PLOUGHS in Somerset, we have appointed Messrs. JOHNSTON & SUDLER, of Princess Anne, our agents for the sale of them, who will constantly keep a supply of the different kinds at our prices. S. & M.

WEAVERS' BRUSHES,

Reeds and Shuttles,

Wash and cake boards,
Sifters, Lamp and candlewick,
Muddlers, and lime squeezers
Pound, half pound and and quarter pound Butter Prints, of various patterns
Weaver's slays or reeds
Shoe, sweeping, dusting and other brushes
Twine and cord, patent taps
Cane, for reed makers
Humming and common tops
Boot & shoe blacking, towel rollers
Lamp wicks, assorted sizes, by the dozen or gross
Spiggots and fossets, suitable for hogs heads, barrels, kegs, and hydrants
Fancy and common bellows
Fishing lines and rods, butter bowls and trays, Baskets
Nests of sugar boxes and tubs
Potato & turnip mashers, rolling pins
Carpenters' or joiners' chalk lines, etc

The above articles are offered for sale on reasonable terms, by

VALERIUS DUKEHART.

No. 101½ Baltimore, between South and Calvert Streets.

May 13th, 1828.

E. T. J. Woodward,

Corner of Dugan's wharf & Pratt St. BALTIMORE,

Informs his friends and customers that he will sell on COMMISSION, Wheat, Rye, Corn, Oats, and Tobacco, and all other articles of Country Produce, and will make liberal advances on the same.

He has on hand a large supply of Groceries, Liquors, &c.

CONSISTING OF

Teas, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Family Flour, Brandy, Wine, Gin, Spirits, Whiskey and Cordials, Spices, Soap & Candles, Shad, Mackerel, Herrings, Oil and Salt, together with every other article in his line.

ALSO,

Glass Ware, Queen's Ware,

Stone and Earthen Ware, &c

And a general assortment

Of Garden Seeds of approved kinds which he will sell on the most liberal terms.

DRY PINE OR OAK WOOD

Will be taken in exchange for Goods, on fair terms

May 13, 1828. mw

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

May 20, 1828.

ON application of Edward Fowler & Levisa Kennerly, Administrators of Orrell Kennerly, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that they give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess Anne.

True copy, Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscribers, of Somerset county, have obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Orrell Kennerly, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th of November next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 20th of May, 1828.

EDWARD FOWLER, & LEVISA KENNERLY,

Adm'tors of O. Kennerly, dec'd.

May 27, 1828. k

JOB PRINTING

Neatly executed at this office.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY—with [illegible] the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

NEW WAVERLY NOVEL.

The following is the XIth chapter of the new Waverly Novel. The style reminds us of the most powerful romances of the author; and it seems that he had not yet made up his mind to repose on his well earned laurels. The time, and the manners and characters of the age in which he has laid his new scene, are particularly adapted to his genius. He has not yet, by any means, exhausted the materials afforded by Scottish History.

We must here trace, a little more correctly, the events which had been indistinctly seen from the window of the royal apartments, and yet more indistinctly reported by those who witnessed them. The glee-maiden, already mentioned, had planted herself where a rise of two large broad steps, giving access to the main gateway of the royal apartments, gained her an advantage of a foot and a half in height over those in the court, of whom she hoped to form an audience. She wore the dress of her calling, which was more gaudy than rich, and showed the person more than did the garb of other females. She had laid aside an upper mantle, and a small basket which contained her slender stock of necessaries, and a little French spaniel dog sat beside them, as their protector. An azure-blue jacket, embroidered with silver, and setting close to the person, was open in front, and showed several waistcoats of different coloured silks, calculated to set off the symmetry of the shoulders and bosom and remaining open at the throat. A small silver chain worn around her neck, involved itself amongst these brilliant coloured waistcoats, and was again produced from them, to display a medal of the same metal, which intimated, in the name of some court or guild of minstrels, the degree she had taken in the Gay or Joyous Science. A small scrip suspended over her shoulders by a blue silk riband, hung on her left side.

Her sunny complexion, snow-white teeth, brilliant black eyes, and raven locks, marked her country lying far in the south of France, and the arch smile and dimpled chin bore the same character—Her luxuriant locks, twisted around a small gold bodkin, were kept in their position by a net of silk and gold. Short petticoats, deeply laced with silver, to correspond with the jacket, red stockings which were visible to near the calf of the leg, and buskins of Spanish leather, completed her adjustment, which, though far from new, had been saved as an untarnished holiday suit, which much care had kept in good order. She seemed about twenty-five years old, but perhaps fatigue and wandering had anticipated the touch of time in obliterating the freshness of early youth.

We have said the glee-maiden's manner was lively, and we may add, that her smile and repartee were ready. But her gaiety was assumed, as a quality essentially necessary to her trade, of which it was one of the miseries, that the professors were obliged frequently to cover an aching heart with a compelled smile. This seemed to be the case with Louise, who, whether she was actually the heroine of her own song, or whatever other cause she might have for sadness, showed at times a strain of deep melancholy thought, which interfered with and controlled the natural flow of lively spirits, which the practice of the Joyous Science especially required. She lacked also, even in her gayest sallies, the decided boldness and effrontery of her sisterhood, who were seldom at a loss to return a saucy jest, or turn the laugh against any who interrupted or interfered with them.

It may here be remarked, that it was impossible that this class of women, very numerous in that age, could bear a character generally respectable. They were, however, protected by the manners of the time; and such were the immunities they possessed by the rights of chivalry, that nothing was more rare than to hear of such errant damsels sustaining injury or wrong, and they passed and repassed safely where armed travellers would probably have encountered a bloody opposition. But though licensed and protected in honour of their tuneful art, the wandering minstrels, male or female, like similar ministers to the public amusement, the itinerant musicians, for instance, and strolling comedians of our own day, led a life too regular and precarious, to be accounted a creditable part of society. Indeed among the stricter Catholics the profession was considered as unlawful.

Such was the damsel, who, with violin in hand, and stationed on the slight elevation we have mentioned, stepped forward to the bystanders, and announced herself as a mistress of the gay science, duly qualified by a brief from a Court of Love and Music held at Aix, in Provence, under the countenance of the flower of Chivalry the gallant Count Aymar; who now prayed that the cavaliers of merry Scotland, who were known over the wide world for bravery and courtesy, would permit a poor stranger to try whether she could afford them any amusement by her art. The love of song was like the love of fight, a common passion of the age, which all at least affected, whether they actually possessed it or not; therefore the acquiescence in Louise's proposal was universal. At the same time, an aged, dark-browed monk, who was among the by-standers, thought it necessary to remind the glee maiden, that since she was tolerated within these precincts, as an unusual grace, he trusted nothing would be sung or said inconsistent with the holy character of the place.

The glee-maiden bent her head low, shook her sable locks, and crossed herself reverentially, as if she disclaimed the possibility of such a transgression; and then began the song of poor Louise, which we gave at length in the last chapter.

Just as she commenced, she was stopped by a cry for "Room—room—place for the Duke of Rothsay!"

"Nay, hurry no man on my score," said a gallant young cavalier, who entered on a noble Arabian horse, which he managed with exquisite grace tho' by such slight handling of the reins, such imperceptible pressure of the limbs and sway of the body, that to any eye save that of an experienced horseman, the animal seemed to be putting forth his paces for his own amusement, and thus gracefully bearing forward a rider who was too indolent to give himself any trouble about the matter.

The Prince's apparel, which was very rich, was put on with slovenly carelessness. His form, though his stature was low, and his limbs extremely slight, was elegant in the extreme; and his features no less handsome. But there was on his brow a haggard paleness, which seemed the effect of care or of dissipation, or of both these wasting causes combined. His eyes were sunk and dim, as from late indulgence in revelry on the preceding evening, while his cheek was inflamed with unnatural red, as if either the effect of the Bacchanalian orgies had not passed away from the constitution, or a morning draught had been resorted to, in order to remove the effects of the night's debauchery.

Such was the Duke of Rothsay, and heir of the Scottish crown, a sight at once of interest and compassion. All unbonnetted, and made way for him, while he kept repeating carelessly, "No haste—no haste—I shall arrive soon enough at the place I am bound for. How's this—a damsel of the joyous science? Ay, by St. Giles! and a comely wench to boot. Stand still, my merry men; never was minstrelsey marred by me. A good voice, by the mass! begin me that lay again, sweetheart."

Louise did not know the person who addressed her; but the general respect paid by all around, and the easy and indifferent manner in which it was received, showed her she was addressed by a man of the highest quality. She recommenced her lay, and sung her best accordingly; while the young Duke seemed thoughtful and rather affected towards the close of the ditty. But it was not his habit to cherish such melancholy affections. "This is a plaintive ditty, my nut brown maid," said he, chucking the retreating glee-maiden under the chin, and detaining her by the collar of her dress, which was not difficult, as he sat on horseback so close to the steps on which she stood. "But I warrant me you have livelier notes at will, ma bella tenebrosa, ay, and canst sing in bower as well as wold, and by night as well as day."

"I am no nightingale, my lord," said Louise, and endeavouring to escape a species of gallantry which ill-suited the place and circumstances, a discrepancy to which he who addressed it to her seemed contemptuously indifferent.

"What hast thou there, darling?" he added, removing his hold from her collar; to the script which she carried.

Glad was Louise to escape his grasp, by slipping the knot of the riband, and leaving the little bag in the Prince's hand, as retiring back beyond his reach, she answered, "Nuts, my lord, of the last season."

The Prince pulled out a handful of nuts, accordingly "Nuts child!—they will break thine ivory teeth—hurt thy pretty voice," said Rothsay, cracking one with his teeth, like a village school-boy.

"They are not the walnut of my own sunny clime, my lord," said Louise; "but they hang low, and are within the reach of the poor."

"You shall have something to give you better fare, poor wandering ape," said the Duke, in a tone in which feeling predominated more than in the affected and contemptuous gallantry of his first address to the glee-maiden.

At this moment, as he turned to ask an attendant for his purse, the Prince encountered the stern and piercing look of a tall black man, seated on a powerful iron-grey horse, who had entered with attendants while the Duke of Rothsay was engaged with Louise, and now remained stupified and almost turned to stone by his surprise and anger at this unseemly spectacle Even one who had never seen the Black Douglas, must have known him by his swart complexion, his gigantic frame, his buff-coat of bull's hide, and his air of courage, firmness, and sagacity, mixed with the most indomitable pride The loss of an eye in battle, though not perceptible at first sight, as the ball of the injured organ remained similar to the other, gave yet a stern immoveable glare to the whole aspect.

The meeting of the royal son-in-law with his terrible step-father, was in circumstances which arrested the attention of all present, and the by-standers waited the issue with silence and suppressed breath lest they should lose any part of what was to ensue.

When the Duke of Rothsay saw the expression which occupied the stern features of Douglas, and remarked that the earl did not make the least motion towards respectful, or even civil salutation, he seemed determined to show him how little respect he was disposed to pay to his displeased looks. He took his purse from his chamberlain.

"Here, pretty one," he said. I give thee one gold piece for the song thou hast sung me, another for the nuts I have stolen from thee, and a third for the kiss thou art about to give me. For know, my pretty one, that when fair lips (and thine for fault of better may be called so) make sweet music for my pleasure, I am sworn to St. Valentine to press them to mine."

"My song is recompensed nobly—" said Louise, shrinking back; "my nuts are sold to a good market—farther traffic my lord, were neither befitting you nor beseeming me."

"What! you coy it, my nymph of highway?" said the prince contemptuously. "Know damsel that one asks you a grace who is unused to denial."

"It is the Prince of Scotland"—the Duke of Rothsay,"—said the courtiers around, to the terrified Louise, pressing forward the trembling young woman; "you must not thwart his humour."

"But I cannot reach your lordship;" she said "you sit so high on horseback."

"If I must alight," said Rothsay, "there shall be the heavier penalty—What does the wench tremble for? Place thy foot on the toe of my boot, give me hold of thy hand—Gallantly done!" He kissed her, as she stood thus suspended in the air, perched upon his foot and supported by his hand; saying, "There is thy kiss, and there is my purse to pay it; and to grace thee farther, Rothsay will wear thy scrip for the day." He suffered the frightened girl to spring to the ground, and turned his looks from her to bend them contemptuously on the Earl of Douglas, as if he said. "All this I do in despite of you, and of your daughter's claims."

"By St. Bride of Douglas!" said the Earl, pressing towards the Prince, "this is too much, unmannered boy, as void of sense as honour! You know what considerations restrain the hand of Douglas else had you never dared——"

"Can you play at spang cockle, my lord?" said the Prince placing a nut on the second joint of his fore-finger, and spinning it off by a smart application of the thumb. The nut struck on Douglas's broad breast who burst out into a dreadful exclamation of wrath, inarticulate, but resembling the growl of a lion in depth and sternness of expression. "I cry your pardon, most mighty lord," said the Duke of Rothsay, scornfully, while all around trembled; "I did not conceive my pellet could have wounded you, seeing you wear a buff-coat. Surely, I trust, it did not hit your eye?"

The Prior, despatched by the King, as we have seen in the last chapter, had by this time made way through the crowd, and laying hold on Douglas's rein, in a manner that made it impossible for him to advance, reminded him that the Prince was the son of his Sovereign, and the husband of his daughter.

"Fear not, Sir Prior," said Douglas. "I despise the childish boy too much to raise a finger against him. But I will return insult for insult—Here, any of you who love the Douglas,—spurn me this queen from the Monastery gates; and let her be so scourged that she may bitterly remember to the last day of her life, how she gave means to an unrespective boy to affront the Douglas!"

Four or five retainers instantly stepped forth to execute commands which were seldom uttered in vain, and heavily would Louise have atoned for an offence of which she was alike the innocent, unconscious, and unwilling instrument, had not the Duke of Rothsay interfered.

"Spurn the poor glee-woman?" he said, in high indignation; scourge her for obeying my commands?—Spurn thine own oppressed vassals, rude Earl—scourge thine own faulty hounds—but beware how you touch so much as a dog that Rothsay hath patted on the head. Far less a female whose lips he hath kissed!"

Before Douglas could give an answer which would certainly have been in defiance, there arose that great tumult at the outward gate of the Monastery, already noticed, and men both on horseback and on foot began to rush headlong in, not actually fighting with each other, but certainly in no peaceable manner.

The contending parties, seemingly, were partizans of Douglas, known by the cognizance of the Bloody Heart, and citizens of the town of Perth. It appeared that they had been skirmishing in earnest when without the gates but, out of respect to the sanctified ground, they lowered their weapons when they entered, and confined their strife to a war of words and mutual abuse.

The tumult had this good effect, that it forced asunder, by the weight and press of numbers, the Prince and Douglas, at a moment when the levity of the former, and the pride of the latter were urging them to the utmost extremity. But now peacemakers interfered on all sides. The Prior and the monks threw themselves among the multitude, and commanded peace in the name of Heaven, and reverence to their sacred walls under penalty of excommunication; and their expostulation began to be listened to. Albany, who was despatched by his royal brother at the beginning of the fray, had not arrived till now on the scene of action. He instantly applied himself to Douglas, and in his ear conjured him to temper his passion.

"By St. Bride of Douglas, I will be avenged!" said the Earl. No man shall brook life after he has passed an affront on Douglas."

"Why so, you may be avenged in fitting time, said Albany; "but let it not be said, that, like a peevish woman, the Great Douglas could choose neither time nor place for his vengeance. Bethink you, all that we have laboured at is like to be upset by an accident. George of Dunbar, hath had the advantage of an audience with the old man; and though it lasted but five minutes, I fear it may endanger the dissolution of your family-match, which we brought about with so much difficulty. The authority from Rome has not yet been obtained."

"A toy!" answered Douglas, haughtily,—"they dare not desolve it."

"Not while Douglas is at large, and in possession of his power, answered Albany. "But noble Earl, come with me, and I will show you at what disadvantage you stand."

Douglas dismounted, and followed his wilely accomplice in silence. In a lower hall they saw the ranks of the Brandanes drawn up, well armed in caps of steel and shirts of mail. Their captain, making an obeisance to Albany, seemed to desire to address him.

"What now MacLouis?" said the Duke.

"We are informed the Duke of Rothsay has been insulted, and I can scarce keep the Brandanes within door."

"Gallant MacLouis," said Albany "and you may trust Brandanes, the Duke of Rothsay, my princely nephew, is as well as hopeful gentleman can be. Some suffle there has been, but all is appeased." He continued to draw the Earl of Douglas forward.—"You see, my lord," he said in his ear, "That if the word arrested was to be once spoken, it would be soon obeyed and you know your attendants are few for resistance."

Douglas seemed to acquiesce in the necessity of patience for the time. "If my teeth," he said, "should bite thro' my lips I will be silent till it is the hour to speak out."

George of March, in the mean while, had a more easy task of pacifying the Prince. "My lord of Rothsay," he said, approaching him with grave ceremony, "I need not tell you that you owe me something for reparation of honour. Though I blame not you personally for the breach of contract which destroyed the peace of my family.—Let me conjure you by what observance your Highness may owe an injured man, to forego for the present this scandalous dispute."

"My lords, I owe to you much," replied Rothsay, "but this haughty and all-controlling lord has wounded mine honour."

"My lord, I can but add, your royal father is ill—hath swooned with terror for your Highness's safety."

"Ill!—the kind, good old man swooned, said you, my lord of March?—I am with him in an instant."

The Duke of Rothsay sprung from his saddle to the ground and was dashing into the palace like a gray hound, when a feeble grasp was laid on his cloak, and the faint voice of a kneeling female exclaimed, "Protection my noble Prince!—Protection for a helpless stranger!".

'Hands off, stroller!' said the Earl of March, thrusting the suppliant glee-maiden aside.

But the gentler Prince, paused. 'It is true,' said he, 'I have brought the vengeance of an unforgiving devil upon this helpless creature. O heaven! what a life is mine, so fatal to all who approach me!—What to do in the hurry?—She must not go to my apartments—and all my men are such born reprobates. Ha! thou at mine elbow, honest Harry Smith? What doest thou here?'

There has been something of a fight my lord, answered our acquaintance, the Smith, between the townsman and the southland loons who ride with the Douglas; and we have swinged them as far as the Abbey-Gate.

I am glad of it. And you beat the knaves fairly?

Fairly, does your highness ask?—said Henry. Why ay! We were stronger in numbers, to be sure; but no men ride better armed than those who follow the Bloody Heart. And so in a sense we beat them fairly; for as your highness knows, it is the Smith who makes the men at at-arms, and men with good weapons are a match for their odds.'

While they thus talked, the Earl of March, who had spoken with some one near the palace gate, returned in anxious haste. My lord duke! My lord Duke!—Your father is recovered, and if you haste not speedily, my lord of Albany and the Douglas will have possession of his royal ear.

And if my royal father is recovered, said the thoughtless prince, and is holding, or about to hold council with my gracious uncle and the Earl of Douglas, it befits neither your lordship nor me to intrude till we are summoned. So there is time for me to speak of my little business with mine honest armourer here."

Does your highness take it so? said the Earl, whose sanguine hopes of a change of favour at court had been too hastily excited, and were as speedily checked,—Then so let it be for George of Dunbar.

He glided away with a gloomy and displeased aspect. The Prince went on in indolent conversation with our armourer.

Well, but what I wished of thee is, said the Prince, this poor glee-woman, good Smith, she must be placed in safety. Thou art man enough to be any woman's companion, and thou must conduct her to some place of safety.

May it please your Highness, he said, I am but a poor craftsman. But though my arm and sword are at the King's service and your Highness's, I am with reverence, no squire of dames. Your highness will find, among your own retinue knights and lords, willing enough to play Sir Pandarus of Troy—it is too knightly a part for poor Hal of the Wynd.

Umph—hah! said the Prince. My purse, Edgar—(his attendant whispered him)—True, true, I gave it to the poor wench. I know enough of your craft and of your craftsmen in general, to be aware that men lare not hawks with empty hands; but I suppose my word may pass for the price of a good armour, and I will pay it thee with thanks to boot, for this slight service.

"Your highness may know other craftsmen,' said the Smith, "but, with reference, you know not Henry Gow He will obey you in making a weapon, or in welding one, but he knows nothing of this petticoat service."

"Hark thee, thou Perthshire mule," said the Prince, yet smiling, while he spoke, at the sturdy punctilio of the honest burgher, "the wench is as little to me as she is to thee. But in an idle moment, as you may learn from those about thee, if thou sawest it not thyself, I did her a passing grace, which is likely to cost the poor wretch her life.—There is no one here whom I can trust to protect her against the discipline of belt and bowstring, with which the Border brutes who follow Douglas will beat her to death, since such is his pleasure."

"If such be the case, my liege, she has a right to every honest man's protection; and since she wears a petticoat,—though I would it were longer, and of a less fanciful fashion,—I will answer for her protection as well as a single man may. But where am I to bestow her?"

"Good faith, I cannot tell," said the Prince. "Take her to Sir John Ramorny's lodging—But, no—no—he is ill at ease, and besides, there are reasons—take her to the devil if thou wilt, but place her in safety, and oblige Robin of Rothsay."

"My noble Prince," said the Smith, "I think, always with reverence, that I would rather give a defenceless woman to the care of the devil than of Sir John Ramorny. But though the devil be a worker in fire, like myself, yet I know not his haunts, and with aid of Holy Church hope to keep him on terms of defiance. And, moreover, how am I to convey her out of this crowd, or through the streets, in such a mumming habit may be well made a question."

'For he leaving the convent,' said the Prince, 'this good monk (seizing upon the nearest by his cowl,) Father Nicholas or Boniface——"

'Poor brother Cyprian, at your highness's command said the father.

'Ay, ay, brother Cyprian,' continued the Prince, yes, Brother Cyprian, shall let you out at some secret passage which he knows of, and I will see him again to pay a Prince's thanks for it.

The churchman bowed in acquiescence, and poor Louise, who, during this debate, had looked from the one speaker to the other, hastily said I will not scandalise this good man with my foolish garb—I have a mantle for ordinary wear.

Why, there, Smith, thou hast a friar's hood and a woman's mantle to shroud thee under. I would all my frailties were as well shrouded! Farewell, honest fellow. I will thank thee hereafter.

Then, as if afraid of farther objection on the Smith's part, he hastened into the palace.

Henry Gow remained stupified at what had passed, and at finding himself involved in a charge at once inferring much danger, and an equal risk of scandal, both which, joined to a principal share which he had taken, with his usual forwardness, in the fray, might, he saw, do him no small injury in the suit he pursued most anxiously.

He was roused from his reverie by the voice of the Monk, who, sliding out his words with the indifference which the holy fathers entertained, or affected towards all temporal matters desired them to follow him. Smith put himself in motion, with a sigh much resembling a groan, and without appearing exactly connected with the Monk's motion he followed him into a cloister and through a postern door, which, after looking once behind him, the priest left ajar. Behind them followed Louise, who had hastily assumed her small bundle, and, calling her little four legged companion, had eagerly followed in the path which opened an escape from what had shortly before seemed a great and inevitable danger.

From the New York Enquirer, May 21.

STYLE OF DRESS, &c.

Spring has a mighty influence over buds and belles. Look at the fields of New Jersey or Long Island. How prettily they begin to dress themselves in their gayest native hues. We hate sentiment, it belongs exclusively to blue stockings, otherwise much more could be said of fields and roses and fine scenery. But the belles of Broadway—how delightful they look in the present month. Their style of dress is splendid beyond all former example. About an age ago (that is two long years,) the flounces shrunk into the narrowest dimensions. A complete reaction has now taken place. They have swelled to an astonishing longitude. From the level of the bewitching little foot they rise upwards to an immeasurable altitude. But the great improvement or disimprovement of the present year, however, is the head dress. On this section of the female creation, genius, invention, extravagance and eccentricity, have exhausted themselves. We pronounce, without hesitation, that the female dress, anno domini eighteen hundred and twenty eight and one half, is the chef d'œuvre of splendid electricity, elegance, and effect. It is prodigiously fine—even approaching a gaudiness. We talk of walking dresses alone.

The ladies of Broadway appear also to have assumed a perfect, novel style of walking. This is the age of steam boats. Who has not travelled in one of these splendid machines?—Who has not felt the peculiarity of their movement through the water?—The style of walking in Broadway has a resemblance to the steam boat tread. It is an alternate movement of the right and left shoulder—the line of motion rising perpendicularly from the nadir to the surface of the earth, and thence to the zenith. There is no place on this continent half so fascinating as Broadway is, in a summer's afternoon when the dust is laid, the sky clear, and the sun shaded with a handful of clouds. Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia—they ought not to be named in the same breath. Even the splendid capital, with elongated avenues, adorned with poplars and a thousand hacks and grinning black drivers, ought not to be compared to Broadway. The beauties of Washington during the court season, are generally a couple of years behind New York in the style of their dress. It is only in this latitude, where can be found novelty, splendour, taste, fashion and uniformity, united. But the bonnet—we had almost forgot the bonnet. They call them Navarino, French cottage, gipsies, and any other popular name that can be pressed into the service. And then their peculiar position is singular. They are perked upon the very top of the head. They are not on a level with the ear but form a variation of 15 degrees. And then their breadth—so great is the dimension that walking arm and arm is impossible and unfashionable.

VALUABLE PROPERTY
AT PRIVATE SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM, situated at the mouth of Wiconico Creek, in Somerset county, Md. containing about 300 acres and known by the name of "Kibble's Destiny." The improvements are an excellent two story frame house, with necessary out-buildings—A peach orchard containing nearly 1000 trees—Also a good apple orchard.

Vessels of a large burden can come within 20 yards of the house.

☞The crops of corn and wheat on the farm will be sold with the land. There are about 175,000 of the former and of the latter about forty bushels were sown.

For further particulars and terms apply to JOSHUA MORR[illegible]

May 20, 1828.

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that I have appointed Benjamin I. Jones my agent to collect all money due me, and to adjust and settle all claims against me; therefore all persons owing me, or having claims against me will please call on him.

JOHN JONES, (of Be[illegible]

May 27, 1828.

Constable's Sale.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by George M. W[illegible] a justice of the peace, and to me directed, one, James Dorman use of Jery. Mezzick use of Hooper & Jenkins against Louda Riggin and J[illegible] Powell, and one George Wright against Louda Riggin, I have seized and taken in execution as the property of the said Louda, one negro girl named Sarah, which said negro girl I will sell on the 17th day of June next to the highest bidder for ready cash, at the Court-House door, in Princess Anne, between 2 and 3 o'clock P. M. to satisfy the above claims.

SAML. McBRYDE, Const.

May 26—27

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC.

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthma and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.

10th May, 18[illegible]

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath and every indication (in the opinion of my physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores, composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for, and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical cases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER.
Princess-Anne, Md.

Nov. 20, 1827.

Village Herald.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY MORNING, BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

VOL. II. PRINCESS-ANNE, MD., JUNE 17, 1828. NO. 12.

THE CONTRAST;
OR,
Military Chieftains & Political Chieftains.

(CONCLUDED.)

In the following closing extracts from the pamphlet before us, the portrait is finished—the hideous portrait of the secretary of state, the prime mover of all the leading measures that prevail in the cabinet of Washington, where the cat is made to rake the chestnuts for the monkey, or, to drop the metaphor, where Adams and Webster and some others, men of superior talents, and with greater pretensions than Clay, are unconsciously rendered subservient to the insidious designs and ultimate views of this modern Cardinal De Retz.—N. Y. Evening [illegible]

The secretary has often dazzled the eyes of representatives by "placing before their eyes" the brilliant picture of South American independence. The flame of liberty was kindled, and the light was shining on the midnight gloom of those once dark regions. If it be so, the Prometheus who drew down this fire from Heaven was Simon Bolivar, a "military chieftain." While the knowledge of civil liberty was extending in the former provinces of Spain, under the instruction of a "military chieftain," Spain herself is given up to the blessed government of monks, inquisitors, and civilians. The miserable tyrant who wears her ancient crown has shed the blood of the bravest and the best of her warriors who fought for the crown, and fought for freedom—who braved Napoleon when Ferdinand was his submissive slave. And yet the minister of our republic an accomplished statesman—the minister of a republican people, loving liberty and detesting tyrants, has tendered in their behalf to this weak, wicked, false, and perjured king, the assurances of their respect and good will for his august person, and for his royal family, and entreated his majesty to admit the "homage of his profound respect and unbounded devotedness:" aye, and kissed the hand, red and reeking as it was with the blood of one of the noblest patriots and warriors that ever fought or bled for liberty—whose deeds alone had illustrated the name of Spain more than all that has been achieved by the legitimate and royal race from whom that wretched king derives his descent.

Many more instances could be adduced of military men who have risen to high civil employments, and have been found honest, capable, and faithful to the constitution. But enough has already been said to show that this fantastic alarm of danger, in this country, from military ambition is of the same character as that which flutters the heart at the sight of the unsubstantial meteors which wander by night over swamps and church yards.

Military knowledge, so far from unfitting any one for the performance of the functions of a civilian for many offices, certainly for that of president, a high qualification The arrangement of the national defence, the organization, discipline, and mode of employing the army, navy, and militia, the system of the fortification, and the military school, are now some of the principal objects of national legislation and of executive superintendence. That president who should undertake to subvert our liberties with the military force of the country, must not only be desperate, but mad. But apart from this, there is something in the military character, too frank for intrigue, too bold for conspiracy, too generous for treachery, too elevated for avarice. Something like that noble feeling which animated the heart of Andrew Jackson, when he staked his whole fortune to make good the defence of New Orleans, submitted to the laws, refused the remuneration of his fine, and rejected the richest prize that was ever placed within the grasp of man, when he found the price of the object was the sacrifice of honor. Any one deserving the title of "military chieftain," any one whose knowledge is perfected in the difficulties of command, must have acquired a sagacity too keen to permit imposition whether employed in detecting the hidden design of an enemy, or the lurking treachery of pretended friends—a sagacity, which can penetrate motives, and sound the heart—a long reaching apprehension, which can predict with certainty not only the immediate, but the remote consequences of the present events—a disciplined mind, steady to its purposes, always perceptive of advantages, always prepared for difficulties—a foresight of danger—a firm philosophy, teaching the heart never to shrink from the performance of any duty, and viewing the most horrible disasters without dismay—a regulated enthusiasm, sufficiently elevated to enlighten the understanding, but not so sublimated or wild as to cloud it. A military chieftain, thus constituted, who feels at the bottom of his heart a patriotism which would submit to wrong, and yet love and honour and serve the country which did the wrong, if that country was "his own, his native land;" a patriotism, unprofessing, unbought and untaught, evidenced by personal sacrifices and privations; who cherishes a high and manly sense of honour, disdaining to dabble in paltry deceptions, and miserable equivocations, or to deal in falsehoods, slander and detraction; who, to all other qualifications, unites the philosophy, as well as the technicalities of military science; and that knowledge which is the result of an accurate, extended observation of men and things as they are; when called to administer in civil affairs, must necessarily be a more able and accomplished statesman, than one who has lived in the dust of universities, if he has gleaned his learning from a thousand books, and specially so, if the last has never mingled with the people, and has seen human nature only in those artificial shapes in which it appears at courts, palaces and levees.

If any danger is incurred in free governments from calling military chieftains to the high executive offices, it must arise from inordinate ambition stimulated by the habit of command;—from a spirit disdaining control, impatient of contradiction, and accustomed to obedience. Is there a man within the wide bounds of our republic (with the single exception of Aaron Burr) who has developed such overweening ambition, such impatience of opposition, and such an impassioned anxiety for promotion, as Henry Clay? In what manner did he gain his seat in the national legislature? By denouncing as unconstitutional the opinions and the votes of his very respectable predecessor, Mr. Pope, on the question of renewing the charter of the bank of the United States, playing the demagogue, and by inflammatory declamations exciting the popular prejudice against his rival. His object gained, he pursued the policy and supported the measure for which he had arraigned his antagonist! Had he been possessed of true magnanimity, what would have been his conduct when he had satisfied himself that he had mistaken the extent of the constitutional power, in chartering the bank? Would he not have sought the earliest opportunity to have redressed the wrong, and to have done justice to one who had suffered from his unjust censures? A military chieftain would have done so—Did the secretary do so? No, he retained his seat, and his pay. He rose by detraction, and he held his place without blushing!

He presided over the deliberations of the house of representatives, and how? Let his friends Josiah Quincy and Daniel Webster, tell. They once would have said that the speaker of that house violated every rule of parliamentary decorum, and was not only a partisan, but a bully.

He next appears as a great diplomatist at Ghent. Let his friend, the president, relate his conduct there, tell his transactions, by open day and secret night. Let those pages, where the record is made in the "black book," be given to the world, and no more can be asked.

Since his return from Europe, has he not undertaken to underrate, decry and belittle every character whom he supposed might be thought of in connexion with the presidency?—Hence his attempt to prostrate Gen. Jackson on the seminole question—Hence his effort when he threw himself into a "factious opposition" against the administration of president Monroe, and attempted prematurely to force an acknowledgement of the independence of the South American nations. Defeated in all his objects, he breaks through the line of "safe precedents," openly electioneering for the presidency,—seeking aid from all quarters,—fails,—disregards the will of his constituents,—laughs at instructions—coalesces with his bitterest enemy, and receives from his hands the office of secretary of state!

He has always assumed the paternity of every popular project after some bolder and nobler spirit had led the way, and had overcome the first and greatest difficulties. He would be thought the friend and patron of internal improvement, and he has endeavoured to prostrate the author of that system, in the very state which has raised the strongest and most striking proofs of its advantages. He has proclaimed the American system, or in other words, the encouragement of domestic manufactures by protecting duties, as one of the leading objects of his policy: and he has called to his councils and confidence, some of its most determined enemies, and has neglected its earliest and ablest advocate.

He has asserted the position [illegible] of a representative to obey the will of his constituents, and when he could not have mistaken it, he has disobeyed it.

He has denounced Gales and Seaton on the floor of congress as venal editors, fed on treasury pap; and has administered the pap himself.

The zealous advocate of the late war, he has defended that war in language like this; "Is there a man who could not desire a participation in the national glory acquired by the war?—Yes national glory, which however the expression may be condemned by some, must be cherished by every genuine patriot. What do I mean by national glory? Glory, such as Hull, of the Constitution, Jackson, Lawrence, Perry, have acquired. And are gentlemen insensible to their deeds, to the value of them in animating the country in the hour of peril hereafter? Did the battle of Thermopylæ preserve Greece but once? Whilst the Mississippi continues to bear the tributes of the iron mountains and the Alleghany, to her Delta and to the Gulf of Mexico, the eighth of January shall be remembered and the glory of that day shall stimulate future patriots, and nerve the arms of unborn freemen, in driving the presumptuous invader from our country's soil Gentlemen may boast of their insensibility to feelings inspired by the contemplation of such events. But he would ask, does the recollection of Bunker's Hill, of Saratoga, of Yorktown, afford them no pleasure? Every act of noble sacrifice to the country; every instance of patriotic devotion to her cause, has its beneficial influence A nation's character is the sum of its splendid deeds. They constitute one common patrimony—the nation's inheritance. They awe foreign powers. They arouse and animate our own people." Again, "I love true glory. It is the sentiment which ought to be cherished; and in spite of cavils and sneers and attempts to put it down, it will finally conduct this nation to that height which God and nature have destined it.

Such was the language of this patriot orator. And how has his conduct accorded with his language? He has denied a paltry pension to support the declining years of the aged mother of one of the heroes thus characterized by himself, the one too who saved the north western frontier from the direst calamities of the war. He and his friends, his printers and his proteges have exerted all their powers in public and in private, to render that hero odious to the people, who saved the other frontier of the west from a more horrible desolation than that which threatened the first, from miseries, the very thought of which now agonizes the heart, to the most humiliating mortification. This animated eulogist of glory, of battles and of warriors, who then foresaw and foretold the future grandeur of his country, and seduced it from the achievements of her "military chieftains," now endeavours to degrade them below the common level of the citizens, denies them equal rights, and would subject them to degrading suspicions, and cover them with contempt But at that time no "military chieftain lay, like a lion, in his path to the presidency!

After deafening congress with his loud and unceasing clamours about the wrongs of the west, and the neglect of their just claims to official distinction, he has prevented the election of a western president.

He has denounced the Hartford convention as traitors, and he has taken to his bosom and his councils, the most efficient supporters of the measures of the legislature of Massachusetts and has constituted, as the organ of his administration, and the official promulgator of their opinions.

The strongest argument which he used in advocating his own election to the presidency, was the importance of destroying the dangerous precedent of a continual succession to the first office from the department of state, inasmuch as an usage, sanctioned by time, would give to the president the virtual power of appointing his successor, and he now justifies himself for denying his own doctrines, by pleading the "safety" of the precedent, which he had condemned as dangerous to liberty!

He has denounced John Quincy Adams as an apostate federalist, a puritan, a political hypocrite, the enemy of the western interest, and as unworthy of confidence or trust; and he has placed the executive power of the great nation in his hands!

All these things we know he has done, and with this knowledge it certainly requires no monstrous stretch of credulity to believe that he might have gained his office by bargain, intrigue and management?

Such is the secretary of state. If not a worse man than his master, certainly a more mischievous one The latter deceived no one; none placed any reliance on his friendship, liberality or generosity. Those who had confidence in his success were his supporters, ambitious speculators in politics, political apostates, and interested adventurers But the secretary wore the semblance of all those virtues, and under their disguise he gained the confidence of some of the most generous, unsuspecting and noble minded men in the nation. But when this veiled prophet shall stand revealed—when his veil, the silver veil which now conceals this great Mokanna shall be torn away.—deep will be then wonder that they should have kneeled at this altar, and bitterly will they lament that blind infatuation which mistook the devices of evil for the design of benevolence—a malignant mortal for an angel of light.

JUNIUS BRUTUS.

"Why did not the blood of this unfeeling hypocrite turn to an ulcer in his veins and impede his utterance, when, he afterwards rose in debate upon the floor of congress, and exerted all his influence to defeat the petition of Captain Perry's indigent, aged, helpless mother, and did defeat it, by persuading the members of the west that the vote for it would be unpopular with their constituents? Perhaps the time may arrive, when 'the hard hand of pinching poverty' in his old age may come and sting his bosom with reproaches for this cruel and reckless deed.—Ed. E. P.

Such is the frailty of human nature that in party disputes, the passions of some men become so much inflamed, that they appear to be regardless of candour and even of probability if not of possibility. As if with a view of exciting intense interest, ineffable contempt, or overwhelming abhorrence, they are not content with delineating the candidate whom they oppose, with the real share of those infirmities which by nature he may be heir to; they transform his foibles in to crimes and his very virtues into vices; their imaginations let loose and inflated, they disdain to represent him as he is, take some demon as the model and demand of the world to recognize the picture.

Was not this the course pursued in relation to Mr. Jefferson, by the supporters of the elder Adams? is it not the course now pursued towards Gen. Jackson by the advocates of his son? Had half what they prefented of Mr. Jefferson been true, the institutions of learning;—the constitution of the government;—the rites—the very temples of religion, would have been unsafe. But the intelligence and republican spirit of the people were proof against all such attempts at delusion Jefferson triumphed—learning flourished—the constitution was supported—religion was cherished and respected the people were prosperous and happy—republican principles became so firmly fixed and established, that for twenty years, aristocracy appaled, shrunk from the contest. Such were some of the fruits of electing Mr. Jefferson and deposing the father of our present president.

On the other hand, what weakness—what folly—what ignorance—what [illegible] has not been [illegible] of General Jackson Murder, the most barbarous and unprovoked, committed for mere wantonness in cruelty, heads the catalogue of vile charges The accusation is refuted by the most incontestible testimony. What then? Is any compunctious visiting of conscience manifested? Yes—it [illegible] repetitions of the same accusation, a thousand times aggravated by the aid of forgery, [illegible] "His [illegible] his [illegible] sufferings avail not Women [illegible] children—whole frontier settlements, protected by him from the scalping knife and tomahawk of the savage Does this service, shield him from ungenerous reproaches? No! it seems but to sharpen the appetites of calumniators He saved a whole city from violation, pillage and massacre Does this [illegible] his traducers? No It [illegible] fresh aliment for detraction Who are his chief accusers? this is an important question—John Binns his coadjutors, and subordinates, are the [illegible] band! Who have been [illegible] men, whom even John Binns [illegible] such men as Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe and their own idol J. Q. Adams himself— What a contrast [illegible] between them?

Mr. Jefferson approved, defended, justified the whole conduct of Gen Jackson in the Louisiana campaign [illegible] patriot' and a statesman [illegible] the whole—the declaration of martial law—the [illegible] Hall—suppression of the [illegible] of the Legislature—[illegible] and when [illegible] said he, General Jackson [illegible] country, [illegible] than any other [illegible] living.' All John Binns, his aiders and abettors could say and write, and forge in a century would be but as dust in the balance against such testimony. Now, Mr Jefferson and Gen Jackson sat at the same time, in the same senate chamber, when Mr. Jefferson was President and the General voted against those royal laws, the alien and sedition bills of the first Adams. Mr. Jefferson therefore knew him well—and so knowing—he solemnly made this avowal—"It was fortunate for the country that General Jackson was likely to be [illegible] for public life some years at [illegible]—And what did Mr. Adams say before he became the rival of Gen Jackson?—Why, he defended, justified his conduct in the Seminole war—he defended and justified the execution of those miscreants Arbuthnot and Ambrister about whom we have heard so many hellish lamentations. And more recently, with the whole ground before him, Mr. Adams declared that he had entertained the highest sense of the worth, talents and services of Gen. Jackson, and that his name is closely associated with the glory of the nation

President Madison reposed the highest confidence in him.

President Monroe offered to send him Embassador to Mexico. And yet it is unblushingly said that General Jackson cannot read [illegible] let no one start!—ay, that this very man who had accomplished so much—who had been confided in so much, by all our Presidents, except the reign of terror Adams—and upon whom Mr. Jefferson thought so much still depends—can not read, write, or spell the most common words in his mother tongue!!! When respectable men in our own neighbourhood put their names to such incredible stuff, who can wonder at the raw head and bloody bones held up by creatures who have no characters to lose.—Democratic Eagle.

VILLAGE HERALD.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance, or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, of the year subscribed for, will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued unless at the editor's discretion, until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion—those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, will appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come post paid.

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY
OF
AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public, that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast & wrought Shares, with & without Coulters, Hill side, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs, a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality, Harrows, Swingletrees, double & single; Corn Shellers and Washing Machines Also on hand as usual, his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners, Cast steel Axes, Grubbing Hoes, Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.

His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 5 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his implements, that he will continue to merit the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.

JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.

N. B. On hand, [illegible] bushels good MILLET SEED which will be sold low. FRUIT TREES will be furnished to orders. Implements ordered by country customers which [illegible] kept on hand will be carefully selected and turned to the order. March 18. [illegible]

E. T. J. Woodward,

Corner of Dugan's wharf & Pratt St
BALTIMORE.

Informs his friends and customers that he will sell on COMMISSION Wheat, Rye, Corn, Oats, and Tobacco and all other articles of Country Produce, and will make liberal advances on the same.

He has on hand a large supply of Groceries, Liquors, &c.

CONSISTING OF

Teas, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, French Plum Brandy, Wine, Gin, Spirits, Whiskey and Cordials, Spices, Soaps, Candles, Shad, Mackerel, Herrings, Oil and Salt, together with every [illegible] in his line.

ALSO,

Glass Ware, Queen's Ware,

Stone and Earthen Ware, &c.
And a general assortment
Of Garden Seeds of approved kinds, which he will sell on the most liberal terms.

DRY PINE OR OAK WOOD
Will be taken in exchange for Goods, on fair terms.

May 13, 1828. now

CAMBRIDGE HOTEL.

Sign of the Steamboat & Stages

THE Subscriber continues to keep this handsome establishment, a few doors above his old stand, in a very central part of the town, where he is prepared at all times for the reception of travellers, and others, who may please give him a call. His house is well furnished; the rooms private and comfortable; his bar supplied with a choice selection of the best liquors; his stables stored with good provender and his prices regulated by the times. By strict attention to his business, he flatters himself with a continuation of those customers who have been so liberal heretofore to whom he gratefully acknowledges himself indebted.

The public's obt. servant,
WM. C. RIDGAWAY.

N. B. His hack runs to the Cambridge wharf to meet the Steamboat Maryland, on her arrival from Baltimore every Tuesday and Friday evening. Also for the conveyance of passengers from his house to the boat on her departure every Wednesday and Saturday morning, free of charge. He has, for the accommodation of persons who are going on to Baltimore, rented a private stable with a [illegible] lot, well enclosed, for the purpose of taking of their horses at a low price which shall be regulated by the [illegible] he is prepared at a [illegible] time with fresh horses and carriages for the conveyance of Travellers to any part of the Peninsula. W. C. R.

Cambridge, June 3, 1828.

The "Herald" and the "Eastern Shore Whig" will each please insert the above four times, and forward their accounts to this office for collection.

Consumptions, Coughs, &c

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC.

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthma and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of my physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores, composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for, and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical cases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER.
Princess Anne, Md.

Nov. 20, 1827

JOB PRINTING
Neatly executed at this office.

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 1828.

PEOPLE'S TICKET.

For President.

ANDREW JACKSON.

For Vice President.

JOHN C. CALHOUN.

For Elector of President and Vice President of the U. S. for the District composed of Worcester, Somerset, and part of Dorchester counties:

Thomas K. Carroll.

CELEBRATION OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE.

The fifty-second Anniversary of American Independence will be celebrated at B. C. Springs by a number of gentlemen from different parts of the Electoral District. An Oration will be delivered on the occasion, at 11 o'clock A. M. by WESLEY SLOAN, Esq. after which the company will be addressed by Messrs. DENNIS and CARROLL, the candidates for Elector of President of the U. S.

June 10, 1828.

Another Sign in Somerset, Md.

The meeting of the company commanded by Captain Anthony B. Bennett, took place (agreeably to the notice published for several weeks in this paper,) on Saturday last. Previous to dismissing the company a proposition was made to take a vote on the presidential question, which resulted as follows:

For Andrew Jackson	87
For John Q. Adams	6

A FURTHER EXTRACT

From the Report of the Committee on Retrenchment.

They think that the discretion which the Secretary of State, in fact, employs both in appointing and compensating bearers of despatches, is liable to strong objection. In practice, we fear it is prone to degenerate into a species of favouritism, altogether adverse to the public interest: for your committee have reason to apprehend that it is little short of a convenient mode of sending favourites abroad, to travel for their pleasure, health, or instruction, out of the public coffers.

Amidst the numerous appointments of messengers made by the present administration, they will select the account of J. H. Pleasants, editor of the Richmond Whig, because that case, in their estimation, presents the most flagrant example of abuse.

It appears that on the 19th of April, a little more than a month after the inauguration of the President, this gentleman received the appointment of bearer of despatches to Rio Janeiro and Buenos Ayres. The circumstance of his journey from Richmond to Boston, in seeking a passage; his ultimate embarcation at New York, on the 28th of May, in the William Tell, for South America; the incidents which occurred on board that vessel; his leaving his 'important despatches' in charge of the captain of the William Tell, and going on board another vessel bound to Antwerp, his again debarking from this vessel, and embarking, at sea, on board a ship bound to Liverpool; his spending the summer in England, "in seeing the country," and his ultimate return to New York, in October, are detailed in his letters, narrative and penitential, to Mr. Clay in the Appendix, marked No. 9; whilst the subjoined account shows at whose expense these extraordinary voyages were made, viz.

Department of State,

To John H. Pleasants,	Dr.
To this sum for voyages out and home,	$900
To actual expenditures, in travelling expenses and board, from the time of leaving Richmond, on the 19th of April 1825, to the 28th May of the same year, in which interval I was seeking, from Baltimore to Boston, the means of getting to Buenos Ayres,	247
To expenses on my return from New York to Richmond,	37
To per diem allowance, at $6, from the 19th April to 23d August, is 126 days inclusive,	756
Approved: H. CLAY—	$1,940

7th December, 1826.

The account was proved by the Secretary without vouchers.*

In the first place, your Committee are of opinion that Mr. Plersants was entitled to no allowance for voyages, not one of which he performed in the public service; at all events, if he paid his passage to Buenos Ayres, in the William Tell, before embarking, this was the extent of the allowance which should have been made him.

Either his despatches were or were not of importance; if they were of importance; like a soldier on post, no consideration should have induced him to have deserted them: if they were of no higher importance than to have rendered it safe that they should be confided to the Captain of an ordinary merchant vessel, then they should have gone thro' this channel, and Mr. Pleasants ought not to have been appointed. The item of $900 for voyages, is exorbitant, your Committee believe, beyond the comparative rates of passage money, to parts of the habitable globe the most remote. By looking at some of the accounts of other bearers of despatches, employed and paid during the present administration, the Committee find no corresponding rates.

*So marked in the accounts reported in the report of the Committee on the Expenditures of the State Department.

THE PLEDGE—Again!

We lately published an extract from Mr. Walsh's paper on this part of the bargain between Messrs. Adams and Clay. Some of the Coalition seemed very much dissatisfied because we did not give the whole of the article—which was impossible, as we had not seen it. But we now present it entire, with some notes by the Richmond Enquirer, which may assist the Adams men in comprehending Mr. Walsh's remarks:

"We observe the following sentence in a series of resolutions printed for some public meeting. (1.)

"It is now ascertained that Mr. Adams made overtures to the leaders of the federal party before his election, offering in substance to bring them into power provided they would support him."

This may serve as a specimen of the electioneering falsehoods put in circulation under the authority of party assemblages. No evidence of the fact thus stated—not the shadow of evidence—is extant or could be adduced. The utmost that has been alleged, with any semblance of truth, (2) is, that one or two members of Congress, Federalists, who decidedly preferred Mr. Adams to Gen. Jackson, on the broadest grounds, wished to know, before they definitively resolved to vote for him, whether if made President, he would pursue the policy of excluding federalists from office; and they accordingly asked information on the subject from Mr. Webster, or some other friend of Mr. Adams, supposed to be acquainted with his sentiments. Their object was (3)—not any stipulation for themselves, but simply the satisfaction of being assured that a disfranchisement as detrimental to the national weal, as unjust and absurd in itself, was not likely to be continued. To this application, the gentleman addressed (4) gave a written answer, which had the approbation or revision of Mr. Adams; and which contained a profession of doctrine (5) on the point, similar to the one soon after made to the world, more emphatically and fully, in his inaugural address. Here is all that has been alleged with any degree of plausibility. And yet we are told now of overtures, corrupt bargains between Mr. Adams and individuals, &c.

It is manifest that whoever wrote the answer (6) may have performed this agency, with reference only to the general principle, and to the federalists as a body; and without the idea of any stipulation or special advantage for himself. We are absolutely sure, and so must be every man who knows him, that Mr. Webster made no bargain, had no selfish understanding, with any candidate. As to the point how far Mr. Adams has acted conformably to this declaration of sentiments or intentions—that has no essential connexion with the question of bargain:—the democratic friends of General Jackson, who have raised an outcry about the letter, are not, certainly, those who are entitled to complain of him, if he has abstained from appointing federalists to office; they should rather allow him credit for virtually retracting what they represented as a fault or error of original opinion and design.

If any of the Federal members of Congress had addressed themselves, on the same head, with the same purpose to one of the leading federal friends of General Jackson, Colonel Drayton or Senator M'Lane, the answer, no doubt, would have been similar; the General, to be consistent, honest and candid, must have authorized the statement that he meant, if he could, to "destroy the monster party," & as he argued with Mr. Monroe in favour of the appointment of Colonel Drayton; so would he argue with himself, and patriotically act, in the event of his becoming President. Had such a reply been given, (7) would not his party have been exceedingly indignant to hear from the other side, charges of corrupt overtures, bargains, pledges &c., against him, and the gentleman selected as the organ of his assurances? It strikes us that he might now, with just as much reason, be accused of tampering and colluding with the Senate of Indiana, because he has answered favourably their queries concerning his sentiments, about the Tariff and Internal Improvement. We are entitled to presume that the Indiana interrogators meant to vote for him, in case his confession of faith should coincide with their theory and wishes: otherwise, their proceedings might be deemed impertinent and offensive. (8)

The name of the editor of this gazette has been coupled with the stories to which we have referred, and his testimony repeatedly invoked. It is a rule of honor with him, never to reveal for the public what has been imparted to him with express or implied confidence; or what he has casually heard in social intercourse. And if he could violate a principle which he deems essential for the security and comfort of private friendship or acquaintance, it would not, assuredly, be on an occasion whereon those who cite him before the tribunal of the country profess no warrant for so doing, and seek, not the truth, but materials for invective and slander against men of the highest distinction and merit. He, therefore, individually, neither confirms nor denies any of the particular allegations and conjectures in the present case; (9) and he will not undertake to reason with persons that consider silence as assent, when sinister appeals are made from quarters to which no deference is due. This much, however, he will assert, in general; that he has no knowledge, direct or indirect of any transaction between Mr. Adams and Mr. Webster, or any federalist which he could view in the light of a bargain, stipulation, intrigue, or corrupt understanding; or as in any degree discreditable to either.—He had some opportunity, before the election of judging with regard to the resolves and acts of Mr. Adams as a candidate; and his opinion was, that they indicated extreme scrupulosity and abstemiousness. Some signal instances of this purport fell under his immediate observation."(10.)

NOTES.

(1) This is a mistake—The sentence which he quotes is not extracted from a series of resolutions printed for some public meeting; but from an editorial article in the "Eastern (Maine) Argus" which was re-published under his beard by the Philadelphia Sentinel but two days before. It is of course not put in circulation "under the authority of party assemblages." The truth seems to be, that the Signs from N. Jersey, indicating some disposition on the part of the friends of Mr. Stockton to come out upon the subject, Mr. Walsh was willing to save his own credit by preceding them—and that he seized upon this sentence as presenting the charge against Mr. Adams in a stronger shape than his opponents had generally made it.—This sentence charges Mr. C. with making overtures, and offering them the bribe direct—a proposition, which Mr. W. conceived, might be directly contradicted.

(2) This, then, according to Mr. W. may be alleged "with any semblance to truth."

(3) His language becomes stronger and stronger. He undertakes to say what "their object was"—there must of course, be an act, where the agent has an object—this is consequently admitting that they did ask the information through Mr. Webster.

(4) Why, here, Mr. Walsh drops entirely the diplomatic style; "the semblance of truth"—what 'has been,' or may be "alleged"—but tells us unequivocally that the "application" was made, and for what Mr. Webster was "addressed"—and moreover, that he did give "a written answer"—which answer "had the approbation or revision of Mr. Adams"—and Mr. Walsh then goes on to say categorically what that said answer did "contain."

(5) Oh, only "a profession of doctrine!" Mr. W. has certainly been studying in the school of diplomacy. At least, he seems to have caught some of its language.

(6) There was an "answer" then written, of course!

(7) Had Gen. Jackson given such an answer under the same circumstance, that Mr. A. did, then we are free to confess that he would have been liable to the same charges of making bargains, giving pledges, &c.—His letter to Mr. Monroe was written under very different circumstances, and could not by any possibility have been intended to tamper with the election. But Mr. A. could not be elected, without obtaining the federal vote of the H. of R. He wanted the votes of 13 states to elect him—Three federal gentlemen had in fact the votes of three states in their hands. Two of these did vote for Mr. Adams—there is every reason to believe they saw the letter—and Mr. Webster did offer in a certain contingency to show the letter to the third gentleman, but he refused to see it. Is there the slightest analogy between General J's conduct and Mr. A's?

(8) "It strikes us" in a very different light. The parallel he would draw between Gen. J. and Mr. A. fails again. Mr. A. was asked, by those who were disposed to be his friends, to say whether their party might count upon him for a fair share of the loaves and fishes. But the application to Gen. Jackson, was pretty much for "a profession of doctrine"—and he was called upon by men, who were unequivocally his enemies. They wished to injure him, if they could, and their proceedings were certainly unfriendly and "offensive." If he remained silent, they intended to argue that he was afraid to speak out—and if he spoke, they hoped, as we have seen their friends have actually done, to turn his declarations to his disadvantage. Are not the Politics of those who voted for the Resolutions, well known to be hostile to him? Is not Gov. Ray's insiduous letter besides, a sure interpretation of their wishes? What was Jackson to do? To shrink; when thus called upon—or, to profess his 'doctrines?' But, there is one further view of this matter, which seems to have escaped Mr. Walsh altogether. The application to Jackson, was in the face of day—his answer was fearlessly given, and has been publicly announced. Look at the other picture. It is all dark, and mysterious. The whole negociation is secret—and to this day, the parties concerned, have affected to conceal it—Mr. Adams himself, has ventured to deny it; and Mr. Walsh, embarrassed by the disclosure which he has made, is anxious to mystify the subject—affects to deny his own disclosures—and charges others with "hazarding the assertions, which they have made, respecting the purport of the article."

(9) Amusing enough! If he does not "individually" make these allegations, who does? Who has authorized him to make them, without breaking the seal of "confidence?" Was it Mr. Webster, and have they at last found, that they have unfortunately let the secret out, and are now solicitous to mystify the matter?

(10) When these extraordinary instances of scrupulosity occurred, Mr. W. is not pleased to inform us. Was [illegible] the election was [illegible] of R.—when [illegible] and the object which he sought was almost within his grasp. Let us leave the letter, and we will judge for ourselves about the bargain. But Mr. Walsh knows there was such a letter—and, yet, is attempting to conceal what he knows about it, and disingenuously to deny what he has said about it.—The attempt is unavailing. Mr. W. does himself an injury.

We are at a loss to know, which most to admire, the impudent barefaced attempt of the Nat. Journal, the N. Y. American, and other loyal prints of the Administration, to deny the whole matter about the letter, or the miserable attempt of Mr. Walsh to mystify his own confessions. Yet with all these awkward efforts to extricate himself from the consequences of his own loquacity, Mr. W. has never gone as far as a drivelling paper, in Lynchburg would represent him. Mr. W. would never so far disgrace himself as to aver, "that he knows nothing of any such letter as is charged to have been written by Mr. Webster and interlined by Mr. Adams, nor of any other letter which can be tortured into a resemblance of the description given of it."—No, Mr. W. has some character to lose, whatever be the case with his affiliated prints—and he has never said, and will never bring himself to say, that he does not know nor does he believe there was such a letter written by Mr. Webster and revised and approved by Mr. Adams.

One word more of caution to all these gentlemen: In addition to the mass of evidence, which has been accumulating upon us for some time, we have received a letter from New York, since we penned the above annotations, which confirm what we have said upon this subject. We understand that the declaration of the late Mr. Stockton, that Mr. Webster did show him the letter in question, can be confirmed by Capt. R. F. Stockton, by Mr. J. R. Thompson, who married the daughter of R. Stockton, by Mr. Bispham, a respectable gentleman of New Jersey, whose son stands the 10th on the list of Lieutenants of the Navy of the U. States, recently confirmed by the Senate, "to take rank in the order in which their names are placed" on said list—and, moreover, by many gentlemen of the bar of New Jersey.—"You perceive (says a letter from the North) that Mr. Hopkinson does not deny the existence of such a letter—nor dare he or Mr. Walsh." We have here given the names of five gentlemen—who may contradict this statement if they can. But the disclosure of this truth will be made in due season.

It is whispered that there has been some interesting sparring on the subject of the same letter between Mr. McLane of Delaware, and Mr. Webster, during the secret session of the Senate.

We leave it to Mr. Walsh to respond as seemeth best unto himself, to what the "Massachusetts Journal" says about "his late ambiguities."—"Mr. Walsh (says the Editor of that Journal) must either confirm and justify the clapping and crowing of the Richmond Enquirer, or he must vindicate our President and our Webster from this oft-repeated and sickening accusation, or he must confess that he knows nothing about it, and that his mystification in the National Gazette of Thursday, May the 8th, is mere affectation." We repeat with the Journal, that "Mysteries whatever be their motive, will not now pass."

THE BARGAIN.

After the publication of the Address of the Jackson corresponding committee of the District of Columbia, the man who doubts that there was a BARGAIN between Adams and Clay at the last Presidential election, must do so because he has not read that address, or if he has read it, and is not convinced, it must be because he does not choose to be convinced—because he wilfully shuts his eyes to the truth, or because he is so prejudiced, so blinded by party spirit that he cannot see truth unless she happens to be on the side of his own party.

That there was a BARGAIN, was suspected by a large portion of the American People, as soon as the letter of the Hon. George Kremer, came out in the Columbian Observer, in which it was charged that there had been a BARGAIN made between Mr. Clay and Mr. Adams, by which the votes under Clay's influence, would be given to Adams, and that Clay, for electing Mr. Adams, would receive the office of Secretary of State. We say, the suspicion then arose and spread very generally among the people, that there had been a bargain. Mr. Clay, for a while, bullied the charge out of countenance; but when the election came on in the House and Mr. Adams was elected President, and that too by the vote of Mr. Clay and his Western friends, and Mr. Clay was shortly after, appointed Secretary of State, the public suspicion revived; and revived too, in a strength and seriousness, which produced alarm in Mr. Clay and those whom he had seduced to betray the people. Blustering, bullying, fighting, writing and speaking, were all in vain, the suspicion strengthened and extended daily—every attempt of Mr. Clay to put down the charge but elicited new facts, which confirmed it. His Circulars, his speeches and his pamphlets, but involved him in contradictions;—and after all his struggles to extricate himself, the net has been fairly drawn upon him, by the address of the Jackson Corresponding Committee of the District of Columbia. The man who will read that address, observe the relation in which Adams and Clay are there proved to have stood to each other previous to the election, and the relation in which Clay and Jackson stood to each other prior to that time, see what CLAY said of Adams and what he said of Jackson—see the course which CLAY pursued just before he left Kentucky, and sometime after he got to Washington, and mark the result. We repeat it, after doing this, any man is not convinced that there was a BARGAIN between Adams and Clay, it must be because he is utterly blinded by party feeling.

Mr. Clay having presented to the public the statements of most of the Western members of Congress, who participated with him in the bargain of 1825 to prove that he and they are innocent, and having offered evidence to show that before he left Kentucky in 1824, he had made up his mind NOT to vote for General JACKSON, and that he had said that he could not conceive of any event which could possibly happen, which could induce him to support the election of General Jackson to the Presidency; let us produce some evidence, which we believe will have rather more weight than any Mr. Clay has yet offered, of what Mr. Clay said, both before he left KENTUCKY, and after he got to WASHINGTON. And first we will produce the testimony of respectable gentlemen on their OATHS before the Senate of Kentucky:

"Oliver Keene stated, that in the fall of 1824, eight or ten days before Mr. Clay started for Washington city, he asked Mr. Clay, in conversation, whether he had written to General Jackson to come to his house and to go on to Washington with him? Mr. Clay said HE HAD. Witness was a warm supporter of Mr. Clay, but prefers Jackson to Adams."

"Francis McAlear stated, that on the morning Mr. Clay started for Washington, in the fall of 1824, in the presence of gentlemen, he heard Mr. Clay say he HAD WRITTEN TO GEN. JACKSON TO COME THRO' LEXINGTON AND GO ON TO WASHINGTON WITH HIM, but had received no answer, and had given him out. Witness was a warm advocate of Mr. CLAY, until he voted for John Q. Adams."

Now hear the statement of Major Thomas P. Moore, a Representative in Congress, from the state of Kentucky at the time the election took place in the house, who voted in the house, for JACKSON, who has since been re-elected without opposition, and whose character for veracity and integrity, is above impeachment. Mr. Moore says—

"During the late contest for the Presidency, before the people, I was the warm and zealous friend of Mr. CLAY. I regarded his election as important to the whole United States, and especially to the people of the Western country, with whose political principles he had harmonized, and with whose local interests his pretentions appeared to be particularly identified. The information given me by Mr. Clay and his friends, and my own sanguine temperament, induced me to believe that his prospects were equally favorable with those of any other of the candidates; and, much more so than those of General Jackson, until Oct. 1824. In that month Mr. CLAY, Mr. Trimble, Mr. C. A. Wickliffe, myself, and perhaps other members of the Kentucky delegation, casually met at Frankfort during the session of the Court of Appeals. There Mr. Clay, for the first time, expressed to me an apprehension that he should be excluded from the house of Representatives; and observed, with seeming carelessness of manner, that it would be best for us, in that case, to remain uncommitted as to our second choice. This remark made but a slight impression on my mind at the time, and in November I proceeded to Washington city, still entertaining the hope that Mr. CLAY would be one of the three returned to the house of Representatives.

"After my arrival in the city I was confined to my room by indisposition. While in this situation, Mr. Clay called, and after the usual civilities, told me, in emphatic terms, that he had little doubt he was excluded from the House of Representatives, and that all "WE" (meaning the Kentucky delegation in congress) "had now to do, was to hold ourselves uncommitted, as to our second choice," declaring, "that we could vote for either of the three candidates, and justify ourselves to our constituents."

Mr. Clay had a conversation similar to this with Mr. Moore, with the Hon. R. P. Henry, a Representative in Congress from Kentucky. Two more brief extracts from Mr. Moore's letter to the Jackson Corresponding Committee, and we will pass on to other testimony.

"I had no further intercourse [after the conversation at Mr. M's room, which we have given above.—Editor] with Mr. Clay on the subject of the election, until it was over; except that which will be explained in a subsequent part of this letter. I was warmly attached to Mr. Clay, and decidedly hostile to Mr. Adams. I had denounced him in all parts of the district represented by me, on the authority of facts derived from Mr. CLAY. Disappointed in my first choice, (Mr. Clay) and in bad health, I took little or no part in the canvass among the members of Congress, and gave a silent vote, in accordance, as I thought, with the wishes of the people of Kentucky."

The subsequent intercourse with Mr. Clay, alluded to in the above paragraph, is thus stated by Mr. Moore:

"I received two letters from a confidential friend of Mr. Clay's, residing in Kentucky, urging me to vote for whoever would make Mr. Clay Secretary of State, and intimating that Mr. ADAMS would do it. Mr. CLAY happened to see me receive one of the letters, and after I had read it, asked me what news from Kentucky? I replied, that I had received a letter from ——. Mr. Clay asked "and what does—— say?" I replied, "You know very well." He laughed, and left me under the impression that he did know.

A few days after, the intention of Clay, with that of a majority of the Kentucky delegation, to vote for Adams was publicly announced. There is all the simplicity of [illegible] in this statement of Mr. Moore [illegible] doubt not that Mr. Clay did [illegible] very well what his confidential [illegible] in Kentucky, had written to [illegible] Moore; and we doubt as little [illegible] those two letters were procured [illegible] written to Major Moore by Mr. C[illegible] It has been put beyond the possi[illegible] of a reasonable doubt that Mr. C[illegible] procured letters to be written to [illegible] their representative from Ken[illegible] Mr. White, by his influential c[illegible]uents, pressing him to vote for [illegible] if he would make CLAY Secret[illegible] State. And we doubt not that [illegible] same sort of influence was atte[illegible] to be bro't to bear on Major M[illegible] But let us proceed with our [illegible] and our next extract shall be [illegible] the letter of Gen. John Floyd, [illegible] a gentleman above the breath of [illegible]umny, standing high in the con[illegible] and affections of his native Sta[illegible] respected by all who have ev[illegible] him in the councils of the natio[illegible] ter relating what, in an interv[illegible] had with him, Mr. Clay said [illegible] Crawford, the General thus pro[illegible]

"He" (Mr. Clay) "then went [illegible] state, in the course of that con[illegible] and I think nearly in these [illegible] "When I take up the pretensi[illegible] Mr. ADAMS, and weigh them [illegible] lay them down—then take u[illegible] pretensions of GENERAL J[illegible]SON, weigh them, and lay them by the side of those of Mr. Ad[illegible] never was as much puzzled in [illegible] life, as I am to decide between the[illegible]

"In answer to the other pa[illegible] your inquiry, permit me to say, I have had many conversations [illegible] Mr. CLAY, of a political char[illegible] the nature and extent of which [illegible] unwilling to disclose, unless so[illegible] ture circumstance should authori[illegible] quire it."

This conversation between G[illegible] Floyd and Mr. Clay, in which [illegible] for said—speaking of the prete[illegible] of Adams and Jackson to the [illegible] dency—"I never was so much p[illegible] in all my life, as I am to decide be[illegible] them," took place, says Gen. F[illegible] in the month of January, 1825, [illegible] latter part of the preceding m[illegible] December. In the latter part of [illegible] cember, 1824, he "never was so [illegible] puzzled in all his life as to decid[illegible] tween them," altho' he told the [illegible] lie, that long previous to that tim[illegible] before he left Kentucky, he [illegible] made up his mind, and so stated [illegible] friends NOT to vote for Gen. J[illegible] SON under any circumstances could possibly be conceived!

Another extract, and we shall [illegible] done, for the present. The foll[illegible] extract from the letter of Gen. [illegible] Call, at the time of the election [illegible] House, the Delegates from Fl[illegible] will serve as much as any thi[illegible] know, to show the deep game [illegible] pocrisy, which Mr. Clay was pla[illegible] —Gen. Call says—

"As Gen. Jackson, Major [illegible] and myself were returning fro[illegible] Capitol, after passing through the [illegible] tunda, we were overtaken by [illegible] Clay, who approached Gen. Ja[illegible] with his usual pleasing address [illegible] with the following familiar and f[illegible] ly language: "General Jackso[illegible] have a quarrel with you; why di[illegible] not let me know that you were [illegible] ing by Lexington? I certainly s[illegible] have waited for your arrival." A[illegible] the best of my recollection, he ad[illegible] "We should have travelled to[illegible] er."

Now, whatever Mr. Clay may [illegible] whispered into the ears of a [illegible] friends about his determination [illegible] "unalterably fixed" resolution [illegible] to vote for General Jackson—we [illegible] whatever of this sort, he may [illegible] said to a few, before he left Kent[illegible] we have shown that he said BEF[illegible] he left Kentucky, that he was [illegible] COMMITTED" that he said he [illegible] written to General Jackson to joi[illegible] in Lexington and travelling wit[illegible] to Washington—that AFTER h[illegible] to Washington, he familiarly c[illegible] Gen. Jackson for not letting him [illegible] he was coming through Lexin[illegible] that, he might have waited for [illegible] and travelled with him—that [illegible] TER he got to Washington [illegible] to Gen. Floyd, that he never [illegible] much puzzled in all his life, as he [illegible] to decide between the pretensio[illegible] Gen. JACKSON and Mr. AD[illegible] —that AFTER he got to Washi[illegible] he said to Major Moore—"We" [illegible] Kentucky delegation) "could [illegible] EITHER of the three candidates, [illegible] justify ourselves to our constituents."

Having shown these things, [illegible] leave Mr. Clay and his friends, to [illegible] out of their difficulties, if they ca[illegible]

Baltimore Republican.

The Orphans' Cou[illegible] Somerset County will sit on Tue[illegible] the 24th instant.

We are authorized to announ[illegible]

Anthony B. Bennett,
Thomas Bayly,
John C. Wilson, Jr. and
John J. Davis, Esqrs.

as Candidates to represent Some[illegible] county in the next House of Dele[illegible] of Maryland.

Constable's Sale.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri F[illegible] issued by George M. Willing, a ju[illegible] of the peace, and to me directe[illegible] the suit of Levin D. Jones again[illegible] dam Horsey, I have seized and t[illegible] in execution the following proper[illegible] wit: one negro girl named S[illegible] which I shall proceed to sell for a [illegible] of years, at Back Creek Stor[illegible] Wednesday the 2nd day of July [illegible] to the highest and best bidder for [illegible] to satisfy the above mentioned [illegible] with interest and cost.

SAML. McBRYDE, C[illegible]

June 3, 1828.

Gen. Jackson and Aaron Burr.

The coalition seem determined to keep us continually on the defensive, and being unable, from having exhausted their inventive powers to fabricate new forgeries are resolved to assail us with a repetition of the old. We dislike this mode of warfare. After having slain our enemies, we are not disposed to be haunted by their ghosts.—This coalition, with characteristic disregard to truth, had charged General Jackson with having been concerned in the conspiracy of Aaron Burr; and were immediately answered by a letter from Mr. Jefferson, wherein that great man, who was not often mislead in his estimate of men, paid the highest compliments to the patriotism and fidelity of the Hero of New Orleans. But this testimony ample and conclusive as it is, the coalition suppose to be forgotten by the people, and therefore think they may venture upon a repetition of the slander.—Perhaps they may mislead a few, a very few, who may not have seen, or may have forgotten the letter of Mr. Jefferson; and to destroy even this hope, we will venture upon its republication. Here it is.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Jefferson to General Wilkinson, dated Washington, January 3d, 1807, giving instructions for detecting and arresting the movements of Col. Burr and his associates.

"If every thing from that place, (Louisville,) be successfully arrested, there is nothing from below that is to be feared.—BE ASSURED THAT TENNESSEE, AND PARTICULARLY GEN. JACKSON ARE FAITHFUL."

Are we to suppose that Mr. Jefferson, [illegible]ho knew mankind, and consequently, was [illegible]ware of the facility with which a portion [illegible]f it might be seduced, would have said this [illegible] General Jackson rashly, and inconsiderately? More especially would he have said [illegible] without sufficient reason, at a time when [illegible] whole Western country was pervaded [illegible]y the ramifications of an extensive conspiracy, and when distrust of his neighbour [illegible]d visited almost every individual? Those [illegible]ho would believe this of Mr. Jefferson, [illegible]now little of that great man's character.—[illegible]e repeat that such commendations from [illegible]r. Jefferson, under such circumstances, [illegible]re a sufficient answer to the charge, though [illegible] were supported by the affidavits of the [illegible]hole Coalition.

But, in addition to the testimony of Mr. [illegible]efferson, we have that of the most distin[illegible]uished citizens of Tennessee, who took [illegible] active part in the movements then made [illegible] arrest the projects of Col. Burr. A num[illegible] of revolutionary veterans, who could [illegible] wounds received in battles where [illegible]ashington, and Greene, and Gates, and [illegible], and Lincoln, and Mercer, and Knox, [illegible]d such men commanded, on learning that [illegible]ason was abroad in the land, organized [illegible]mselves into a company of volunteers, [illegible] offered to GENERAL ANDREW [illegible]CKSON, their services in defending [illegible] country. The following is their ad[illegible]ss to Gen. Jackson, with their names [illegible]bscribed.

To Major General Andrew Jackson.

At a moment when great sensibility and [illegible] fearful apprehension for the welfare [illegible]our country, has been excited, from one [illegible]d of the continent to the other. When [illegible] government, the best calculated of all [illegible]ers, for the attainment of individual se[illegible]ity and happiness, has sounded the toc[illegible] of alarm, to be on the alert in suppress[illegible] combinations of men, hostile to the in[illegible]rity of the union and interests of our [illegible]ntry. It believes all men either aged [illegible] youthful, to coalesce in their attachment [illegible]their country. In the affections of the [illegible]izens our government exists; not in op[illegible]ssive and unnecessary coercion, as in [illegible]er countries. These principles which [illegible]nently characterise republican institu[illegible]s, clearly demonstrate, that every citi[illegible], whatever his situation may be, ought [illegible] contribute in some mode to the support [illegible]he government under which these ines[illegible]able blessings are enjoyed.—The infirm, [illegible] their opinions and exhortations—to [illegible]m experience belongs. They know the [illegible]lculable blessings of freedom of thought, [illegible]ch, action—security of person and pro[illegible]. Patriotism is their claim, though [illegible] exclusive in a country of freedom.—[illegible] is an important crisis, when the limits [illegible]gal active exertion, ought not to be [illegible]t with a microscopic eye. So far as our [illegible] powers will admit, we cheerfully sub[illegible] the rigors of military institutions.—[illegible]ountry will require nothing unnecessa[illegible] of us. The thread of age will not be [illegible]n, but it will be used to the extent of [illegible]ength.

[illegible]nder these impressions, we agree to em[illegible] ourselves—aged and infirm as we may [illegible] offer our services and our fortunes to [illegible]ountry, in support of its laws and con[illegible]ed authorities.

[illegible]eral James Robertson, captain,
[illegible]es Hennen, surgeon,
[illegible]eral Thomas Overton,† [illegible]or Howel Tatum,†
[illegible] Clem. Hall,† [illegible]ptain James Tatum,†
[illegible]or William T. Lewis,†
[illegible]onel Joel Lewis†
[illegible]onel Robert Hays†
[illegible]tain William Richard,† [illegible]tain Stephen Cantrell
[illegible]tain Robert Edm[illegible]
[illegible]or William W[illegible]
[illegible]tain William L[illegible], sen.†
[illegible]tain Joshua Hadley,†
[illegible]tain John Beck,†
[illegible]tain John Park,†
[illegible] Joseph Coleman, Mayor, Nashville
[illegible]liam Tait
[illegible]mas Talbot
[illegible] Poyzer,
[illegible]mas Dillon,
[illegible]liam Whorton,
[illegible] Whorton,
[illegible] others, old veterans composing a [illegible]y, all over fifty years of age.
[illegible]hose marked thus † were officers in [illegible]olutionary war.

[illegible]uppose, any, treasonable connection [illegible] General Jackson and Col. Burr af[illegible]ding this testimony, we must either [illegible] that, these veterans who had shed [illegible]od for their country's independence [illegible]emselves, connected with Burr, and [illegible]d this address to conceal their trea[illegible] that they were so, "ineffably stupid," [illegible]ce themselves under the command [illegible] whose fidelity and patriotism they [illegible] well assured. But, admitting the [illegible]m of these revolutionary heroes, how can we reconcile either supposition of Gen. Jackson's reason with this answer to their address? Here it is. Let the confident read it and rejoice; let the doubtful read it and be convinced.

Gen. JAMES ROBERTSON, & the corps of INVINCIBLES, you have the honor to command:

The tender of your services at the serious crisis, when our government has warned us to be watchful, is honourable, not only to yourselves, but the country in which we live. It is interesting and grateful at the present moment. The Executive of the Union, in whom we all have confidence will not only receive it with pleasure, as a mark of attachment to the government and laws; but the faithful historian of passing times, cannot avoid noticing it as an instance of patriotism, to be found only in Republics; for their support, they rest on the opinion and affections of the people, and above all governments, union of sentiments and action is necessary.

Though all citizens must be sensible of the inestimable blessings we enjoy, yet your generous expressions of them, has filled me with emotions of ardor as extraordinary as the occasion which gave birth to them,—may all men cherish such sentiments, is my sincere wish. Age, in a government of laws and freedom, is entitled to a claim of patriotism, but it is equally entitled to the highest respect from youth. The frost of age and experience is as necessary in the moral as in the physical world. The dissipated attention of men is collected and the natural relaxation of youth invigorated.—Hence our union of sentiments in the position, that all men ought to contribute their might in some mode, to the public good. But when age in its wisdom bounds beyond its ordinary limits of counsel and admonition into the hardy field of exertions!—My God! how can I express my sensations!!!

Age, from the immutable principles of the law of nature, is entitled to an exemption, but should the danger which threatens our country, require your services in the field, it is hoped that the occasion may be temporary, and that you will only be wanting in the field of battle, where your years and meritorious services will be duly considered. There your commander well knows that your former services, presence and bravery, will be equal to a regiment of men.

Accept the thanks of the government, and of your General to whom you so generously offered your services, with the sentiments of my grateful respect.

ANDREW JACKSON,
Maj. Gen. 2d. Division.

But, we have not done. But a few weeks before the organization of this patriotic corps, and the publication, at Nashville, of this patriotic address and answer, General Jackson addressed the following letter to Gov. Claiborne of Louisiana, for the purpose of warning him against an apprehended movement upon New Orleans by the conspirators.

Letter of Gen. Andrew Jackson to his Excellency William Claiborne, warning him to be on the alert to detect the Burr conspirators.

SIR:—Although it is a long time since I wrote you, still that friendship that once existed remains bright on my part; and although since I have had the pleasure of seeing you, I have waded through difficult and disagreeable scenes, still I have all that fondness for my old and former friends that I ever had, and their memory has been more endeared to me by the treachery I have experienced since I saw you, by some newly acquired ones. Indeed I fear treachery has become the order of the day.—This induces me to write to you. Put your town in a state of defence. Organize your militia, and defend your city as well against internal enemies as external: my knowledge does not extend so far as to authroize me to go into detail; but I fear you will meet with an attack from quarters you do not at present expect. Be upon the alert; keep a watchful eye upon our General, and beware of an attack as well from our own country as Spain. I fear there is something rotten in the state of Denmark. You have enemies within your own city that may try to subvert your government, and try to separate it from the Union. You know I never hazard ideas without good grounds, and you will keep these hints to yourself. But I say again, be on the alert, your government I fear is in danger. I fear there are plans on foot inimical to the Union. Whether they will be attempted to be carried into effect or not I cannot say; but rest assured they are in operation or I calculate boldly. Beware of the month of December. I love my country and government: I hate the Dons; I would delight to see Mexico reduced, but I will die in the last ditch before I would yield a foot to the Dons, or see the Union disunited. This I write for your own eye, and for your own safety; profit by it, and the ides of March remember.

With sincere respect I am, as usual, your sincere friend.

ANDREW JACKSON.

Nov. 12, 1806.

After publishing these documents, which we recommend to the attention of every republican press in the Union, we hope this slander may not be repeated; for though we know the Coalition would repeat it, if they thought its repetition would deceive a single voter, we hope they will not so far compromit their reputation for common sense, as to venture upon a thrice refuted falsehood. U. S. Tel.

ANOTHER ANTI-TRUTH.

We last week gave, from a Baltimore paper, a proper confutation of a coalition falsehood concerning the members of the General Conference of the Methodist E. Church, a majority of whom are favourable to the election of Andrew Jackson. But it has also been stated by John Binns that there is no preacher of the Gospel in the whole state of Delaware. This assertion, which we know to be an astonishing anti-fact, is met by the Delaware Gazette as follows:—

"We perceive that the statement in the Journal, that there is no clergyman but Mr. R. of Newark, in this state, who is in favour of the election of General Jackson, has reference to one made by Binns that there was not one. We do not marvel at the assertion, when we understand that Binns is the author of it, but since it is made a question, we will undertake to name a clergyman in the state who is in favour of Jackson, for every one whom any of our opponents can name who is opposed to him."

From the New-York Enquirer.

NATIONAL POLITICS.

The following well written address, to the people of the United States, we copy from the National Intelligencer. It is ably and coolly written, and is intended to promote the cause of John Quincy Adams, but we have taken the liberty to make a few alterations in its position and assumptions, and it answers full well for General JACKSON; indeed, as it now reads, it carries on its face the marks of undeniable truth and sincerity. On the breaking up of Congress we wanted an address, and have borrowed one from the enemy—we hope they will excuse us.

To the People of the United States.

One part of the policy of those who strive, by whatever means, to prevent the election of Gen. Jackson, is, to subdue the hopes and discourge the efforts of his friends and supporters, by such representations of the state of public feeling as show his election highly improbable, or impossible. The administration, to ensure victory, raises a shout, that victory is already won.

The great extent of the country, and the difficulty of accurately knowing, in one part, what sentiments prevail in another and distant part, afford facility to this mode of practising imposition on the public. The people of New Hampshire, for example, are assured, that it is no longer matter of doubt that Ohio and Louisiana will vote for Mr. Adams; while the citizens of those states are surprised, at the same time, by hearing it asserted, with a confidence belonging to real conviction, that not only New Hampshire, but others, also, of the New England States, perhaps nearly all of them, give satisfactory proof of having supported the same cause. Whatever of colouring, of exaggeration, or, we regret to add, of unqualified misrepresentation, this course of policy may require, seems, hitherto, not to have been found wanting. Not only are slight and doubtful manifestations of opinion when favorable, swoln into importance, and magnified beyond all just degree, on the one hand; while, on the other, the most clear and decisive results of full popular elections, if unfavorable, are made to go for nothing; but, formal statements are, also, put forth, sometimes under the authority of names, such as are willing to be appended to them, which are known, not only to be partial, but to be absolutely untrue, by those who have information on the subjects to which they relate.

Notwithstanding the general intelligence of the community, there may be danger that attempts of this sort, every where made, and long continued, will produce more or less of the effect intended, unless seasonably and properly counteracted.

It has been deemed expedient, therefore, on the eve of the adjournment of congress, that the friends of Gen. Jackson, throughout the whole Union, should be informed, from some source, or through some channel, in which they have confidence, what is the belief, entertained here, of the present state, and the present tendency of public opinion and of the probable result of the Election.

It is the purpose of this paper to state what that belief is; with some reference to the grounds on which it is founded. It proceeds from those who have no motives which should induce them to mislead or deceive, either themselves or others; and as, from obvious causes, this place is the point, at which, at the present moment, the greatest amount of information on the subject is concentrated; it has been attempted to consider and compare the various parts of this information attentively and fairly, to judge of the whole correctly, and to lay the result honestly before the public. That result, we have the pleasure to say, is, in a high degree, satisfactory and gratifying.—It has produced a full conviction, that, since the first bursting out of opposition to the gallant and patriotic General, which was contemporary with the elections of 1825, no period has furnished so strong reasons to expect his election as the present; and that such election may be now anticipated with a reasonable degree of certainty.

Of the more general grounds which conduce to this opinion, it is not intended on this occasion, to speak at any length; because they are equally open to the observation and judgment of all. All can observe, and judge, whether there be not, at least in many parts of the country, a very altered tone of feeling towards Mr. Adams—whether there be not the prevalence of a more sober temper, in judging between him and his patriotic competitor; an increasing reluctance to continue the highest public concerns, in hands which have, so far, conducted them unwisely and unsafely; and growing doubts, and hesitation, now approaching to alarm, about the propriety of continuing the fortunes of this young Republic to one, no otherwise bro't into this number of candidates for the highest office, than as having distinguished himself by a life of diplomacy and tergiversation. There would appear, we think, to be indications of a solemn pause, of a disposition to reflection not in partisans and zealots, but in the minds of candid and reasoning men, who have hitherto countenanced the cause of Mr. Adams.—They begin to take counsel of their better judgment; to put it to their own consciences, and to enquire, what there is, in his conduct, his appointments, and the course of his administration, in his character and his temper, so highly fitting him for the situation for which he is proposed to be again chosen?

But, not dwelling on these general indications, it is the immediate purpose of this Address to refer to particulars, and to exhibit, with some detail, that view of the subject which has led to the belief above expressed.

In presenting this view, the object will be, not to hold out general and vague encouragement; not to show that Gen. Jackson may be elected by a very large majority; but to state the grounds on which we believe there will be a strong majority for him: and that, consequently, he will be elected. This is the first object.

In favor of the election of Gen. Andrew Jackson may be reckoned, then, in the first place, the entire votes of the following states, viz. Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, and Louisiana. Whether we regard the representation of these States in Congress, or their Legislatures at home, or appeal to any other just mode of ascertaining the sentiments of their people, the result equally justifies this opinion.

To the votes of these States is next to be added a majority of those of Maryland.—Here again, we think, there can be no danger of mistake; since that State lies so contiguous, and information from every part of it is so full and particular. Thus far, the computation is accompanied with as much certainty, as can well belong to such questions.

The next object of enquiry is Kentucky. It is well known that the friends of Adams and Clay have made Kentucky one great theatre of their active and vigorous operations. They have sought to avail themselves of her locality of the warm and generous character of her citizens, inclining them to some degree of enthusiasm towards Mr. Clay; and they have artfully connected themselves, also, with pre-existent State parties, and internal controversies and rivalships. These means, however, have not been deemed alone sufficient to promise success. The drawing off of Kentucky from a man who had gloriously served his country, and the arraying her with those whose opinions, on points which she deems of high interests, are known to be essentially different from her own, has justly been thought an object of no easy attainment. She had herself voted for Mr. Clay, who transferred its vote for a consideration, to Mr. Adams.—Mr. Clay's popularity and weight of character, were, of course, to be brought to bear against Gen. Jackson, and, to accomplish that end, efforts were to be made, proportioned, at once, to the importance, and to the difficulty of the undertaking.—A storm of abuse has accordingly raged against him, the violence of which has no precedent. A charge of being an assassin of his soldiers—a charge relating to the reputation of his venerable and respectable wife, having its origin where decorum and delicacy, as well as truth & honor, should have altogether forbidden it; a charge, unsupported by the slightest proof, encountered by every contrary presumption, confuted in short, by the most conclusive evidence, has been spread abroad, nevertheless, and repeated, and re-echoed, with a vehemence, which, for a while, seemed but to increase the more, as the accusation was shown, more and more to be groundless. [Here we omit a paragraph for want of room.]

We believe, then, that the votes of Kentucky, are to be enumerated among those favourable to Gen. Jackson.

Adding the votes of Kentucky to those before-mentioned, the sum total exceeds the necessary majority. But it is desirable that General Jackson should receive a considerable number of the votes of New York.—That he will receive the requisite number of these votes, we entertain no doubt whatever. Information from every part of the State, and the opinion of persons among the most competent to judge, conspire to produce satisfaction on this point. We hazard the prediction, and we are persuaded the intelligent People of that State will, in due time, most fully and triumphantly verify it, that the cause of Mr. Adams is destined to receive, in New York, signal overthrow and defeat.

Such is the view which has convinced us, that, with just and proper efforts, on the part of the friends of Gen. Jackson, there is nothing which can be reasonably expected to prevent his election; and, for the sake of distinctness, we repeat our belief that N. York, and in all probability New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, part of Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Louisiana, &c. will make that event sure.

This calculation we know, will be attacked and disputed. Most of it will be contradicted and denied. Assurances of a contrary result will be given, in the most positive manner, and under every form which may impose upon credulity. All this is of course. It is not to be expected that our adversaries will admit the probability of our success. This address is not intended for them. It is designed for the friends of General Jackson; and its purpose will be fully answered, when it shall have solemnly assured those friends that the opinions here expressed are honestly and conscientiously entertained. We warn them against giving credit, either to positive assurances of success and triumph on the other side, in this quarter, and in that; or to the numerous reports, charges, accusations, and calumnies, which are to be looked for, to be forthcoming through the Summer and Autumn.—Steady confidence and steady efforts are necessary, in the present state of things, and steady confidence and steady efforts be assured, will conduct us safely and happily through the crisis. In July, the election of members of Congress will take place in Louisiana. Her sentiments will be then again expressed; and we are willing to hear her sentiments. In August, the great contest in Kentucky will be brought to an issue; and we are willing also to hear the voice of Kentucky. In the mean time, let every man guard himself, and assist to guard the public, against delusion and imposition.

It will be seen, that, in the foregoing estimate, nothing has been said of Illinois, where the question will be earliest contested, and which at this moment may be pronounced to be a sure State; no details have been referred to about Virginia, in which State there is a large and rapidly increasing party, thoroughly opposed to the election of Mr. Adams, embodying great worth, intelligence, and respectability; and conducting the controversy with spirit and activity. Nor has much been said of Pennsylvania. An attempt, a very feeble one, has been made to shake Pennsylvania, but she remains firm as her mountains—her vote is undoubted.

Nor have we said much of North Carolina, one of the most unobtrusive and respectable States of the whole Union. She is naturally among the very last to vote for Mr. Adams, such a vote would be opposed to her whole character and her whole history. There is nothing in it to gain her, there is much reason to hope that she will, herself, take the same view of what is due to her own steady and uniform character. That Gen. Jackson triumphs in that state, is beyond doubt or question; and, although the character of this address requires, that no ground of hope should be too strongly stated, nor any expectation raised which is likely to be disappointed, we cannot refrain from saying, that recent information places North Carolina near to, or at the head of, those States, which are most certain for the man of the people.

Justice to the cause, and to those who have espoused it, requires, that, on this occasion, it should be mentioned with respect and gratification, that electoral tickets favourable to the General, have been formed in Maine, New-Hampshire, Indiana, Ohio, and some other states claimed as administration.

There is one other point of view, in which the general subject may be usefully examined. We have stated what states are considered as reasonably certain for General Jackson, what probable, and what more doubtful. If we now take the same survey of the prospects of Mr. Adams; what are they? Allow him the votes of New England, altogether not exceeding 51, and he is in possession of every thing which he can hope to enjoy without a contest. Not one vote south of the Potomac can he receive. If he gains Ohio, it will be only by a great struggle.

In thus surveying the different states, one striking truth is fully established, which it is material to notice. It is this; that, were the electors to be chosen, throughout the whole Union, in one uniform mode, whatever that mode might be, General Jackson would have a most triumphant majority.—This, we think, can be made evident and unquestionable. If such uniform mode were to be made by General Ticket in every state, he would not, in that case, lose one vote which is now expected for him; while the entire suffrages of New-York, added to what is already secure, would put him far ahead of all competition. On the other hand, if that uniform mode were to be by Districts, in all the States, he would be certain, of receiving more votes in New England and New Jersey, than he could possibly lose by the change in all other States; and thus his majority be greatly increased. This affords the cheering inference, that a majority of the Electors of the United States are favourable to the cause of the venerable Patriot. We believe this is so; and that, if the whole country could be polled to-morrow, he would have a decided & vast majority. [Remainder unavoidably omitted.]

MARRIED, on the 12th inst. by the Rev. Wm. Quinn, Mr. TUBMAN DRYDEN to Miss SARAH RIGGIN, both of this county.

On Sunday last, by the same, Mr. WILLIAM WEBB to Miss PRISCILLA SCOTT, all of this county.

STATE OF MARYLAND, SC.

Somerset County Orphans Court.

June 10th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Isaac T. Mar-
§§SEAL.§§ shall, Administrator of Jacob Mar-
§§§§§§§§§§ shall, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of JACOB MARSHALL, late of said county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 29th of December next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 10th of June, 1828.

ISAAC T. MARSHALL,
Adm'tor of Jacob Marshall, dec'd.

June 17, 1828. k

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Venditioni Exponas issued out of Somerset county court, at the suit of Henry Lankford, administrator of Pierce Riggin against Henry J. Riggin; by virtue of two writs of Fieri Facias, one at the suit of Elizabeth J. C. Stewart by William Miles her guardian, one do. at the suit of Mary A. Stewart by William Miles her guardian; by virtue of six writs of Fieri Facias issued by Burton Cannon, a justice of the peace for Somerset county, to wit:—one at the suit of Levin Tiler, executor of Samuel Milborn, 1 do. at the suit of Isaac Riggin, administrator of Nancy Riggin, 2 at the suits of Roland Bevins, 1 do. at the suit of James Stewart, 1 do. at the suit of Robert Lankford; by virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by William Costen, a justice of the peace for Somerset county, at the suit of Richard H. Samson, at the use of James Samson, at the use of Burton Cannon, all the above writs against Henry J. Riggin, and to me directed, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—One negro man Jim, 1 do. woman Ann, 1 do. Nelly, 1 do. Esther, 1 do. boy Dave, 1 do. girl Margaret, 1 do. Case, 1 do. Jane, 1 do. Eliza, 3 head of horses, 2 yokes of oxen, 4 head of cattle, 20 head of sheep, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 3 pine do. 1 stand, 1 lot of earthen ware; 1 dozen chairs, 1 safe, 2 trunks, 1 lot of knives and forks, 1 grind stone, 1 hand mill, 1 wain cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat fan, 1 lot of casks, 1 cider mill, 1 cross-cut saw, 1 hand do. 9 ploughs, 3 harrows, 3 axes, 1 lot of iron, 150 bushels of corn, more or less, 14 stacks of fodder, more or less, 1 lot of flax in the straw, 2 pair of and-irons, 3 ox yokes, 3 ox chains, 6 hives with bees, 1 lot of tin ware, 1 lot of cooper's ware, 1 looking glass, 2 guns, 1 tract of land called Gray's Purchase, containing 100 acres, 1 do. Dudly, 50 acres, 1 do. Rawley Hill, 50 acres, 1 do. part of Unity Enlarge, 43 acres, 1 do. Privilege 30 acres, 1 do. part of Privilege, 20 acres, 1 do. part of Phillips' Conclusion, 200 acres, 1 do. part of Friend's Assistance, 90 acres, 1 do. part of Pasturage, 20 acres, all the above tracts containing more or less acres—which I shall proceed to sell at the court-house door on TUESDAY the 8th of JULY next, between the hours of 12 and 4 o'clock, P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writs.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

June 17, 1828. wp

A Camp Meeting for Annamessex Circuit

Will be held on Deal's Island, JULY 17th. Persons going to this meeting with horses will provide themselves with provender for them, as it is difficult to obtain any on the island. June 17.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY multiplies the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FROM ZION'S HERALD.

THE PILGRIM.

"Whither, pilgrim, dost thou roam?
Weary pilgrim, tell me where;
Why forsake thy native home
For the traveller's dearly fare?

"Have thy bosom friends betray'd thee
In the evening of thy day;
And a lonely pilgrim made thee,
From thy country—far away?

"Or for safety dost thou flee
To some land of calm repose?
There, in sweet serenity,
All thy weariness to close?

"Oh, for safety I am fleeing—
Friend, for such I think thou art,
Listen to my story—seeing,
It will ease my anguish'd heart.

"Born to affluence and ease,
Neither father nor ma I fear'd;
Cheer'd by every fav'ring breeze,
I my bark in safety steer'd.

"Till at length the tempest rose,
Sweeping desolation round;
All my pilings in its throes,
I a helpless wreck was found.

"Friend by friend was torn away,
One by one my comforts fled,
All my prospects blasted lay—
None to ease my aching head.

"Thus in wretchedness I roam'd,
Not a friend to give relief,
And my anguish'd spirit groan'd,
In the agony of grief.

"While forsaken and forlorn,
Reckless of my future doom,
Then my thoughts were upward borne
To the joys beyond the tomb.

"On the first repentant sigh
That escap'd my troubled breast,
Kindly pass'd the Saviour by,
Bade me live and go at rest.

"Now for safety I am fleeing
To my home beyond the skies,
There to spend an endless being;—
There the land of promise lies.

"Thither, thither do I roam,
Thither, thither do I fly;
Heaven, O heaven is now my home;
There my only treasures lie."

NATURAL HISTORY.

The Whilt-Bear of the United States.

The white bear is the only wild beast of these regions that is dangerous. He almost always attacks the traveller, and when hungry never fails to do so. One of these animals, last year, rushed into the canoe of two Bois-brules, while they were resting near the bank, and seizing one of them dragged him into the forest, whilst the other who was musket-shot wide-awake, was totally disabled from following after him. Fortunately, however, a party of Indians were hunting near the spot, who ran to his assistance and killed the bear while still grasping his prey. The unfortunate Bois-brule was merely wounded, and gave me the recital of the circumstance himself and likewise sold me the animal's skin. The black bear, on the contrary, is extremely timid, and always on the approach of man betakes itself to flight. Next to the buffalo it is the most valuable of all animals to the Indians. Its skin gives them a bed, its tendons, even its nails, and teeth, are all convertible to purposes of utility.

Nature has distinguished this animal by peculiar characters. He feeds entirely on fruits during summer and autumn, and it is at those seasons that the Indians go in search of him in places where fruits are abundant, and destroy him. When the cold weather commences he proceeds to hide himself in the hollow of a tree, or in a hole which he digs for himself in the ground. Here he remains motionless apparently under the influence of the soundest sleep, for the whole winter. He sustains himself by sucking his paws, from which the fat with which his body is covered seems to pass for his nourishment. The Indians discover his abode sometimes by means of dogs which scent him, sometimes by the place which his breath marks in the snow, and they destroy him without his making the least resistance or even motion, so that a simple pike or lance is sufficient for the purpose. In the spring, the season when he quits his den, he in the first place exerts himself to regain possession as it were of those natural powers which have remained suspended or paralyzed during the winter. He cleanses himself by purgative and diuretic simples, which nature points out to him with more exactness than they are indicated by our physicians and botanists. As, however, so long abstinence, and this new feeding purgation, must necessarily have weakened his stomach, and it is consequently necessary for him to follow a light regimen, he commences with fish.

The manner of he conducting his fishing is truly extraordinary. Sitting on his hind paws on the bank of a river or a lake, he continues as perfectly motionless that he might be mistaken for a burnt trunk of some tree, which frequently happens. Armed with the keen and practiced eye of an Indian himself. With his right paw he seizes with incredible dexterity and skill the fish which unsuspectingly pass under his eyes, and throws them on the bank. When he has obtained a plentiful supply for his table, he regales himself on a portion of it, and conceals the rest, that he may save recourse to it as appetite serves through the day; he appears perfectly to know that morning and evening are the fit times for fishing. He afterwards proceeds to a more substantial fare, to the flesh of beasts which he hunts or finds dead, and at length returns to his diet of fruit. Thus at successive periods of the year, he is a piscivorous, carnivorous, and frugivorous animal.

From the Philadelphia Aurora.

We have before us the April number of the American Medical Recorder. The very honorable distinction which this work has acquired in the profession for whose use it is principally designed, renders it unnecessary to say more than that a new number believed to be not unworthy its predecessors, is offered to the public. We shall leave the work for the present, after making a short extract. Every one has heard of the unfortunate James Hadfield, who fired a pistol at George III. The following account of him, copied from "Archives Generales," December, 1827, will no doubt be interesting. There is a particular department in Bedlam allotted to those maniacs who had escaped capital punishment. The report states:

"One of those detained here is Hadfield, about sixty years of age, small, lean, speaking with vivacity, remarkable for the mobility of his physiognomy. Although many scars received in battle render still more singular, who thirty years ago, at the theatre, discharged a pistol at King George, the ball passed over him. It being proved that Hadfield was in a state of alienation, he had manifested but symptoms of it, the jury acquitted him, and he was confined for life. He is now in that part of Bedlam which is occupied by persons of the same description. His air is frank and his manners polite.

He has embellished his cell with a thousand objects, whose form and original disposition denote him to be a man who is able and industrious, in inventing every thing that can beguile the tediousness of his captivity. He is quick and passionate, yet he is never disorderly, and he tranquilly submits to every thing. From the time that he committed this crime to the present, he has scarcely given any sign of madness; but some years since, without any known cause, he suddenly became so furious, that his attendants were obliged to bind and confine him. This was, however, of a short continuance, and was followed by the healthy condition in which he still remains."

INTOXICATION.

The laws against intoxication are enforced with great rigor in Sweden. Whoever is seen drunk is fined for the first offence three dollars; for the second six; for the third and fourth a still larger sum; and is also deprived of the right of voting at elections, and of being appointed a representative. He is besides publicly exposed in the parish church on the following Sunday. If the same individual is found committing the same offence in the parish, he is shut up in a house of correction, and condemned to six months' hard labour; and if he is again guilty to a second misdemeanor of a similar description. If the offence has been committed in public, such as at a fair, at an auction, &c. the fine is double; and if the offender has' made his appearance in a church his punishment is still more severe. Whoever is convicted of having induced another to intoxicate himself, is fined three dollars which sum is doubled if the drunken person is a minor. An ecclesiastic, if he should fall into this offence, loses a benefice if it is a bishop who occupies any considerable post his functions are suspended, and perhaps he is dismissed. Drunkenness is never admitted as an excuse for any crime; and whoever dies, while drunk, is buried ignominiously, and deprived of the prayers of the church. It is forbidden to give, more explicitly to sell, any spirituous liquor to the servants, journeymen, apprentices and private soldiers. Whoever is observed drunk in the street or making a noise in a tavern, is sure to be taken to prison, and detained until sober, without, however, being on that account exempted from the fines. Half of these fines go to the informers; who are generally police officers, the other half to the poor. If the delinquent has no money he is kept in prison until he has worked out his enlargement. Twice a year these ordinances are read aloud from the pulpit by the clergy, and every tavern keeper is bound under the penalty of a heavy fine, to have a copy of them hung up in the principal rooms of his house.

The Seven Churches of Asia.—Of the Seven Churches of the Apocalypse, founded in Asia by the Apostles, hardly a vestige remains. Smyrna, Ephesus Pergamos, Sardis, Thyatira, Laodicea, and Philadelphia (see Revelation Chap. II. and III.) with all their power and magnificence, have fallen into utter decay, except that the first mentioned city remains a port of commercial consequence. But Ephesus is a mere heap of ruins: Pergamos has a population of 1600 Greeks, among 15,000 Turks; Sardis, once the splendid capital of Lydia, is a few mud huts; Thyatiras (now Ak-hissar) lies only one miserable Greek church; Laodicea (now Eski-hassar) is a Turkish village, near diseases and scattered fragments of ancient architecture and sculpture; and Philadelphia (now Alla Shar) has been shaken into dust by wars and earthquakes.

From the New England Farmer.

Insectivorous Birds.—These are to the farmer and gardener of great value. They were designed by the Creator to check the too great increase of insects; and no farmer ought to suffer them to be wantonly destroyed on his premises. The number of insects destroyed by the robin, swallow, blackbird, and other small birds, is astonishing. One little family of robins, a few years ago, hundred of insects in a day. Some time since, a pair of these robins built their nest on a tree, which grew close to my window. The little society was closely observed. When they had gained sufficient strength, both parents were mutually and incessantly employed in collecting small insects from every quarter, and on a moderate calculation, to the number of seven hundred a day.

One great cause of the increase of so many insects, so destructive to vegetation, is the decrease of those little friends of the agriculturalists. Should a few of them innocently trespass on the property of the farmer, to the amount of a few cents, let him remember that he is greatly indebted to them for services rendered, and not wage a war of extermination.

They are not merely useful in destroying insects—for they call the farmer and the gardener to their business—cause the groves, to resound with music, and usher in the morning with melodious praises.

From the Maine Republican.

On deep ploughing—the management and application of Vegetable and Animal manures.

BY JOHN MARK POWEL, ESQ.

I have seen instances by greater skill lime and deep ploughing, a farm, made sterile by a series of the most exhausting crops, which the acquisitive Romans could suggest. I am not ignorant of the objections which have been urged against deep and, not less ingeniously supported against breaking the "pan" and reversing the sub-soil; but I have seen fair instances, where ultimate success has not attended deep ploughing, in a judicious course of management, except on arid sands. I have turned up sub-soils, of different hues; mixed with substances, varying, from tenacious clay to loose gravel, or sparkling sand, and have found, that those who condemned my "burying fertile mould beneath sterile clay," confess that at the end of five years, I obtained great crops, by means of deep and fine tilth, from a chestnut ridge, and gravel knoll, originally covered with barren oak and cedar trees.

I have never had apprehension of the loss of animal manure by sinking, as its component parts are generally soluble in water, as to cause them to be left by filtration sufficiently near to the surface for all other purposes; but I have had many motives to guard against its escape by evaporation, and therefore invariably deposite it deeply, and generally in its freshest state, beneath the surface of the land. My experience during nearly twenty years has taught me, that in this climate, where the exhalations of the sun during one season, the influence of wind, the effects of melting snow, and torrents of rain, during another, upon a surface made impervious by frost almost to the edge of an age, leaving a surface of clay, or other composed of calcareous matter, should seldom be applied. Old pastures remarkable for the excellence of their herbage, or grass lands within the reach of large towns, may be profitably enriched by the application of animal manure to the surface in the spring, when the soil is open, and the grass by pushing forth its leaves, soon affords some protection, from the sun, whilst they imbibe to a certain extent, the fertilizing principles, passing off in a gaseous form.

The expedients which the decrees of fate and the decrees of laws, have coerced certain Europeans to adopt, cannot for ages become profitable to this farmer (acting generally for his own soil; and the laborer is paid, and protected, as being worthy of regard, the wages of his hire. Compost heaps, in certain situations, may be advantageously formed. In very few would the repay the cost of chopping, turning, and scientific commingling, without noticing the loss, in this climate, at each operation, of animal matter, by the escape of its volatile parts—not the least essential of which it is formed. I am satisfied, that animal manures should, if practicable, be applied in their freshest state—that where this cannot be done, they should be covered with earth, and exposed in the fold yard, to the treading of hoofs, in order, that the mass may be made compact—the air be excluded—and consequently, decomposition retarded, until its influence shall be directly required, to stimulate plants, and enrich the soil.

I should be unwilling to shake off some of the prejudices, which we have imbibed, with our mother tongue: but although I do not object to out a heavy cloth coat, in an August day, after a foreign winter fashion, I am not prepared to remain a colonist in thinking, that we cannot manage our farms, without European precedent or rule.

If any man were to cultivate a large farm in this state after the most approved scientific mode, which the agricultural Doctors would have us adopt, he might expect to have an empty barn, and ere long light purse.

Science is essential to agricultural art; chemistry and the slippery turn; cooking is a chemical process yet I should be unwilling to be fed with oven from the laboratory of the great Davy himself, unless he had been practised in seasoning his broth, even with the aid of the whole college of physicians, it were essentially compounded, as Smollett's feast of the ancients, and served in classic vases of gold.

JOB PRINTING
NEATLY EXECUTED AT THIS OFFICE
Handbills, Cards, Blanks
PAMPHLETS, &c.
Thankfully received and promptly executed, do modest prices.
At the Office of the Village Herald.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, I shall proceed to sell at public vendue, on the premises, on Tuesday the 27th day of May, 1828, at 1 o'clock P. M. the following property, to wit:—

Ten Thousand Dollars.

SCHEME.

1 prize of	$10,000 is	10,000 Dolls.
1 prize of	2,000 is	2,000 Dolls.
1 prize of	1,000 is	1,000 Dolls.
2 prizes of	500 is	1,000 Dolls.
5 prizes of	100 is	500 Dolls.
10 prizes of	100 is	1,000 Dolls.
20 prizes of	50 is	1,000 Dolls.
20 prizes of	30 is	600 Dolls.
100 prizes of	10 is	1,000 Dolls.
200 prizes of	5 is	1,000 Dolls.
4000 prizes of	4 is	16,000 Dolls.

4367 pr's, amounting to 85,000 Dolls.

Only 5,000 Tickets in the Scheme. The 10,000 dollar prize will be part payable by 1600 tickets, and the 1000 inclusive, valued at 2500 Dolls.

Whole Tickets, $4 | Quarters, $1.00
Halves, 2 | Eighths, 50

To be had in the greatest variety of Nos. at

COHEN'S OFFICE

114 Market-street, Baltimore, Where have been the Great Prizes of One Hundred Thousand Dollars each were sold in former Lotteries, and where now the Capital Prizes have been at any other office in America.

ORDERS either by mail (post paid) or private conveyance, enclosing the Cash or Prizes, will meet the same prompt and punctual attention as if on personal application.

Address to
J. I. COHEN, Jr. & BROTHERS,
Baltimore.

Balt. June, 1828. 10tc

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

ON application of Levin W. Barly, Administrator of Daniel Vance, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, has obtained from the Orphans Court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of David Vance, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of December next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of May, 1828.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

June 10 — 4tc

COHEN'S OFFICE.—Baltimore.

24 Class Maryland State Lottery, for 1828. To be drawn in the city of Baltimore on WEDNESDAY, 25th JUNE, inst.

THE MONEY PRIZE,

Ten Thousand Dollars.

SCHEME.

1 prize of	$10,000 is	10,000 Dolls.
1 prize of	2,000 is	2,000 Dolls.
1 prize of	1,000 is	1,000 Dolls.
2 prizes of	500 is	1,000 Dolls.
5 prizes of	100 is	500 Dolls.
10 prizes of	100 is	1,000 Dolls.
20 prizes of	50 is	1,000 Dolls.
20 prizes of	30 is	600 Dolls.
100 prizes of	10 is	1,000 Dolls.
200 prizes of	5 is	1,000 Dolls.
4000 prizes of	4 is	16,000 Dolls.

4367 pr's, amounting to 85,000 Dolls.

Only 5,000 Tickets in the Scheme. The 10,000 dollar prize will be part payable by 1600 tickets, and the 1000 inclusive, valued at 2500 Dolls.

Whole Tickets, $4 | Quarters, $1.00
Halves, 2 | Eighths, 50

To be had in the greatest variety of Nos. at

COHEN'S OFFICE

114 Market-street, Baltimore, Where have been the Great Prizes of One Hundred Thousand Dollars each were sold in former Lotteries, and where now the Capital Prizes have been at any other office in America.

ORDERS either by mail (post paid) or private conveyance, enclosing the Cash or Prizes, will meet the same prompt and punctual attention as if on personal application.

Address to
J. I. COHEN, Jr. & BROTHERS,
Baltimore.

Balt. June, 1828. 10tc

FOR SALE.

THE subscribers offers for sale the following valuable property, situate in Worcester county, on the Pocomoke River, called The Island Farm, containing 200 acres, more or less, about 50 acres of which are in good state of cultivation. The improvements are a dwelling house, and out buildings with a good SAW and GRIST MILL, both in excellent order, and a young orchard. About 100 acres of the land is in a good state of cultivation.

There is on one part of the above property, an abundance of Iron Ore, which would warrant the erection of a Forge, and prove an object of value to a purchaser acquainted with, and calculated for, such an undertaking.

The terms of sale will be—one third down, and 3 years for the payment of the balance. For further particulars apply to

JOHN MORRIS.

April 22 — 3d

VALUABLE PROPERTY

AT PRIVATE SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM, situated at the mouth of Wicomico Creek, in Somerset county, Md. adjoining the lands of Mr. Kibble's. The improvements are a dwelling house, with necessary outbuildings—A peach orchard containing 1000 trees—Also, a good apple orchard.

Vessels of a large burden can come within 20 yards of the house.

The crops of corn and wheat on the farm will be sold with the land—There are about 12,000 of the finest of the latter about forty bushels were town.

For further particulars and terms apply to JOSHUA MORRIS.

May 20, 1828.

PROPOSALS

For publishing in the City of Philadelphia, Pa.

THE PRACTICAL

FARMER'S MAGAZINE,

OR

Agricultural and Literary Gazette.

THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE is designed to contain information drawn from Authentic Sources relative to the management and management of remarkable Farms, sources of manure, number and kind of Stock, farming utensils, implements, fairs, &c. Agricultural Improvements; drawings and descriptions of Useful Inventions; critical notices and reviews of such publications as may tend to the interests of the Husbandman: improvements in the breed of Domestic Animals; accounts of such Foreign and Domestic trees, shrubs, vines, plants, seeds and grains, as are considered necessary or useful to the Agricultural Department, with Information relative to their treatment, growth, requisite soils of soil, &c. &c. Nothing will be wanting in every way tend to increase the product of the soil, and advance the Rural Economy of the country.

Attention will always be given to such Reports, Addresses and Papers, as may be communicated to the Agricultural Societies of this and other states.

A Land Register will contain as far as practicable, a list of farms, which are now, or may hereafter be, For Sale, account of their situation, price, quality of soil, and other particulars as may be deemed Useful.

Space will be afforded the Solid Sciences, and Elegant Arts, as the interest is so full and conclusive to establish this point, that we do not believe, that any man of intelligence and reflection, can be certain a doubt. We can see nothing in his subsequent conduct that can possibly be construed into a desire to act the part of a fair, open, conscionsness of innocence. "Reproaches and inquiries," says the most eloquent of orators, "are the arrows, which have no power to afflict either the man of unblemished integrity or the abandoned profligate. It has been stated, that a public character, that alone is Vulnerable; the man who without firmness enough to meet a disgraceful charge, has yet feeling enough to be ashamed of it." The union of Mr. Adams and Mr. Clay, is equalled by nothing in the history of the Republic, unless it be the mysterious conversion of John Q. Adams to democracy. The most deadly animosities, the most bitter, virulent, personal contests, have thrown into one common grave, and the Coalition of December next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 24th day of May, 1828.

JACOB W. BAYLY, Adm.
of D. Vance, dec'd.

June 3d, 1828.

FOR RENT,

FOR the ensuing year or for a term of years, the FARM on Little-Monie, now occupied by Mitchell Phelps. For terms apply to

JAMES POLK,

June 3, 1828. tfc

NOTICE.

ALL persons indebted to the subscriber are respectfully requested to come forward and settle their accounts by paying the cash, before the 15th of June next. The subscriber is compelled to this course from the peculiar situation of his affairs. He returns his grateful acknowledgments for the very liberal patronage with which he has received from the public, in his line of business, and solicits a continuance of the same, as he will continue to use his utmost to render universal satisfaction. The public obt. serv't.

THOS. R. DISHAROON.

Snowhill, May 27th, 1828.

N. B. Those of my customers, whom I have not seen during September last, are requested to remit me the amount of their accounts and thereby prevent the addition of cost. T. R. D.

SINCLAIR & MOORE,

Pratt-St. Wharf, Baltimore

HAVE in store—Millet, Lucerne, early Corn, bunch pole & soup Beans, a large assortment for planting, and garden seeds generally.

PLOUGHS.

amongst which are the much approved self-sharpening point Plough—By turning and reversing each share, the horse has first larger flanches cast share of any other plough, increases as the point is of steel, and when worn by bevelling it is sharpened by filing over. The CULTIVATORS made by Sinclair & Moore, pulverize the ground more effectually, and much deeper than the old fashioned three hoed kind—and by the use of these in the culture of corn, it will repay nearly two thirds of the ploughing.

ALSO, Socket Shovels, Spades, Mattocks and Picks, with handles—spring steel Hay and Manure Forks, WHEAT FANS, & GRAIN CRADLES, with best Waldron Scythes, Garden Tools generally, Wove Wire for Seives, and Mill Screens.

They have just received from on board the brig Hyperion, capt. Forbes; just from Liverpool, a quantity of grain and grass Seythes, (Wright's patent) Sickles, Malcable trace Chains, Straw and Hay Knives, Grass Hooks, Ash Garden Tools, amongst which are spades and other Hoes; Edging Tools, budding and pruning Knives, &c. &c.

For the greater convenience of those who use our PLOUGHS in Somerset, we have appointed Messrs. JOHNSTON & SUDLER, of Princess-Anne, our agents for the sale of them, who will constantly keep a supply of the different kinds at our prices. S. & M.

WEAVERS' BRUSHES,

Reeds and Shuttles,

Wash and cake boards,
Sifters, Lamp and candlesticks,
Mindillers, and lime squezers,
Pound, half pound and quarter pound Butter Prints, of various patterns—
Weavers clays or reeds,
Shoe, sweeping, dusting and other brushes,
Twine and cord, patent taps
Glass, for reed makers
Humming and common tops—
Best of shoe thread, Tacks, and rosin
Lamp wicks, assorted sizes, by the dozen or gross—
Spiggots and fossets, suitable for kegs, pails, barrels, kegs, and hogsheads
Fancy and common bellows,
Potato & turnip mashers, rolling pins
Carpenters' or joiners' chalk lines, &c.

The above articles are offered for sale on reasonable terms, by

VALERIUS DUBERT,
No. 101 Baltimore, between South and Calvert Streets.

May 13th, 1828.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court.

ON application of Levin Walter, Adm'r. d. b. n. of Wm. Walter, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, has obtained from the Orphans court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration, d. b. n. on the personal estate of William Walter, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of December next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of May, 1828.

LEVIN WALTER, Adm.
of W. Walter, dec'd.

June 3, 1828. 4

$35 REWARD.

STOLEN or Ran away from the subscriber, on the day of May, 1827, a BETTY—About 10 or 12 years old, black or nut colour, speaks when spoken to, and lisps in talking. She has a small lump on her neck on her arm; also a scar on top of her right foot, in the shape of a half moon. She is a very pregnant when she went off. Should she be living, it is nearly enough for him to know the will of his creditors, and accordingly proceeded to—and in violation of the express direction of the conditions, derived through an absent Commissioner Tomlinson—the Legislature of Kentucky, did not appear in evidence in the investigation before the Senate of Kentucky, that Mr. Clay had received any printer with a premium of one hundred dollars, and another with thirty, for publishing pamphlets claiming Mr. Clay to be the idol of the western country, with falsehood and with ignorance, and with attempting to sell the birthright of the American people for a mess of pottage! Did it not also appear by more than one witness, that Mr. Clay would not go before the house, said that he was willing to go Gen. Jackson, to come, to be cross-examined by the Committee, but that Mr. Trimble expressly directed that they should not go before, he voted for Mr. Adams in the contest between Jackson and Adams and make Mr. Clay Secretary of State?

With all these facts staring us in the face, it cannot be strange that any one can profess a belief in the pure and uncorrupted elevation of Mr. Adams. We have now succinctly reviewed some of the principal actions of Mr. Adams, previous and having reference to his election in 1825 and we have found him in all the same—a fawning, cringing, political trimmer that will act his sails to suit all winds, will bend his principles to suit all circumstances. But what have his attending acquaintances the learning of which his admirers boast so much; his scientific talents and long experience done for the country? Have they been administering her affairs? We ask for the trophies of his diplomatic skill. We are anxious to discover what stupendous improvements he has made in the financial affairs. The weight of taxation been softened by a diminution of the expenses of government?—Has Mr. Adams performed any services of the kind? The universal answer will be—No! Mr. Adams's weak and culpable negligence of duty has lost for us our colonial trade. His art of finance has ruined our navigation. Mr. Adams's expenditures of the last year exceed the receipts. His wanton and profuse lavishing of the public money is altogether unexampled in the history of his predecessors.

The disbursement of the three years of Mr. Adams's administration are enormous compared with that of the three years immediately preceding it shows an increase of expenditure of $1,000,000.

The "secret service money expended during two years and nine months of the present administration amounts to $40,000 and during the whole eight years of Mr. Monroe's administration, there was paid only $19,000. Follow since, and you will reflect upon these mortifying facts. We confidently hope you will see the necessity of ousting this administration in its career of degeneracy and corruption. The president of the United States at the present time holds in his possession more than 150,000 dollars as a recompence for a journey that he never performed and he has refused to refund the money. Dollars, that Mr. Monroe had unadvisedly forwarded for his use, although Mr. Monroe immediately informed him, that "in his future accounts he ought to keep this deduction in view." But let us turn from these scenes of intrigue and corruption, loathsome as they ought to be to every true republican, to brighter and livelier spots in the history of our country, to happier scenes and recollections more auspicious to the happy destiny that awaits our favored land.

General Andrew Jackson is emphatically a republican of the old school. He is the candidate of the people when he received a majority of their suffrages in 1824. He was now succinctly reviewed some of the principal actions of Mr. Adams, previous and having reference to his election in 1825 and we have found him in all the same—a fawning, cringing, political trimmer that will act his sails to suit all winds, will bend his principles to suit all circumstances. But what have his attending acquaintances the learning of which his admirers boast so much; his scientific talents and long experience done for the country? Have they been administering her affairs? We ask for the trophies of his diplomatic skill. We are anxious to discover what stupendous improvements he has made in the financial affairs. The weight of taxation been softened by a diminution of the expenses of government?—Has Mr. Adams performed any services of the kind? The universal answer will be—No! Mr. Adams's weak and culpable negligence of duty has lost for us our colonial trade. His art of finance has ruined our navigation. Mr. Adams's expenditures of the last year exceed the receipts. His wanton and profuse lavishing of the public money is altogether unexampled in the history of his predecessors.

The disbursement of the three years of Mr. Adams's administration are enormous compared with that of the three years immediately preceding it shows an increase of expenditure of $1,000,000.

The "secret service money expended during two years and nine months of the present administration amounts to $40,000 and during the whole eight years of Mr. Monroe's administration, there was paid only $19,000. Follow since, and you will reflect upon these mortifying facts. We confidently hope you will see the necessity of ousting this administration in its career of degeneracy and corruption. The president of the United States at the present time holds in his possession more than 150,000 dollars as a recompence for a journey that he never performed and he has refused to refund the money. Dollars, that Mr. Monroe had unadvisedly forwarded for his use, although Mr. Monroe immediately informed him, that "in his future accounts he ought to keep this deduction in view." But let us turn from these scenes of intrigue and corruption, loathsome as they ought to be to every true republican, to brighter and livelier spots in the history of our country, to happier scenes and recollections more auspicious to the happy destiny that awaits our favored land.

General Andrew Jackson is emphatically a republican of the old school. He is the candidate of the people when he received a majority of their suffrages in 1824. He was honored with the choice of the house of representatives elected John Q. Adams in open defiance and contempt of public opinion, and notwithstanding the great master, proclaimed to the whole nation in his inaugural address, "that a representative should be the faithful index of his constituents."—That he is the candidate of the people in 1828, we soon hope to see him triumphantly demonstrated. He himself is one of the people.

His fame and reputation stand upon the solid pedestal of his own merits and his own exertions. Every act that the tortured ingenuity of his opponents has hitherto could devise, has been employed to sully the fair fame of this patriot, and wound the feelings of the hero and the patriot, and yet he stands unsullied. Maddened to despertion by the discomfiture of their plans and the exposure of their schemes, they have made attack with all the vindictive malice of demons.

Because he approved the resolution of the Senate of Tennessee, requesting the appointment of six militiamen for daring and outrageous mutiny, for encouraging desertion and plundering the public stores, he has made a powerful enemy was hovering on our coast employing every means to produce mutiny and desertion, and finally succeeded in seeking only a favorable opportunity to attack New-Orleans, he has been slanderously called a "murderer of his soldiers" and has been conclusively shown by official documents, that three of the six months for which they were drafted, had not expired when this outrage was committed.

As he rescued a beautiful and flourishing city, from the ravages of a cruel, pillaging and devastation by his promptitude and energy, he is said to have "trampled on the constitution" of his country, and is turned out of office, one of the heroes of the Revolution, a "military chieftain," although three fourths of his public life he has acted in a civil capacity.

But the poisoned shafts of calumny fell shivered and harmless at his feet; the base calumniators have shrunk from the scorn of their authors with a force proportionate to the violence with which they were directed. The name of General Jackson was the watchword has displayed an unwavering devotion to his country, and an unalterable attachment to our republican institutions. When a child in years was find him baring his bosom against the invaders of our soil, we find him sedulously and ardently co-operating with those master-spirits of the revolution, who ensured to us at their given imminent risks the blessed privileges we now enjoy.

When the hurricane of the revolution had subsided—when the dread blasts of war had been succeeded by the blessings of peace, the youthful soldier threw down the implements of war, and betook the tedious employment of the plough, and family cares. Not Mr. Trimble expressly directed that they should not go before, he voted for Mr. Adams in the contest between Jackson and Adams and make Mr. Clay Secretary of State?

With all these facts staring us in the face, it cannot be strange that any one can profess a belief in the pure and uncorrupted elevation of Mr. Adams. We have now succinctly reviewed some of the principal actions of Mr. Adams, previous and having reference to his election in 1825 and we have found him in all the same—a fawning, cringing, political trimmer that will act his sails to suit all winds, will bend his principles to suit all circumstances. But what have his attending acquaintances the learning of which his admirers boast so much; his scientific talents and long experience done for the country? Have they been administering her affairs? We ask for the trophies of his diplomatic skill. We are anxious to discover what stupendous improvements he has made in the financial affairs. The weight of taxation been softened by a diminution of the expenses of government?—Has Mr. Adams performed any services of the kind? The universal answer will be—No! Mr. Adams's weak and culpable negligence of duty has lost for us our colonial trade. His art of finance has ruined our navigation. Mr. Adams's expenditures of the last year exceed the receipts. His wanton and profuse lavishing of the public money is altogether unexampled in the history of his predecessors.

The disbursement of the three years of Mr. Adams's administration are enormous compared with that of the three years immediately preceding it shows an increase of expenditure of $1,000,000.

The "secret service money expended during two years and nine months of the present administration amounts to $40,000 and during the whole eight years of Mr. Monroe's administration, there was paid only $19,000. Follow since, and you will reflect upon these mortifying facts. We confidently hope you will see the necessity of ousting this administration in its career of degeneracy and corruption. The president of the United States at the present time holds in his possession more than 150,000 dollars as a recompence for a journey that he never performed and he has refused to refund the money. Dollars, that Mr. Monroe had unadvisedly forwarded for his use, although Mr. Monroe immediately informed him, that "in his future accounts he ought to keep this deduction in view." But let us turn from these scenes of intrigue and corruption, loathsome as they ought to be to every true republican, to brighter and livelier spots in the history of our country, to happier scenes and recollections more auspicious to the happy destiny that awaits our favored land.

General Andrew Jackson is emphatically a republican of the old school. He is the candidate of the people when he received a majority of their suffrages in 1824. He was honored with the choice of the house of representatives elected John Q. Adams in open defiance and contempt of public opinion, and notwithstanding the great master, proclaimed to the whole nation in his inaugural address, "that a representative should be the faithful index of his constituents."—That he is the candidate of the people in 1828, we soon hope to see him triumphantly demonstrated. He himself is one of the people.

His fame and reputation stand upon the solid pedestal of his own merits and his own exertions. Every act that the tortured ingenuity of his opponents has hitherto could devise, has been employed to sully the fair fame of this patriot, and wound the feelings of the hero and the patriot, and yet he stands unsullied. Maddened to despertion by the discomfiture of their plans and the exposure of their schemes, they have made attack with all the vindictive malice of demons.

Because he approved the resolution of the Senate of Tennessee, requesting the appointment of six militiamen for daring and outrageous mutiny, for encouraging desertion and plundering the public stores, he has made a powerful enemy was hovering on our coast employing every means to produce mutiny and desertion, and finally succeeded in seeking only a favorable opportunity to attack New-Orleans, he has been slanderously called a "murderer of his soldiers" and has been conclusively shown by official documents, that three of the six months for which they were drafted, had not expired when this outrage was committed.

As he rescued a beautiful and flourishing city, from the ravages of a cruel, pillaging and devastation by his promptitude and energy, he is said to have "trampled on the constitution" of his country, and is turned out of office, one of the heroes of the Revolution, a "military chieftain," although three fourths of his public life he has acted in a civil capacity.

But the poisoned shafts of calumny fell shivered and harmless at his feet; the base calumniators have shrunk from the scorn of their authors with a force proportionate to the violence with which they were directed. The name of General Jackson was the watchword has displayed an unwavering devotion to his country, and an unalterable attachment to our republican institutions. When a child in years we find him baring his bosom against the invaders of our soil, we find him sedulously and ardently co-operating with those master-spirits of the revolution, who ensured to us at their given imminent risks the blessed privileges we now enjoy.

When the hurricane of the revolution had subsided—when the dread blasts of war had been succeeded by the blessings of peace, the youthful soldier threw down the implements of war, and betook the tedious employment of the plough, and family cares. Not

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JUNE 24, 1828.

THE PEOPLE'S TICKET.

For President.

ANDREW JACKSON.

For Vice President.

JOHN C. CALHOUN.

For Elector of President and Vice President of the U. S. for the District composed of Worcester, Somerset, and part of Dorchester counties:

Thomas K. Carroll.

THE MARYLANDER—G. RISTON.

This admirable couple have united their creative powers for the purpose of confuting some remarks made in the V. Herald of the 27th ult. under the head of "Secret Service." But their mode of procedure is the old slang of the Adams press—the ne plus ultra of Coalition logic; i. e. to give an incontrovertible fact the LIE flat—as to the proof, that is with them a matter of no consequence.

The editor of the Marylander says, he was informed that the article above alluded to went to the world with the knowledge of its falsehood. Possibly, he may have been told so, but, that the article was published with such knowledge, is an infamous falsehood—which we believe could only emanate from, and be republished by, such prints as the misnomed Marylander and the got-up S. Iris; and as we stand prepared to prove the circumstances detailed in that article, we continue to believe, that we were justifiable in drawing the conclusions which accompanied the relation of facts which the Marylander and Riston cannot disprove. We never expected that they would acknowledge having received aid from government for the establishment of the Marylander: but from Geo. Riston's saying at this place, that previous to his arrival here he had been in Washington and had an interview with Adams and Clay—Also, that the Marylander, (about which he appeared to be much concerned,) would go into operation immediately—that they were in possession of ample funds, and that an abundant emission would take place—we were led to believe what we expressed under the head of "Secret Service."

As to Mr. Rex (beg pardon—Mr. Riston,) in the first paragraph of his pitiful communication to the Marylander, he says, the article alluded to is "impudent and false,"—Poor fellow! his language is quite in character; but until he prove the circumstances therein stated to be false, we shall consider his assertion most basely unfounded. 'Tis true, he offered to swear on a stack of Bibles as high as Christ church steeple in his vindication—but, if we mistake not [illegible] a profane swearer when founding his asseverations on unasked oaths.

We did not say that Mr. R. acted dishonorably, or that he appropriated any secret service money to his own use—for surely a man who can vend Somerset bank notes need not apply to any of Uncle Sam's funds to fill his coffers.

He also labours to make it appear that the "Princess-Anne partisan" exonerated him from the charge Perhaps, seeing Riston's confusion on hearing it, he spoke ironically, or through compassion jested the noble Baltimore gentleman by way of "high relief."

He concludes his second and large paragraph, by saying, "the said article being prepared," &c. Ah! being prepared? would he have people believe it was known by the "partisan" that such an article was written previous to its publication? If so, he says that which is impudently false.

This subject of good society, viz. G. R. also talks, in the Marylander, about his debtors in Somerset. O fie! we thought he went far enough when he exposed them at this place, and therefore think his last step is too bad!

As we suspect there is something (on the above subject) forthcoming, we shall here conclude for the present time.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

JACKSON AND BURR.

The last Iris, or, Teackle in the last Iris, has again touched on what the minions of power call an "alleged connection of Jackson & Burr." What a poor, miserable, silly, contemptible charge!—Why they do not—they cannot believe it themselves, and they are conscious their readers cannot swallow it! hence they promise "proofs" in "due season." By doing which they acknowledge that the proofs, to substantiate this charge, are yet wanting! This we believe, and they eternally will be wanting—Therefore 'tis useless for them to cry out "Beware of deception"!!! for there is scarcely a man in our state so ineffably stupid as to be deceived by such allegations which have not even the shadow of probability to bear them out. But, it appears that the Iris writer is not altogether incompetent to appreciate his own assertions, for in concluding his piece of pompous diction he says they are "damning facts." Aye, we agree with you here too—Such facts will not only politically "damn" their unrighteous originators here, but what is infinitely worse * * * * * *

"The letter of Gen. Jackson to Gov. Claiborne was dated November 12, 1806, and in introducing it, the Telegraph made the following remarks:

"But a few weeks before the organization of this patriotic corps, and the publication at Nashville, of this patriotic address and answer, Gen. Jackson addressed the following letter to Governor Claiborne of Louisiana, for the purpose of warning him against an apprehended movement upon New Orleans by the conspirators."

Here the date of the address to Gen. Jackson by the Tennessee Volunteers, and his answer, are expressly declared to be a few weeks after November 12, 1806. But to place the matter beyond all doubt, the Telegraph refers to the National Intelligencer of February 11, 1807, Vol. VII. No. 987 from which they copied the address and answer above mentioned. TOPAZ.

COMMUNICATED.

Long wished for about to come at last.

I have just seen a letter to the Clerk of this county, from which I learn that the laws, votes and proceedings of the last session may be expected in a few days.

I have long, very long, waited to see them. I wish particularly to examine the Licence Law, which, as is publicly said here, was drawn by Mr. Gwynn, of Baltimore—and the votes and proceedings thereon—the state of the Treasury and who is fed by pap from it, and many other matters on which I shall make such remarks as my leisure may permit. One of the People.

To the Editor of the V. Herald.

Sir:—It has been veritably rumoured in Princess-Anne, and other parts of the county, that two hogsheads of WHISKEY have been brought down from Baltimore by a person who has no license to retail—That one of the said hhds. is deposited in the cellar of a respectable tavern of this town, and the other at a grocery store near the bridge, for what purpose let the moral and reflecting part of the community judge. What a practical illustration of the sincerity of a certain gentleman who wrote last year under the head of Moral Power, and got subscriptions against treating! The character of "A friend to Order and Decency," (a misnomer) and some others shall receive their proper hue from the pencil of JEOFFRY CRAYON, Esq.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

The following lines are copied from a communication, (published in last Friday's Iris,) signed "Observer."

"There is a strong affinity of sentiment prevailing among the numerous members of the [Methodist] Church, in favour of the present incumbent [Adams]—so that the old adage, "Like Priest like People," is not altogether unappropriate to the case in question."

If the writer of the above paragraph means that the sentiments of the Methodists are "like" those of J. Q. Adams, he must be as ignorant of the doctrines of our Church as he palpably is of vital religion—for no Christian would lend his hand to the furtherance of falsehood so vile as that contained in the communication from which the above paragraph is taken. We, fallen creatures, believe, that if we are ever saved, it must be through the merits of Christ alone; for there is no other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we can be saved.—Hence said the Rev. J. Wesley in his last illness: "How necessary it is for every one to be on the right foundation!

"I the chief of sinners am,
But Jesus died for me!"

How vastly different is this from bearing an "affinity" to the "sentiments" of "the present incumbent," Adams—who, though puffed by designing politicians as the very pink of purity, does not hesitate to play at billiards! which is, perhaps one of the least of the crimes of which he is guilty. In evidence of "the great disparity there is in" the doctrines of our church & the Unitarian (John Q. Adams') faith, I will give an extract from a contrast published in "Zion's Herald," on the 23d of last April. This paper [illegible] land and Maine conferences of the Methodist E. Church, and is devoted to religious intelligence to the entire exclusion of political matter. Here follows the extract:

BIBLE.	UNITARIAN BELIEF.
"And that every tongue should acknowledge that Jesus Christ is Lord.	Jesus Christ being inferior to God, ought not to be acknowledged as Lord.
For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.	How absurd it is to think, that the Godhead could dwell in a body of flesh: it is no such thing.
Believest thou not that I am in the Father and the Father in me?	We do not believe that Christ was ever in the Father."

I have not time to make a further extract, but incline to think that the above is sufficient to show the absurdity of trying to exhibit an "affinity" in the above doctrines. Yet, charity leads me to hope that such is not the object of Mr. "Observer." But, why does he insist on it that a vast majority of our itinerant preachers are in favour of Mr. Adams, when he cannot but know that this has been contradicted by a reputable print on authority fully entitled to credit? I should think that the solitary fact of its having emanated from the forger John Binns ought to be sufficient to prevent any man of veracity or worth from meddling with it. But, suppose, a majority of our preachers were favourable to J. Q. Adams; does it follow that we must implicitly receive this as a criterion by which to form our opinions? I think not. They, as well as other preachers in our church, tell us they were called "to preach the Gospel;" not to study politics,—not to visit dram shops and lounge there and at other places to retail party slang: Consequently, as it does not come within the bounds of their vocation to engage in political affairs, I cannot give credence to the assertion that their opinions "should be solely regarded." The creditable information, however, concerning the members of the general conference is this, viz: nearly every member from the West, where Gen. Jackson is best known, preferred him.

As to the paragraph published by the first Iris, stating that "there is no preacher of the Gospel in Delaware for Jackson," it will be sufficient to state that that also came from J. Binns—Indeed, your last paper gave Mr. Harker's word that he 'would name a Jackson preacher in that state for every one his opponents can name who is opposed to him.'

To conclude, I will state, that the Methodists are not made of wax, consequently cannot be moulded into any shape to suit the political leaders of any party; and I deem it a great shame, in any man, or any set of men, to call upon a whole religious denomination for the accomplishment of a particular political object. A METHODIST.

We received the following communication, after the above was put in type, and not from the same source.

COMMUNICATION.

"Moreover, there is a strong affinity," &c.

The above extract I have taken from the Iris over the signature of "Observer."—The writer endeavours to make the people believe that the Methodist clergy are generally in favour of the election of John Q. Adams.—The whole premises of the "Observer" appear to be taken from the Democratic Press, a paper edited by the notorious John Binns, all of which the Observer knows, to be false—The Conference which was lately held at Pittsburg, was composed mostly of western clergy, that is from Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, where the Methodists are generally in favour of the election of Gen. Jackson—But the effort to deceive the people in regard to numbers is not half so bad as the sentiments conveyed in the above extract. Has it come to this, that a writer shall declare a strong affinity of sentiment between the Methodist church and Mr. Adams who is a Unitarian? Does the Methodist Church hold the same religious sentiments as Mr. Adams? Does it renounce the Saviour and the Holy Spirit, and the whole plan of redemption and atonement? It is a well known fact that Mr. Adams does not believe in the trinity—that he is a Unitarian, who discards every thing in the Scriptures regarding the Deity of Christ and the Holy Spirit—and this is the first time that I ever heard it declared that the Methodist Church held the same doctrines. No Sir, this aspersion on the Methodist church is false; she holds no such creeds, and the Observer has stumbled on a mistake in this ebullition of his religious phrenzy or rather zeal in politicks.

But there is something more, in the extract, equally heterodox. It is an effort to connect Church and State together—whenever this is done it should be met with the frown, & indignation of a free & independent people. "So, that the old adage like priest like people is not altogether unappropriate"—It ought to read thus: "like priest like king"—and then the adage would be correctly quoted, and very appropriate to the views of the "Observer," who it appears wishes to connect church and state, and who, I infer, would be willing to have John Q. Adams as the file leader both in religion and politicks. Yes a King and an established religion. A Methodist.

For the Village Herald.

When the noble and patriotic spirit of freedom fired the bosoms of our forefathers in the "days which tried men's souls," they sallied forth and erected Liberty Poles in evidence of their devotion to Liberty and their detestation of Tyrants.—But the Tories of those days turned up their noses at the patriotic acts of the founders of our Republic, and occasionally huzza'd for King George! At the present time many of the freemen of a respectable number of the federal states are manifesting their zeal in the cause of correct principles and our republican institutions by erecting hickory poles and trees.—This savours of the spirit of our forefathers and we rejoice at it.—But what say the Ebony men to these proceedings? Why, they hoot at them—they say it is not the spirit of nobility—they cannot hear these things because they are in open hostility to corruption and aristocracy—they cry bah! and even the golden calf set up at this place echoes their bleatings! bah! bah!! TOPAZ.

[COMMUNICATED.]

Parodies in part of the Reign of Terror, Jackson Style, &c. in the last Iris, or the False made True.

[illegible]

With the Bargainites, 'tis common to anticipate a military despotism in the event of the election of Gen. Jackson. This is designed to overawe the timid and produce an influence favourable to their corrupt cause.* It seems that Mr. Clay, and many of them, would rather have "plague, pestilence and famine to desolate this happy land, than that blasting disappointment should frustrate their midnight machinations.

*Tom Telescope, an old friend of mine, who now resides in Washington, and who always looked very keenly at things, says that it was all a mistake about the Eagles hovering over the Capital during the inauguration of Mr. Adams—that it was two Buzzards drawn there by the strong scent of corruption.

ADAMS STYLE.—Deject then exaggeratory obloquy below the horizon of your prospect, without the servility of adulation afford openness of ears, sedulity of thought, and stability of attention. But above all, expulse hereditary aggregates and agglomerated asperities which may obumbrate your intellectual luminaries with the clouds of obscurity, or obthurate the porches of your intelligence with the adscititious excrement of critical malevolence.

JACKSON AND WASHINGTON.

Great importance has been attached, by the Adams party, to a vote given by General JACKSON upon the occasion of General WASHINGTON'S retiring from the Presidency, and for that vote, he has been attempted to be held up to the people of this country as one, who was unwilling to pay that respect to General WASHINGTON, to which his life, his character, and his services entitled him. The following which we copy from a well written Circular of the Hon. JOEL YANCEY, of Ky. to his constituents, puts this matter in its true light and exposes the silly attempt of the Adams party to present JACKSON in the light of an enemy to WASHINGTON.

From Mr. Yancey's Circular.

"The enemies of General Jackson are so anxious to vilify and degrade him, because they find him such a powerful rival of Mr Adams in the Presidential contest, that in addition to numberless other charges, they have added that of his being (as they assert) opposed to General Washington. This assertion is destitute of truth. A correct statement of this matter will satisfy every impartial man, that the vote General Jackson gave, was in strict accordance with the republican principles which have uniformly marked and characterized his course. In 1796, when General Washington was about to retire from public life, an address was drawn up by Fisher Ames, a noted federalist, addressed to him, in which many of the republicans of that day were severely censured, indirectly, in consequence of their hostility to Jay's treaty; besides it incorporated a principle to which many of the republicans refused their sanction. Amongst that number was NATHANIEL MACON, Abraham Venable, and Christopher Greenup, old, well tried republicans. They considered it a direct invasion of that republican maxim that rotation in office is the security of our rights, and a sure guarantee of the durability of our republican institutions. The language of the address was in some instances, was fulsome, and in others, at war with the principles for which we contended in the war of the Revolution. The following sentiment extracted from the address, is objectionable, and was so decided by General Washington and the republicans of that day. "We cannot forbear to express the deep sensation of regret with which we contemplate your intended retirement from office." This anti-republican remark was disapproved by Washington, for it was with great difficulty he could be prevailed on to serve longer than four years. And if General Jackson and others had voted for this address, they would have sacrificed their principles to the gratification of a Federal faction, who were seeking the prostration of the Republican party. It is true, that the address was supported by many of the republicans then in Congress, but without properly estimating the principle involved, of unlimited continuance in office. General Washington, after serving eight years, retired, and refused to serve any longer; and his example has been followed by his republican successors, Mr. JEFFERSON, Mr. MADISON, and Mr. MONROE—thereby setting their seal of approbation to General WASHINGTON'S example and General JACKSON'S vote."

The whole amount then of General Jackson's offence in his vote, was, that he tho't eight years as long as any President ought to serve, and he would not play the hypocrite and say that he regretted his retirement from office, when he thought he ought to retire.—Is there any man in the country that does not approve of the example set by Washington; to the Presidents who succeeded him, of serving only eight years? Washington tho't that as long a period as he ought to serve, and General Jackson only agreed with him. Baltimore Republican.

WHOOP! WHOOP!

Glorious administration this of Mr. Adams, for Indians! The following items of expenditures made within the last three years, we copy from the report of the Committee on Retrenchment:

"Paid James P. Denny, Secretary of the Creek delegation, on his own certificate	$1,365 87
Jesse Brown, for boarding of Creek delegation, from Dec. 1825 to April 1826,	3,273 88
J. Tennison, board of M'Intosh's party	1,040
Board of John Crowell, Indian Agent, and three Indians,	146
Paid for boot and shoe blacking for Indians	215
Paid Mority Furst, for taking President Adams' likeness, &c.	1,000
Paid within the last three years for taking portraits of Indians	3,190."

What say you, old Indian-fighters of the West, to the payment of your money for such purposes? Here are $4,459 88 paid for board of savages and one of their keepers at the first and most extravagant Hotel in Washington City! This is not all; but we must pay TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTEEN DOLLARS for blacking their boots and shoes! Why, we thought Indians wore moccasins; which need no blacking.

Here also are $3,190 for daubing pictures of these tawny visitors, besides $1,000 for a likeness of Mr. Adams, to hang up with them! Really this is too much. It is indeed time for the people to awake. If they suffer these things to go on, there is an end to all responsibility in our public officers, and we may give up our money and our rights to be disposed of accordingly to their will and pleasure.—Western Argus.

A good sign—In the recent elections in Virginia, the county in which Mr. Jefferson lived, gave the Jackson ticket a unanimous support. Not a single vote was given for the Adams candidate. The profound respect, entertained by Mr. Jefferson for Gen. Jackson, and expressed whenever an opportunity offered, seems not to have been without its influence upon his neighbours and friends. At a period when his virtues are fresh in their memories, they have taken an opportunity to go hand in hand in support of one whom their illustrious fellow citizens emphatically declared, had "filled the measure of his country's glory."—Lockport Jour.

John Q. Adams's opinion of General Jackson.—In 1822 when Jackson was not a candidate for the presidency, and when Mr. A. could have no motive for speaking otherwise than in truth of him, Mr. Adams said in his letter to the Spanish minister, that General Jackson's "services to this nation ENTITLE HIM to their HIGHEST REWARDS—his whole career has been SIGNALIZED by the PUREST INTENTIONS and the MOST ELEVATED PURPOSES." Why is the note now changed, and Jackson's character and conduct,—conduct signalized by the purest intentions, grossly misrepresented and wantonly aspersed?

[From the New-York Morning Courier.]

A flying Parrot.—We copy the following advertisement from the N. York Enquirer.

"Flew away, on Friday the 6th inst. a PARROT, with red feathers on the throat, that often says, quite distinctly, "Hurrah for Jackson!" A suitable reward will be given for returning the bird to the owner, at 29 Wall-street."

Yesterday afternoon we were much surprised to hear the shout "Hurrah for Jackson!" proceeding from the office of our friend STONE. On examination we saw Poll perched on the window sill, ogling the Colonel uxoriously, and evidently determined to bring him over to the good cause. The Colonel was in an attitude of defence, making divers desperate pushes at Poll, and exclaiming loudly, "Go away, d——n you!" "Hurrah for Jackson!" said Poll. "Go to thunder!" said STONE. Bloodshed was prevented by the interference of the police—Hays seized the culprit, and carried her off, all Broadway heard the shout, "Hurrah for Jackson!" as Poll travelled to the City Hall. "Darn that bird!" said a Jonathan, from Nantucket—"Hurrah for Jackson!" said Poll. On being presented to Justice Hopson, the first inquiry was, "What is your name?" "Hurrah for Jackson!" said Poll. "What do you do for a living?" "Hurrah for Jackson!" Nothing else could he get out of her; she was about being committed to Bridewell, when our neighbour of the Enquirer entered bail for her good behaviour, that she should keep the peace towards the people of New York and William L. Stone in particular. "Hurrah for Jackson!" said Poll, and away she went.

☞ The Ladies' Bible Society of Somerset County will meet on Monday the 7th of July [illegible] in the Methodist Church in Princess-Anne.

LATE AND IMPORTANT FROM EUROPE.

The packet ship Pacific, capt. Crocker, arrived on Monday morning from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 16th May. By this arrival the New York Commercial has received London papers to the 15th inclusive.

RUSSIAN DECLARATION OF WAR.

The long threatened crisis has at length arrived. The die is cast, and Muscovite advances upon the Ottoman.

The Russian Declaration of War, and the manifesto, by which it is accompanied, has been received. It is an extended history of the grievances of which Russia complains and of the negotiations by which she has sought to redress them. It declares that Russia has no ambitious plans, that enough of nations and countries already obey her laws; but that she will not lay down her arms without obtaining her rights. The manifesto premises that the treaty of July 6th shall be observed, and that Russia will co-operate with the Allies to carry it into effect.

The objects of the war on the part of Russia are stated in the declaration to be—to compel Turkey to pay for the expenses of the war, and indemnify the subjects of Russia for losses sustained from the Turkish government, to enforce the due observance of former treaties—and to secure the inviolable liberty of the Black Sea and the free navigation of the Bosphorus.

DREADFUL STEAM-BOAT DISASTER—further particulars.—The following, says the Cincinnati Gazette, was handed us by a young man who came up in the General Pike, and is a correct list, so far as had been ascertained, of the unfortunate sufferers in the Car of Commerce, who had died from the effects of the explosion on that boat, on the 4th inst.

N. Green, engineer; James Pratt, do; Charles Ivers, do; Asa Warren, steward; cabin boy; Peter, (black) cook's mate; one fireman. Passengers, David Saunders, Isaac Smith, D. C. Smith, —— Smith, A. Jessup, G. Jessup, John Collins, John A. Bickett, William Harris, W. Bradley, —— Huntsman, —— Coleman, —— Edmunds, John Barlett.

A gentleman who was on board the above steam-boat two hours after, the accident, states, that it presented a scene of confusion and distress, that cannot be described—twenty-one lay dead on deck; thirty-two badly wounded, and four who were thrown overboard, had not been found. The crew of the boat were generally killed; and most of the deck passengers were either killed or wounded, while every individual who was in the cabin at the time of the explosion, escaped without injury.

[We have conversed with gentlemen who left Louisville some days after the above was published. They inform that intelligence had reached that place that forty one bodies had been interred near the spot where the accident occurred. Nine of the wounded had been brought to the hospital at Louisville; most of them in a dreadful condition—some of them intreating to have an end put to their sufferings: they were chiefly from Indiana and Illinois. The distance from Louisville to the Canadian Reach is about six hundred miles, and it will be some considerable time before we can get all the particulars. Our informant states that it was currently reported that a short time before the accident, the captain stood with his foot on the safety valve, in order to prevent the steam from passing off, as a boat was nearing them. If such was the fact, the conduct of the man is worse than that of the murderer.—N. Y. Commercial Adv.

Maryland Crops.—The Chestertown Telegraph states, that the prospect of good crops of wheat, in Kent County is more flattering than it has been for many years. The same paper has the following paragraph:—Early Harvest.—On the 10th inst. Wm. H. Barroll, Esq. of this place, cut a lot of rare ripe Wheat of about five acres, which was sufficiently ripe, and of large excellent grain, and yielding, it is supposed about 20 bushels to the acre.

We are authorized to announce
Anthony B. Bennett,
Thomas Bayly,
John C. Wilson, jr., and
John J. Davis, Esq'rs.
as Candidates to represent Somerset county in the next House of Delegates of Maryland.

CELEBRATION OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE.

The fifty-second Anniversary of American Independence will be celebrated at B. C. Springs by a number of gentlemen from different parts of the Electoral District. An Oration will be delivered on the occasion, at 11 o'clock A. M. by WESLEY SLOAN, Esq. after which the company will be addressed by Messrs. DENNIS and CARROLL, the candidates for Elector of President of the U. S.
June 10, 1828.

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Joshua Hitch against Thomas Roberts I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: Part of a tract of land called Nelzy, containing 15 acres, more or less, lying and being in Somerset county, and on the county road which leads from Salisbury to Quantico Mills, and now occupied by Abigail V. Cox, which I shall proceed to sell on Monday the 14th July next, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. on the premises for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
June 24 tdc

Notice to Creditors.

The creditors of the undersigned are hereby notified to appear in Somerset county court, in Princess-Anne, on the 1st Saturday after the third Monday in November next, to show cause if any they have why he should not be entitled to the benefit of the insolvent laws of Maryland. LEVIN ABBOTT.
June 9th—24th 1828.

A Camp Meeting for Annamessex Circuit,

Will be held on Deal's island, JULY 17th. Persons going to this meeting with horses will provide themselves with provender for them, as it is difficult to obtain any on the island. June 17.

MR. JACKSON AND MR. ADAMS.

From the Geneva Gazette.

A portion of the coalition presses possess but little claim to credit or respectability, and oft repeated slanders against the character and conduct of Gen. Jackson could [illegible] them have changed their mode of attack, compelled to throw down their former weapons, and to concede to him an incorruptible and spotless reputation, they are now endeavouring to deceive the public into the belief that he is grossly illiterate, and charge him with the monstrous ignorance of not knowing how to spell. This charge against Gen. Jackson betrays most clearly the utter hopelessness and despair of the cause it is intended to subserve. It betrays a degree of malignity and disregard of truth unparalleled in the annals of political warfare. To sustain the charge, these political harpies, the jackalls of the administration, have searched the numerous writings of General Jackson, and in the thousands of his letters, official papers and other publications, have been able to detect two or three instances of bad grammar and incorrect spelling, and some typographical errors of the press. We fearlessly make the assertion, and pledge ourselves to maintain its truth, that upon a candid and strict and critical examination and comparison of the respective productions of these two men the capability, acquirements, and talents for business, of Gen. Jackson, as far as can be discovered from these sources, are decidedly superior to those of Mr. Adams. Indeed, in no other point of view does the former appear to greater advantage over his competitor, except perhaps in unyielding political integrity. On examination, the writings of Mr. Adams will be found to contain as many and much more palpable inaccuracies than those of Gen. Jackson. In comparing their respective writings, it ought not to be forgotten that the productions of Mr. Adams are the elaborate and studied compositions of a Professor of Rhetoric, written in the leisure and retirement of a literati at Harvard University, or while reposing amid the luxuries of foreign courts, a pensioner upon the bounty of our government, which he has slandered and traduced as penurious and ungrateful. The productions of Gen. Jackson, on the contrary, were principally written while engaged in the active and laborious service of his country; frequently amid the din and confusion of the camp, and sometimes in the very heat of battle. When the destinies of his country were suspended upon the prompt and immediate execution of important measures, there was no time for elegant metaphors, rhetorical flourishes, and well turned periods. When these circumstances are taken into consideration, it will be acknowledged by the liberal and candid of all parties, that it is singular indeed that the writings of Gen. Jackson do not furnish more inaccuracies. We do not profess to admire the character of a finished scholar. His style is clear, simple and unaffected; he conveys his ideas in a lucid and intelligible manner, perfectly adapted to the understandings and capacities of ordinary readers in every section of the community. In this respect he presents a striking and enviable contrast to the metaphorical embellishments and ridiculous bombast which characterize the writings of Mr. Adams, and which render many of his productions perfectly unintelligible, that this may not be considered as an idle assertion, we submit a few of the many proofs in possession.

We have before us the celebrated letter of J. Q. Adams to Harrison Gray Otis, published in 1808, containing strictures on Col. Timothy Pickering's address to his constituents, and justifying his own vote in favour of the embargo. This is a studied production, written with the express view to be submitted to the American people and has been considered by the friends of Mr. Adams as one of his ablest and happiest efforts. We extract as follows:

"When one of the senators from a state claims to his constituents that a particular measure or system of measures which received the vote and support of his colleague, are pernicious and destructive," &c. This is really too much for a professor of rhetoric—a measure which has received the vote and support of his colleague are pernicious! We challenge the production from the writings of Gen. Jackson of a more gross inaccuracy, or a more palpable violation of one of the simplest rules of syntax.

Again—"It is but little more than two years since this question was agitated both in England and America, with as much zeal, energy and ability as ever was displayed." This is about as good English as to say, the author of this extract are utterly ignorant of the first rudiments of our language.

Again: "If the voice of reason and justice could be heard, they would say, &c."

Errors like these, for which the professed scholar might well blush, are found interspersed through the writings of Mr. Adams. But the great objection to the writings of Mr. Adams is his peculiar style, which is singularly unfortunate for the official business of government. His ideas are generally involved in obscurity by studied attempts at fine writing, too frequent substitution of words of sense, or by throwing together a [illegible] medley of words, & thus constructing sentences without meaning or wholly unintelligible. In proof of this remark we extract the following from the publication now in use:

"I am not sufficiently confident in the sufficiency of my own wisdom to appeal by a [illegible] application [illegible] the congenial feeling [illegible] one, not even my own native section of the Union."

[illegible] "application" is a surgical term, meaning something applied to a particular part of the body. What idea can be gathered from this sentence? Numerous others of the same character may be selected from this address to the yeomanry of the United States.

A further proof of the truth of our remarks, and one which is certainly a literary curiosity, we subjoin the following letter of J. Q. Adams to William Sullivan, esq. chairman of the Bunker Hill Monument association, in June 1826:

"In presenting you my acknowledgments for the obliging terms with which you have done me the goodness to enclose me the invitation of the Bunker Hill Monument Association to attend the approaching celebration, I have to ask of you the additional obligation that you would assure the association of my regret that my necessary distance from the [illegible] deprives me of the gratification which I should have enjoyed by taking part in this solemn commemoration.

I am with respect,
Sir, your very obedient servant,
JOHN QUINCY ADAMS."

This reminds us of the following anathema which a country schoolmaster uttered against the tories:—"Let them receive for their ration all the humectation which falls during the daily rotation, then they will not disturb the peace of the nation, by its subjugation to the domination of some foreign nation."

Some of the state papers of Mr. Adams are written in a style quite as ridiculous as this.

From the Bangor (Me.) Republican.

Uncle Sam's Extravagance for Horse-keeping.

The committee on retrenchment, appointed by the House of Representatives in Congress, have made a report detailing the "expenditures in the department of State."—It is a long Document, containing the accounts made out in that Department, and showing for what objects the public money, placed at the discretion of Mr. Secretary Clay, has been paid, in the three years of his premiership. It is a curious exhibit of extravagance, and were it not for indignation at such palpable waste and misapplication of the public money, could not be read without merriment.—Our readers, doubtless, all know that clerks are employed in the department of State; but it may not be so generally understood that Horses are also in requisition. In the three years of the present administration, it has cost Uncle Sam $1340, 87—to support the stable where Mr. Clay is chief Ostler. We have no room to give all the items that compose the aggregate; but will remark, that the old gentleman has been singularly unfortunate in his horse dealings. In 1826 he bought a horse of C. W. Boteler, at $70, for the Patent Office. And besides the former stock of saddlery, $66 60 was paid for those articles in five months. In 1827 Uncle Sam bought another horse of John Bettenger for $80; but cantering too hard for the old gentleman's ease, he swapped him away to S. A. Childs, giving $50 to boot—Having a strong propensity to trade, not long after he swapped again, paying a difference of $10 to H. McGee. And just as the old gentleman was comfortably provided according to his mind, some rogues stole "the horse;" and besides infinite vexation, it cost $55 50 to get him back again! Poor fellow—his two beasts this year cost him $565.13. And what is remarkable in his economy is, he frequently buys horses, saddles, martingales, bridles, whips, &c.—but never sells any; and in his tradings he always gives boot but never receives it.

Mr. Clay has also charged the government with several thousand dollars paid for books; without, in most instances, mentioning the kind. We notice however, $40 for "lives and portraits of eminent Englishmen;" and $75 for "Edmondson's Heraldry and Carton's Peerage!"—Now in the name of all that is Republican, what has Mr. Clay to do with Heraldry and the Peerage?—Besides these he has purchased for his amusement, books in most of the sciences and departments of literature—It may be well to inquire how far this useless waste of the contingent fund should be permitted.

Reasons for supporting J. Q. Adams for the Presidency.

Because he was educated in Europe, amongst the sons of Kings, princes and nobles, and consequently understands the art of governing.

Because he has contended that the people are their own worst enemies, and their hostility to monarchy is nothing but a mechanical antipathy to the name of a king or the sight of an innocent ribbon.

Because, he has contended that when the President recommends a measure, the representatives of the people ought not to hesitate nor deliberate, but implicitly succumb to the suggestions of their superior.

Because he voted in the Senate of the United States in favor of a property qualification in a voter, thereby recording himself an enemy to free suffrage.

Because he voted in the Senate of the United States against the abolition of the Slave Trade—thereby recording himself an advocate of the Slave-Trade which has since been declared piracy.

Because he refused to pay the amount of his subscription, 1000 dollars, in a joint stock company, for a turnpike road through Quincy, after said road had been made—thereby cheating the company out of 1000 dollars, through a loop-hole of the law.

Because he suffered to be protested, and refused to pay a note he had endorsed for 187 dollars, contending that as the drawer of the note endorsed by him was a married woman, the note was a nullity in law, and that he would not pay one cent of it; but offered to compromise by paying the half, which offer was rejected by the creditor Mr. Kerr of Georgetown—thereby proving that he will take advantage of any quibble of the law.

Because, during the late war, when a Minister at Ghent, in Russia, he wrote a letter, in which he declared our government weak and penurious with but five frigates for a navy, and scarcely five regiments for an army—divided among ourselves more by passion than principle—with half the nation sold to the enemy by their ignorance and their prejudices—and tauntingly enquired how the Americans could expect to stand before the mass of force which their gigantic enemy, England, was collecting to crush them at a blow.

Because, when a Minister at Ghent, he was willing to barter away the navigation of the Mississippi to the British, for the paltry consideration of the Cod fisheries—thereby proving that he would sacrifice the western country for the sake of a small boon to the Yankee states. This is proved in a pamphlet the publication of which was paid for by Henry Clay,—before he sold himself to J. Q. Adams for the "safe precedent."

Because, when Minister to Russia he charged the United States government several thousand dollars for journies which he never performed—thereby securing by craftiness, what he had no claim to by justice.

Because, he observes a mysterious silence on the subject of the secret charges of treason urged by him against the Federalists of New England, to Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Giles—thereby refusing to substantiate the same.

Because he was guilty of intrigue, management and bargain in securing to himself the Presidency of the United States.—

1. In that he interlined a letter, with his own hand, pledging himself, in case of his election to keep in view the promotion of the Federal party.—See the public prints respecting the Webster pledge.
2. In that he negotiated directly or indirectly to appoint Henry Clay Secretary of State, in consideration of Clay's securing his election by his western influence—Proved by the confession of Trimble, Johnson, Metcalfe—The testimony of Moore, Call, &c.—See the Address of the Central Committee of the District of Columbia in reply to Clay's address.
3. In that he also tampered with the Honorable Henry R. Warfield, a member of Congress from Md., and secured his vote by certain explanations. See the statement of Mr. Warfield to Dr. Zollickoffer, attested by the Doctor's certificate.
4. In that he had a private interview with Henry Clay, which united in a mutual understanding and the securement of Mr. Clay's vote. See the statement of the Hon. Mr. Plumer of New Hampshire in reference to the letter of his cousin Wm. Plumer.

Because, he contends that the representative ought not to be palsied by the will of his constituents—i. e. that the representative is not the servant of the people.

Because he pretended to be in favor of a direct popular election of the Presidency; and afterwards opposed the adoption of such a measure.

Because he has apostatized from both the federal and the democratic parties.

Because he recommends a mission to Panama to improve the moral and religious condition of the Catholics of South America—contrary to the fundamental principle of our government, that we ought not to interfere with the religion of any country.

Because he has neglected the interests of the country—first by the loss of the British colonial trade, and then by the sacrifice of the French colonial trade—thereby depriving the Farmers and Manufacturers of the United States of two important markets for the products of their labor—See the debates in Congress.

Because he has suffered the insults heaped upon the United States flag by the Emperor of Brazil, without resisting them, or laying an account thereof before the people—and pusilanimously made a treaty without first waiting to hear the testimony of the Charge des Affairs who had been driven home by insult. See Conde Raguet's appeal to the people of the United States.

Because he has countenanced a most shameful waste of the public money.—See the reports and debates in Congress late session.

Because he has countenanced the murderous practice of duelling, in his official capacity as President, by suffering Henry Clay, his Secretary of State to challenge and shoot at John Randolph of Roanoke for words spoken in debate in the Senate of the U. States.

Who would not support J. Q. Adams when such recommendations as these can be urged in his behalf? Citizen.

GENERAL JACKSON'S TEMPER.

[From the New-Hampshire Patriot.]

Every tory and amalgamation paper that has been published in the country since the merits of Gen. Jackson have been so deeply felt by the people as to place him before them as the individual most likely to fill the presidential chair after the next election, has teemed with tirades upon the shocking cruel, blood-thirsty temper of that distinguished citizen. And by way of example and encouragement to their allies in this great work of blasting the fame of the great man of whose reputation Great Britain stands in awe, the last London Quarterly Review, the demi-official mouth-piece of the British government, comes out in two or three pages of the coarsest abuse of Gen. Jackson—quite after the fashion of Binns, Moore & Co.

That Gen. Jackson is a person of marked and decisive character is his greatest claim to the confidence of the nation. Never was a man entitled to be relied on in the hour of trial who does not possess that character. In ranging through his long life of public services, it is possible that two or three cases may be found where, sitting by our fire sides without knowing the particular circumstances of the cases, we may be satisfied in our own mind that his course of conduct has not been precisely such as we should have adopted—that we should not have been so hasty—that we should have deliberated more than he did. And is this the manner by which the reputation of public men is to be settled? Is there a private individual in the nation who does not convict himself of similar foibles? Is there a public man who does not stand in the same relation to the rest of the world? To say nothing of Gen. Washington, who was attempted to be removed from his command during the revolutionary war by the intrigues of Lee and Conway on charges precisely similar, or of any other military man, the nature of whose employments renders them particularly obnoxious to such charges—are there no faults of temper discernible in the distinguished civilians of our country?

Take a single instance from that model of all perfection, John Quincy Adams: In consequence of a gross personal affront given by this accomplished diplomatist to Commodore Porter, either through ignorance or design, which the honourable feelings of that distinguished officer would not permit him to overlook without an apology, the ordinary intercourse of civilized life had become suspended between them at the time of the arrival of the "Nation's Guest" at Washington. At the levee at the President's house held in his honor, the eye of the veteran anxiously sought the man whose naval fame in Europe was co-extensive with that of our country. Inquiring if Com. Porter was present, he was informed of the reason of his absence. The chivalrous Lafayette immediately repaired to the residence of Com. Porter, and after expressing his regret that he had not met him under different circumstances, requested the commodore to accompany him to the President's house, where he would take charge of an arrangement between them. The gallant Commodore, placing entire confidence in the honourable views of the venerable soldier, assented—on the arrival of the two heroes at the house of Mr. Adams, what was the deportment of that meek [illegible] POLISHED GENTLEMAN? He [illegible] his back upon them—his hands clenched—his teeth [illegible] and his countenance indicative of [illegible] good nature. This outrage by the President of the Nation to the guest of the Nation, in the palace of the Nation, [illegible] towards a man whose character belonged to the Nation, in the view of every man accustomed to the decencies of civilized society, compared with the conduct of Gen. Jackson, even stated by his enemies in the cases of Dickenson, Benton or Dinsmoor, is like the blackness of midnight! Gen. Lafayette stated he never was so shocked in his life, and Com. Porter immediately left the country under circumstances familiar to all. TACITUS.

Extract of a letter from Nashville, dated May 8th, 1828.

"I have intelligence from Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, and feel satisfied that Jackson will get the votes of all those states. In some the vote will be close but we will succeed. The administration party is becoming desperate to a degree hitherto unknown. In Nashville a few days since, that party composed of all sorts and sizes, could muster, according to their own account, but forty, and in Rutherford county, voting 2700 votes, they could muster but nine men! !

That you may know to what extent the abuse of Gen. Jackson is carried on, I will state some facts, which you may use if you think them worth notice.

Double letters are sent from Boston, from parts of good old Pennsylvania, and some from Washington city, without signatures, containing the most vulgar and obscene language, and allusions to Mrs. Jackson of the veriest blackguardism; sometimes carricatures are sent to him of the most shameless comparison. Forgeries are sent off from this place through the post office to be used against the general at a distance. (Vide Nat. Journal.

Thus when the general is pursuing his peaceful avocations at home, and endeavouring to increase the wealth of the republic by his own labor, contributing with equal zeal to its prosperity in peace, that he did to the success of its triumphant honor and glory in war, aloof from the political foments of the day, and wishing only for the prosperity and happiness of his country, and the perpetuity of its free institutions, to see him thus hunted and pursued by the base minions and wretches, suborned by a dynasty of political vampires, that they may be enabled to suck the remaining blood of the people, is monstrous! what has Gen. Jackson done to merit this from any man who wears in his bosom an American heart? Was it the acquisition of a new state to the Union? (Alabama;) was it the extension of the settlements of Mississippi and Tennessee, by the extinguishment of Indian title by order of his government? was it by annexing the Florida provinces to the republic? was it by the privations and dangers which he endured for his country? was it by the glory and renown which he achieved for her citizens in battle? was it by his submission to the constitution of his country? was it by retiring from office, whenever the emergency which had called him to office had ceased? or rather, is it not because he is the enemy to kings, despots, and usurpers?* because those now in power have acquired it by corruption, and as their title to power depends upon the prostration of virtue and patriotism, will they not try every means to destroy the good and great, and to exalt the vicious, by treason against the rights of the people.—N. Y. Enq.

*His letter to Mr. Monroe relative to Yturbide!

JOHN WOODS, Administration consistency.—General Jackson is represented as a murderer, because he did not pardon Woods a second time. But what is their conduct towards Col. Williams of Tennessee? Why he was appointed charge de affaires to Guatamela among the first appointments of Adams and Co. Yet this same highly favored Col. Williams, was Judge Advocate of the court martial who tried Woods, and refused to recommend him to mercy. Surely the coalition must think their cause desperate, when they rest principally on this point.—But as a pert Chilicothe Lawyer said at the circuit court last summer, "the case of the militiamen is our only string to pull." People's Press.

A prominent republican of the county informed us a few days since, that he had been a uniform supporter of Mr. Adams, till he had read some of the violent attacks on Gen. Jackson, which had been forwarded to him from Washington & other places. "These," said he, "were too much." He thought he knew the character of Gen. Jackson too well, and believed he had done too much for his country, to merit such abuse—and he should henceforth support him.

This is the language of thousands. They were willing to support Mr. Adams, until they saw the character of their country's greatest benefactor wantonly traduced, when they resolved on his protection. [Saratoga Sen.

The Adams men here are so confoundedly ashamed of Mr. Clay's Baltimore speech, that they swear that the extracts about "war, pestilence & famine," are not genuine. They say they will not believe that Clay was drunk or crazy—and as they cannot believe that any man in his sober senses could have uttered such impious trash, they conclude that it must be a forgery of the Jackson party. Boston Statesman.

SHAMEFUL.

In looking over the Adams black book, or report of the retrenchment committee, there is one item which is disgraceful: Page 31.

"Paid for boot and shoe blacking for Indians $215."

There must be some roguery about this. Indians wear moccasins; we never saw one with boots or shoes; and then what a sum for a cabinet to pay, which boasts that they expend the people's money "with an eye to the strictest economy." What can Mr. Charles King say, in defence or explanation of this item.—N. Y. Enq.

Two Signs.—The New York Ithica Journal informs us that the Norwalk Reporter, of Huron county, Ohio, and the Republican, of Plattsburgh, New York, have thrown off the Ebony and Topaz livery, and declared in favor of the People's candidate, General ANDREW JACKSON.

Two more Signs.—The Muskingum Messenger, a very spirited paper published at [illegible] Fayetteville, Ohio, has recently come out for Jackson, and so also has a paper recently established at Millersburg, Ohio. There are sure to be Jackson men where there are Jackson papers; and they are not often established where there are only a few.

Nest Boxes and Barrel Covers.

80,000 Cane, suitable for Reedmakers.
300 Nests Sugar Boxes.
200 Barrel Covers.
100 Butter Prints.

100 groce of Lamp Wick, assorted sizes, Spiggots and fossets, suitable for hogsheads, barrels, kegs, and hydrants, shoe, sweeping, dusting and other brushes, sifters, mudlers, and lime squeezers, fancy and common bellows, pound, half pound and and quarter pound Butter Prints, of various patterns, fishing lines and rods, butter bowls and trays, baskets, wash and cake boards twine, and cord, patent taps, humming and common tops, nests of sugar boxes and tubs, boot & shoe blacking, towel rollers, potato and turnip mashers, rolling pins, carpenters' or joiners' chalk lines, spoons and paddles, trenchers, crabbing and cabbage nets.

The above articles are offered for sale on reasonable terms, by

VALERIUS DUKEHART,
No. 101½ Baltimore, between South and Calvert Streets.
Baltimore, 6th mo. 24. tow

VALUABLE PROPERTY
AT PRIVATE SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM, situated at the mouth of Wicomico Creek, in Somerset county, Md. containing about 300 acres and known by the name of "Kibble's Destiny." The improvements are an excellent two story frame house, necessary out-buildings—with A peach orchard containing nearly 1000 trees—Also, a good apple orchard.

Vessels of a large burden can come within 20 yards of the house.

☞ The crops of corn and wheat on the farm will be sold with the land—There are about 175,000 of the former and of the latter about forty bushels were sown.

For further particulars and terms apply to JOSHUA MORRIS.
May 20, 1828.

FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of disposing of his real estate, being and lying in Worcester county, Md. and situated on Dividing Creek. The landed estate consists of 2000, or more acres. The improvements are a dwelling house and out buildings with a good SAW and GRIST MILL, both in excellent order; also a young orchard. About 100 acres of the land is in a good state of cultivation.

There is, on one part of the above property, an abundance of Iron Ore, which would warrant the erection of a Forge, and prove an object of value to a purchaser acquainted with, and calculated for, such an undertaking.

The terms of sale will be—one third down, and 3 years for the payment of the balance. For further particulars apply to
JOHN MORRIS.
April 22 kd

FOR RENT,

FOR the ensuing year or for a term of years, the FARM on Little-Monie, now occupied by Mitchell Phœbus.

For terms apply to
JAMES POLK.
June 3, 1828. kw

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of the State of Maryland against Peter Bell, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: part of a tract of land called Casqua, containing 200 acres, more or less—part of Casqua and part of Woodfield containing 250 acres, more or less; also a horse and gig, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises on Friday the 27th instant, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 1 o'clock P. M. for cash, to the highest and best bidder to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
June 5—10 jb

PROPOSALS
For publishing in the City of Philadelphia, Pa.
THE PRACTICAL
FARMER'S MAGAZINE,
OR
Agricultural and Literary Gazette.

THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE is designed to contain information drawn from Authentic Sources relative to the improvement and management of remarkable Farms, sources of manure, number and kind of Stock, farming utensils, labourers, dairies, &c.; Agricultural Improvements; drawings and descriptions of Useful Inventions; critical notices and reviews of such publications as may tend to the interests of the Husbandman: improvements in the breed of Domestic Animals; accounts of such Foreign and Domestic trees, shrubs, vines, plants, seeds and grains, as are considered necessary or useful for subsistence, comfort or ornament, with Information relative to their treatment, growth, requisite kinds of soil, &c.; and in short, whatever may tend to increase the product of the soil, and advance the Rural Economy of the country.

Insertion will always be given to such Reports, Addresses and Papers, as may be communicated for publication, by the several Agricultural Societies of this and other states.

A Land Register will contain as far as practicable, a list of farms, which are now, or may hereafter be, For Sale, account of their size, situation, quality and such other particulars as may be deemed Useful.

Space will be afforded the Solid and Sterling Beauties of Literature, the useful arts and science, Chemistry, Natural History and Philosophy, Biography and Travels, states of the Markets in the principal Sea Ports, &c. &c.

TERMS.

The Farmer's Magazine will be published semi-monthly, the price is three dollars, payable either at the time of subscribing, or on receipt of the first number. That form and size has been adopted, which is deemed most convenient for binding, while the quality of the paper, the beauty of the type, (entirely new,) and the general execution of the work, will be such, as it is hoped will reflect credit on the Publishers, and gratify its patrons.

☞ Address (post paid) Thomas C. Clarke, agent for the Proprietors, No. 48, Market St. Phil'a. May 17

JOB PRINTING
Neatly executed at this office.

THE CORNUCOPIA.

"Blending the useful with the sweet."

FROM ZION'S HERALD.

HEAVEN.

Heaven is a world of pure delight,
Where joys spontaneous rise,
No scenes of sorrow there to blight
The glories of the skies;
In all that radiant world is found
No jarring or discordant sound.

Heaven is a world of calm repose
Where weary pilgrims rest;
Where every gentle breeze that blows
Cheers up the fainting breast;
There's not in heaven a harp unstrung,
There's not a note that's left unsung.

Heaven is a world of joys unknown,
A land where angels dwell,
Bending, they stand around the throne,
And notes melodious swell;—
So sweetly roll their years away,
In one unclouded, perfect day.

Heaven is a world where God resides,
His more peculiar seat;
Where Christ in glorious form abides,
Where saints and seraphs meet;—
Meet to unite in one accord
In praises to their common Lord.

Heaven is a world where spirits dwell
Secure from earth born care;
The storms that wreck this lower world
Are hushed to silence there.—
To Heaven, O Father, may we go
When death has laid our bodies low.

THE ODE OF SAPPHO.

Blest as the Gods, me thinks, is he,
Th' enamour'd youth, that sits by thee,
Hearing thy silver tones the while,
Warm'd by the love-exciting smile.

While gazing on thee, fair and blest!
Wild transports heav'd my glowing breast;
My fluttering accents soon grew weak,
My quiv'ring lips refused to speak.

My voice was lost—the subtle flame
Of love pervaded all my frame,
O'er my film'd eyes a darkness hung,
My ears with hollow murmurs rung.

Cold moisture every pore distilled,
My frame a sudden tremour chill'd,
My colour went—I felt decay—
I sunk, and fell, and swoon'd away.

HAPPY PARENTAL DISCIPLINE.

From the Parent's Monitor, by Rev. David Barker. Just published in London.

"The son of a minister, now living, had by some means excited the displeasure of his father. His father thought it right to be reserved for an hour or two, and when asked a question about the business of the day, he was very short in his answer to his son; an hour or more elapsed; the time was nearly arrived when the youth was to repeat his lessons. He came into his father's study, and said, 'Papa, I cannot learn my lessons except you are reconciled; I am very sorry I have offended you, I hope you will forgive me, I think I shall never offend again.' His father replied, "All I wish is to make you sensible of your fault; when you acknowledge it, you know all is easily reconciled with me." 'Then, Papa,' says he, 'give me the token of reconciliation, and seal it with a kiss.' The hand was given, and the seal most heartily exchanged, on each side. 'Now,' exclaimed the dear boy, 'I will learn Latin and Greek with any body;' and fled to his little study. 'Stop, stop,' exclaimed his father, 'have you not a heavenly Father? If what you have done be evil, He is displeased, and you must apply to Him for forgiveness. With tears starting in his eyes, he said, 'Papa, I went to Him first; I knew except he was reconciled, I could do nothing;' and with tears now fast rolling, he said, 'I hope, I hope, He has forgiven me, and now I am happy.' His father never had occasion to look at him with a shade of disapprobation from that time till his death.

From the American Farmer.

MAGNOLIA MACROPHYLLA.

Sir—The magnolia macrophylla one of the most magnificient of our native trees is now in full bloom at the nurseries of D. & C. Landreth, near Philadelphia, and is so truly worthy of notice that I cannot refrain from attempting a description of it for insertion in your columns. The specimen, to which I more particularly refer (for their nurseries contain several of considerable size,) is estimated at upwards of thirty feet in height, and measures three feet above the ground, and eight inches in diameter. The upper surface is smooth, of a light green colour—The under glaucous, form a coating of pubescent, and marked with prominent veins, alternately proceeding from the midrib—and are invariably arranged in clusters of four, or more, near the extremity of the branches.

As respects the flower, it is difficult to give a description calculated to convey an adequate idea of its majesty. Mr. Nuttall, in his "Genera of N. A. Plants" states it to be the largest flower of any other American plant. In the nurseries herein referred to, they generally measure eight inches in length, and when fully expanded, sixteen inches in diameter, giving a circumference of nearly four feet. It is composed of but six petals, white or slightly inclined to cream colour. The three inner ones, marked near the ball, with a purple spot of about an inch square—forming a remarkable contrast with (this excepted) its unsulied purity.

Let the reader figure to himself a tree of the size here named, with clusters of immense leaves, hanging pendant or horizontally, and waving in the air like vast two-coloured wings—the extremity of each branch, crowned with a flower of a size to be individually conspicuous at a distance of two or three hundred yards; and he has but a faint idea of the tree attempted to be described.—The contracted localities in which this tree is found growing indigenously has been remarked by all the botanists who have traversed our continent. Mr. Nuttall says, he first observed it near the banks of Cumberland river, Tenn. but of small size. Michaux observes in his "North American Sylva," 3d half vol. page 263, "In the month of June, 1789, in the first journey made by my father from Charleston to the mountains of North Carolina, I accompanied him, and discovered this tree which he immediately judged to be a new species of magnolia. The spot on which we found this magnificent vegetable is in North Carolina, ten miles south of Lincolnton, and two hundred and fifty miles from Charleston. Our extensive researches in quest of it in the upper parts of the Southern states, and those subsequently made by several English botanists, east of the Alleghanies which were alike unsuccessful, sufficiently prove that it is extremely rare between the mountains and the sea. West of the range in Tennessee, it is more common; but even here only a few trees are found together at intervals of forty or fifty miles, as I had an opportunity of observing during my journey in the western states in 1803.

It is now many years since it was added to the collection of Messrs. Landreth, and is found perfectly hardy; the youngest plants enduring the severest frost uninjured—easily cultivated, and thriving readily in most situations. It is, therefore much to be regretted it yet remains to be generally introduced.

The changes wrought on my vegetables by careful cultivation and attention is too generally known to be necessary to repeat; and the present case is an instance of it worthy of remark. Michaux states that in its native soil, "it does not exceed thirty-five feet in height and four or five inches in diameter." The estimate of the height of the specimen here spoken of is believed to be pretty accurate, and should no accident interfere, it will certainly attain a much larger size, the shoots of each year being strong and vigorous.—The diameter of the tree is from actual measurement. The flowers he also states "when fully blown are sometimes eight or nine inches in diameter;" and a size but about one half which they arrive at in the nurseries herein referred to. D.

Philadelphia Co. June, 1828.

Admirable remark.—One of the best and readiest answers we recollect to have heard, was made last year at the meeting held in Julien Hall, for the suppression of intemperance. A highly respectable gentleman present, had his misgivings about the propriety of making entire abstinence the ground work of reform, and frankly declared that neither courtesy to his visiting friends nor the usage of social life, would permit him to subscribe to this restriction. Among other illustrations to prove that spirits might be often advantageously used, he instanced those authors who were said to draw their inspiration from the bottle, and who wrote best when most intoxicated. He alluded particularly to the supposed declaration of lord Byron, that some of his best productions were written under the influence of gin. The Rev. Mr. Pierpont (we must be excused for naming him in print) in an answer, very happily said, "I very much doubt the truth of the story related of the noble bard: but if it be true Mr. Chairman, I believe he was more under the influence of gin when he made this confession, than when he wrote his poetry!" The effect of this reply was prodigious: notwithstanding the character and solemnity of the meeting, the audience expressed their strong sensations in some rounds of thundering applause.—Philanthropist.

MARTIN LUTHER IN HIS CLOSET.

I cannot (says Titus Theodorus, one of the German Reformers) enough admire the cheerfulness, constancy, faith and hope of Luther, even in these trying times. He constantly feeds these good affections by a very diligent study of the Word of God. Then, not a day passes in which he does not employ in prayer at least three of his best hours. Once I happened to hear him at prayer. O what spirit, what faith, was there in his expressions! He petitions God with as much reverence as if he were actually in the divine presence; and yet with as firm a hope and confidence as he would address a father or a friend. "I know," said he, thou art our Father and our God: therefore I am sure thou wilt bring to naught the persecutors of thy children. For shouldest thou fail to do this, thine own cause, being connected with ours, would be endangered. It is entirely thine own concern: we, by thy providence, have been compelled to take a part. Thou, therefore will be our defence!" While I was listening to Luther praying in this manner, at a distance, my soul seemed to be on fire within me; to hear the man address God so like a friend, and yet with so much gravity and reverence; and also to hear him, in the course of his prayer, insisting upon the promises contained in the Psalms, as if he was sure his petitions would be granted.

From the Baltimore American.

The Philadelphia Quarter Sessions have just decided that a certain John Hodges, or Hodge, had no right to beat the "partner of his bosom," as some men's wives are somewhat absurdly called. They are partners in their vexations, their losses and their wretchedness, and have often an undivided property in their ill usage. The story of Hodge's dame is short and simple; but it is a story after the life. Hodge, after the fashion of his betters, first "abused his spouse by abuses and words." Then falling into a less sophisticated course of action, he beat her "with" his fist, by kicks;" and afterwards, with a caprice that would have done honour to more irritable nerves, in more luxurious stations, "he first turned her out of the house, and complained that she would not come back." Byron could not have displayed a more variable humor, though he might have enveloped it in a better sounding stanza than Hodge had his moments of relenting, when he would politely offer to take back his wife, on condition of her forgiving him. There are some men who think to heal all sores by a few soft words, as the Saxon laws made abuse payable for by a measure of honey.—That Hodge was a sad dog, more worthy "to be forgotten than forgiven," is evident from the fact, that though his spouse consented afterwards "to lodge with him, she had to set up all night at the window, watching for her life." Hodge's counsel objected that a wife is a competent witness against her husband, only in cases of violent beating, or of murder (qu. of the wife?) and that the husband has a right to administer moderate castigation to his wife. But Judge King charged the jury, that "the English rule that a man may correct his wife, is not law in Pennsylvania." In a country where intoxication lends new weight to the "argument ad baculum," which Mrs. John Hodge would translate, "beating by kicks," it is well to take such forcible reasoning out of the hands of every Hodge of a husband.

WIND PUMP.—Captain Brownell, of Boston has invented a machine by means of which 7000 gallons of water per hour can be discharged from the hold of a ship at sea.—It consists, says the Boston Bulletin, in the adaption of the principle of the common windmill, as to supersede the necessity of manual labour at the pumps, while at the same time it accomplishes an inconceivably greater amount of mechanical work. The idea of this invention was suggested to Capt. B. by pure necessity. He was at sea, with a ship so leaky, that in spite of the exertions of his crew, the leak continued to gain upon them for several days in succession. In this emergency he was driven to the utmost exercise of his inventive faculties, and, after repeated trials, when his men had become utterly exhausted and discouraged, succeeded in rigging a rude pump upon this principle, by which means alone he saved his ship and all on board. An experiment has been tried on a brig of one hundred and thirty tons.—A hole two inches in diameter was bored through her bottom, into which the water was suffered to flow to the depth of eighteen inches, when the process of pumping was commenced, the aperture still remaining open. In 50 minutes the vessel was freed, the pumps being entirely drained. The inventor has also contrived a wheel, which, with very little manual exertion, may be applied with great effect to the apparatus in case of a calm, or of accident to the shafts of the vanes. The whole machinery is portable, and may be easily separated and stowed away—the very largest occupying a space of only six feet in length by two or three deep.

Astronomy.—In the month of February, 1825, M. Struve undertook, with the large telescope made for him at Munich, a general view of the heavens, visible at Dorpat—having especially in view the double stars. After two years indefatigable labour he has discovered, that of more than 120,000 stars 3,060 belonged to the first four classes of double stars—whereas the catalogue which he had drawn up in 1820, contained only 500 of this kind. So remarkable an increase in one of the most important branches of the science has induced the University of Dorpat to publish a new catalogue of double stars. This is accompanied by a correct and well engraved chart of the heavens, and by a report with some preliminary and general remarks on the nature of the fixed stars, and the motions of those celestial bodies, the immobility of which was, at no very remote period, taken for granted by all astronomers. Foreign Quarterly Review.

THE HARVEST.

The Western Virginian of the 6th states that "the approaching harvest promises to be one of the most abundant that has crowned the labours of the husbandmen for many years."—The last Petersburg "Old Dominion" says "the wheat, except the portion of it in this section of country, lately inundated by the great fall of rain which we noticed a few days ago, never looked better, and promises a plenteous harvest indeed. We understand, that it is probable wheat will start at from 85 to 95 cents."

Large Hail.—A communicated paragraph in the Petersburg Intelligencer, states that the neighbourhood of Darvill's, in Dinwiddie, Va. was visited on Friday, the 30th ult. by one of the severest hail storms within the memory of the oldest inhabitants. The size of the hail was uncommonly large—many of them measuring nine inches in circumference.

Spring propelling Rudder.—A machine of this name, formed by thin pieces of metal, or elastic wood, fastened to a strong rudder stock, and receiving a waving (sculling) motion from the tiller, is advertised by Wm. Willis, at Charleston, with free liberty to make use of it for three years, although patented by the inventor.

New Invention.—Mr. Pliny Weller, of York, Livingston co. has invented and put in operation, a machine for making barrel staves which takes them from the log, and prepares them for the truss hoop. It will with the attendance of a man and one boy, dress 3600 per day. A day's labour in the usual way is, we understand 200. The value of this invention in a country where so many barrels are used, must be immense.—Rochester Observer.

In 1700 there were about 200,000 souls in Venice, and now there are barely half the number. There were formerly 8000 gondoliers, now there are barely 2000. There were formerly 3000 private gondolas belonging to the nobility, now the number is scarcely worth mentioning.

The Sublime.—An eminent auctioneer, not far from Great Welnethan in selling a wind mill by auction the other day, by way of recommendation, observed—"The mill is seated upon the summit of a beautiful eminence, towered beyond obstruction; she opens her nostrils at the atmosphere, and while she inhales the breeze, her revolving powers at immeasurable rate, wheel the wealth into the coffers of the possessor."

Oil Stones.—A quarry of this stone has been discovered in Perry co., Ohio, said to be superior to the best Turkey oil stones, for sharpening razors &c.

Things upon a large scale!—Mr. Roffinac, Mayor of New Orleans, has addressed a memoir to his constituents, in which he states that the population of that city has doubled every ten years since 1794, the shipping has increased since October, 1822, from 144,179 tons, to 204,460; in October last the city debt is $263,600, its expenses $171,000, its revenue $200,379.

The merchandise landed at Sandusky, Ohio, amounted during the last season, to $1,319,323. It should be recollected that Sandusky is on Lake Erie. What an immense mass of merchandise, therefore, may be expected to pass through that port when the Grand Canal of Ohio is completed!

The Ulster Iron Works, for making and rolling Iron, when in full operation, will employ one hundred and seventy-five men, and manufacture 200 tons per week, from pig iron, into rounds, squares, flats, hoops, boiler plate, sheet iron, &c.

The Saugerties Paper Manufactory in Ulster county, on the Hudson, when in complete operation, will employ about three hundred and sixty persons, and is capable of turning out 25,000 square feet of paper in an hour—said to be of the first quality—probably the largest paper manufactory in the United States.—Richmond Compiler.

Anecdote.—When Constantine was chosen Emperor, he found several Christians in office, and he issued an edict requiring them to renounce their faith, or quit their places. Most of them gave up their offices to preserve their consciences; but some cringed and renounced Christianity. When the emperor had thus made full proof of their disposition and character, he removed all who thus basely complied with his supposed wishes, and retained the others, saying, "that those who would desert their Divine Master would desert him, and were not worthy his confidence."

Two gentlemen were walking in Holiday street last week, about the hour which the industrious servants of the mop and brush usually devote to cleaning the pavement before the door. It happened that the bucket was in the centre of the walk, and one of the gentlemen accidentally stumbled against it. "My dear friend," exclaimed the other "I lament your death exceedingly!" "My death!" "Yes—you have just kicked the bucket!"—"Not so," rejoined his friend, "I have only turned a little pale"—(pail.)

The wonderful sagacity and discoveries of Sir Isaac Newton being the subject of conversation in a mixed company, some knowing person observed that he thought the philosopher must have had intercourse with a demon. "Aye, that he had," said a shrewd fellow, "and I can tell you his name—it was Demon-Stration."

Lord Kelly had a remarkable red face.—One day Foote solicited him to look over his garden wall to ripen his melons.

A farmer in the interior of Massachusetts, was thus accosted by his landlord. "John I am going to raise your rent." "Thank you sir," said John, "for I cannot raise it myself."

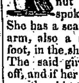
SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Venditioni Exponas issued out of Somerset county court, at the suit of Henry Lankford, administrator of Pierce Riggin against Henry J. Riggin; by virtue of two writs of Fieri Facias, one at the suit of Elizabeth J. C. Stewart by William Miles her guardian, one do. at the suit of Mary A. Stewart by William Miles her guardian; by virtue of six writs of Fieri Facias issued by Burton Cannon, a justice of the peace for Somerset county, to wit:—one at the suit of Levin Tiler, executor of Samuel Milborn, 1 do. at the suit of Isaac Riggin, administrator of Noah Riggin, 2 at the suits of Roland Bevins, 1 do. at the suit of James Stewart, 1 do. at the suit of Robert Lankford; by virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by William Costen, a justice of the peace for Somerset county, at the suit of Richard H. Samson, at the use of James Samson, at the use of Burton Cannon, all the above writs against Henry J. Riggin, and to me directed, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—One negro man Jim, 1 do. woman Ann, 1 do. Nelly, 1 do. Esther, 1 do. boy Dave, 1 do. girl Margaret, 1 do. Case, 1 do. Jane, 1 do. Eliza, 8 head of horses, 2 yokes of oxen, 4 head of cattle, 20 head of sheep, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 8 pine do. 1 stand, 1 lot of earthen ware, 1 dozen chairs, 1 safe, 2 trunks, 1 lot of knives and forks, 1 grind stone, 1 hand mill, 1 wain cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat fan, 1 lot of casks, 1 cider mill, 1 cross-cut saw, 1 hand do. 3 ploughs, 3 harrows, 3 axes, 1 lot of iron, 150 bushels of corn, more or less, 14 stacks of fodder, more or less, 1 lot of flax in the straw, 2 pair of and-irons, 3 ox yokes, 3 ox chains, 6 hives with bees, 1 lot of tin ware, 1 lot of coopers' ware, 1 looking glass, 2 guns, 1 tract of land called Gray's Purchase, containing 100 acres, 1 do. Dudly, 50 acres, 1 do. Rawley Hill, 50 acres, 1 do. part of Unity Enlarge, 43 acres, 1 do. Privilege 30 acres, 1 do. part of Privilege, 20 acres, 1 do. part of Phillips' Conclusion, 200 acres, 1 do. part of Friend's Assistance, 90 acres, 1 do. part of Pasturage, 20 acres, all the above tracts containing more or less acres—which I shall proceed to sell at the court-house door on TUESDAY the 8th of JULY next, between the hours of 12 and 4 o'clock, P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writs.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

June 17, 1828. wp

35 DOLLARS REWARD.



STOLEN or ran away from the subscriber, on the 6th day of May, 1827, negro BETTY—about 19 or 20 years of age, of dark chestnut colour, speaks quick, when spoken to, and lisps in her speech. She has a scar from the kine pock on her arm, also a scar on the top of her right foot, in the shape of a heart, quite notable. The said girl was pregnant when she went off, and if her child be living, it is nearly five months old at this time. It is thought unnecessary to describe her clothing as they probably would have been changed by this time. This girl was conveyed to me, as security for the payment of money by Henry I. Riggin, and it is expected that she is either in the neighbourhood of Princess-Anne or Wetipquin. Any person taking up said negro Betty, and lodging her in Somerset county jail, shall receive the above reward, and all charges paid by

WILLIAM WHITE,
near Snowhill, Md.

June 10 kf

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed at the suit of Sarah Huston use of William W. Handy against James W. Dashiell, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro man Sampson, one do. Shadrick, one do. Huett, one do. Moses, one do. Albert, one do. John, one woman Betty, one do. Harriet, one do. Sally, one do. Sophiah, and one child Milly, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, in Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the first day of July next, at the hour of 2 o'clock, P. M. for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

June 10 uk

CAMBRIDGE HOTEL,

Sign of the Steam-Boat & Stages.

THE Subscriber continues to keep this handsome establishment, a few doors above his old stand, in a very central part of the town, where he is prepared at all times for the reception of travellers, and others, who may please give him a call. His house is well furnished; the rooms private and comfortable; his bar supplied with a choice selection of the best Liquors; his stable stored with good provender, and his prices regulated by the times. By strict attention to his business, he flatters himself with a continuation of those customers who have been so liberal heretofore, to whom he gratefully acknowledges himself indebted.

The public's obt. servant,

WM. C. RIDGAWAY.

N.B. His Hack runs to the Cambridge wharf to meet the Steam-Boat Maryland, on her arrival from Baltimore every Tuesday & Friday evening. Also for the conveyance of passengers from his house to the boat on her departure every Wednesday and Saturday morning, free of charge. He has, for the accommodation of persons who are going on to Baltimore, rented a private stable with a fine grazing lot, well enclosed, for the purpose of taking at livery horses at a low price, which shall be regulated by the price of grain, hay, &c. he is prepared at all times with fine horses and carriages, for the conveyance of Travellers to any part of the Peninsula.

W. C. R.

Cambridge, June 3, 1828.

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY OF AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast and wrought Shares, with and without Coulters; Hill-side, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs; a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows; Swingletrees, double and single; Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual; his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes, Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.

His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 3 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his implements, that he will continue to merit the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.

JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.

N. B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders.

March 11. tx

SINCLAIR & MOORE,

Pratt-St. Wharf, Baltimore,

HAVE in store—Millet, Lucerne, early Corn, bunch, pole & soup Beans, a large assortment for planting, and garden seeds generally.

PLOUGHS,

Amongst which are the much approved self-sharpening point Plough—By turning and reversing said point, the share lasts much longer than the cast share of any other plough, in as much as the point is of steel, and when worn bevelling it is sharpened, if turned over. The CULTIVATORS made by Sinclair & Moore, pulverize the ground more effectually, and much deeper than the old fashioned there hoed kind—and by the use of these in the culture of corn, it will save nearly two-thirds of the ploughing.

ALSO, Socket Shovels, Scythes, Mattocks and Picks, with handles;—spring steel Hay and Manure Forks, WHEAT FANS, & GRAIN CRADLES, with best Waldron Scythes; Garden Tools generally; Wove Wire for Seives, and Mill Screens.

☞They have received from on board the brig Hyperion, capt. Forbes, just from Liverpool, a quantity of grain and grass Scythes, (Waldron's prime) Sickles, Malleable trace Chains; Straw and Hay Knives; Grass Hooks, and Garden Tools, amongst which are turnip and other Hoes; Edging Tools, budding and pruning Knives, &c. &c.

☞For the greater convenience of those who use our PLOUGHS in Somerset, we have appointed JOHNSTON & SUDLER, of Princess-Anne, our agents for the sale of them, who will constantly keep a supply of the different kinds at our prices.

June, 1828. S. & M.

E. T. J. WOODWARD,

Corner of Dugan's Wharf & Pratt-Street.
BALTIMORE,

Informs his friends and customers that he will sell on COMMISSION, Wheat, Rye, Corn, and Oats, Tobacco, and all other articles of Country Produce, and will make liberal advances on the same.

He has on hand a large supply of Groceries, Liquors, &c.

CONSISTING OF

Teas, Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Family Flour, Brandy, Wine, Gin, Spirits, Whiskey and Cordials, Spices, Soap & Candles, Shad, Mackerel, Herrings, Oil and Salt, together with every other article in his line.

ALSO,

Glass Ware, Queen's-Ware,

Stone and Earthen Ware, &c.

And a general assortment

Of Garden Seeds of approved kinds, which he will sell on the most liberal terms.

DRY PINE OR OAK WOOD

Will be taken in exchange for Goods, on fair terms.

May 13, 1828. mw

Village Herald.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY MORNING, BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

VOL. II. PRINCESS-ANNE, MD., JULY 1, 1828. NO. 14.

VILLAGE HERALD.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance; $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if paid within six months.

Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

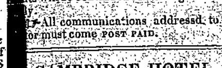
ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion; those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

Persons advertising must limit the number of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

CAMBRIDGE HOTEL,

Sign of the Steam-Boat & Stages.



THE Subscriber continues to keep this handsome establishment, a few doors above his old stand, in a very central part of the town, where he is prepared at all times for the reception of travellers, and others, who may please give him a call. His house is well furnished; the rooms private and comfortable; his bar supplied with a choice selection of the best Liquors; his stable stored with good provender, and his prices regulated by the times. By strict attention to his business, he flatters himself with a continuation of those customers who have been so liberal heretofore, to whom he gratefully acknowledges himself indebted.

The public's obt. servant,

WM. C. RIDGAWAY.

N.B. His Hack runs to the Cambridge wharf to meet the Steam-Boat Maryland, on her arrival from Baltimore every Tuesday & Friday evening. Also for the conveyance of passengers from his house to the boat on her departure every Wednesday and Saturday morning, free of charge. He has, for the accommodation of persons who are going on to Baltimore, rented a private stable with a fine grazing lot, well enclosed, for the purpose of taking at livery horses at a low price, which shall be regulated by the price of grain, hay, &c. he is prepared at all times with fine horses and carriages, for the conveyance of Travellers to any part of the Peninsula.

W. C. R.

Cambridge, June 3, 1828.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Venditioni Exponas issued out of Somerset county court, at the suit of Henry Lankford, administrator of Pierce Riggin against Henry J. Riggin; by virtue of two writs of Fieri Facias, one at the suit of Elizabeth J. C. Stewart by William Miles her guardian, one do. at the suit of Mary A. Stewart by William Miles her guardian; by virtue of six writs of Fieri Facias issued by Burton Cannon, a justice of the peace for Somerset county, to wit:—one at the suit of Levin Tiler, executor of Samuel Milborn, 1 do. at the suit of Isaac Riggin, administrator of Noah Riggin, 2 at the suits of Roland Bevins, 1 do. at the suit of James Stewart, 1 do. at the suit of Robert Lankford; by virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by William Costen, a justice of the peace for Somerset county, at the suit of Richard H. Samson, at the use of James Samson, at the use of Burton Cannon, all the above writs against Henry J. Riggin, and to me directed, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—One negro man Jim, 1 do. woman Ann, 1 do. Nelly, 1 do. Esther, 1 do. boy Dave, 1 do. girl Margaret, 1 do. Case, 1 do. Jane, 1 do. Eliza, 8 head of horses, 2 yokes of oxen, 4 head of cattle, 20 head of sheep, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 8 pine do. 1 stand, 1 lot of earthen ware, 1 dozen chairs, 1 safe, 2 trunks, 1 lot of knives and forks, 1 grind stone, 1 hand mill, 1 wain cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat fan, 1 lot of casks, 1 cider mill, 1 cross-cut saw, 1 hand do. 3 ploughs, 3 harrows, 3 axes, 1 lot of iron, 150 bushels of corn, more or less, 14 stacks of fodder, more or less, 1 lot of flax in the straw, 2 pair of and-irons, 3 ox yokes, 3 ox chains, 6 hives with bees, 1 lot of tin ware, 1 lot of coopers' ware, 1 looking glass, 2 guns, 1 tract of land called Gray's Purchase, containing 100 acres, 1 do. Dudly, 50 acres, 1 do. Rawley Hill, 50 acres, 1 do. part of Unity Enlarge, 43 acres, 1 do. Privilege 30 acres, 1 do. part of Privilege, 20 acres, 1 do. part of Phillips' Conclusion, 200 acres, 1 do. part of Friend's Assistance, 90 acres, 1 do. part of Pasturage, 20 acres, part of a tract of land called Panther's Den, 1 do. part of Al's Vale, 1 do. Lonely Glade—the three last named tracts containing 91¼ acres of land, all the above tracts containing more or less acres—which I shall proceed to sell at the court-house door on TUESDAY the 8th of JULY next, between the hours of 12 and 4 o'clock, P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writs.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

June 17, 1828. wp

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed at the suit of Sarah Huston use of William W. Handy against James W. Dashiell, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro man Sampson, one do. Shadrick, one do. Huett, one do. Moses, one do. Albert, one do. John, one woman Betty, one do. Harriet, one do. Sally, one do. Sophiah, and one child Milly, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, in Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the first day of July next, at the hour of 2 o'clock, P. M. for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

June 10 uk

Notice to Creditors.

The creditors of the undersigned are hereby notified to appear in Somerset county court, in Princess-Anne, on the 1st Saturday after the third Monday in November next, to shew cause if any they have why he should not be entitled to the benefit of the insolvent laws of Maryland. LEVIN ABBOTT.

June 9th—24th 1828.

CONSUMPTIONS, COUGHS, COLDS, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the the signature of proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER,

Nov. 20, 1827. Princess-Anne, Md.

STATE OF MARYLAND, SC.

Somerset County Orphans Court.

June 10th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Isaac T. Mar-
§§SEAL.§§ shall, Administrator of Jacob Mar-
§§§§§§§§§§ shall, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of JACOB MARSHALL, late of said county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 20th of December next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 10th of June, 1828.

ISAAC T. MARSHALL,
Admtor of Jacob Marshall, dec'd.

June 17, 1828. k

SINCLAIR & MOORE,

Pratt-St. Wharf, Baltimore,

HAVE in store—Millet, Lucerne, early Corn, bunch, pole & soup Beans, a large assortment for planting, and garden seeds generally.

PLOUGHS,

Amongst which are the much approved self-sharpening point Plough—By turning and reversing said point, the share lasts much longer than the cast share of any other plough, in as much as the point is of steel, and when worn bevelling it is sharpened, if turned over. The CULTIVATORS made by Sinclair & Moore, pulverize the ground more effectually, and much deeper than the old fashioned there hoed kind—and by the use of these in the culture of corn, it will save nearly two-thirds of the ploughing.

ALSO, Socket Shovels, Scythes, Mattocks and Picks, with handles;—spring steel Hay and Manure Forks, WHEAT FANS, & GRAIN CRADLES, with best Waldron Scythes; Garden Tools generally; Wove Wire for Seives, and Mill Screens.

☞They have received from on board the brig Hyperion, capt. Forbes, just from Liverpool, a quantity of grain and grass Scythes, (Waldron's prime) Sickles, Malleable trace Chains; Straw and Hay Knives; Grass Hooks, and Garden Tools, amongst which are turnip and other Hoes; Edging Tools, budding and pruning Knives, &c. &c.

☞For the greater convenience of those who use our PLOUGHS in Somerset, we have appointed JOHNSTON & SUDLER, of Princess-Anne, our agents for the sale of them, who will constantly keep a supply of the different kinds at our prices.

June, 1828. S. & M.

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY OF AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast and wrought Shares, with and without Coulters; Hill-side, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs; a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows; Swingletrees, double and single; Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual; his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes, Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.

His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 3 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his implements, that he will continue to merit the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.

JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.

N.B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders.

March 11. tx

FOR RENT,

FOR the ensuing year or for a term of years, the FARM on Little-Monie, now occupied by Mitchell Phœbus.

For terms apply to

JAMES POLK.

June 3, 1828. kw

From the Eastern Argus.

HICKORY—NO. XXVII.

'He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.'

It has been urged upon the people, by way of prejudicing their minds against General Jackson, that he voted in the U. S. House of Representatives against an address by congress to General Washington, on the latter's retiring from the Presidency. But it is well for every man, who cannot but see that he is beset with such arguments from some improper motives in him who uses them, to examine thoroughly the circumstances associated with their rise, before yielding to them unqualified assent. Whoever forms hasty conclusions, especially in politics, is very liable to retract them upon further inquiry, and in this way incur the charge of palpable inconsistency, notwithstanding his fault partakers more of precipitancy or rashness, than of dishonesty or want of integrity. I make the remark as of general application, rather than from any serious apprehension that I entertain of the effect which the vote of Gen. Jackson just alluded to has had upon the minds of even hasty politicians. For the influence must indeed be limited among a thinking people, of the man who would be persuaded against the fitness of General Jackson for the Presidency, on the grounds that the latter voted against a certain address by congress to Gen. Washington, the import of which is not generally known.—Still we all feel attached to the memory of Washington, and no man among us is more so than General Jackson, if a series of expressions made by him to that effect through a long number of years is any criterion by which to judge of his feelings. These I must cite. But we will first dispose of the resuscitated address to Washington, of which a bugbear has been attempted to be made, by his restless, unremitting opposers. To understand it correctly, an allusion to the history of the times that gave birth to it is also requisite.

The address to Washington was gotten up at the close of his second term of service in the Presidency, when he declared his unalterable determination to retire from the office. A party existed at that time, avowedly, in favour of establishing a Presidency "for life," and of so amending the constitution already adopted. They too had the ascendency in the two branches of the legislature, and so elevated their favourite, the elder Adams, to the Presidency, on the retirement of Gen. Washington. Keeping their favourite system of an aristocratic President "for life" in view, they endeavoured to prevail on Gen. Washington not to retire from the Presidency, but to serve yet a third term of four years or more. But, as already remarked, he refused absolutely to do so, unwilling to jeopardize the liberties of the people by the establishment of such a precedent. Their next resort was, by way of inculcating their tenets, to get up an address to Washington in the House of Representatives, setting forth the principles upon which they would fain model the administration that was to follow, so far forth as in their power, under the pretence of being those in Washington's own administration. A committee was accordingly appointed in the House of Representatives to prepare this address, thus designed more for political effect, than for any token of gratitude to the illustrious benefactor of his country, whom they could not draw into their purposes. A majority of this committee were of the aristocratic party, of course, and the friends and supporters of the elder Adams' election. And the Address was drawn so completely to suit the condition of their own political projects, as to be in more particulars than one extremely obnoxious to the republican feelings of no inconsiderable portion of the people. But then the republican party of that day was in the minority in the House, although before the elder Adams had passed through the first four years of his Presidency, they gained the ascendency. The address consequently prevailed, yet from the following extract of it the reader may judge very correctly of its general tenor, and of the views it inculcated in regard to a Presidency for life, and its corresponding principles of government, to wit:

"While we entertain," (says the address) "a grateful conviction that your wise, firm, and patriotic Administration has been signally conducive to the success of the present form of our government, we cannot forbear to express the deep sensations or regret with which we contemplate your intended retirement from office."

This is only a part of the anti-republican address conjured up at that day for political effect, under pretence of complimenting Gen. Washington, and against which Jackson voted. Had I room I would lay before the reader the whole of that artful manœuvre, that he might appreciate the full extent of its design. And I would furthermore point to the vote that Jackson gave upon it, as a bright pledge of his attachment to the republican principle of "ROTATION IN OFFICE" in those perilous days, which soon after gave rise to the gag act and sedition law of the elder Adams. What friend to the democratic policy of our governments;—what discipline of the old republican school of Jefferson; what advocate for the elective franchise of the people, would not commend him more and more for it?—It is only by suppressing the history of its parentage;—it is only by keeping out of light the cause that originated it, and the design it was intended to effect, that the enemies of General Jackson can hope to succeed in prejudicing the ignorant, or leading the weak, when recalling to mind his vote upon this affair.

How vile and dishonourable does it not appear, for men professing the most ardent love for our republican institutions, to thus wilfully misrepresent the very virtues that have been spent in their defence and preservation, so as to give them the outward look, not of patriotism, but of hostility to the friends of liberty! The public has been inundated with those foul perversions, and even the brightest victories of which our country can boast degraded, and ridiculed by disgraceful comparisons, all—for—what? to tarnish the high reputation of the individual who has acted so conspicuous a part in the affairs and defence of our nation, and to tear him from the affections of the people, that they may not remove by his elevation to the Presidency men who came into office to the disappointment of the people, and men whose administration of the people's affairs has been but one almost unbroken series of disappointments, ever since they came into office. The time will come—the time is near at hand, when the voice of the people must be heard. The disturbed fountains of truth and the natural flow of a nation's gratitude, which has of late had its channels so recklessly broken up, shall soon have restored to them their just and wonted equilibrium, and again figure in the affections of a free people with triple security. The past and present scenes will combine to teach a lesson not soon to be forgotten by a reflecting nation. LEONIDAS.

A Clincher.—Mr. Warfield, the member of Congress from Maryland, who gave the vote of that state to Mr. Adams at the Presidential election, has furnished evidence that Mr. Adams obtained his office by bargaining, not only with Mr. Clay, but with himself! Soon after the election, he informed Dr. Wm. Zollickoffer, a highly respectable gentleman of that state, and one of Mr. Clay's electors, that, not having determined how he should vote on the question, Mr. Adams sent for him a few days before the election, and asked him if he could give him his vote?—Warfield said he had not made up his mind—upon which Mr. Adams asked what were the objections he had to him; and on his stating them, Mr. Adams explained them away, and obtained from him a pledge to support him. The kind of explanation given Warfield did not not state but added that he could get any foreign appointment he wanted—but that it would not do now, lest the people might discover the manner in which things were conducted."—from which we may easily infer its character. Dr. Zollickoffer has under his own signature, in the Maryland Citizen, affirmed the truth of the above. If additional proof of the corruption to which Messrs. Adams and Clay owe their present offices were necessary—we have it here.—Trenton (N. J.) Emporium.

Condy Raguet, esq. late American chargé d'affaires at the court of Brazil, appeals thro' the Philadelphia Gazette, "to the people of the United States." The appeal is a plain and lucid statement of the very singular course pursued towards him by the American cabinet. The passage on the 30th April, in the H. of R. of the resolution offered by Mr. Coulter of Penn. calling upon the president for copies of the correspondence between Mr. Raguet and the Brazillian government and between him and his own government, relative to the alleged blockade by the Brazillian naval force, the imprisonment of our seamen and the confiscation of the property of our citizens, &c. will be recollected. To this call, no answer was made by the president until the afternoon of the 23d of May, (Friday) one day before the termination of the legislative labours of the session! Consequently altogether too late to be acted upon, or even printed. Hence this appeal to the people.—A. Argus.

"Marius on the Ruins of Carthage,"—"War, pestilence, and famine." A good picture might be drawn from this sentiment of the modern Cataline. Picture Clay seated on the ruins of the Capitol—surrounded by smouldering palaces, dying men, women, and children; and the whole country sickly and pale with desolation; prostrated by stalking famine—by raging war—by consuming pestilence—by plague—fever—and disease! And Clay grins horribly a ghastly smile—and cries "this is my work! I am a patriot! Hah! hah! hah!"—It is the laugh of the maniac; the horrible laugh of the lost mind—and desolation echoes it—"hah! hah! hah!"—Such is Henry Clay, and his tool, J. Q. Adams.—Mercury.

Electoral vote of Maine.—We have not the slightest doubt but General Jackson will receive a portion of the votes of Maine. There is now a feeling pervading that State against Adams and Clay, which nothing can allay. The Adams presses are endeavouring to cover their deplorable condition, but their very efforts show the hopelessness of their cause. The strange doings of Webster and his partisans in the last session of Congress raised a spirit in Maine, which will overwhelm the coalition in that quarter.

From the Baltimore Republican.

CONNECTICUT.

The Electoral vote of this state, was given at the last election of President and Vice President, to John Quincy Adams for President, and to ANDREW JACKSON for VICE PRESIDENT. Jackson may be considered then, to have been, at the last election, the second choice of the people of Connecticut, and at the next, from the "signs of the times" in that state, there is good reason to believe he will be the first.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

In this state, where we have already shown our party to be strong, and where our cause is daily gaining ground, where those who were formerly the warm supporters of the Coalition, even the late Adams ELECTORS are following into the ranks of the Republican party, which, in that state, is the Jackson party, so far from gaining the votes of any of the Southern, Middle or Western states will have enough to do to keep their heads above water in the Eastern states. The prospect of the Jackson party's getting the vote of New Hampshire is, even at this moment, better than of the Adams party's getting it. There is no doubt that Jackson will get some of the votes of Maine—We have the best reason to believe that he'll get at least three of them. The Connecticut Mirror, a thorough-going Adams paper, says, that "there is danger of Adams' losing Connecticut."—Let the Coalition then, look at home.

From the Boston Statesman, we copy the following, on the subject of the recent great Jackson State Convention at Concord, New Hampshire:—

Jackson Republican Convention in New Hampshire.

We have not yet received the official account of the proceedings of this Convention; but incidentally learn that delegates appeared from every town in the state, and that an excellent spirit and the strongest confidence prevailed. The following nominations were made.

For Electors.

John Harvey of Northwood,
Benning M. Bean of Moultonboro,
William Pickering of Concord,
Jessee Bowers of Dunstable,
Samuel Dinsmoor of Keene,
Jonathan Nye of Claremont,
Stephen P. Webster of Haverhill,
Moses White of Lancaster.

For Representatives in Congress.

John Broadhead of New Market,
Dr. Hammond of Farmington,
Jonathan Harvey of Sutton,
Thomas Chandler of Bedford,
Henry Hubbard of Charlestown,
John W. Weeks of Lancaster.

FROM THE RICHMOND ENQUIRER.

THE SUPPLEMENT.

We have a copy of the pamphlet, published by Mr. Clay, by way of Supplement to his Address of December last. The two Officials, of course, attempt to puff it into notice. The Intelligencer vouches its proofs to be "conclusive." The Journal unhesitatingly pronounces "the whole of the charge against Mr. Adams and Mr. Clay as groundless, and notoriously disproved by the ample testimony which has been now laid before the world." The reader will know how to judge of this conclusive and overwhelming testimony, when he is told that the pamphlet contains some 22 pages—the 1st part, (touching Gen. Jackson's remarks) exhibiting the statements of Messrs. W. Sample, J. Bennett, the Rev. A. Wylie, J. Keerl, C. T. Jones and J. U. Waring—the 2d part relates to the opinions expressed by Mr. Clay, and consists of statements from Messrs. G. Robertson and C. S. Todd, D. Verther, A. W. Woolsey and B. S. Forrest—and Mr. Clay ekes out his pamphlet with statements from Col. Benton, Mr. Plumer, Mr. Robertson of Ohio, D. White, and two old letters of his own to gentlemen in Virginia, which last statements had all been previously published—This is the whole Supplementary evidence, which is deemed so "conclusive." We shall lay it before our readers—and let them judge for themselves.

It has left a very different impression upon our minds. Its silence is most significant. Its omissions are fatal to the cause of Mr. Clay—for, the friends of open and fair dealing, will at once look to the manner in which Mr. Clay met the strong charges that have been brought against him since December last—They will demand, how Mr. C. has rebutted the testimony that has gone forth in the investigations before the Senate of Kentucky, and in the address of the Washington Jackson Committee. They will know how to appreciate his defence, when they are told, that not one word, one solitary whisper, has escaped him in reply to these weighty documents. Not one word of Blair—not one word of his letters to Blair—not one word from Trimble or F. Johnson, about the declarations which they had made of its being ascertained that if Adams was made President, Clay would be made Secretary of State—Not a word from Clay about the pamphlets of Kendall on the essays of "Wayne"—not a word in reply to Gen. Floyd or Moore, or Wickliffe or Carneal—(and why, it may be asked, does he now hunt up for proofs of what he may have said in favor of Mr. Adams, when Gen. Floyd comes forward to tell him that he (Mr. Clay) informed him how doubtful he was about the vote he should give, and that he never was as much puzzled in all his life—and when T. Moore declares that Mr. C. recommended it to the Delegation of Kentucky to hold themselves "uncommitted?") Not a word does the Supplement urge in contradiction of these weighty documents—and therefore it is, we consider this last step of Mr. Clay as the most fatal that he has yet taken, and his supplement as far more calculated to injure him by what it does not say, than to serve him by what it does say.

Mr. Clay well knows the cloud of suspicion which has been cast upon him by the silence of Mr. Blair. He knows that the public has called for his letters to Mr. Blair; has called him to unseal the lips of Mr. Blair; and that his silence had given rise to the strongest imputations of his guilt. Is this silence now broken? Does this meagre body of supplementary evidence supply the ominous omission? No—Mr. C. still shrinks from the developement of his own letters—and he compels the world to conclude, that he dares not produce them because they carry with them the proofs of his conviction. It would have been infinitely better for Mr. Clay to have thrown this miserable pamphlet into the flames, than to afford such fearful evidence against himself.—He cannot be insensible to the dilemma in which he stands. His clear understanding cannot be drugged by the loyal panegyrics of the official organs at Washington. Sycophants may seek to amuse his ear—but Henry Clay well knows, that a public man must clear himself of every appearance of suspicion—and that his letters to Mr. Blair ought to be produced.

Interesting Letter from Governor Giles.

ADDRESS TO GEN. WASHINGTON.

Messrs. Green & Jarvis:—The oft repeated tale, that General Jackson voted in 1796 against an address to General Washington, and consequently, that he was in sentiment and feeling opposed to him, is met by the circumstances disclosed in the enclosed letters, which I desire you will publish at some convenient time. Not long since I addressed a letter to Mr. Giles, Governor of Virginia, and to Mr. Livingston, a member of Congress from the state of Louisiana; both of them representatives in Congress at the period when this address was proposed for consideration. The replies of those gentlemen satisfactorily show, that the minority vote resulted from no personal objections entertained, but alone from the controlling influences of principle. As his acquaintances know, no man in the country entertains, or has manifested, a stronger regard for the character and services of the father of our country, than has General Jackson. Looking to the similarity of, and parallel in their histories, it could hardly be expected to be otherwise; and yet this vote, so very immaterial, when all the circumstances, as disclosed by Mr. Giles and Mr. Livingston, are looked to, and which was given thirty-one years ago, is seized upon, and circulated widely for political effect, that under cover of that sanctity which merit fedly attaches itself to the name of Washington, prejudices may be produced. These letters, highly interesting, are forwarded to you for publication, that this preferred objection may be correctly understood.

With great respect,
J. H. EATON.

WASHINGTON, 29th May, 1828.

RICHMOND, May 5, 1828.

DEAR SIR:—Your highly esteemed favour of the 1st instant reached me last evening, and I have given the most respectful attention to its contents. After many false, scandalous, malignant, idle, silly, blackguard, ridiculous and preposterous charges heretofore brought against Gen. Jackson by the parasites of the Administration, (excuse this long list of epithets, but the occasion would justify as many more,) I am not at all surprised that the new one, of nearly thirty one years standing, mentioned in your letter, should be added to the disgusting catalogue. Many of the most terrific of those charges seem to me to be too preposterous even for the use of an old woman in a nursery, and I am sure would be frowned down by universal consent, were it not for the blind infatuation arising from the extremely excited state of feeling existing in the public mind at this moment. Whilst I pretend to no knowledge of the motives of General Jackson, or any others, inducing the two votes he is now called on to defend, I have the most perfect recollection of my own motives for the same votes. The same, and similar charges have often heretofore been brought against myself, for votes upon the same and similar subjects, given about the same time. It would require more time than I have now at command, to give a full and comprehensive view of the subjects of your inquiry; and in addition to that consideration, I am now in the very last stage of a painful and feeble existence. To form a correct judgment upon these subjects, it would be necessary for you, Sir, to give a critical attention to the whole of the answer to the President's speech; from which you have presented me only an extract; and you cannot avoid seeing from its whole contour, abundant justification to every republican member of Congress for voting against it; whilst, under impressions like mine, it would be extremely difficult for ingenuity itself to furnish any one sufficient ground of justification for any one republican member in voting otherwise.

Upon examination, you cannot but observe, Sir, that this answer is a most artful, ingenious, able production for its object. Its author was believed to be the celebrated Fisher Ames; and his great and brilliant genius was never more conspicuously displayed in any literary effort of his whole life, than in drawing this celebrated answer. He had two objects in view. The one, the highest wrought eulogiums upon Gen. Washington, drawn from the richest stores of his fertile mind. The other, to crush his republican political opponents, by the irresistible influence of Gen. Washington's well-earned popularity. The one object was highly laudable; the other, unworthy of him, and of the occasion. The incense to Gen. Washington, upon his retirement from public service, ought to have been pure and unadulterated. It should have consisted solely of the purest love offerings of the heart. It should not have been contaminated by the indulgence of hostile, vindictive passions towards others. Not so thought Mr. Ames, and his party. The occasion was too tempting, the advantage too great, and their own peril too imminent to be given up to a wise, honourable, and liberal course of proceeding. Mr. Ames had the whole weight of Gen. Washington's popularity in his hands, and he determined to make the most of it, upon this delicate and interesting occasion. He determined to use it, not only to Washington's honour, but to the dishonour of all his political opponents, and reckless of mercy towards them, he resolved through its potent influence, to compel these daring political opponents to bear testimony themselves to their own dishonour and political inconsistency. I, for one, indignantly repelled this insulting effort, under the peril of the vengeance of Gen. Washington's whole popularity. I disdained to give evidence against my own honour, and my own political consistency; in direct violation of the best dictates of my own judgment and conscience. Mr. Ames might, without difficulty, have obtained an unanimous and hearty vote in favour of his answer, if his sole object had been the plaudits of Gen. Washington, however highly wrought or extravagant; but this would not content him, nor his party. The humiliation of their political antagonists seemed to be the most acceptable portion of his unhallowed incense. Mr. Ames made the most artful and cutting thrusts at them, which the occasion invited. The most artful and effective of all, will probably be found in the quotation, from which, the clause moved to be stricken out, formed a part. The words the most peculiarly insulting and offensive, in the clause proposed to be stricken out, are these: "It is our earnest wish, that your example may be the guide of your successors." Your example in what? Certainly in his Presidential character, as evidenced in his practical administration of the government. Not the example of his military conduct during the Revolutionary war. Not the example of his life, generally. Oh, no; Mr. Ames would not be content, with holding out these examples for imitation; but an example, i. e. that by which his successors in the Presidential Office might be guided; of course, the whole of his administration. Now the republicans, myself with the rest, had not only opposed, but zealously and strenuously opposed, the most prominent measures of Washington's administration. The establishment of the bank of the United States. The British treaty, the funding system, &c. &c. could any thing have been more, insulting to every honourable republican opponent, of the most prominent measures of Washington's administration, than to be peremptorily called upon to declare to the world, that, it was his earnest wish, that Washington's example in his practical administration of the government, should be the guide for the observance of his successors? When almost every day's opposition to his measures, incontestibly proved, he wished no such thing; or if he did, that his opposition to those same measures, were dishonourable and deceptive? It was not possible for my mind to be brought to such a state of humiliation and dishonour; and without fear or apprehension of consequences, supported by an approving conscience, I indignantly repelled the attempted coercion.

It is very far from my desire, or intention, to implicate, in any respect whatever, the motives of those republican members, who voted in favour of this artful, ingenious answer. They doubtless took a different view of its meaning, from that I put upon it; and perhaps it may be said in their justification, that the words selected by Mr. Ames, are general in their character, and, being ingeniously chosen, might admit of some other interpretation. It may be so: but the words certainly do bear, and were intended to bear, the interpretation I then put upon them; and the mere possibility that they could be even tortured to bear that interpretation; would certainly be sufficient for my justification, in repelling them with indignation.

The possibility of their being tortured, to bear some different meaning, affords no mental salvo to me. The charge then is reduced to this; that an insulting attempt, under ingenious disguise, was made to coerce me to bear testimony against my own honour, and my own political consistency, at the hazard of encountering the dread influence of Washington's popularity; and that I had firmness and independence enough to resist that influence, and save my own honour. This is the head and front of the offence, and I presume of General Jackson's. If this be guilt, I rejoice in its commission—and this too, after thirty-one years of cool reflection, under the sanction of an approving conscience; and I now wish to be distinctly understood, that whilst I never did at any time set up the least pretensions to services like Washington's, and was at all times disposed to render him as pure homage for those services, as any citizen of the United States, I did not then, nor did I ever, yield to Washington, nor any other human being, in claims to honourable motives, and purity of intentions. Besides, my conduct at that day was universally known in the district I then had to represent, and universally approved.

My responsibility for all these evil deeds, has been since tested in my elections by the people, by the Executive Council, and by the Legislature. During which time, I never solicited an office; nor did I, until lately, ever lose an election. Since that time a new set of politicians have grown up, under the magical influence of a splendid Government, without any of the feelings inspired by the great republican principles of the revolution, or of the republican feeling of the time of Washington's administration; who are now calling the old republicans to a new account, upon a very different test of responsibility from that which in those times was deemed the true test of political merit; and who, under this infatuation, inspired by the brilliant delusive prospects of a splendid Government, have already, as I think, substituted the most frightful destructive despotism, for the best and happiest republican system ever devised for the benefit of man; and which, for nearly half a century, proved its great merit, in the blessings it conferred upon American people. It will afford me much pleasure, Sir, if the foregoing explanation should enable you to defend General Jackson against these new charges for old sins; and you are at liberty to make any use of them you please, for that purpose; but I really fear, that the trouble I have imposed upon you, of reading so long a letter, will cause you to regret the call you have made upon me for the explanation.

Be pleased, Sir, to accept the assurances of my respectful and friendly considerations &c. WM. B. GILES.

The Hon. J. H. Eaton.

From the Baltimore Republican.

Substance of Gen. JACKSON's ADDRESS to his Troops, before New Orleans.

(Designed as an exercise for Youth.)

My brave Countrymen:—

I am fortunate in being associated with you, on this eventful occasion. Our country has called us to arms, in vindication of our rights. We have to defend our altars, and preserve, untarnished, the privileges of freemen. You have made many sacrifices, in separating yourselves from all the endearments of home, and encountering the fatigues and obstacles of a march of many hundred miles.—These have been overcome, and you now stand on the plains of Orleans.

The enemy approaches. He comes flushed with the victories of Europe. On his standard, he displays his many successful battles in Spain, and his triumphs at Waterloo. Yes—I will not depreciate the foe you are to meet. He is a lion in his full strength, rejoicing in the glory he has won. Having vanquished the French Eagles under the greatest Captain of any age, he no doubt believes, his march will now lead him to an easy conquest.

These things are not said to discourage you; but that you may prepare yourselves for the approaching conflict. We must breast the storm in all its fury. Already, in imagination, is the enemy in possession of the fair city of New Orleans, and indulging in all the excesses of a licensed soldiery. Utter desolation is in his train. He is the despoiler of all that is fair and excellent. "Beauty" and "booty" are his watch words. Innocence will afford no protection against his brutality, nor the sacredness of the altar preserve it from violation. All that is calculated to rouse to action and excite, even to madness, the worst passions of a degraded soldiery, has been promised. We must expect to measure arms with a most determined enemy.

He has subdued the Eagles of France; but, thank God, the American Eagle has never cowered before him. Those columns have never before been arrayed, on the soil of freedom, against an army of citizen soldiers.—We are actuated by no sordid hope of gain, nor motive of licentious indulgence. Our countrymen look for the performance of our duty.—They have committed to us the defence of all that is dear to freemen. We defend our homes, our property, our families, our matchless institutions. Some of us were united in the conflicts of the Revolution; the glories of that era are fresh in our remembrance. Time has consecrated our liberties; their enjoyment has rendered them dearer to us than existence. Who would hesitate to hazard his life on the present emergency. Is there a heart that does not swell with indignation at the temerity and insolence of the foe: or, an arm that is not nerved for the combat? Is there one in this army, who does not, now invite the battle? No, not one. I swear this hour, on the altar of my country, that the march of the enemy shall be stayed. He shall be disappointed in his hopes—I will perish on this plain, or arrest his progress. Let us my friends, all pledge our lives to the sacrifice, or drive these legions from our fields. We will teach them how dangerous it is to engage with freemen. If we fall, our memories shall be cherished by our grateful countrymen, so long as that mighty stream mingles with the ocean. Future generations shall visit this spot with admiration, and the event will be celebrated in the annals of our country. But we shall overthrow the proud battalions of our adversary. We shall carry dismay and destruction into his ranks—we shall drive him from our soil. And then, we shall be hailed by our country, as her brave defenders, and citizens worthy of the Republic.

From the Onondaga (N. Y.) Journal.

THE TEST.—If the Adams people speak their honest feelings, when they assert that they shall have a majority of the Electors, in this state, let them propose to change the law, and choose by general tickets. We will meet them with pleasure on that ground.—What say you gentlemen.

ANOTHER FALSEHOOD UPSET.

From the Alabama Telegraph and Patriot.

In casually glancing our eye over the second number of the "Tennessean," our attention was arrested by the following statement, which upon inquiry we find so destitute of truth, as to require a passing notice at our hands.

"Some have affected to believe, that General Jackson would be highly offended at the offer of any pecuniary reward, above what the laws of his country allowed. Not so fast. I have myself seen him receive forty or fifty thousand dollars of this kind of pay; and lest I may not be credited, I will state the circumstance, which is susceptible of proof. During the sale of public land at Huntsville, Ala. when a very valuable section of country was under the hammer, near the Big Spring, (Tuscumbia,) General Jackson, bid the government price—when the public crier immediately notified the people that it was the General's bid; and the crier or some other person, I do not remember which, requested that there should be no opposition to him; the consequence was, that the General bid off eight quarter sections at government price, which would otherwise have sold from forty to sixty dollars per acre."

As the lands here spoken of, lie in the neighbourhood of this place, we have thought proper to make some inquiry into the matter, and find, as we expected, that the above statement is far wide of the truth. It is not true that Gen. Jackson bought eight quarter sections of land at the Huntsville sale; nor is it true that the public crier proclaimed his bid to the crowd, accompanied by a request that no one should oppose him, nor that he realized the enormous profit of $50,000 which the "Tennessean" with such unblushing hardihood asserts. The following letter from Col. Winston, of this vicinity, who has resided in the country for many years, who was present at the Huntsville sales, and who afterwards purchased and now lives upon the land then bought by Gen. Jackson, will expose the falsity of these charges, and present the transaction in its proper point of view.

To the Ed. of the Telegraph & Patriot.

Franklin County, May 25.

Sir: I have just read the second number of the "Tennessean," to which you called my attention, and was surprised to find it stated, that General Jackson, at the land sales in Huntsville, bought two sections in the neighbourhood of Tuscumbia, upon which he realized a profit of $50,000. I was present at the sale, and can assure you with the utmost positiveness that the statement in many particulars is untrue. The General bought but one section. When it was put under the hammer he bid the government price; and no one feeling disposed to oppose him, it was knocked off without another bid. I did not hear the crier make any remark which was calculated to prevent the people from bidding. It was an act of kindness entirely voluntary on their part. They recollected the great services he had rendered the country, and were gratified to have it in their power to make him some compensation in this way. The moment it was cried off, the General rose from his seat, bowed to the crowd, and observed, that it was his wish and intention to have bought more land, but as no one had opposed him, he would decline doing so. He afterwards bought of private individuals about 578 acres to render the tract complete.

It was the intention of the General, when he purchased this land to have settled upon it, but afterwards abandoned the idea, he sold it to me for $6,796, payable as follows: one half down, and the balance in three annual payments. At the time he came to the possession of it, it was in the woods, or nearly so. When he sold it to me, there were 150 acres cleared and under a good fence, a good gin house, and a number of negro cabins. If then the original price which it first cost, him, which was $1280, be added to the expenses he was at in making the improvements, which I should estimate at $1200, it will be found that the immense speculation which the "Tennessean" charges him to have made in government lands, at the public sale in Huntsville, dwindles down to a very paltry sum.

Statements of this nature so palpably false, and so susceptible of refutation, are calculated to injure, rather than advance the cause, which the redoubtable knight of the lancet has espoused so warmly.

These are all the lands the General ever bought in north Alabama that I know of, (and I have attended all the land sales,) with the exception of four quarter sections which he purchased in Linderdale county, at the average price of $29 50 per acre; and which he afterwards sold at cost, loosing his labour and improvements.

Those who are acquainted with General Jackson, well know that he was never avaricious of fortune. As a proof of the generosity of his nature I will here state a fact that fell under my observation at the Huntsville land sale which will present his character in a point of view highly honorable to him.—Maj. Russel, one of his old associates in arms, as brave a man as ever drew a sword, who fought through the Creek war with distinguished gallantry, had fixed his eye upon a tract of land in the neighbourhood of Russelville, upon which he had made some improvements, with the expectation of buying it. When it was offered for sale, he was opposed by a bidder, who soon run it up to $85 per acre. Being in moderate circumstances, and unable to give so enormous a price, the General begged him to desist—generously observing to him that they had been old soldiers together; that he should not want a home, to go and divide the tract he had just bought for himself, make choice of halves, and he would make him a title to it. The next day, however, Maj. Russel succeeded in purchasing a half a section upon moderate terms, and did not think proper to accept the generous offer that had been made by the General.

I have now stated, at your request what I know in relation to this transaction. If you think it would advance the cause of truth by giving it publicity you are at liberty to do so.

ANTHONY WINSTON.

Dr. Armstrong, of Shelbyville, Tennessee, whose dastardly conduct in the Creek war drew down upon him the contempt of the whole army, has lately thrown off the mask, and avowed himself the author of the numbers signed "A Tennessean." Emanating from such a source, we are not surprised at the falsehoods which they contain. Hating the General in whose services he was disgraced, he would, no doubt, if he could despoil him of his well earned reputation. That however, there is little fear. An intelligent community appreciating the motives from which he acts, attach but little cre to his malevolent effusions. Here they taken for what they are worth—in dist parts, where he is unknown, they may p for something more. We therefore pub the letter of Colonel Winston, that the b and antidote may go together.

From the Maryland Advocate.

"CONTRAST."

"EBONY."	HICKORY.
"Divided among ourselves, more in passions than interest, with half the nation sold by their prejudice and their ignorance to our enemy, with a feeble and penurious government, with five frigates for a navy, and scarcely five effective regiments for an army, how can it be expected that we should resist the mass of force which that gigantic power has collected to crush us at a blow?" [John Quincy Adams' letter to L. Harris.]	"Our country m and shall be defen We will enjoy ou berty or perish in last ditch." "The only cou on earth where enjoy freedom, w its blessings are extended to the and rich, calls on to protect her the grasping usu tion of Britain; will not call in I know that e man whose beats high at proud title of man, will prom obey her voice, rally round the gles of his cou resolved to rescue from impending ger, or nobly to d her defence." [J son's Address at N Orleans.]

Contrast the language of these two m Weigh it well, and then determine, in wh hands would the liberties of this country safest. We hear General Jackson declar to his fellow citizens and soldiers at New leans, 'Our country must and shall be defe ed, WE WILL ENJOY OUR LIBER OR PERISH IN THE LAST DITC Can the liberties of this country be in d ger in the hands of such a man? We bel not. And although, Mr. Clay would 'hum prostrate himself before God, & implore mercy, to visit our favoured land with W with PESTILENCE, with FAMINE, or scourge, other than military rule,' we did think that there was another being, bes himself, who, calling himself an Ameri would be so fool hardy, so wicked and a bandoned of principle, as to join in with h in his infamous and audacious prayer. B we have, to our utter astonishment, he the same prayer offered up in our own v lage;—yes, we have heard it from the lips one, clothed with the sacred ermine of Gospel, from one who occupies the chief in the synagogue. He tells us 'he could h bly prostrate himself before Heaven, and imp Almighty God to visit our fair country w WAR, with PESTILENCE, with FA INE, or any other scourge, rather than Gen Jackson should be elected the President of United States.' Startle not fellow citizen however dreadful and shocking this langu may be, it is that of one of the Administ tion party, in Cumberland—a professed f lower of the Lamb—a Herald of the Cr Well may we tremble for the safety of Republic, when men become thus abando ed and desperate. In conclusion, we wo advise the people of Allegany, to beware a Wolf in Sheep's clothing.

PRO PATRIA

From the Frederick Citizen.

WASHINGTON COUNTY, Md.

The Adams men in Washington cou are appropriating to their own use the na of every man who is not notoriously for Jac son. This system of piracy is too contem ble to be alarming—they may use the na but they cannot change the votes. The fo lowing protest will shew that an indiscri nate impressment has been made.

To the Voters of the third Electoral Distric Washington county.

Fellow Citizens—

We, whose names are hereunto subsc ed, have seen ourselves announced by Administration party, at their late meeti in Hagerstown, as members of a committ of Vigilance for this district. We declare we are opposed to the re-election of J. Q. A ams to the Presidency of the U. S. and we are in favour of the election to that station, of General A. Jackson, and that intend to use all honourable means to p mote his election, because we think hi patriot and statesman, who "has filled measure of his country's glory."

E. Williams,	James Robinson,
G. Erich,	John Betz,
David Startzman,	Geo. Wherritt,
David Shilling,	Richard Weiss,
Philip Shilling,	Saml. Brackunier

From the Torch Light.

Hagerstown, May 29th, 1828

We the subscribers Certify that we did authorize the Administration Meeting held the 26th inst. to put our names upon the Committee of Vigilance, and we further C tify that we are in favor of Andrew Jacks

John Tisher	John Cook,
John Rowhold	Mitch'l Promett,
Samual Cline	John Spigler
Jacob Byers, Jr.	Isaac Moyer
Michael Frazier	Edward Thomas
George Fox	David Sprilman
Henry Figley	S. Brackunier
Geo. Martény, jr.	David Christ
D. L. Middlekauff	Jacob Wolf
Sam'l Spigler	James Pheasant
Sam'l Kershner	John Horn
George W. Elliott	Jacob Moyers
Jacob Richardson	Henry Moyers
J. L. Middlekauff	Fred'k. Sillhart
Ben. Barr	Samuel Spigler

A SIGN IN MAINE.

From the Bangor Republican, May 13.

At Buckfield the republicans were invi to meet and express their preference tween the presidential candidates, when J Quincy Adams received 56 votes and drew Jackson NINETY-NINE votes. believe there are towns in this county wh Mr. Adams would not, if the election w to-morrow, receive one vote. It is high for those, who have been long sitting "on fence," to come off and take their ground

A Sign in Vermont.—The National St dard has come out with the Republican ination of Gen. A. Jackson for President J. C. Calhoun for V. President of the Will the Ebony editors call this re-action?

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JULY 1, 1828.

THE PEOPLE'S TICKET.

For President.

ANDREW JACKSON.

For Vice President.

JOHN C. CALHOUN.

For Elector of President and Vice President of the U. S. for the District composed of Worcester, Somerset, and part of Dorchester counties.

Thomas K. Carroll.

We are authorized to announce

Thomas Bayly,
Anthony B. Bennett,
John C. Wilson, jr., and
John J. Davis, Esq'rs.

as Candidates to represent Somerset county in the next House of Delegates of Maryland.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr. Editor,

Being from my youth obliged to earn my bread by the "sweat of the brow"—having oft toiled the live-long day in summer's heat at the plough, the harrow, or the hoe—and as my weal or wo is at all times materially affected by the current price of grain, it gave me no comfort to find, by one of your late papers, that corn is quoted at 33 a 34 cents per bushel. And sometimes 'tis even less than this. These low prices are most undoubtedly, in a great degree, occasioned by our loss of the West India trade. And the losing of this can be attributed to nothing other than either the culpable neglect or ignorance of J. Q. Adams and Henry Clay. Their partisans may assign it to which they please—They may call it a vile charge made by one of the "unprincipled opposition." I care not. Facts, 'tis said, are stubborn things; and it is a fact that a poor labourer (though he be denominated one of the 'rabble,') cannot find it in his heart servilely to countenance those men who through corrupt management and overtures wrested the sovereignty from the people, and now grind the face of the poor to sustain and retain themselves in their extravagance. Yes! extravagance, such as should rouse every honest man in the country to his duty—to aid in hurling those spendthrifts from their high places, and putting in men who have been known to sacrifice their own property for the public good, but never to exact payment for charges which no law on earth allows. My attention was lately arrested by a Report of the Committee of the H. of Rep. "on so much of the public accounts and expenditures as relates to the State Department." In this report I perceive that Geo. S. Watkins, special messenger of the U. S. to the minister at London, for compensation from the 12th of March to the 1st of July, 1825, received the sum of $1,347 68. Now, it clearly appears that Mr. Watkins made a most exorbitant charge. He left Washington for New York to seek a passage to Liverpool—This being the route of young master Clay I shall allow Mr. Watkins agreeably to his charges, thus:

From Washington to N. York	$ 20 25
From N. York to Liverpool	150 00
From Liverpool to London	30 00
From London to Liverpool	30 00
From Liverpool to N. York	150 00
From N. York to Washington	20 25
Amount of expenses	400 50
Amount paid G. S. Watkins	1,347 68
Balance,	$947 18

Here are nine hundred and forty-seven dollars and eighteen cents (clear of all expenses) for 112 days' services! This is prodigiously economical! Truly, the farmers will get in raptures on beholding how this economising administration can give a young sprig of the Metropolis, for a little more than three months' services nearly one thousand dollars. And all this managed so expertly that it remained hushed up nearly two years! Let us now calculate how much corn would be required to make up a sum of money sufficient to pay for this buck's trip to London. I said above, corn is quoted at 33 a 34 cents, from which deduct cost for conveying it to market, and you'll not have more than 30 cents per bushel remaining. It would therefore require upwards of three thousand one hundred and fifty-seven bushels of Corn to pay said George S. Watkins' outrageous charge of $947 18 for 112 days' services! exclusive of travelling expenses!! This is "with an eye to the strictest economy" at a round rate.

I might add to the above $1,940 for Pleasants' health voyage and pleasure excursion, $1000 for Mority Furst's taking President Adams' likeness, (which was charged to the contingent fund of the U. S. Indain department,) $2,119 25 for King & Ford's painting portraits of Indians, $4,319 88 for Tennison and Brown's bills for boarding Indians in Washington, ($3,279 of this being for boarding the very Indians who instigated the massacre of Fort Mimms,) $215 for blacking boots and shoes of Indians, (who wear moccasins,) and the immense sum of $15,000 paid for extra clerk hire, and part of that to Mr. Adams' favourite preacher, Robt. Little, who was brought from Europe to teach us religion,—and numerous other instances of shameful waste of public money "too tedious to mention." But, we have an economical administration, and ought not so much as "peep" at these extravagances—at least the cabinet men tell us so. And what will be said by mechanics, farmers, and others, who pay towards defraying government expenses whenever they purchase a yard of cloth or a pound of coffee? Will they succumb to those who have usurped the power, without an effort to place the reins of government in other hands? The ballot boxes, on the 31st of next October, will give the answer.

OLIVER THISTLE.

June 25, 1828.

From the Kentucky Gazette.

The notorious Doctor James Armstrong, the defamer of General Jackson, who was disgraced for cowardice at New Orleans, and who writes for the Reporter, published in Lexington over the signature of "A Tennessean," has in that paper of May 4th, made a scurrilous attack upon Mr. GWINN, a highly respectable preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Speaking of Mr. Gwinn he says; "Although I occupied a part of the same house with this gentleman, I neither messed with him nor slept in the same room; yet such statements would not be out of character with his reverence, because I have long since that period, convicted this same "Chaplain" of misrepresentation, before the Methodist Tennessee Annual Conference, and the proofs are now in my possession." Now if this cowardly slanderer speaks the truth, how does it happen that this same Chaplain Gwinn has been selected by the society to represent the interests of that church in the General Conference at Pittsburg. The citizens of this town had recently the pleasure of hearing this venerable and truly pious herald of the great truths of the gospel preach to them in the Methodist Church. He wsa then on his way, in company with Bishop McKendree, to Pittsburg, as a delegate from the Methodist Church in Tennessee, to the General Conference. Mr. Gwinn's character, as a pious, exemplary and able divine, as well as an upright and honorable man, are too well known for the slanders of such defamers as Doctor Armstrong to do him an injury."

MECHANICS.

Mr. Pleasants, the Editor of the Richmond Whig, in a letter to Mr. Clay, a copy of which has been published by the Committee on Retrenchment, excused himself for leaving the ship in which he had taken passage with his despatches for South America by saying:—

"The quantity of these individuals (25 passengers) was, in no respect, * * * nor by their respective qualities; they were, for the most part, mechanics emigrating to that country, and the filth of their persons, and obstreperous * * * of their deportment, was by no means corresponding to the republican respectability of their profession.—When the horrors of sea sickness were superadded to the other painful circumstances attending my situation, my sufferings became greater than I can describe. Deprived of every comfort with not ten feet square for exercise, a pestilential air, and most offensive smell, pervading every part of the ship, and even without the most common medicines, I assure you, Sir, that death would have been no unwelcome visiter."

We are left to conjecture what are the words supplied by stars, which Mr. Clay's modesty omitted in the copy. But from this letter of apology furnished by Mr. Clay as an excuse for Mr. Pleasants' leaving the ship and sending the despatches entrusted to his charge, by the Captain, Mr. Clay has given us the estimate which he places upon the mechanics of the country. The smell of a mechanic was too much for the deranged nerves of Mr. Clay's Editor, and he not only justifies his leaving the ship, but gave him $1,940 of the peoples's money to defray his expenses.

U. S. Telegraph.

Shelby County, Illinois, May 30, 1828.

SIGN OF THE TIMES!

At a battalion muster in the town of Shelbyville, on the 29th instant, the friends of Gen. Andrew Jackson formed themselves in a line, by request, and it appeared that two hundred and thirty-one were in favor of his election to the Presidency, and T-E-N for John Q. Adams!!! What saith the Intelligencer to this, Mr. Blackwell having been a witness of the fact? Illinois Corrector.

"Jacksonsburgh, Wayne county, Indiana, June 12, 1828.

"At a muster of the 1st battalion of the 37th regiment, held in the town of Milton, on the 3d day of May last, it being agreed upon by both parties to try the Presidential question, and a motion being made by the Lieutenant Colonel, an Adamsite, the result was as follows:—109 for Jackson, and 15 for Adams & Clay.

"At a muster of the 2d battalion of the same regiment, held at the house of William Brown, on the 10th day of the same month, the result was as follows:—120 for Jackson, and 12 for the Coalition."

A SIGN IN OHIO.—We could nearly fill our paper with the proceedings of public meetings in Ohio, in favor of Gen. Jackson for the next presidency, and other 'signs,' in this state, clearly and conclusively showing, that our citizens are wide awake to the approaching contest, & will meet the crisis of Mr. Clay's "war, pestilence and famine" like freemen. At a battalion muster in Deerfield, Warren county, on the 7th inst. a vote was taken on the next Presidency, when there appeared 226 for Jackson, and 44 for Adams. This is the county in which Jeremiah Morrow resides, the coalition candidate for United States' Senator. Nat. (Ohio) Repub.

Signs in North Carolina.—The following is communicated for the Star by a gentleman in Stokes county: "At the muster lately held by Capt. Wm. Vest, it was proposed to take a vote on the Presidential election, when the votes stood thus: For Jackson 65, for Adams 11. Also at Capt. Henry Null's company, for Jackson 64, for Adams 5. In the village of Bethania there are 31 voters, out of which Jackson will receive for certain 27, or perhaps 28 votes. So we go on the west side of Stokes county."

The Edenton Gazette of the 10th inst. states that "the Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions for the county of Pasquatank, at their session last week, proposed to appoint a Solicitor in the room of J. L. Bailey, Esq. resigned, when the vote stood for E. A. M'Nally 10—C. R. Kinney 4, and W. Beckwith 2. The successful candidate was supported by the friends of General Jackson, and the result is a fair test of the strength of the parties in that county. This is one of the counties set down by the Raleigh Register, in the electoral district "belonging to Isaac N. Lamb," (one of the Administration electors,) as decidedly for Mr. Adams, and if we mistake not the very county in which Mr. L. has his domicil—So we go."

The vote of the Grand Jury of the Superior Court of Sampson county was taken on the 2d ultimo, and was as follows: For Jackson 17, for Adams 1.

The vote of Capt. Walker's company, Warawcreek, Mecklenburg county, on the 5th April, was as follows: For Jackson 90, for Adams none.

Also of Capt. Bell's company, near Dillonsville, in the same county, For Jackson 101, for Adams 1.—N. C. Star.

From the Richmond Enquirer.

Plain Matters of Facts—undenied and undeniable.—No. I.

ONE AT A TIME.

"CONSTRUCTIVE JOURNIES."

The public mind seems to have become in a great degree bewildered, by the multitude of falsehoods which daily issue from the presses, respecting the approaching presidential election; and many of them are so ingeniously disguised, or so blended with seeming truths, as almost to disqualify plain honest people from judging correctly upon this most vitally interesting subject. To counteract the perplexity and confusion, arising from this state of things, it is thought that a few plain matters of fact might be selected, any one of which would be sufficient to enable every plain, honest citizen to decide for himself, as to the correctness of the vote, his first duty to his country will shortly call upon him to give.

The following, then, is admitted by all, to be "one plain matter of fact"—That John Q. Adams, the present President, did himself present an account against the United States, containing the following items:

1814,	June 30th, Expenses of a journey from St. Petersburgh to Ghent,	$ 886 86
"	Sept.—Expenses to Ghent,	1037 36
"	Dec. 31, do.	1884 65
1815,	January, do.	640 00

"Here we have $3,062 01 for Mr. Adams' expenses at Ghent, for only three months.—What was the nature of the expenses, has never been disclosed.

"This sum allowed for his expenses, back to Petersburg, equal to the sum allowed on his journey from St. Petersburg to Ghent $886 86." "This journey back to St. Petersburg, Mr. Adams never travelled. He went from Ghent to Paris, and thence to London, where he remained about two years as minister, and then returned to the United States."

So far Mr. Moore—It turns out then that the journey here asserted to have been performed, as the foundation of his charge, was not, in fact, performed. It was only "a constructive journey." Mr. Adams' remaining mute, amounts to a plea of "guilty" to this charge. Does it not, then, become the duty of every patriotic citizen, whatever may be the state of his former prejudices, of his present feelings, conscientiously to examine into the nature and character of this admitted charge? First, then: Is it not grounded on a falsehood? That must be admitted by all. Is it not made for the sake of money? That cannot be denied. Will any American Patriot; can any American Patriot, vote for any human being for his President; who not only claims the public money, but actually puts it into his pocket, when the claim itself is admitted to be grounded solely upon a known falsehood? It would seem to be impossible. Let every American citizen put it to himself, in a spirit of candor & patriotism, "Can I, an American citizen, vote for one for my President, who plunders the public Treasury, by the introduction of a falsehood upon the public records?" Does not its peculiar character and tendency, greatly aggravate the offence of this falsehood? It must be admitted by all, to be of no ordinary character. Its tendency is fraught with mischiefs of—the highest order. It corrupts the public morals—It especially corrupts the Treasury officers. It vitiates the public records. It strips the Treasury accounts of all credit, by disgracing them with falsehood. As it deprives them of all character for truth, so it must deprive them of all the attributes of evidence. Records are evidence, because they are presumed always to speak the truth; never to lie. Suppose a proposition made by Wright of Ohio, represented to be a perfect libertine in his assertions—that the treasury records should be received as evidence in courts of justice; and the honourable and eloquent Mr. Hamilton of South Carolina, were to object—"The Treasury records contain falsehoods—one of them introduced by the President himself, truth can only be received in evidence." Would W. yield to the objection, or eulogise the falsehood, and give himself as a precedent in justification? The fact of the falsehood cannot be denied, and the vice of lying must be defended, to justify the treasury records. Now, let every patriot think of this dilemma, and impartially ask himself, if Mr. Adams, who has brought this disgrace upon the records of his country, is fit to be its President now, or hereafter? Is a re-election the proper reward for his vices?—vices of the most immoral character and destructive tendencies? Would not his re-election amount to a full approbation of his vicies, pronounced by the American people, with a full knowledge of them? Would it not amount to a declaration, to every future President, that he may sin at pleasure, even to his private, plunder of public money; and his sins will not only be forgiven, but applauded and rewarded by the American people? What must necessarily ensue from such applause, of such vices, but the destruction to public and private morals, and the ruin and downfall of our republican federative government? Is not, then, this "one plain matter of fact," sufficient to direct every vote in the nation? Could Mr. Adams, or any friend of the Administration, have the hardihood to recommend to Congress any law, for giving the Treasury records the character of evidence in courts of justice, after the President had incorporated into them a falsehood? told, too, for his own pecuniary benefit?—If one entry be admitted with a knowledge of its falsehood, may not more than one be admitted, when a more pressing occasion urges the temptation? Have not more than one already been admitted. Have not many been already admitted? Who can tell how many may have been admitted? Who can distinguish the true from the false entries?

The intent undeniable.

The "quo animo," not even disguised.

Now, let every American Patriot solemnly ask himself—Whether the crime of vitiating the Treasury records is here exaggerated, either in the baseness of its character, or in the mischief of its tendencies? If not, can it be necessary to ask, shall it be sanctioned and rewarded by the American people.

QUÆRIST.

Accounts from Kentucky say, Maj. Barry, the Jackson candidate for Governor, will be elected by a majority of at least 5,000 votes.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT.

The tenth presidential term expiring with the 20th congress, on the third of March ensuing, a choice of the electors, and of president and vice president must be made in the passing year. The law of congress (of 1792) provides that the choice of electors of president, &c. must be made within thirty four days, preceding the first Wednesday of December. And the constitution requires of the electors to meet in their respective states on said third Wednesday of December, to vote, by ballot, separately for a president and vice president of the United States, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves. This year the first Wednesday of December falls on the third day of the month, consequently the choice of electors must be made on or after the 31st October, and before the first Wednesday of December.

According to the laws now in force (and at present there is no probability of their being changed) the ensuing choice of the electors will be made in the states of the union, in the following manner.

By General Ticket, (18 States.)

	Votes		Votes.
New Hampshire,	8	North Carolina,	15
Massachusetts,	15	Georgia,	9
Rhode Island,	4	Ohio,	16
Connecticut,	8	Indiana,	5
Vermont,	7	Mississippi,	3
New Jersey,	8	Illinois,	3
Pennsylvania,	28	Alabama,	5
Virginia,	24	Missouri,	3
Louisiana,	5	Kentucky,	14
By the Legislature, (2 States.)
Delaware,	3	South Carolina,	11
In Districts, (4 States.)
Maine,	9	Maryland,	11
New-York,	36	Tennessee,	11

Total 261—of these 131 are necessary to constitute a choice by the electoral colleges.

BIBLE SOCIETY MEETING.

At a meeting of the citizens of Somerset county, held the 20th of May, in the Episcopal Church in Princess-Anne, to take into consideration the resolution of the Young Men's Bible Society of Baltimore, recommending to each county in the state of Maryland, to supply every destitute family within their respective limits, with the sacred Scriptures, the Rev. Joseph Covell was called to the Chair, and Mr. Robert Patterson appointed Secretary. It was agreed that we do hereby organize ourselves into a Bible Society for Somerset county—and a Constitution was unanimously adopted.

CONSTITUTION.

OF THE

Bible Society of Somerset County.

Article. 1. This Society shall be called "The Bible Society of Somerset County."

Art. 2. The object of this Society shall be to supply destitute families in Somerset county, with copies of the Sacred Scriptures.

Art. 3. The officers of this Society shall consist of a President, six Managers, a Secretary, and a Treasurer, any three of whom shall constitute a quorum sufficient to transact business—and sixteen Collectors, two in each Electoral District, to be appointed by the managers to solicit new members and donations, and advance the interests of the Society.

Art. 4. The officers & managers shall meet three times in a year, at the following times: the third Tuesday in June, October and February.

Art. 5. There shall be an annual meeting, on the first Thursday in June, when a report of the proceedings of the Society, shall be read—officers elected, and other business attended to, that may be interesting to the Society.

After the adoption of the Constitution, the Society proceeded to the election of officers, when the following gentlemen were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Samuel Ker; Secretary, Mr. William Done; Treasurer, Mr. John S. Zieber; and the following gentlemen Managers, viz: Rev. Joseph Covell, Rev. Joshua Moore, Rev. William Quinn, Mr. J. H. Bell, Col. George Handy, Capt. Levin Ballard, of Jarvis.

The following resolutions were also unanimously adopted, viz:

Resolved, That we do hereby approve of the efforts of the Young Men's Bible Society of Baltimore, to supply every destitute family in the State of Maryland, with a copy of the Sacred Scriptures, within one year.

Resolved, That we do hereby resolve, in reliance on Divine aid, to supply every destitute family in the county of Somerset, with a copy of the Word of Life, within the limits of the above mentioned time

Resolved, That considering the difficulty of engaging the citizens of the county to undertake the labour of exploring every family; and considering, also, the importance of having this thing accurately done—that we thankfully receive the assistance of agents offered by the Young Men's Bible Society of Baltimore.

Resolved, That the religious of all denominations—the citizens of the county in general—and all those friendly to the Bible, the cause of truth and the advancement of knowledge, be respectfully and earnestly invited to co-operate in this noble and truly benevolent exertion.

Resolved, That as the old Bible Society of Somerset has been virtually extinct, that two persons be appointed from the present organized Society, and authorized to make arrangements with the managers of the old Society, and contract with them for any Bibles and funds they may have remaining on hand.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Society be rendered to the Rev. William P. Alrich, for his untiring and successful efforts in reviving the Bible cause among us.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this Society be published in both the papers of the village.

A communication was received from the Salisbury Bible Society, kindly offering to co-operate, by appropriating 50 dollars to assist in supplying Somerset and Worcester, which communication was approved, and the offer thankfully accepted.

Meeting concluded with prayer by the Rev. John B. Slemons.

Adjourned to the third Tuesday in June, at which time the Managers will meet in the Methodist meeting house, in Princess-Anne, at 10 o'clock in the morning.

On the 17th instant, at a meeting of a quorum of the Society, it having been ascertained that the persons nominated for Secretary and Treasurer, declined serving, it was unanimously agreed to appoint William Done, Esq. Treasurer, and George M. Willing, Esq. Secretary. It is ascertained that they are willing to serve.

Contents of the American Farmer, June 27.

The Agriculture of New England, and improvements suggested for the Southern States, by Thos. Gold, from the unpublished correspondence of G. W. Jeffreys, Esq. of N. C.—Valuable cow in Pennsylvania—On the culture of Orchard Grass—On Hemp and Corn Culture—Extract from the Manual on the Culture and Manufacture of Silk, with remarks and notes—Fruit Trees in late bloom—Culture of Olives in the South; New Family Spinner and Cotton Carder; Education of Females; on Domestic Management—Items from the London Annals of Sporting; Curious Fox Chase, Extraordinary Feat, Pedestrianism—Cure for Distemper and Hydrophobia—Pedigrees of Thorough Bred Horses continued—Debt and Credit—Want of a Point, a nice Point—Loading Hay in Chili—Vitiated Atmosphere from Vegetation—Expansive force of Steam; Insect Labours—The Ape—List of Premiums for the Annual Show and Fair of the Maryland Agricultural Society in October next—Pump worked by a Dog—Prices Current.

Baltimore Prices Current.

June 27, 1828.

FLOUR—white wheat family, $5 a 6.00; superfine Howard-st. 4.75 a 4.87½; city mills 4.50; Susquehanna, 4.37½ a 4.50; WHEAT, best red .85 a .90, best white .95 a 1.00—CORN, .34 a .35; OATS .20 a .22

☞The Orphans' Court of Somerset County will sit on Tuesday next.

☞A Camp Meeting for Annamessex Circuit will be held on Deal's Island, JULY 17th.

☞The Ladies' Bible Society of Somerset County will meet on Monday the 7th of July, at 10 o'clock A. M. in the Methodist Church in Princess-Anne.

CELEBRATION OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE.

The fifty-second Anniversary of American Independence will be celebrated at B. C. Springs, by a number of gentlemen from different parts of the Electoral District. An Oration will be delivered on the occasion, at 11 o'clock A. M. by WESLEY SLOAN, Esq. after which the company will be addressed by Messrs. DENNIS and CARROLL, the candidates for Elector of President of the U. S.

June 10, 1828.

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by George M. Willing, a justice of the peace, and to me directed, one, James Dorman use of Jery. Mezzick use of Hooper & Jenkins against Louda Riggin and James Powell, and one George Wright against Louda Riggin, I have seized and taken in execution as the property of the said Louda, one negro Girl named Sarah, which said negro girl I shall sell on the 22nd of July next, to the highest bidder for ready cash, at the Court-House door, in Princess-Anne, between 2 and 3 o'clock P. M. to satisfy the above claims.

SAMUEL McBRYDE,
June 24—j1 Constable.

EMIGRATION TO LIBERIA.

NOTICE.

THE Managers of the American Colonization Society give notice, that they are ready to receive applications for the conveyance of free people of color to the colony of Liberia.

In all cases, the age, sex, and professions of the applicants must be mentioned.

Applicants from the State of Maryland must be prepared to offer the affidavit of some free white person, to their having actually resided within the State of Maryland for "twelve months" previous to the period of emigration.

Applications may be made in Baltimore, to Hon. Judge Brice, Charles Howard Esq. of John E., John H. B. Latrobe Esq., or Charles C. Harper Esq., Agents of the Society. July 1

PROPOSALS

For publishing in Hagerstown, Md. a Weekly Newspaper, under the title of The Hagerstown Mail.

The Mail will convey "news from all nations"—particularly those most interesting to our own country, and will be conducted so as to give early and correct information of public affairs generally; of political occurrences in the different states; of the rise and fall of American produce in our principal cities, and the prices in foreign markets.

The political principles of this paper will be as purely Republican as those contained in the Declaration of Independence, and the Rights of the People shall be at all times zealously, firmly and fearlessly supported, whoever may be in power. The Establishment is intended to be a permanent one, and as such every endeavor will be used to render it a first rate country paper deserving public patronage.

With regard to the Presidential question which now agitates the whole Union, the Mail will decidedly and openly advocate the election of ANDREW JACKSON. And when it is considered that there is only one press in Baltimore, and only one between Baltimore and Cumberland that espouses his cause, it will readily be allowed that in so large an extent of country there is room for at least another—more particularly as all the other presses in this rich, and populous country, where he has so many disinterested friends, are against him; the times too emphatically demand the establishment of such a press, for at no period of our political history have such unfair and unjustifiable means been resorted to, in order to destroy the character of a public man, as have been within the last year to injure the well-earned fame of the Hero of New Orleans, and merely because he is a candidate before the people for a high and important office—although he was brought out by the people themselves; but the Mail will never leave him until he arrives at Washington, and receives from the hands of the people, the honors justly due to one whose whole life in peace and in war has been devoted to his Country's Liberty, Welfare and Happiness.

Terms of Subscription.

For a single paper Three Dollars a year: But this may be discharged by Two Dollars paid in advance, or Two Dollars and Fifty cents in Six Months—Any person obtaining Ten subscribers and becoming responsible for the money shall have a paper gratis.

Hagers-town, May 13—July 1

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

Communicated for the Readers of the Village Herald.

VERSES

In commemoration of the Nativity of our LORD JESUS CHRIST.

Ubi amatur, non laboratur;
Et si laboretur, labor mutatur.
THAT IS,
"Where love is, there is no labour, and if there be labour, the labour is loved."—Augustine.

O for a song of sacred mirth,
To celebrate the Saviour's birth!
Who at his heavenly Father's call,
Brought life and liberty to all.

Glory to God, the LORD Most High,
Who frame'd the earth, and starry sky:
Whose wisdom form'd the gracious plan,
To renovate degenerate man;
And Jesus sent our race to bless,
Richly adorn'd with truth and grace;
To burst the barriers of the grave,
Omnipotent to heal and save.

Let Homer from Parnassus' mount,
His Grecian heroes' acts recount,
Exhibit fierce Achilles' rage,
Style him the champion of the age.

Let Virgil in majestic verse,
Renowned Æneas deeds rehearse.

Let Horace tune the pagan lyre,
Enrapturd with poetic fire,
And hail Augustus Cæsar's name,
With others of distinguish'd fame.

My task he, to my latest breath,
To sing the Man of Nazareth,
Who still the path of virtue trod,
Gentle, humane, approv'd of God.

Anniversary of the Nativity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

"And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. And Joseph went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth into Judeah, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, to be taxed, with Mary his espoused wife, and she brought forth her first born son, and wrapped them in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn. And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the fields, keeping watch over their flock by night. And lo! the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the Glory of the Lord shone round them, and they were afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a SAVIOUR, which is CHRIST the LORD. And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will towards men!"

Such is the history which the inspired Evangelist has given us of the birth of the Son of God, and consequent rejoicing of the heavenly host. While reading the sublime language of the angel, we are imperceptibly raised above these sublunary scenes; and with an eye of faith viewing in the mighty space of eternity, the thousands of souls freed from sin and Satan, our elevated thoughts break forth, with ecstatic joy, in the song of "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will towards men!" If such was the rejoicing of angels—if the shepherds with a haste went to Bethlehem, to see this thing which the Lord made known to them—if wise men of the East came to worship the infant King of the Jews—cold, indeed, must our hearts be, if we refuse to remember that day, on which the incarnate God visited this lower world.

A SINGULAR STORY.

From Madame de Montier's Letters.

When I was in the country last year, says madame du Montier, I chanced to fall in company with a good friar, sixty years of age, who told me the following story:

About forty years ago, he was sent for to a highwayman, to prepare him for death. They shut him up in a small chapel with the malefactor, and while he was making every effort to excite him to repentance, he perceived that the man was absorbed in thoughts and hardly attended to his discourse. My dear friend, said he, do you reflect that in a few hours you must appear before a more awful tribunal than that which has lately condemned you? What can divert your attention from what is of such infinite importance? True, father, returned the malefactor: but I cannot divest myself of the idea that it is in your power to save my life. How can I possibly effect that? said the friar, and even supposing I could, should I venture to do it, and thereby give you an opportunity, perhaps, to commit many more crimes? If that be all that prevents you, replied the malefactor, you may rely on my word; I have behold my fate too near, again to expose myself to what I have felt.

The friar acted as you and I should have done:—he yielded to the impulse of compassion; and it only remained to contrive the means of the man's escape. The chapel in which they were was lighted by one small window near the top, 15 feet from the ground. You have only, said the criminal to the friar, to set your chair on the altar, which we can remove to the foot of the wall, and if you will get upon it, I can reach the window by the help of your shoulders. The friar consented to this manœuvre, and having reached the altar, which was portable, seated himself quietly in his chair. About three hours after, the executioner, who began to grow impatient, knocked, at the door, and asked the friar what was become of the criminal. He must have been an angel, replied he coolly; for, by the faith of the priest, he went through the window. The executioner, who found himself a loser by this account, inquired if he were laughing at him, and ran to inform the judges. They repaired to the chapel where this good man was sitting, who, pointing to the window, assured them upon his conscience, that the malefactor flew out at it; and that supposing him an angel, he was going to recommend himself to his protection, that, moreover, if he were a criminal, which he could not suspect after what he had seen, he was not obliged to be his guardian. The magistrates could not preserve their gravity at this good man's sang froid, and, after wishing a pleasant journey to the culprit, went away.

Twenty years afterwards, this friar, travelled over the Ardennes, lost his way, when just at the day was closing, a kind of peasant accosted him, and after examining him very attentively, asked him whither he was going, and told him the road he was travelling was a very dangerous one. If you will follow me, he added, I will conduct you to a tarm at no great distance, where you may pass the night in safety. The friar was much embarrassed; the curiosity visible in the man's countenance excited his suspicion; but considering that if he had a bad design towards him it was impossible to escape, he followed him with trembling steps. His fear was not of long duration: he soon perceived the farm which the peasant had mentioned; and as they entered, the man, who was the proprietor of it, told his wife to kill a capon, with some of the finest chickens in the poultry yard, and to welcome his guest with the best cheer. While supper was preparing the countryman re-entered, followed by eight children, whom he thus addressed:—My children pour forth your grateful thanks to this good friar. Had it not been for him you would not have been here, nor I either; he saved my life. The friar instantly recollected the features of the speaker, and recognised the thief whose escape he had favoured. The whole family loaded him with carresses and kindness; and, when he was alone with the man, he inquired how he came to be so well provided for. I kept my word with you, said the thief; and, resolving to lead a good life in future, I begged my way hither, which is my native country, and engaged in the service of the master of this farm. Gaining his favour by my fidelity and attachment to his interest, he gave me his only daughter in marriage. God has blessed my endeavours. I have amassed a little wealth; and I beg that you will dispose of me and all that belongs to me. I shall now die content, since I have been able to see and testify my gratitude towards my deliverer.—The friar told him he was well repaid for the service he had rendered him by the use to which he devoted the life he had preserved. He would not accept of any thing as a recompense; but could not refuse to stay some days with the countryman, who treated him like a prince. This good man then obliged him to make use at least of one of his horses to finish his journey, and never quitted him till he had traversed the dangerous roads that abound in those parts.

Pleasure is to woman, what the sun is to the flower—if moderately enjoyed, it beautifies, it refreshes, and it improves; if immoderately, it withers and destroys. But the duties of domestic life, exercised as they must be in retirement, and calling forth all the sensibilities of the female, are perhaps as necessary to the full development of her charms, as the shade and the showers are to the rose, confirming its beauty, and increasing its fragrance.

From the Boston Recorder & Telegraph.

DOMESTIC WRETCHEDNESS.

In conversation with a neighbour of mine a few days since he remarked, "A great deal has been written, and much has been done, of late, to stop the progress of intemperance in our country, and it is all good.—But there is one important consideration connected with this subject, which I do not remember to have seen noticed, that is domestic unhappiness. And this is a cause, which I have reason to believe more than any other produces this most degrading vice. I well recollect when Mr. S. who was a particular friend of mine in early life, first entered in this way, and I marked the progress of this dreadful disease upon him, until I saw him laid in the grave. If the influence of a virtuous woman is great in society, how much greater is that of one of an opposite character, who has so powerful an ally in every unregenerate heart. My mind is even now fill'd with horror, when I think of the influence which an artful, wicked woman has in her family, especially over her husband.

"The beginning of intemperance in Mr. S. had not even the slightest semblance of any guilt, to an uninterested observer. For at the age of thirty-five, no man's character stood fairer in the eyes of the world than his; therefore all were slow to believe him a fallen man, and those who knew his kind and friendly disposition, were the very last to believe him so. His look of thoughtfulness, his absence of mind, and sometimes the silent tear, denoted, what his tongue could never utter, that she, whom he had chosen to assist and comfort him in the journey of life was totally unlike what a wife should be. Beneath an exterior of uncommon loveliness, was concealed a heart, where foul and bitter suggestions were engendered, and upon her unfortunate husband, they fell with a deadly weight.

"O, the dreadful moment of peril, when a man's confidence is destroyed, when he cannot take shelter in the covenant of God's promises. Perhaps a woman, at the head of a family, may not unaptly be compared to the heart in the human system, on which depends every thing of comfort or life, but which in a state of disease, disorganizes every other part. Here it was that my friend suffered, agonized and fell. Where he expected and deserved order, quietness, plenty and cheerful good nature, he, for a long time in uncomplaining misery, met only the reverse. At length in the darkness of night—but God saw him—he yielded to temptation; he deviated but a little, yet the second time the remonstrances of conscience were less formidable; till, at last, fear of discovery was his chief trouble. But this barrier was soon removed, and nothing was then left to hinder his fatal progress. Reputation, health, and all that can make life desirable without religion, were gone. It was easily then for my poor friend to think he was willing to die. He did die—and in a state of hopless gaiety.

"It seems to be evident, without a doubt, that the character and conduct of his wife, was the occasion, and the only occasion of his aberrations. He had no fondness for ardent spirit, but an habitual indifference to it, until that false reasoning of millions took possession of his mind, "I cannot bear my trouble, therefore I will destroy myself:"

"O, if women only knew, (but they do know,) if they would consider consequences, and exert the same power to make every thing regular and pleasant, kind and cheerful, in their own houses, as they did to render themselves so precious to marriage, how many husbands might be saved from the fatal snares of intemperance!"

Errors of the Press.—When it is known that from fifty to a hundred thousand types are picked up singly and put in their proper places for each day's paper, it will appear not extraordinary that occasionally one or two of them will get into the wrong place, or that in making up a body containing many small parts errors should sometimes occur. It is a matter of surprise that so few do slip press especially, as as correct as it is.

Improving the Breed of Cattle.

Our attention has been drawn to this subject, by a gentleman to whose liberality, zeal and intelligence, this state is much indebted. The importance of improving the breed of cattle and domestic animals, is made abundantly manifest from the fact, that lean stock cattle to the value of 800,000 dollars, are yearly brought from the interior of New York, and sold in this state, at an average advance of one third more price. The cattle from New York are not better bred than ours. They feed easier and grow larger; and as before stated, are considered worth one third more.

Every body knows there is little or no difference in the trouble and expense of raising one colt more than another, yet one of a particular make and breed, at a given age, will be worth ten times as much as the other. One horse will travel with double the speed, and perform twice the labour of another, and with [illegible] ease to himself. So with horn[illegible] cow will give four tim[illegible] much milk as another, and not [illegible]cent more to keep her. Also wi[illegible] Put two pigs of different breed[illegible] the same pen, with the same [illegible] at a given time, one pig will [illegible] and twice the weight of the oth[illegible] this shows the immense importa[illegible] to farmers to procure the best [illegible]ock. To promote this beneficial purpose, is the aim of the Agricultural Societies, and the design of their exhibitions and cattle shows. [Pennsylvania Gazette.]

FODDER.—Nearly double the fodder is every year, and by almost every farmer, expended than would be sufficient, was it properly and economically prepared and fed.

It is ascertained that hay goes much farther by being cut and chaff before it is foddered out. Many scientific and observing men have ascertained by actual measurement that a saving of nearly half and some say more is effected by this means.

The tops of Indian corn, cut as rye straw, mixed with potatoes or meal, is recommended as superior to rye straw, used in the same manner, for fodder.—The cornstalk contains a great quantity of farinae substance, and is very nutritious. Cut and scalded with a little bran, they are very good food for milch cows. In the common way, the blades are eaten, and the stalks wasted; but by adopting the plan recommended, the whole is saved.

MR. CAMPBELL THE TRAVELLER.

At the table of a friend, I had the pleasure of meeting one day with Mr. Campbell, a London Missionary to the South of Africa, who had published an interesting book of travels into the interior of that unexplored continent. Mr. Campbell is an intelligent looking Scotchman, abundantly communicative and entertaining on the subject of his travels. He penetrated as far as Lattakoo, 1300 miles from the Cape, a point to which no European had ever attained before him. His anecdotes of the singular people he visited were highly amusing, and illustrative of human nature in some of its wave varieties.

Of the sagacity of oxen finding water in the desert, he related an instance which came under his own observation. They were obliged to cross one of those sandy wastes, in which it was usual for numbers of cattle to perish by thirst. By making as few and as short stops as possible, he escaped with the loss of only four out of twenty-four; but twenty or thirty which composed his caravan. Besides these, are a large drove of sheep and goats followed the party, on which the Hottentots were to subsist. Just at break of day, when all were ready to faint with thirst, the oxen made a sudden halt, and snuffed the air of both sides, as if uncertain which way to proceed: while the sheep or goats, taught by instinct or observation to trust to the superior sagacity of the oxen, patiently waited their decision. After a minute or two, they all struck off on a gallop towards a little bushy hill at some distance, but when the party arrived, they found there no gratification, that the pools had just been emptied. The oxen took a new direction, followed by the whole squadron, and quickly came to another pool, into which they plunged, followed by the sheep, goats, Hottentots, and the good missionary himself.

In a skirmish with some Bushmen, a Hottentot of the party was wounded in the neck by a poisoned arrow. The man submitted to have a large piece of flesh cut out, in the hope of arresting the poison, but all to no purpose. No alteration appeared in him the first night; the next morning Mr. C. consulted an old Hottentot on the probable issue. The sage pointed to the sun; and tracing his finger along his course to the west, as soon as it came to the horizon, he put his hand to his mouth as if plucking something out of it—thus intimating that at sunset the spirit of the wounded man would depart. About noon, his feet began to swell; and the inflammation rapidly extended over his whole body, so that scarcely the shape of man was left; and the moment the sun sunk behind the hills he expired.

One day three of the party went out to look for some of their strayed cattle. One of them having gone a little distance from his companions, suddenly came in front of three lions couched among the bushes. It was too late to retreat; he gave a hasty glance after his companions, but on looking again at the savage beasts, they had advanced some steps nearer. He had sufficient presence of mind to adopt the usual practice of the Hottentots, when they find themselves in such an unpleasant neighbourhood—that of standing still, and looking them steadily in the face, while he waved his musket in the air as a signal to the rest of the party. They came up, but it was only to share in his trepidation. They maintained their ground, however, looking steadily at their enemies, who, growing tired of this species of ogling, at length slowly withdrew. It is a singular fact, that few ravenous beasts can long endure the steady gaze of [illegible] will attack him while he stand[illegible] and an attentive observer of [illegible] motions. Does not such an [illegible]ent strikingly illustrate the remarkable pledge given to Noah: "The fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every beast of the earth; into your hands are they delivered."

An animal was killed by the party, which Mr. C. thought must be the Unicorn of the Scriptures. It was a large powerful animal, with a strong pointed horn, grown directly out of his forehead. The skull, with this remarkable appendage, is deposited in the museum of the Lond. Missionary Society.—Ep. Watch.

We are indebted to an esteem friend in Ireland, for the following Lament, sung by one of their native bards at a country fair, to the memory of a man named Sullivan, who forfeited his life by engaging in the attempt to free his country from bondage—called from its unsuccessful termination, "the Rebellion of 1798." The style is similar to the laments sung at funerals, and was taken as it was rehearsed from the lips of the speaker.—Philadelphia Souvenir.

Cold and silent is thy repose—damp falls the dew of heaven—yet the sun shall bring joy, and the mist of night shall pass away before his beams; but thy breast shall not again vibrate with the pulse of life at the return of morning, nor shall thou wander more on thy native mountains—amid the scenes of thy childhood, where first were awakened thy friendships, where first thou smiled in the playfulness of infancy.

Cold and silent is thy repose!

Thou wert dearer to me than the rays of the declining sun—and when I turn my eyes on him, with the soft blush upon thy cheek—like him at midday, thou shone in the dignity of manhood; but early was thy fate clouded with misfortune, and thou sank beneath it—nor shall thou arise again like him—no, thou shalt return no more!

Cold and silent is thy repose!

Thou wert to me as the nerve of my throbbing heart—for thy sake only was this world dear—thou wert brave—thou wert generous—thou wert just—thou wert loved by all—but why look on thy virtues? Why recall these scenes to memory which are to be no more beheld? He whose they were, has passed away—he has gone for ever—to return no more.

Cold and silent is thy repose!

From the N. Y. Morning Courrier.

THOUGHTS.—To contemplate the events of life too closely, leads insensibly to a belief in fatality. Prudence frequently loses the game which rashness wins; judgement breaks down on the road, and folly attains the goal; the structure of talent is prostrated, while stupidity builds a palace. These things are strange; and the mind is strongly disposed to throw the blame from itself, and consider destiny as its enemy. This idea solaces the pride, while it enfeebles the energies. Restless attempts to vainly attempts to solve the mystery that depravity should be permitted to look up in the face of day, that hypocrisy should be the companion of success, and that honour and honesty, and virtue should not govern earth as well as inherit heaven. But human existence itself is an unfathomable mystery: then why seek to understand the existence of evil, moral and physical? Why should the body be subject to its thousand torments, and the mind to its thousand pangs? Why is passion powerful, and reason weak? If good be mightier than evil, why is not evil annihilated? Can philosophy tell? Not till she receives her lesson from 'the great teacher, death.'

I REMEMBER, I REMEMBER.

BY THOMAS HOOD.

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born,
The little window where the sun
Came peeping in at morn;
He never came a wink too soon,
Nor brought too long a day,
But now I often wish that night
Had borne my breath away.

I remember, I remember
The roses, red and white,
The violets, and the lily-cups,
Those flowers made of light!
The lilacs where the robin built
And where my brother set
The laburnum on his birth day,
The tree is living yet!

I remember, I remember
Where I was used to swing,
And tho't the air must rush as fresh
To swallows on the wing;
My spirit flew in feathers then,
That is so heavy now,
And summer pools could hardly cool
The fever on my brow!

I remember, I remember
The fir trees dark and high:
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky:
It was childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm farther off from heav'n
Than when I was a boy.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, JANUARY 1, 1828.

Terms of Publication.

THE VILLAGE HERALD is published weekly at $2 50, per annum, or at $2 if sent by mail, and subject to postage, in either case to be paid half-yearly in advance. No subscription taken for a shorter period than six months; none discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off, and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for each continuance: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE.

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S.	1 Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks		par
Annapolis		par
Easton		par
Frederick		par
Frederick County Bank		par
Rank Westminster		par
Hager's Town		par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co		par
Elkton		1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia		20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown		par
Union Bank Georgetown		par
Bank of Washington		par
Bank of the metropolis		par
Patriotic Bank		par
Bank of Alexandria		par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria		par
Bank of Potomack		par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria		par
Bank of Virginia & Branches		par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches		par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester		par
Do at Charlestown		par
Do at Leesburg		par
Do at Romney		1
Lynchburg Branches		1
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling		34
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware		1
Farmers' Bank		par
Wilmington & Brandywine		par
Commercial Bank of Smyrna		par
Branch Bank of Milford		par
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks		par
York Bank		par
Carlisle Bank		par
Chambersburg Bank		par
Gettysburg Bank		par
Lancaster Bank		par
Harrisburg Bank		par
Chester County Bank		1
Germantown Bank		1
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster		par
NEW-YORK
City Banks		par
Albany Banks		1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank		5
Cape Fear Bank		5
State Bank and Branches		5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks		2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah		21
Bank of Augusta		25
Bank of Darien		30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank		15
Trenton Banking Company		14
Newark Bank		14
State Bank at Camden		14
Do Elizabethtown		14
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown		14
Do New Brunswick		14
Salem Banking Company		14
People's Bank at Patterson		14

50 and upwards

LITERARY PREMIUMS.

The editor of the Amulet, and Ladies' Literary Cabinet, desirous of drawing forth the talents of the Ladies, offers

For the best original Tale, not exceeding two columns of the Amulet, Twenty Dollars.

For the best Poem, not exceeding fifty lines Ten Dollars.

The premiums will be awarded by competent female judges, and the envelope containing the names of the unsuccessful competitors, will not be opened. All communications must be sent in, post paid, by the first of February next, addressed to the Editor of the Amulet, Philadelphia.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11, 1827.

§§§§§§§§ ON application of Joseph §§§§§§§§ Barkley, adm. d.b.n. of Mary §§§§§§§§ Millisay, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Mary Millisay—late of Somerset county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of June, 1828,—they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1827.

JOSEPH BARKLEY, Adm'r.
of M. Millisay, dec'd.

Dec. 18 4t

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11th, 1827.

§§§§§§§§ ON application of Daniel §§§§§§§§ Benson, Adm'r. of Adrian §§§§§§§§ Marshall, late of Somerset county, dec'd, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Adrian Marshall—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber, on or before the 24th of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th of Dec., 1827.

DANIEL BENSON, Adm'r of A. Marshall, dec'd.

Dec. 18 4t

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

§§§§§§§§ ON application of William §§§§§§§§ Costen, Administrator of §§§§§§§§ Betsey Ann Taylor, late of Somerset county, dec'd., it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Betsey Anne Taylor late of Somerset county deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1827.

WILLIAM COSTEN, Adm'r. of B. A. Taylor, dec'd.

Dec. 18 4t

WANTED,

FOR the ensuing year, a GIRL, about 12 or 13 years of age, for whom a liberal price will be given. For further information enquire at this office.

Dec. 18.

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

Certificate.
10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that our first attention should be employed in avoiding the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born to consumption, the purest medicine of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully to be attended to.

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the exertion of an asthmatic, consequently the shortness of breath and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for, and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hyperbarical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON S. SUDLER,
Princess-Anne, Md.

Nov. 29, 1827.

District of Maryland, to wit:

(L. S.) BE IT REMEMBERED, That on this 23d day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the U. S. of America, William Hollins, of the said district, hath deposited in this office, the title of a book, the right whereof he claims as proprietor, in the words following, to wit:

"Rail roads in the United States of America: as a united and organized against a sole system, on the part of the State of Maryland, to the Baltimore & Ohio rail road company, addressed to the officers and representatives of the people in the several States of the Union, and to the General Government—By a Citizen of Baltimore."

In conformity with the act of Congress, of the U. S. entitled "An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the time therein mentioned" and also to the Act, entitled "An Act, supplementary to the Act, entitled An Act, for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the time therein mentioned, and extending the benefits thereof, to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints.

PHILIP MOORE,
Clerk of the District of Md.

A few copies of the above work are on sale at this office.

Magistrates' Blanks

Neatly printed at the Herald Office.

T. L. DISHAROON,

HATTER,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their customs, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York marks afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to vie with those manufactories of Oil establishment, he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something more than fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long stepping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their customs shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. 3m

TRUSTEE'S SALE.

IN CHANCERY IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT.

Joshua Wright and Priscilla Dunn vs. Isaac R. Jones, Divisee of John Jones of Jonathan.

BY virtue of a decree of Somerset County Court, in this case, the subscriber will offer at public sale, to the highest and best bidder, on the premises, on the 9th of January next, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. part of a tract of land called Shadwell's Chance, or Shadwell's Disposed, situated in the county aforesaid, on the south east side of Nanticoke river, containing one hundred and fifty acres, more or less, with the improvements and appurtenances thereto belonging. The terms of sale will be a credit of twelve months, with interest from the day of sale, to be secured by a bond or bonds given to the Trustee, with good security, upon the payment of which and ratification of the sale, the Trustee is directed by the said decree to execute to the purchaser or purchasers, his, her, or their heirs, a deed for the aforesaid property, conveying the title of the complainants and defendant in the premises.

Notice is hereby given that the creditors of John Jones of James, late of the aforesaid county deceased, that they must bring in their claims against the said John with the vouchers thereof, and lodge the same with the Clerk of Somerset county court, within six months from the day of sale.

THOMAS JONES, (of John,)
Dec. 18—3t Trustee.

From a New-England paper.

NEATNESS.

N. England has many points of advantage; but in respect to neatness and order about her villages & farms, she contrasts badly with other countries. Englishmen, who visit us, are disgusted with the appearance of our villages, for, in their own land, they are accustomed to see them adorned by the hand of system and taste.

Let us look to this point then. Neatness and order are enjoined not only by economy but by comfort. Every slovenly farmer resigns one of the choicest pleasures within his reach, that of seeing his house and home surrounded by the marks of neatness, industry, and taste. He brings up his family amidst confusion, and presents to his children an example of negligence the most unpardonable. Can he wonder if they follow this example? They will go further. In their very partialities they will have a vicious preference for what just taste, good sense, and sound economy condemn. They will regard with less regard with less respect the decencies of life, and be more likely to abandon the paths of virtue and morality. There is as much meaning in the old adage, and the observance of which let me urge as a remedy for every degree of evil I advert to—"Have a place for every thing, and keep every thing in its place." In the language of a venerated man, now gone to a better world:

Let order o'er your time preside,
And method all your business guide:
One thing at once be still begun,
Contrived, resolv'd, pursu'd and done;
Nor till to morrow's light delay,
What might to well be done to day:
Neat be your barns; your houses neat:
Your doors be clean; your court yards swept:
Neat be your barns; 'tis long confess'd,
The neatest farmers are the best.

[Rev. C. A. Goodrich.]

FAMILY RECEIPTS.

Potatoes.—Frozen potatoes will yield far more flour for starch than fresh ones. That flour, with as much wheat flour, some butter, sugar, yest, and currants, will make excellent tea bread, which will keep a month.

Beef.—The Tartars put lean beef under a heavy press, until no liquor runs from it; then chop and pound it, add sugar, unground pepper, clarified butter, and crumbs of bread, and work all together; roll it into cakes, and when thoroughly dried it is excellent. The Russians add bits of bacon, and tie it up in bladders or pots. It needs no cooking, and is thought to be superior to common potted beef or Bologna sausages.

To take off spots from cloth of any colour—Take half a pound of crude honey, the yolk of a new-laid egg, and the bulk of a nut of sal ammoniac, mix them together and apply the mixture. Soon afterwards, wash the place with clean water, and the spot will disappear.

To increase the force of gunpowder—Add three ounces of pulverized quicklime to one pound of gunpowder: shake it together till the white colour of the lime disappears; and its force will be increased one-third.

Cows.—Keep no more cows than you can keep well. One cow well fed will give as much milk as two treated indifferently, and produce more butter. Sweet potatoes, carrots, pumpkins, and ground oats, are unquestionably the best article of food for milch cattle. These cause the milk and butter to assume a fine flavour and a rich colour, and at the same time the quantity and quality are greatly increased.

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATE

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JAN. 1, 1828.

☞ The Office of the Village Herald is removed to the late residence of Dr. King, nearly opposite Messrs. Johnston & Suddler's store.

We herewith present our patrons the compliment of the season, and render our unfeigned thanks for the encouragement received at their hands.

CONGRESS.—Doubtless our readers would be glad to hear what is being done in Washington. The following extract of a letter to an editor in Baltimore may serve to give them a little idea of the proceedings of our representatives:

"Congress has sat nearly an hour each day, during which time many petitions have been presented, and many resolutions offered for no other purpose, than to shew the names of the members, who offered them, in print."

That this statement is made in perfect verity we cannot believe, yet we fear there is too much truth in it.

The report of the lead mines, gives a very satisfactory view of the importance of this property to the U. States; the expected annual supply is equal to 10,000,000 pounds. A tythe of which as rent received by the government, will be more than sufficient for the army and the navy.

THE AMERICAN SYSTEM.

In the continuation of our remarks upon the great interest of domestic industry, we present an extract from the editorial department of the Constitutional Whig, published at Richmond. This we esteem the more valuable as the State of Virginia has hitherto persisted in inveterate hostility to this interest. After invoking the reader's attention to the mutual dependence of Agriculture and Manufactures, and adverting to established facts, which may be more safely relied upon, than "all the visionary theories, of all the hair-splitters and Constitution expounders, put together;" they proceed as follows:

"Upon the subject of manufactures, a great revolution is advancing in Virginia. Never within our limited experience, have we known the public mind rush so instantaneously, from one extreme to another—from the most blind and bigoted and furious opposition to the tariff and manufactures, to the general persuasion of their indispensable necessity to restore the waning fortunes of the State, and the wish to see Virginia at once engaged in them. It is rare to meet an intelligent mind that has not exchanged its prejudices against manufactures, for convictions of their utility and expediency. These convictions have been forced upon the public by the sternest of teachers—adversity; by the contemplation of general poverty and decay. The public mind is freed from the prejudices so long felt, so industriously fomented by certain politicians. All that was ever necessary to liberate it of its bigotry, has been accomplished—to bring it to the point of enquiry. So plain, simple and conclusive is the reasoning which proves the expediency of Virginia's engaging in manufactures—her future prosperity is so obviously dependent upon her withdrawing a portion of her labour and capital from the overdone and unproductive (unproductive because overdone) pursuit of agriculture—that to bring the public mind to think on these subjects, was one and the same thing as to convince it that manufacturing was good policy. We consider the struggle between prejudice and reason as already over—the contest was as brief as the antagonists were unequal.—Virginia is about to become a largely manufacturing state, and what is a necessary consequence, Virginia will in a few years be an advocate in the tariff. The politicians whose antiquated and disastrous prejudices have so long controlled her destinies, and throw this fairest most heaven favoured portion of the American Confederacy so far in the rear of the spirit of the age, and of States her children in point of years, and her inferiors in every natural advantage, must either walk off, or be driven off the stage.

The revolution in opinion is already producing good fruit. It will be seen from the resolutions of the people of Fredericsburg, that that spirited and patriotic town is determined to bring herself immediately within the advantages of manufactures. We shall look to see her down hill march arrested, and her gloomy and deserted streets brightened in a few years, by busy faces and the cheerful hum of business. Petersburg was the first (as she always is in patriotic action) to stem the current of prejudice, essay the establishment of manufactures. Richmond we are advised, is agitating the same experiment, and a meeting of her citizens is expected to be called speedily, to take the subject under consideration. This spirit has penetrated to the country, as will be seen from the following proceedings in Fauquier."

From the Warrenton Va. Gazette.
November 7th, 1827.

Agreeably to previous notice, a respectable number of Citizens of New Baltimore and its vicinity assembled at the House of Mr James Hampton, to take into consideration the propriety of establishing a cotton, wool and flax manufactory in said town.

The meeting being called to order, Eppa Hunton was appointed Chairman, and Philip A. Klipstine Sec. when the Chairman having explained the object of the meeting, the following resolutions were adopted.

1st. Resolved, that it is expedient to establish a manufactory of cotton, wool and flax in the town of New Baltimore, and that the members of this meeting will lend their aid in every possible manner to further that object.

2nd. Resolved, that it is expedient and proper that a Manufacturing Company should be incorporated for that purpose; that the members of this meeting will heartily join in a petition to the General Assembly of Virginia, for an act of incorporation, and that Eppa Hunton, John Ogilvie, and Philip A. Klipstine be a committee, to draw up said petition, and superintend the same.

3d. Resolved, that the President of this meeting be requested to call a meeting of the citizens of New Baltimore and the neighbourhood, as soon as it shall be ascertained that a law incorporating the Company has passed.

The meeting then adjourned.
EPPA HUNTON, Pres't.
Philip A. Klipstine, Sec'y.

FROM NILES' REGISTER.

THE WOOLLENS BILL.

Gov. Burton, in his message to the legislature, in reference to the opposition to the woollens bill in South Carolina, recommends that "North Carolina should not be silent;" and gov. Troup in his farewell message to the Legislature of Georgia, suggests a remonstrance against the protecting principle generally, and a correspondence with other states, as if with a view to bring about a non-consumption agreement.

Unless we are greatly mistaken, indeed,—and we have zealously endeavored to ascertain truth from practical operations, the opposition to the woollens bill cannot be founded upon correct principles. It has been conclusively shewn in this work, that every protected article of home manufacture has decreased in price, through the domestic competition—nay, even that negro cloths and cotton-bagging have not at all been affected by the duties levied upon them by the tariff of 1824. We have steadily maintained, that the chief effect of the woollens bill, proposed at the last session, would have been to secure the actual payment of the duties imposed, and not increase the amount of them; and firmly believe that this is the plain and honest truth of the whole matter. In addition to what we have said on this subject, we have the pleasure to offer the following statement from a valuable pamphlet just published at Charleston, S. C. being an appeal to the judgement of the people of that state.

Cost of importing plains, (negro-cloths,) under the tariff of 1824, and the bill reported at the last session of congress—

Under the present tariff law of 1824.

100yds. Welch plains,
31 inchs. wide, cost	16*d.*	*L*6	13	4
do. 32 do. do.	18*d.*	7	10	0
do. 33 do. do.	20*d.*	8	6	8
		*L*22	10	0
Charges including commission for purchase, say 5 per cent.		1	2	6
		*L*23	12	6
			$105	00
Duty 33 1-3 per cent. on $119 being the value laid out at the custom house, with the addition of 10 per cent.			38	57
Cost			$143	67

Tariff proposed at the last session of congress.

Same goods imported under the square yard duty, cost.	$105	00
Duty 33 1-3 per cent. on 250 square yards valued at 44 cents per yard.	39	19
	$144	16

I would merely remark, that in the opinion of our importers of British woollens; the average price 18*d* is the most saleable, and pays the best profit.

[The difference in the cost of three hundred yards of negro-cloths, the duties being honestly paid in both cases, is in the sum of forty-nine cents—or less than the sixth part of one cent per yard; being, on a suit of clothes for a negro, requiring six yards, one cent—or if 12 yards be required for each slave per annum, in the amount of two cents a year—and for fifty slaves one dollar.

As to cotton cloths—a non-consumption agreement would amount to less than this little! The people will not pay 15 cents for a yard of British goods made out of East India cotton, instead of 10 cents for a yard of American goods made out of American cotton, and of better quality!

Since the preceding was written, we have received a copy of the message of the governor of S. Carolina to the legislature of that state, just commenced its session. We deplore the seeming injustice that extensively prevails as to the protecting principle. Gov. Taylor speaks in very severe terms of the "Harrisburg convention" and says "all this overwhelming body of influence, these newly created allied powers, their bills and claims in their hands, proceed to petition congress. As well might we call Cromwell's army, with their fixed bayonets, a band of humble petitioners to the parliament of England, and say that the order of their leader was nothing more than an humble petition to the members of that body, that they would graciously condescend to offer themselves to be kicked out of the parliament house." Conventions have often been held in many of the states to accomplish local purposes—and conventions are held in many, and on both sides, to effect the election of a president of the United States—but have they deserved such reprehension, or ever before received it? And, if gov. Taylor will refer to the 19th vol. of this work, page 257, he will find that just such a convention as that held at Harrisburg in July last was held at Philadelphia in Nov. 1820, of which William Bayard, of New York, was president, and that the proceedings of both were precisely of the same character, with these exceptions.—

1. That of the "merchants and others," was held strictly; if not privately—that of the farmers and manufacturers, "and others," openly and in broad day-light.

2. That the merchants and others petitioned against the protection of domestic industry, and that the farmers and manufacturers petitioned in favor of it.

And how many petitions have been preferred by self created bodies called "chambers of commerce?" Is aught lawful to the merchant, and treasonable in the farmer? It seems that there is a privileged class—if so it is time that all should fully understand it, that, cultivators of their own soil, with their own hands, may not be denounced for acts which importers and venders of British calicoes and cloths may do with impunity—that conventions may be held for any other purpose than that of devising and recommending measures whereby the labourers in the earth may have cause to rejoice in the fatness of their fields—and of these, practical farmers, was a majority of the Harrisburg convention composed.]

From the New York [illegible].

NAVARIN.

The port of Navarin, where the combined forces of France, England and Russia, have so lately crushed the naval power of Turkey, is one of the best harbours of the Morea on the south west. The harbour is formed by the island of Sphacteria, (ancient Sphagia) and three islets, which leave three passages. The most frequented passage is on the north, between Sphacteria and the Main, and is commanded by the cannon of old Navarin, situated at the southern extremity of the port. The entrance is about a cable's length broad between high rockey shores, having depth for the largest ships. The south entrance, through which the allied fleet entered, is about 2600 toises broad—equal to 24 English miles. The island of Sphacteria, and the fortress of Navarin, completely commanded this entrance.

The harbour itself, is in the form of a horse shoe, and the Turkish line of battle corresponded to the contour of the harbour.

Navarin has heretofore been the scene of important occurrences; and the present achievement is but the avengment of former misfortunes. In March, 1825, Navarino was invested by Ibrahim Pacha with 14000 soldiers. The geographical position of this place has rendered its defence of the utmost importance. In addition to the safety of the harbour as a wintering place, its possession by the Turks would open a key to the whole western coast of the Morea. Great efforts were consequently made for the preservation of this important post. Fortifications had been formerly erected by the Venitians during their possession of the Morea in the 16th century, and new works, corresponding to the importance of the place were now added. A corps of 2000 soldiers under the command of Hadgi Christo, and Joannes Madronichales, son to Petro Bey, garrisoned the fortress. Provisions were laid in for a long siege, and every thing indicated on the part of the Greeks, a determination to defend this important position to the last extremity. The army of Ibrahim was encamped east of Navarino, where they had entrenched themselves, and erected a small battery. In the meantime, Conduriotti and Mavrocordato appeared in the Grecian camp with a re-inforcement; while large bodies of Roumeliots, under Gravella, Karatoso Karaiscaki, and Constantine Bozzaris occupied positions in the rear of the Egyptian army, cutting off the communications with the Pacha's forces at Modon. The fortifications were under the superintendance of Major Collegno, a Piedmontese officer, whose liberal principles having caused his exile from his native country, had urged him to the relief of the Grecian patriots, in their struggle for liberty.

On the 19th of April 1825, the forces of Ibrahim commenced the attack in three divisions. The left extremity of the Greek line was commanded by Hadgi Christo, Hadgi Stephano, and Constantine Bozzaris, the right by Giavella and Karatasso, while the Moreots, under the command of Skariza, a Hydriot, occupied the centre.—This part of the line, previous to the action, was re-inforced by a body of troops under Constantine Bozzaris. The two extremities of the Grecian line sustained the assault of their opponents with determined spirit; but the Moreots fled on the first onset, Bozzaris and his select companions exposed to the overwhelming force of the enemy. Himself and twenty-seven of his brave followers alone, escaped with life. The principal effect of this defeat was the renewal of the internal feuds and dissentions that has so long checked the prosperity of the Grecian cause. Difficulties had heretofore existed between the Roumeliots and Moreots; the latter charging on the government a partiality for the former, and the ill feelings engendered by this opinion had been rather increased by the violent conduct of the Roumeliots, on their march through the Morea, towards the peasantry. The disgraceful conduct of the Moreots in the late action, to which Bozzaris justly ascribed his defeat, incensed the Roumeliots to such a degree, that, on the arrival of the news of the investment of Missolonghi, they struck their tents, and marched to the defence of their own homes. The defence was henceforward conducted by the Moreots, who undertook the cause in earnest.

It soon became apparent, that Sphacteria was the next object of the Pacha. Hasty preparations were made for its defence. A battery of three guns, commanded by Stavro Sohini, a valliant young Hydriot, and Anagnostara, with two hundred soldiers, covered the landing. During this period the Greek fleet of twenty-nine sail, under Miaulis, had been constantly engaged in watching the Egyptian squadron. Several attempts had been made with their fire ships, but without success; and the Egyptian squadron, with the loss of one frigate, succeeded in reaching Modon, and on the 8th May, took their station off Sphacteria, with forty-six ships. The only vessel of the Greek fleet at this time in the harbour of Navarino, was the brig Mars, commanded by the brave Hydriot Psamado. Seven vessels were sent in by Miaulis, the day of the arrival of the Egyptians. Early on Sunday morning the 8th of May, the Egyptian fleet was observed moving upon Sphacteria. The Greek squadron, reduced by the detachment to twenty-two ships, lay becalmed at a considerable distance, towards Zante. At noon, the whole Turkish fleet was ranged along the shore, keeping up a heavy fire to cover the landing of their troops.—A party of sailors under Psamado, had been landed from the vessels in the harbour, making the whole force on the island, about five hundred, of which Mavrocordato himself, assisted by Count Santa Rosa, another Piedmontese patriot, had the chief command.—The boats of the enemy could now be seen by this devoted band of patriots, filing with Arabs, and troops, disciplined in the European fashion. These troops, in all from two to three thousand, landed at the lower battery, and surrounded the garrison, destroyed them to a man. Their commanders fell among the last, refusing to yield. The other points of defence on the island were successively carried; and of the whole five hundred defenders, not quite one hundred and fifty escaped.

The ships in the harbour immediately stood out to sea, with the exception of the Mars, who awaited her captain.—Boats were sent on shore for this purpose, and Mavrocordato and some others taken on board; but on again reaching the shore, they were crowded with fugitives and sunk.—Psamado himself, wounded and bleeding, with a handful of followers, now approached, and waved his cap for assistance that could no longer be afforded. The Egyptians soon followed in pursuit, and he fell under a shower of bullets. Dimetri Sartori, commander of the fortress of Old Navarin, was the only surviving Greek now remaining on Sphacteria, and plunged into the sea, he swam to the Mars and communicated to the crew the fate of their captain. This determined band in a small brig of 18 guns, now prepared to force its way through the Egyptian squadron, and by a battery commanding the passage, which was now also in the hands of the enemy. One of their officers, addressing them, declared they should not fall alive into the hands of the foe, as, in case of necessity, he would set fire to the powder magazine, and nobly revenge the death of their commander by a common destruction. The crew answered by three loud cheers. For six hours (it being almost a dead calm) this little brig fought her way resolutely through the Turkish fleet, for three successive hours being in their midst, and having exchanged broadsides with several frigates, besides corvettes and brigs of which no one was her inferior in force, and eventually escaping with a loss of only two men killed and eight wounded. The capture of Sphacteria was followed by the immediate reduction of Old Navarino, which surrendered on the morning of the 10th. Navarino itself soon followed, and the Turks had now possession of an entrance to the whole western part of the Morea. How they have improved that advantage let the present distressed state of the Morea answer.

This, it was the first scene of Ibrahim's triumph, it also proved the scene of his destruction. The God of Battles has at length poured forth his vengeance on the savage Egyptian, and we wait to hear of his entire expulsion from the land of classic fame.

We know that in this dreadful contest the blood of man will flow like water; but we are not therefore disposed to check our joy, at the prospect of a termination of Turkish despotism in Europe.

We lament the destruction that we are aware must involve thousands of our fellow beings: but our lamentations are swallowed up in the proud thought of liberty to Greece. It is a holy cause. The cry of Allah il Allah, has too long sounded from the minarets of Constantinople, the death-word to freedom and learning. The religion of Mahomet, like the simoom of the desert, has withered wherever it has passed. The Saracen has always been marked by its ravages, blighting and destroying in its progress the fair influence of freedom, religion and humanity. The short reigns of a few Caliphs, by adding a splendour to their triumphs, has but served to increase their vanity, and to furnish additional power to succeeding Sultans, to wither and destroy.

Among the Turks, implicit devotion to the religion of the Prophet—unlimited submission to a despotic master, and the most unqualified contempt for the manners and opinions of other nations, are the principal traits of character. The hour of retribution is at hand—"the neighing of the Russian horses may already be heard, impatient for battle," and the power that has so long seated itself like an incubus on the heart of Europe, will we trust, be removed to its effeminate and congenial dominions of the east. The haughty Moslem, with inglorious Austria at his back, will find the vast inferiority of bigotry and prejudice when opposed by science and religion.

Intemperance.—I would not ever, in anticipation, do my country injustice. I glory in my citizenship. With the exception of the one hateful vice, which is spreading its ravages far and wide, we may proudly challenge a comparison with the dominions of the earth. The present, however, is not a time for the silken phrases of self commendation. The gross and besetting sin, the parent of so many others, is a national plot; and if it shows the darker on our scutcheon, that it pollutes so fair a surface, it becomes more imperiously the duty of every patriotic citizen to assist in removing it. Let not our glory and disgrace go hand in hand. When we exultingly proclaim to the decrepit communities of the old world how far we have also outstripped them in liberty, let them not be able to tell us that we have a vice, which is liberty's most deadly foe. If that be true, which we have been told let it teach us humility and excite us to amendment—that though but two hundred years a people, but fifty years a nation, we have already, in this particular, attained a wicked pre-eminence over kingdoms that had seen centuries come and depart, long before the white sail of Columbus caught the inspiring winds of our western sky.
Sprague's Address.

It appears, by an authentic estimate made recently in London, that no fewer than 15,000 boys, between the ages of eight and fifteen, live by theft, in that capital.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

MAJOR ANDRE.

I have often thought that sympathy for this officer was carried too far, even in our own country. The British writers with their characteristic effrontery, hesitate not, to say that his fate was the only soil in Washington's fair fame, and Miss Seward, in her Monody, with all the vengeance of disappointment, in relation to his execution, exclaims

"O Washington, I thought thee great and good,
Nor knew thy Nero thirst for guiltless blood!"

But this kind of talk is just nothing, and if ever any man ought to have been hung, M. Andre was the man.—These remarks have been suggested by reading in the last No. of The American Q. Review, a review of the "Flying Lieut." De Roos, an extract from which I should be pleased to see inserted in your very interesting paper.
RURICOLA.
Ed. of The V. Herald.

"The sight of West Point suggests the following reflections:

"It is impossible for a traveller to "pass these parts, unmoved by melan-"choly reflections on Andre's fate, & "Washington's cruelty. History will "reluctantly record the murder of a "brave man, and the only stain upon "the character of a hero."
De Roos' Travels.

The fate of Major Andre maturely excites the commiseration of his countrymen: but nothing but the most miserable, short-sighted prejudice, or the most determined hostility, we should suppose, could induce even an Englishman to call the execution of this officer a "murder." He was an officer of the British army, taken in the character, and under the disguise of a citizen; he was discovered in violation of the laws of war, engaged in a secret plot, the success of which might have been fatal to the cause of our country: he was tried by a court-martial of general officers, condemned on his own testimony, and suffered the death he merited. Is there any thing of the character of murder or cruelty in all this? There has been much deception practised for the purpose of cheating even the American into a sympathy for this officer: and such indeed was the mildness of the revolutionary feelings of hostility on our part, which not even insult and injury could render otherwise than mild, that we have continued to yield to Major Andre our forgiveness for the injury he coolly meditated against us, and our pity for his fate. We have acknowledged him as an unfortunate hero, when in reality, he was no better than a dastardly spy, meditating and maturing under a false character, a fatal injury; and by our acquiescence in this delusive sympathy, we made him in fact the hero of a transaction, in which he ought only to have figured as a criminal. He has been called amiable, though he meditated a plot, that would have cost this country oceans of blood; hailed as magnanimous because he avowed his name & rank, when it could, by no possibility be any longer concealed; and died like a brave man, when he knew the eyes of the world were upon him.—These persevering attempts to throw a stain upon the character of the purest hero, that adorns the page of history, by elevating a spy into a martyr, are among the many indications of that disingenuous and canting spirit of hostility, which disfigures the pages, of so many, not to say all of the British writers when treating of this country. Let not however the people of the U. States be deceived. The execution of Andre was no murder: it was the just punishment of a base attempt to ruin by stratagem, a country which the British could not conquer; and the real heroes of the piece are the honest, incorruptible, & lowly men who captured this fortunate spy,—fortunate in having gained even the pity of his enemies, for a crime which has covered every other man with disgrace."—Amer. Q. Rev. No. 4, pp. 415-16.

ADMIRAL CODRINGTON.

This officer was Captain of the Orion, in the memorable battle of Trafalgar. An English paper says:—"Had he waited another day before he destroyed the Turkish fleet, it would have been the anniversary of the glorious victory in which he had a share on the 21st Oct. 1805, when the country was deprived of its lamented naval hero, lord Nelson, & the maritime force of France and Spain annihilated by the British fleet under his command.

In Salem, Mass. Abraham Hill was recently fined $2 and costs for unmercifully beating a horse.

☞ Read This!

The Baltimore Patriot of Thursday last contains the subsequent article. It speaks for itself—Will the friends of domestic industry give ear?

Hartford, Conn. Dec. 17.

SILK.—In Norton & Russel's State Register, it is stated that "in the town of Mansfield, in Tolland county, is annually raised upwards of three thousand pounds of silk, which, in its raw state, is estimated to be worth at a fair valuation, from 12 to 15,000 dollars, and when manufactured into skeins and prepared for market, is worth from 18 to 20,000 dollars. The labour is chiefly performed by females and young persons.

The growing and manufacturing of silk is becoming more extensive in this country, and the attention of many public spirited men has recently been turned to it. That it may be made profitable, and a source of great income cannot be doubted when we look at the single instance of the town of Mansfield. That town has less than three thousand inhabitants, and comprises an area of only about 46 square miles; its soil is less productive than that of many other towns, yet the industrious inhabitants in addition to their other employments from which the culture of silk does not detract, contrive to bring in a yearly revenue of about $20,000. What an inducement is here held up to the industrious and enterprising, and if imitated, how long should we be dependent on the old world for silk.

[It is believed that there is no portion of the world better adapted to the culture of Silk than the Eastern Shore of Maryland and the adjoining counties of Delaware & Virginia; and what renders this fact still more interesting, a large portion of the land will scarcely produce a good crop of any thing else. The soil & the climate are peculiarly favourable to the growth of the white mulberry, which, indeed, is to be met with almost every where on the peninsula, and nothing seems to be wanting but the attention of the agriculturists to make Silk a staple product of the Eastern Shore. There are many districts of the peninsula which do not afford timber for fencing: would it not be a good plan to plant mulberry hedges? They would answer two [illegible] purposes; one, fencing fields and farms; the other furnishing food for Silk-worms, the product of which would, when attentively husbanded, afford a better income than that of many of the fields which they enclose.—Let ornamental trees of parterres and avenues, those we mean which are merely so, also give place to the Mulberry. We have no doubt, that should these hints be adopted, the income of the Eastern Shore farmers would be at least doubled, without any addition to their trouble or expenses.]

The last drove.—A drove of Five Hundred Turkeys passed through this village yesterday, on their way to the New York market. They were collected in some of the western adjacent towns, by four men from this place. Thus you see, that this army of Turkeys will have to gobble over 200 miles of ground, on the hoofs, before they arrive at the table of destination.
Cherry Valley Gaz.

A wag on board the Steamboat Constitution, which runs from Frenchtown to Baltimore on the Chesapeake Bay, observed that it must be a strong Constitution that could stand it so high as to be over the bay twice in 24 hours.

Maryland Marble.—From a friend, we have received what, he says, is an inferior specimen of superior marble from Bledsoe's or Bleskar's quarry, in Washington county, twelve miles from Fredericktown and five miles from Harper's Ferry.—and he further and very properly suggests, that if a statue of Washington is to be erected upon the monument dedicated to him by the people of Baltimore, should not the material be of the produce of the state. The Academy of Fine Arts of Philadelphia, have pronounced this marble superior to that of the statue of the king of Rome. The specimen may be seen on our desk.
Am. Farmer.

Destiny.—Hunt has recorded in the "Periodical of Pisa," one of those little tales, so common in the East, inculcating the great oriental dogma of fatility. Solomon was walking in his garden with one of his attendants, when they observed a strange and fearful figure approaching them, "Solomon," said the attendant, "who is that mysterious being, his appearance fills me with dread—send me, I pray thee, to the remotest mountain of India." The figure approached, said "Solomon, how came that man here? my errand was to seize him on the forthest mountain of India!" "Angel of Death!" replied Solomon, "thou will find him there!"
N. Y. Morn. Courier.

A good and pious minister had an excellent and elegant horse, on which he had placed no small share of his affections, and he was proud to show and pamper him: but very suddenly and unexpectedly to his family he sold the horse, and when they, astonished at the measure, inquired the cause, he made answer, that he could not keep the horse, because he got into the pulpit with him.

The intrusion is not a singular one, but the conscientious determination of the good man was highly creditable to his heart and judgement.
Ellsworth Courier.

HYMENEAL.

MARRIED, on the 27th ult. by the Rev. W. Quinn, Mr. Robert H. Cordtown, to Miss Mary E. Horsey, all of this county.

OBITUARY.

DIED - On Thursday week, Mr John McLeany, of Harpers Ferry in the 26th year of his age. He had been married but eight months, and was the fifth husband of Mrs. Mary Jackson, who is yet under the age of 29.

Baltimore Prices Current.

From the papers of Thursday last.

FLOUR, best family,		$5 60
Susquehanna,		4 62
WHEAT, best white, per bu		1 00
red	do	90
CORN,		40

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Lankford against Eleet C. Chelton. I have seized and taken in execution the following tracts or parcels of land, to wit: Part of a tract of land commonly called Eskridge's, also part of another tract of land commonly called Robinson's, or by whatever name or names the aforesaid lands may be known or called, all which will more fully appear by reference to a deed from John Irving to said E. C. Chelton, bearing date the 16th December, 1825—containing in the whole two hundred and fifty-two acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court House door, on Tuesday the 22nd day of January, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 4 P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ.
JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
Jan. 1, 1828. ts

WANTS TO HIRE

FOR the ensuing year, a negro Woman that has some knowledge of cookery. An elderly one would be preferred.
J. P. MARSHALL.
Dec. 31, 1827. 3t

Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county, Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also, another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr Levin Ballard, senior, known by the name of Moore & Cassel, situated on Monokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm. Jones and Dr. J. King.—This tract contains about 130 acres—and, besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises.

As no person will purchase without viewing the property, a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to
L. W. BALLARD.
Dec. 18, 1827. 4t

LAND FOR SALE,
IN POTATO NECK.
344 ACRES.

The westerly half of the farm late the property of Francis H. Waters, esq. (dec'd.)—About 100 acres are under improvement, a good part of which produces luxuriantly. The residue is heavily timbered with oak and pine, &c., and conveniently situated to market. The farm is washed on one side by the Annamessex river, and on the other it lies contiguous to the Menokin.

On the premises upon the Annamessex side is a delightful building spot, of high ground, in full view of the river, intercepted only by a small grove of lofty pines, and near it a delightful well of water, said to be surpassed by none in the county. Further particulars are deemed unnecessary, as those wishing to purchase will doubtless view the premises for themselves. Half of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for five or more years—interest to be paid annually.

For further particulars enquire of Dr. Ballard, near the premises, or to Mr. Lazarus Maddux, Potato Neck, or to the Rev. Dr. Waters, Washington Academy, or a line addressed to the subscriber, Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. York, will meet with attention.
FREEBORN GARRETTSON.
December 18, 1827.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Thos. Brown against Tubman Brown, terretenant of William Fleming, dec'd. I have seized and taken in execution a tract or part of two tracts of land, the one called Rider and the other My Gain, which was formerly the property of said William Fleming, dec'd. and on which the said Tubman Brown now resides, containing 70 acres, more or less, which I will sell at the Court House door on the 8th of January next, between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock, P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above writ.
JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
Dec. 18,—25

PHILADELPHIA ALBUM AND Ladies' Literary Gazette.

"ALBUMS," says an agreeable writer, "are things, in which are gathered many sweets from the flowers of genius and taste in the garden of literature. They also serve as pleasant mementos of those friends who are absent, and tend to instruct, as well as to please—to enlighten, as well as to amuse."

The Album, to which the publishers respectfully invite attention, has during the brief space of its publication, met with such flattering and universal esteem as to warrant the printing, each week, of near six thousand copies.

The work is enriched with original articles on a variety of interesting and valuable subjects, Fine Arts; Sciences; Botanical, Historical, Biographical and Moral Essays, Sketches, &c.; Reviews of new books; Fashionable and Literary Intelligence; Manners, Conversation, Dress and Beauty; the cultivation of Plants and Flowers; Amusing and Moral Tales, together with choice articles in every department of polite and useful literature.

It is handsomely printed [on] 8 pages every Wednesday, on fine white paper, royal size, quarto form, making an elegant annual volume of upwards of four hundred pages, embellished with appropriate engravings.

The publishers are determined to spare neither pains nor expence in their ambitious exertions to make their work an acquisition to literature. To sustain its character, they have made at great expense arrangements with some of the best writers in this country, and are at the same time enabled, from European Journals which they receive, to make the choicest selections from the richest sources of foreign literature.

To give the parents or brothers—the friends or guardians of their fair readers an assurance of that strict sense of purity, chasteness and general propriety which should eminently characterize a work of this kind, constituting a bouquet of the "flowers of literature," which must form to the cultivated and accomplished mind, a "token of esteem," the most valuable and pleasing—a "forget me not," of the most appropriate, endearing, and lasting nature, the publishers have associated with its former conductors in their editorial duties a lady of distinguished literary reputation and talent, whose watchful attention and acknowledged abilities they are confident will aid materially to the character of the work.

Price, $2 50 per annum, payable in advance. Address the Publishers of the Philadelphia Album and Ladies' Literary Gazette, 45 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

BLANK BILLS OF SALE,
Printed on fine Paper.
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11th, 1827.

[SEAL] ON application of Gertrude Kellum, admin'trix. of John Kellum, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court that she give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess Anne.
True copy, Test.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of John Kellum, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 24th day of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of Dec. 1827.
GERTRUDE KELLUM, Adm'x. of J. Kellum, dec'd.
Dec. 18 3w

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court.
Dec. 11th, 1827.

[SEAL] ON application of James Smith, Executor of William Tilghman, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Md. letters of administration on the personal estate of Wm. Tilghman, late of Somerset county, deceased,—All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1827.
JAMES SMITH, Ex'r. of W. Tilghman, dec'd.
Dec. 18 3w

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11th, 1827.

[SEAL] ON application of Mary Porter, Extrix. of Richard B. Porter, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that she give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.
True copy. Test.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Richard B. Porter, late of said county, dec'd. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of Dec., 1827.
MARY PORTER, Adm'x. of R. B. Porter, dec'd.
Dec. 18 3w

FOR RENT.

A House and Lot at Forktown, well calculated for tavern keeping, now occupied by the subscriber, to whom apply for information respecting terms and other particulars.
ISAAC MORRIS.

N. B. The subscriber wishes to inform the public that he has an assortment of young peach trees, from 1500 to 2000, of the best quality. Persons wanting any can apply to
I. MORRIS.
Oct. 16, 1827.

Wanted, Immediately.

An Apprentice to the Printing Business, about 15 years of age. Apply at the office of the Village Herald.
Dec. 18.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

THE NEW YEAR.

A NEW YEAR! and pray what is new,
With him, or her, or me, or you?
Dear reader, let 's consider:
Would it be new if Vice were still Riding on Fortune's splendid wheel,
With Virtue trudging at her heel,
And Conscience up for highest bidder

Pray, what is new? Are any less
Extravagant in food or dress?
Are Old Year's habits mended?
Rears Pride less high her towering crest?
Is Malice banish'd from each breast?
And is the reign of Avarice ended?

Has Idleness been driven hence?
Has Folly yielded to good Sense?
Has vile Intemperance departed?
Has Vanity now ceas'd to tickle?
Are Prudes less prime, or Flirts less fickle,
Or Coquettes more true hearted?

Does the Mechanic cease to fret
O'er the long unsettled Debt,
Due from the rich Delinquent?
Can Printers yet escape from care,
And hope for punctual payment where
Their labour and their ink went?
Does time, with swift and steady pace,
A less unprofitable race
Pursue, this year, that all may trace
In years that have preceded?
And when he points to that great sea,
A shoreless vast Eternity,
Where we are bound as well as he,
Is the dread signal heeded?

If not alas! what is there new,
That 's worth a thought to me or you,
Or cause for gratulation?
'Tis but the dull old story o'er
The moment 's new, and nothing more;
Time has but changed his station.

That happy moment that should find
A heart renewed, a purer mind,
Improving time and talents here—
Should such a time reach me or you,
That were a moment, rich as new—
That were, indeed, a blest New Year.

GEN. GEO. WASHINGTON.

The name of Washington is dear to every American. Distinguished, not only for bravery and intelligence, but for the purest virtues which can adorn the human heart, he has been venerated in the memory of distant nations, and immortalized by the blessings he shed upon his country. He resembles the orb of day, imparting his twilight long after he is set, and invisibly dispensing his light and cheering warmth to the world. Cautious, and prudent, he was never surprised by the most disheartening failures; nor alarmed into compliance by the most undaunted threats. His eye could penetrate the darkest design; and his powers of invention enabled him to escape the most formidable stratagems. The very means employed by the enemy to incommode him, were frequently in his own hands, the instrument of their ruin. As an illustration of his eagle-eyed caution, I will briefly narrate his escape from a singular plot, which I learned from the lips of a venerable man several years deceased.

When the American army was stationed at West Point, during the revolutionary war, the British head quarters were not many miles distant on the Hudson; and each were waiting, like the figures on chess board, for some favourable movement, to disconcert and thwart the operations of the other. Scouting parties would engage in frequent skirmishes; and wagons of provisions, ammuniton and clothing, would fall into the power of those superior in number and address. On one of these occasions, a quantity of English uniform was seized by an American detachment; and several notable advantages obtained by the latter, inspired the enemy with a desire to retaliate. About this time, while at West Point, General Washington had an intimate acquaintance, not far resident from the army, in whose family he enjoyed the kindest hospitality, as well as relief from many of those sterner engagements which harrassed his weary mind. As every circumstance was food to either army, a visit like this not many miles from their camp, could not long escape the cognizance of the English, and to possess a prisoner like General Washington, would, tend, in their opinion, to shorten the period of the war. But the undertaking was difficult: there were always advanced guards to cover the American Commander, and there was no mode of discovering his visits, except by winning over some one of the family. The friend whom the General visited was once thought to have espoused the interests of the British; but he had taken a decided stand in favour of America, and tho' a brave man, he professed the strictest neutrality alleging as his reason, his years, and dependent family.

During the intimacy of the General, it was rumoured in the American Army, that his friend had been seen often returning from the British camp. Washington seemed to disregard the account; for he never ceased to visit the family, and apparently mingled as cordially with the host, as if no suspicion had crossed his mind. At length, one day as the General was taking his leave, his friend earnestly requested him to dine with him the following afternoon, emphatically naming the hour of two, as the moment of expecting him. He reminded him of the uncommon delight which his intimacy conferred—begged him to lay aside every other formality, and regard his house as his home; as the guard that always accompanied him seemed to indicate that he was not visiting a friend. "By no means, dear sir!" exclaimed the worthy patriot; "there is no man I esteem more than yourself: and in proof of the confidence which, I repose in you, I will visit you alone to morrow, and I pledge my sacred word of honour, that not a soldier shall accompany me." "Pardon me General," cried the host; "but why so serious on so trifling a subject. I am only jesting with you." "I am aware of it," said the hero, smiling; "but what of that? I have long considered the planting of these out posts unnecessary, inasmuch as they may excite the suspicion of the enemy; and although it be a trifle, that trifle shall not sport with the friendship you indulge for me." "But then—the hour, General"—"Oh, yes, two o'clock you said," "Precisely!" returned the other.

At one o'clock on the following day, the General mounted his favourite horse, and proceeded alone, upon a byeroad which conducted him to the hospitable mansion. It was about half an hour before the time, and the bustling host received him with open arms, in addition to the greetings of the delighted family. "How punctual, kind sir!" exclaimed the warm hearted friend. "Punctuality," replied Washington, "is an angel virtue, embracing minor as well as important concerns. He that is unpunctual with a friend, may doubt his integrity." The host started but recovering himself, he added,—"then yours is a proof that we enjoy your fullest confidence." Washington proposed a promenade upon the piazza, previous to the dinner. It overlooked a rough country several miles in extent; fields of grain, here and there sweeping beneath the sides of bleak hills producing nothing but rocks and grass—shallow runnels of water flowing along the hollows of the uneven waste—then hidden by woodlands intercepting a prospect of the country beyond—spotted now and then with silver glimpses of the Hudson, stealing thro' the sloping grounds below, and chequered on both sides by the dim, purple Highlands, frowning sometimes into hoary batilements, and tapering again into gentle vallies, hardly illuminated by the sun. "This is fine, bold scenery!" exclaimed the General, apparently absorbed in the beauty of the prospect. "Yes sir," replied his friend, looking wishfully around; as if expecting some one's approach; but catching the piercing glance of Washington, his eyes were fastened convulsed on the floor. "I must rally you my friend, observed the general; "do you perceive yonder point, that boldly rises from the water, and suddenly is lost behind the hill which obstinately checks the view?" "I do," replied the absent listener, engaged apparently in something else than the subject of inquiry. "There," continued the hero, "my enemy lies encamped; and were it not for a slight mist, I could almost fancy that I perceive his cavalry moving; but hark, that cannon! Do you not think it proceeds from the head-quarters of the enemy?"

While pointing to his friend the profile of the country, the face of the latter was often turned the opposite way, seeming engrosed in another object immediately behind the house.—He was not mistaken it was a troop seemingly, of British horses, that were descending a distant hill winding thro' a labyrinth of numerous projections and trees, until they were seen galloping through the valley below—and then again they were hidden by a field of forest that swelled along the bosom of the landscape, "Would it not be strange, observed the General, apparently unconcious of the movements behind him, "that after all my toils, America should forfeit her liberty?" "Heaven forbid!" said his friend, becoming less reserved, and entering more warmly into the feelings of the other. "But," resumed Washington, "I have heard of treachery in the heart of one's own camp; and, doubtless, you know that it is possible "to be wounded even in the house of one's friend." "Sir," demanded the downcast host, unable to meet the searching glance of his companion, "who can possibly intend so daring a crime?" "I only meant," replied the other, "that treachery was the most hideous of crimes: for Judas-like, it will even sell its Lord for money!" "Very true, dear sir," responded the anxious host, as he gazed upon a troop of British horses, winding round the hill, and riding with post haste towards the hospitable mansion. "Is it two o'clock yet?" demanded Washington; "for I have an engagement this afternoon at the army, and I regret that my visit must therefore, be shorter than intended." "It lacks a full quarter yet!" said his friend, seeming doubtful of his watch, from the arrival of the horsemen. "But, bless me sir! what cavalry are those that are so rapidly approaching the house?" "Oh, they may possibly be a party of British light horse," returned his companion, coolly, "which mean no harm; and, if I mistake not, they have been sent for the purpose of protecting me."—As he said this, the Captain of the troop was seen dismounting from his horse; and his example was followed by the rest of the party. "General!" returned the other, walking to him very familiarly, and tapping him on the shoulder, "General, you are my prisoner!" I believe not," said Washington, looking calmly at the men who were approaching the steps; 'but, friend,' slapping him in return on the arm, "I know that you are mine! Here, officers, carry this treacherous hypocrite to the camp, & I will make him an example to the enemies of America."

The British general had secretly offered an immense sum to this man, to make an appointment with the hero, at two o'clock, at which time he was to send a troop of horse, to secure him in their possession. Suspecting his intentions, Washington had directed his own troop to habit themselves as English cavalry; and arrive half an hour precisely before the time he was expected.

They pursued their way to the camp triumphant at the sagacity of their Commander, who had so astonishingly defeated the machinations of the British General. But the humanity of Washington prevailed over the sense of justice. Overcome by the tears and prayers of the family, he pardoned his treacherous friend, on condition of his leaving the country for ever; which he accordingly did: and his name was ever after sunk in oblivion.

RAFFLE FOR A WIFE.

The foreman of a wealthy woollen-draper, in a certain town of Germany, had long been in love with a young person, who received his addresses with the greatest indifference; neither was she more partial to two of his rivals, who like the former, were desirous of obtaining her hand.

The father of the young girl wished that she would accept of either of those three suiters, and accordingly said to her one day, "as I am very willing to abide by your own choice, tell me candidly to which of your three lovers you have given the preference?"

"To neither," replied she; "I feel the same regard for each of them; but as love is still a stranger to my heart, I leave it entirely to your better judgement, to decide which of them is to be my husband.

The father, delighted with so uncommon an act of resignation, determined to wait until the assiduous attention of one of the three should meet its due reward; but in vain did they attempt to gain the affections of the fair one—their efforts proved equally abortive. They respectively would apply to the father, in hopes of obtaining, from parental authority, a wife whom the power of love could not subdue.

The father, tired of this state of uncertainty, formed a sudden resolution. He invited the three candidates to come and sup with him one day, who felt equal surprise and apprehensions at so meeting together, as their host had separately informed each of them that the marriage of his daughter should be settled that evening. After they had been eating hartily, whilst the bottle was going round, the father addressed his guests in the following words:

"Gentleman, I am well acquainted with your intentions, which I approve of. I would wish to make you all three happy, but that is not in my power. I have only one daughter, and she can have but one husband: she esteems every one of you to such a degree, that she is at a loss to make a choice, although I have repeatedly pressed her so to do. She having trusted to my impartial prudence, and I being apprehensive of acting with greater injustice, am determined to leave it to chance alone to decide which of you shall carry the prize. That is the only method I can think of to have nothing to reproach myself with, and to extricate myself from my present dilemma. Now listen to my plan: my daughter will be rich when I am dead, but so long as I live I never will part with a single guilder. You are all in good circumstances; you all three feel an equal love for her, therefore it rests with your rivalry to portion her. You can without any inconvenience to yourselves, by subscribing a similar sum, making a little fortune for your beloved; and if your affection be sincere, you will submit to the law which I am going to dictate. Let each of you deliver into my hands two thousand ducats, to constitute the marriage portion of my girl, and become the property of the husband which Dame Fortune will allot her."

The proposed terms were agreed upon. He who refused, would have evinced no great affection, and, in consequence, been excluded from the treaty. The next day the money was brought to the father, who presented to the three rivals a couple of dice from his backgammon board, declaring, that he who threw the highest point would be his daughter's husband. Williams (the woollen draper's assistant) having thrown sixes, was declared the winner, and jumped for joy, whilst the other two, with woful countenance, left him master of the field of action. Nay, his intended bride then candidly confessed, that chance had decided in conformity to her wishes.

So great and unexpected happiness Williams hastened to go and impart to his employer, who himself was a single man. To him he recounted every particular of the extraordinary circumstance; neither did he conceal that the two thousand ducats which he had deposited, and was going to replace, had been taken out of the chest that was left to his charge.

The master congratulated his cashier on his good fortune, adding, that, upon such an occasion, he would feel happy to entertain the happy couple without any further delay. "So that if you will let the young lady know," said he, "and she is agreed to the invitation, I shall expect you at dinner time." The young maiden readily accepted the proposal, and made her appearance at the appointed hour in her best array, which gave additional lustre to her natural graces; so much so, that the wollen draper fell in love with her at first sight.

On the day following, after weighing maturely the circumstances to which his dependent was indebted for having obtained the possession of his mistress, he determined to take her for himself. Williams being summoned in his presence, he addressed him thus:

"To chance alone you are to ascribe the happiness of marrying the girl I saw yesterday; your partiality for her, therefore, cannot be so strong but you can easily give her up. If my friendship to you be deserving of some return, you must renounce your pretensions in my favour. I love the young woman to distraction. However, I do not wish your condescension should cost you your fortune. I shall make you a present of the money deposited as her wedding portion; and far from claiming that part of it which belongs to me, I will double it. See, consider duly, and decide at once; for I am resolved to go this very minute and speak to the girl's father."

The chance husband, whose heart had been beforehand with the oracle of fate, hesitated not. He refused every offer, prefering the possession of his beloved object to the acquisition of riches. In vain did the tradesman attempt to persuade him. Finding at last that all his endeavours were useless—"Know you," said he, "that before it is long, I may obtain by force, and by the interference of the laws, that which I have humbled myself so far as to solicit. Yea, in spite of you, I shall obtain the hand of your mistress, which my bounty would have made yours."

Williams made light of those threats, and retired without feeling the least inquietude The woollen draper boasted of his riches, to both the father and daughter, but to no purpose: they had given their word, and nothing in the world, could induce them to break their promise.

The cashier was soon informed of that step having been taken, and congratulating himself on his triumph, only thought of securing his prize, when he was summoned before a court of justice, to relinquish his intended bride, which he had obtained only with a stock of which he was alone the depository, and the produce of which, pursuant to the law of the land, belonging to the right owner.

Both parties appeared before the judge. "The law is precise," alleged the plantiff, "it adjudges to merchants all the profits made by individuals in their pay. My cashier has used my money to purchase his wife, since he had not two thousand ducats of his own to deposite, in imitation of his competitors, that he might be allowed to take his chance; therefore, what he has acquired, must belong to me. The original stock was mine—the produce or interest, namely, the wife, agreeably to the spirit of the law, must be mine also: I claim her from your justice, neither can you dispense granting my demand."

So singular an application of a commercial law could not but provoke the laughter of the judges, notwithstanding wonted gravity. The defendant, in reply, observed, "That no law whatever had, hitherto, ranked a wife amongst articles of merchandise, like spices and stuffs, although the sex might be reflected upon by some as not entirely free from the sweet bitterness of the former, or the lightness and variety of the latter. In barbarous countries alone," concluded he, with a triumphant air, "it may be allowed to trade in women."

The eloquence of the plantiff proved of no avail; he was nonsuited, and the defendant maintained in all his rights

La Belle Assemblee.

SOPHISMS WELL ANSWERED.

A Society of Churchmen, who had, for the last century, been engaged among other benevolent designs, in conveying the knowledge of Christianity to the heathen, convened a meeting near my aunt's mansion house, to consider the means of extending to about sixty millions of poor idolatrous Hindoos, the knowledge of Christianity.—Now, whatever religion and sound wisdom might urge upon so plain a point, mere Prudence could not but be alarmed at an attempt, however quiet, to disturb the creed of sixty millions of people. Accordingly, having entered the assembly, I, to the admiration of my aunt, made the following oration:

'I rise, Sir, to oppose the motion which has been submitted to this assembly, on the following grounds:—

'In the first place, the Hindoos are savages, and Christianity is not designed for savages.

'In the second place, the religion of the Hindoos is a very good religion—why then should we try to change it?

'In the third place, their religion has made them excellent slaves for centuries—why, then, teach them a religion which is fit only for freemen?

'In the fifth place, who would think of beginning to convert foreign nations till we have converted every one of our own people?

'When the time comes for the general conversion of the world, some sign will be sent from Heaven to tell us of it.

'Such, Sir, are my reasons for resisting the measure; and whoever promotes it, and opposes me, is an enthusiast, and an enemy to his country and his species.'

Having made my speech, I will own that I expected the very smallest return, the loud acclamations of the astonished assembly. But a most profound silence ensued; till a clergyman, who, as I then thought, looked old enough to know better, arose, and thus addressed the assembly:

'Instead, Sir, of relying directly to the reasonings of the speaker who has preceeded me, I will simply put another case, and request his decision upon it. Suppose, instead of the present assembly, a thousand Peruvians convened on the Banks of the Amazon, to take into consideration a supplication from the nations of Europe, to supply them with that bark of Peru, which is the only known antidote to a very large class of our diseases. And conceive, if you will, the preceding speaker, who, I am sure, would be happy to undertake the embassage, to be the advocate for these fevers and anguish nations to the only possessors of this antidote. Imagine him, to rise amidst the tawny multitude, and, with much feeling and emphasis, to state, that at last 60 millions of people depended upon their determination for health and life. At once I am persuaded, the cry of that multitude would interrupt the pleadings of the orator, and one and all would exclaim, 'Give them bark! give them bark! let not a European perish, whom it is possible for a Peruvian to save.' This far all would be well. But conceive, instead of the assembly being permitted to act upon this benevolent decision, some Peruvian, of an age in which the prevalency of policy or mere prudence over justice and benevolence is more intelligible and pardonable, to rise, and thus address his countrymen:

'Peruvians, you are far too precipitate. Consider, I beseech you, the character and circumstances of the persons for whom this privilege is demanded.

'In the first place, they are civilized nations—they read and write; they sleep in beds, and ride in coaches; they wear coats and trowsers—who then will say that bark is intended for such persons as these?

'In the second place, their fevers and agues may have many excellencies with which we are unacquainted—why then attempt to cure them?

'In the third place, these fevers and agues assist exceedingly to thin their armies—why then strengthen them merely to destroy ourselves?

'Fourthly, these fevers and agues are so deep seated and violent, that it is impossible to cure them—why then attempt it?

'In the fifth place, who would think of curing foreign nations, till we have cured all the sick in Peru?

'Sixthly, when the time comes for the general cure of fever and ague, I have no doubt that the Great Spirit will give us some sign from the mountains.

Such Peruvians, are my reasons for opposing the wish of the speaker; and whoever promotes it, or opposes me, is a mad-man, and an enemy both to the Incas and the Great Spirit.

'Now, then,' continued the old clergyman, 'supposing the Peruvian orator thus to reason, I should be glad to know by what answer that young gentleman would repel his arguments.'

He then, to my infinite horror, sat down, and left the eyes of the assembly fixed upon me, as if waiting for my reply; but not having any precisely ready, I thought it best to be taken suddenly ill, and to leave the room.

Sancho the Proverbalist.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1828. NO. 43.

Terms of Publication.

THE VILLAGE HERALD is published weekly at $2 50, per annum, or at $2 if sent by mail and subject to postage, in either case to be paid half-yearly in advance. No subscription taken for a shorter period than six months; none discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for each continuance: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In the Legislature of South Carolina, on the 13th ult. a discussion of some length took place in regard to the impeachment of Judge James, charged with habitual intemperance It was contended that under the constitution of the state, no officer could be impeached for any offence not actually committed while in office: that drunkenness was not indictable, because there was no such thing as official drunkenness. The habitual intemperance of the accused was admitted, but it was denied that it had affected his administration of justice.

On the other hand it was contended that the testimony conclusively proved that the accused had been drunk upon the Bench; also that his mind was impaired by habitual intemperance.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, there appeared for impeachment 99, against it 12. A committee was accordingly appointed to prepare articles of impeachment, and to conduct the prosecution before the Senate.

Cleopatra's Needle.—A proposition has been made in England, by Capt. Allan, to build a ship in frame in that country, and transport it to Egypt.—When there, the needle is to be brou't to the beach by rail-ways, and then the vessel is to be built round it, and the whole transported together. This pillar is about 70 feet high, and is supposed to weigh 400 tons. It was presented several years ago, to his present British Majesty. Such a monument, it is added, would give great interest to such a place as Abercrombie square, London.

The accounts from Spain represent the Catalonian insurrection as quelled, but not without great effusion of blood, and attempts, even now, on the part of the insurgents, to recruit themselves. A delay has taken place in the arrival of Don Miguel from Vienna.—The St. Petersburg Journal intimates the pendency of negotiations between Russia and Persia, under the mediation of England. On the whole, there does not seem much likelihood at this moment, notwithstanding the late bloody hostilities at Navarino, of any general disturbances of the peace of Europe.

SILK WORMS.—The white silk worms hatch twice a year—the yellow but once. The latter spins much the largest ball, and is accounted the most valuable and least troublesome.

The price of eggs are sixpence the thousand.

Each Miller deposites about 400 eggs.

It is calculated that the worms produced from the eggs of 200 Millers, or winged worms, will make ten lbs. of silk.

One hundred and fifty pounds of leaves, it is estimated, are eaten by 3000 worms, to spin one pound of silk.

It takes about one bushel of the yellow cocoons, or balls, to make 1½ lbs. of silk.

One ball of silk, of the yellow kind, when spun, will measure 1750 feet.

The eggs of the silk worm are of two colors; a lightish slate, and a yellow. The latter are held in poor esteem; they seldom contain the vital principle.

A mulatto man, who was being reconducted into slavery, in North Carolina, a few days since, leaped from the stern of the boat in which he was, and avoiding all means for saving himself, was drowned. Slavery has not many charms it would seem.

March of the Mind.—A bill has passed the House of Assembly of South Carolina, by a vote of 71 to 42, to prohibit the instruction of persons of colour in reading and writing.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis	par
Easton	par
Frederick	par
Frederick County Bank	par	$2 and upwards
Bank Westminster	par
Hager's Town	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co	par
Elkton	1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	½
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	½
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	3
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

LITERARY PREMIUMS.

The editor of the Amulet, and Ladies' Literary Cabinet, desirous of drawing forth the talents of the Ladies, offers

For the best original Tale, not exceeding two columns of the Amulet, Twenty Dollars.

For the best Poem, not exceeding fifty lines Ten Dollars.

The premiums will be awarded by competent female judges, and the envelope containing the names of the unsuccessful competitors, will not be opened. All communications must be sent in, post paid, by the first of February next, addressed to the Editor of the Amulet, Philadelphia.

JOB PRINTING,
SUCH AS
Handbills, Cards, Blanks,
PAMPHLETS, &c.
Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,
At the Office of the Village Herald.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11, 1827.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Joseph Barkley, adm. d.b.n. of Mary Milliway, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given.

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Mary Milliway—late of Somerset county, deceased. all persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of June, 1828,—they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1827.

JOSEPH BARKLEY, Adm'r. of M. Milliway, dec'd.
Dec. 18 3d

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11th, 1827.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Daniel Benson, Adm'tor. of Adrian Marshall, late of Somerset county, dec'd. it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Adrian Marshall—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 24th of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th of Dec., 1827.

DANIEL BENSON, Adm'r of A. Marshall, dec d.
Dec. 18 3d

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11th, 1827.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of William Costen, Administrator of Betsey Ann Taylor, late of Somerset county, dec'd., it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Betsey Anne Taylor late of Somerset county deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1827.

WILLIAM COSTEN, Adm'r. of B. A. Taylor, dec'd.
Dec. 18 3d

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

Certificate.
10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an anodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondriacal, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER.
Princess-Anne, Md.
Nov. 20, 1827.

District of Maryland, to wit:

[L. S.] BE IT REMEMBERED, That on this 23d day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the U. S. of America, William Hollins, of the said district, hath deposited in this office, the title of a book, the right whereof he claims as proprietor, in the words following, to wit:

"Rail roads in the United States of America: or, a protest and argument against a subscription, on the part of the State of Maryland, to the Baltimore & Ohio rail road company, addressed to the officers and representatives of the people in the several States of the Union, and to the General Government—By a Citizen of Baltimore."

In conformity with the act of Congress, of the U. S. entitled "An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies during the time therein mentioned;" and also to the Act, entitled "An Act, supplementary to the Act, entitled An Act, for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned, and extending the benefits thereof, to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints.

PHILIP MOORE.
Clerk of the District of Md.

A few copies of the above work are for sale at this office.

BLANK WARRANTS
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

T. L. DISHAROON,

HATTER,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. 3d

TRUSTEE's SALE.

IN CHANCERY IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT.

Joshua Wright and Priscilla Dunn
vs.
Isaac R. Jones, Dirisee of John Jones of James.

BY virtue of a decree of Somerset County Court, in this case, the subscriber will offer at public sale, to the highest and best bidder, on the premises, on the 9th of January next, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. part of a tract of land called Shadwell's Chance, or Shadwell's Suppose, situated in the county aforesaid, on the south east side of Nanticoke river, containing one hundred and fifty acres, more or less, with the improvements and appurtenances thereto belonging. The terms of sale will be a credit of twelve months, with interest from the day of sale, to be secured by a bond or bonds given to the Trustee, with good security; upon the payment of which and ratification of the sale, the Trustee is directed by the said decree to execute to the purchaser or purchasers, his, her, or their heirs, a deed for the aforesaid property, conveying the title of the complainants and defendant in the premises.

Notice is hereby given that the creditors of John Jones of James, late of the aforesaid county deceased, that they must bring in their claims against the said John with the vouchers thereof, and lodge the same with the Clerk of Somerset county court, within six months from the day of sale.

THOMAS JONES, (of John,)
Dec. 18—ts Trustee.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11th, 1827.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of James Smith, Executor of William Tilghman, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county in Md. letters of administration on the personal estate of Wm. Tilghman, late of Somerset county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1827.

JAMES SMITH, Ex r. of W. Tilghman, dec'd.
Dec. 18 3d

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATE.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JAN. 8. 1828.

☞The Orphans Court of Somerset County will sit on Tuesday next.

☞Through the non-arrival of the mail due yesterday we are deprived the pleasure of presenting any account of the organization, &c. of our State Legislature, which we expected. We can assign no other cause for this unwelcome failure, than a change of carriers, in consequence of the Contractor's reducing the salaries of those who heretofore faithfully served for a paltry stipend. We doubt whether the Post M. General will countenance such procedure to the disappointment and injury of hundreds.

CUBA.—The New York Daily Advertiser has received information by the scientific publication lately commenced in Havana, the Anales de Ciencias, that the sugar and coffee which form the bulk of the exports from Cuba, are nearly all produced on the triangular tract of land between the Bay of Honda, the Batano and Matanzas, which forms only a ninth part of the island. Here are collected five sevenths of the population and more than six sevenths of the wealth of Cuba. The editor has exhibited some very remarkable statements relating to that region: and, if the data are as correct as we believe, political economists will find it an appropriate field for their investigations and reflections.

The tract of country above indicated presents an area of 300 square leagues, and maintains 300,000 inhabitants. The principal articles of exportation, by the ports of Havana and Matanzas, amounted in 1826 at a low valuation, to $9,629,366, which gives $3,209,789 to every 100,000 persons. In France, the total amount of agricultural products, consumed and exported, according to the most precise estimates, gives $935,741,777 to 30 millions of persons—that is $3,119,139 to 100,000 persons, which is less by $90,650 than the proportion for the same number of inhabitants in the part of Cuba above indicated, afforded by a part only of the exports. In the words of Senor Sagra, the editor, "In the island of Cuba, a given number of individuals produce more by the cultivation of the sugar, coffee, spirits, wax, honey, and tobacco exported, than an equal number of the inhabitants of France in the articles in their agricultural list, viz. bread stuffs, wine, flax, hemp, oil, tobacco, fruits, legums, oxen, sheep, hogs, fish, birds, wool, butter, lard, eggs, silks, timber, &c. &c."

In allusion to the petition of Mrs. Decatur, which has again been presented to congress, the New York American remarks—"This widow, of as true a chevallier as ever wore a sword, asks only for what usages, we believe, law awarded in other cases, compensation for the destruction of enemy's property—for the recapture of the American frigate Philadelpia, then a prize in the possession and under the guns of Tripoli. The prayer is just, and if the petition is just, let it not be made in vain; because he to whom the debt, the sacred debt, is due, cannot be heard in its support.—It is asked by one whom, next to honor and country, he most cherished, while living."

The following is an extract from a petition presented to the House of Representatives by John Blake, a Revolutionary officer, who entered the service in April, 1775; who was in the battles of Long Island, Harlaem Heights East Chester, White Plains, Trenton Saratoga, Stillwater, Stoney Point, besides a score of skirmishes.

"When in the Jerseys, I captured several small detachments of refugees, which so irritated their commander, Col. Delanea, that he offered a reward of sixty guineas to any person who might bring me to him, dead or alive. General Washington, then at Crumpond, in the State of New York, wrote me a letter to repair to his quarters. When I arrived, he says, "Friend Blake I have a pleasant tour of duty for you, which is to take a detachment of men, and Col. Delanea, and his guard prisoners.—I have heard he has offered a bounty for you, therefore I give you this opportunity to retaliate." Accordingly, the following night, I repaired to his quarters; but before I arrived I took two of the men who gave me the countersign, by which means I was enabled to take the sentinels without alarming the guard. I found the doors bolted and went to the window, where I saw several officers playing at cards, one of whom inquired What was trumps? I immediately answered, Black Jack of the fifth Regiment, at the same time ordering the window broken. The guard of 36 men and 6 officers were made prisoners, but the Colonel was absent and escaped."

THE NAVY OF THE U. S.

The Report of the Secretary of the Navy gives an account of the active and useful services of all the ships in commission, which have been distributed, with economy, to protect a large and extensive trade, in the Pacific Ocean, the Gulf of Mexico, including all the West India Islands, the Coasts of Africa, the Northern Fisheries and the Mediterranean.

The rights of this country are to be asserted and promptly vindicated in all parts of the world, against inexperienced commentators on the Laws of Nations in the new Governments of South America, the more practised and adroit diplomacy of the old World, and the pirates, marauders, and oppressors, under different names and pretences, that seriously molest this Government, and disturb its laborious and enterprising citizens in the fisheries, the West Indies, the Pacific, and the Mediterranean. The delicate and judicious management of so great a concern, seems to require some seasonable aid from the Government, so as to insure the continued respectability of our Navy, and a universal regard for a flag which has earned its way to a notice that cannot be relinquished. We are admitted to hold a rank with the first maritime Powers—not from the size or number of our ships merely, or the calibre of their cannon, but from the conduct of our officers and the bravery of our seamen. It is time that we took our station in that post of honour that the world holds vacant for us, by supplying a higher grade of officers than we now have, with higher duties, and a more extensive responsibility, and a greater control over those who are subordinate.

The English, French, Russians, Dutch, Spaniards Danes, and almost every Power in Europe, have adopted a system in the gradation of Naval Rank, which has many conveniences, and which it seems little else than affectation in us to depart from. It is not true that a nation is sufficiently and respectably represented by the size of a fighting ship, or the weight of her metal, or even the bravery and discipline of her crew. There must be a personal representative of a rank to correspond with these powerful supporters. Were we engaged in one common cause with any Power in Europe, and to act in conjunction on the water, our sailors would do the fighting, and their Admiral would gain the glory.

The officers in our Navy have already deserved something at the hand of Government. Dinners, and songs, and pictures, and wax work, are well in their place, and still better is a sword or a vote of thanks—but it is due to the present standing of the government, to which the Navy has contributed, that its meritorious officers should not only be respected at home, but placed in their proper station abroad, where their services are rendered, where their profession calls them, and where only they are known as seamen and soldiers."—Connecticut Mirror.

IMPORTANT FROM BRAZIL.

A letter from Rio de Janeiro under date of 27th October, communicates the following commercial important information:—

"The Cortes have passed a Law, which has received the Imperial sanction, placing the duties on imports from all nations at 15 per cent, without regard to treaties."

Under the regulations heretofore existing, the commerce of the United States has experienced great disadvantages in the ports of Brazil—American merchandize being subject to a duty of twenty-four per cent, and British, French and Prussian (by treaty) to a duty of only fifteen per cent, making a difference in favor of those nations, of nine per cent. This difference, of itself, has proved a handsome profit, and has had the effect to exclude in fact, American Cotton goods from the markets of Brazil. The measure just adopted by the Brazilian government, of opening the markets of that country to us on equal terms with other nations, will enable our cotton manufactures to come into fair competition with those of our great commercial rival, and in such a contest we have no fears for the result.

From the Dumfries Courier.

THE PACHA OF EGYPT.

We conversed yesterday with a very intelligent naval gentleman, who has visited Alexandria in his professional capacity, and is personally acquainted with the Pacha of Egypt. That great and enterprising chief is apparently about 60 years of age, and his presence, which befits his situation, is at once dignified and prepossessing. He is much easier of access than the majority of those who serve under him, and is fond of conversing with intelligent Franks. He understands the French and Italian languages, but requires and receives the aid of an interpreter, when brought in contact with English gentlemen who are unacquainted with these tongues. He was born an Arab, and inured in his youth to manual labor, but merit such as his could not long be concealed, and his bravery in the field is, if possible, eclipsed by the tact he evinces in civil affairs. In developing the resources of a country naturally rich, but morally poor, he resembles Peter the Great himself, and we can easily believe that the Porte is jealous of his rapidly increasing wealth and power. By the cultivation of cotton alone, he annually realizes large sums, and what is not a little curious, he acts in a great measure as his own broker. Wages are miserably low in Egypt, and the peasantry, who have one unvaried meal, consisting of water and bread, willingly labor for two pence-halfpenny per day. Like the vast concerns of the East India Company, the monopoly in cotton is a very lucrative one; and the time is not remote when he will turn it to much better account than at present. Already, various kinds of manufactures have been introduced, and in Alexandria and Cairo the weavers shuttle is plied as busily, if not as skilfully as it is in Glasgow, Paisley, or Manchester. As encouragement is given to scientific men, numbers of French engineers and others have flocked, and are flocking to Lower Egypt; and before the lapse of many years, the ancient splendor of Alexandria will be more or less revived, and its harbor made the emporium of every kind of traffic. The Pacha, thought one of the tributaries of the Porte, has become sensible of his own power; and an opinion has long prevailed in the East, that he will take an early opportunity of throwing off the yoke. His step-son Ibrahim, although he has fought desperately against the Greeks, cherishes the same views; and with two such formidable warriors and statesmen to lead the armies and direct the councils of a rising nation, the Ottoman sceptre must eventually be broken in all that line of country, where, according to Dr. Johnson, the "father of waters begins his course, and scatters over the world the harvest of Egypt." The naval force of Egypt consisted two years ago, of 21 frigates, 50 large brigs and schooners, and a great number of small vessels of war. They are chiefly manned by Arabs. French officers of all descriptions freely offered their services to the Pacha, and he now exports the greater part of his cotton to France. Excepting when he makes business or pleasure excursions, he resides alternately at Alexandria and Cairo; and his Harems follow him as closely as his shadow. There are two of these, and they contain nearly 600 wives and concubines; but Ibrahim's mother, by a former marriage, if such a phrase be at all applicable to Asiatic manners, is still the reigning and influential sultana.

HOW TO PAY FOR A FARM.

A man in the town of D——, some twenty years ago went to a merchant in Portsmouth, N. H. who was also president of a bank, and stated that he lived on a farm, the home of his fathers, which had descended to him by right of inheritance; that this, his only property, worth two thousand dollars, was mortgaged for one thousand, to a merciless creditor, and that the time of redemption would be out in a week. He closed by asking for a loan to the amount of his debt, for which he offered to remortgage his farm;

Mer.—I have no money to spare; and if I could relieve you now, a similar difficulty would probably arise in a year or two.

Far.—No; I would make every exertion; I think I could clear it.

Mer.—Well, if you will obey my directions, I can put you in a way to get the money; but it will require the greatest prudence and resolution. If you can get a good endorser on a note, you shall have money from the bank, you can mortgage your farm to the endorser, for his security. You must pay in 100 dollars every sixty days. Can you do it?

Far.—I can get Mr. —— for endorser, and I can raise the hundred dollars for every payment but the first.

Mer.—Then borrow a hundred dollars more than you want, and let it lie in the bank: you will lose only one dollar interest. But mind, in order to get along, you must spend nothing, buy nothing;—make a box to hold all the money you get, as a sacred deposite.

He departed. The note was discounted, and the payments punctually made. In something more than two years he came again into the store of the merchant, and exclaimed, "I am a free man—I don't owe any man ten dollars—but look at me." He was embrowned with labour, and his clothes, from head to foot, were a tissue of darns and patches. "My wife looks worse than I do." So you have cleared your farm, said the merchant. "Yes, answered he, "and now I know how to get another."

Thus, good advice, well improved, rescued a family from poverty, and put them in possession of competency, which we believe they yet live to enjoy. Thus may any one retrieve a falling fortune, if he will. And by urging the same amount of self denial, and making as great exertions, in the way to heaven, we may secure "an inheritance, incorruptible, undefiled, that fadeth not away."

IRON.—In the vicinity of Portsmouth, Ohio, there are nine blast furnaces, and six forges. The Ohio iron is said to be of the best quality, and the ore is "exaustless." Each furnace employs about 50 men, besides five or six strong teams, and will make from 5 to 700 tons of metal a year. What a valuable market do these works make for the neighboring farmers!

LATE FROM EUROPE.

By an arrival at New-York London papers to the 19th of November, inclusive, were received; among the most interesting of which is the annexed article from the Stock Exchange.

"There are advices from Zante and Corfu, in the neighbourhood of Navarino, to the 27th of October, but they contain no additional facts of much interest, in regard to the great naval battle. A part of the allied squadron is to go to the Dardanelles, which it is supposed has for its object the adoption of menacing positions, for the purpose of protecting the Christian residents at Constantinople; and it was hoped that it would effect this desirable object before the arrival of Ibrahim's Tartars, conveying the news of the complete destruction of the Turkish fleet. That news, however, as it appears by a letter, reached Constantinople on the 27th of October—the same day of the date of the letters from Zante and Corfu, from which we have derived the foregoing. The letter is as follows:—

"Confusion and dismay reign in all quarters of this city. A succession of disasters has caused a display of rage and fear bordering on mania. It would appear by a despatch forwarded by the English Admiral to our Ambassador here, that the whole of the Turco Egyptian fleet had been destroyed in the bay of Navarino, on the 20th inst. and that the batteries of that port had been rendered useless. What is more, the Egyptian troops are in a state of mutiny and starvation, wandering over the country, and being cut up in detail. This tragical news, combined with the recent destructive fires, seems to have paralyzed, in toto, the efforts of the Turks in their war department. All is at a stand still. Troops and shipping under orders have been countermanded, and an extraordinary Divan ordered to assemble forthwith Connected with these events, the Reis Effendi has been disgraced, and is in confinement—a prelude, of course, to decapitation. Our suburb is as yet perfectly tranquil, and it is to be hoped, will remain so. Communications with the Foreign Ambassadors have been extremely frequent since the receipt of this news, and messengers innumerable are passing and repassing after the usual hours of diplomatic business. It is the opinion of the best informed English here, that all must and will be settled to the entire satisfaction of the Allied Powers, and immediately."

The rumour that the Ambassadors of the Christian powers had fled from Constantinople, is classed by the Gazette of France, among the "lies of the day."

Admiral Codrington, at the last date, was actively employed in repairing his damaged vessel at Malta and Zante. A London paper adds:—It appears to be the intention of government not to allow those ships which have sustained injury to come home, but that the whole of them may be refitted at Malta; a shipment of the requisite masts, spars, and other naval stores, being about to take place from the government depots for the purpose." Meantime the English part of the squadron is to be re-inforced with all convenient expedition—but to what extent does not appear. An express had arrived at Sheerness Dock Yard, from the Admiralty, with orders to fit out the Gloucester, 74 guns, for sea, immediately, to go, it is reported, against the Turks.

The total loss of men, suffered by the Turks, in the engagement, exceeded five thousand.

The Morning Chronicle says:—We have seen a gentleman who was at Navarino at the time of the engagement. He assures us that the Russians suffered much more severely than either the English or French, from their having been more exposed to the heavy fire of the Batteries. Their ships were dreadfully mauled by the large shot which struck them; but the accounts of the actual loss will be received from St. Petersburg.

There has been another fire at Constantinople but it destroyed only a few houses. A Turkish squadron of ten sail had set out for Mitylene and Chios. Two hundred regular troops are just arrived from Estria, and will immediately march for Romelia.

An article from Constantinople of October 15, says, three councils were held at the Porte to determine the answer to be given to the despatches, in which Ibrahim Pacha announced the provisional suspension of hostilities, to which he had agreed on the 26th of September, with the English and French, Admirals. It is affirmed that the Sultan has sent an answer to Ibrahim that he is to execute the first orders of the Porte, and to put to sea; but to avoid, however, coming to a rupture with the European squadrons. This is probably correct; and the several attempts of the Turco-Egyptian fleet to get to sea from Navarino, before the battle, were movements in accordance therewith.

All the efforts of the European diplomatists to make the Porte understand its situation have been useless. Even the sincere language of the neutral Powers have made no impression on the Divan; and the Reis Effendi is said to have replied very recently to the representations of a distinguished diplomatic character on the danger which the Porte incurred by persisting in its present system. "Leave us to provide for our own security and be sure that we know how to settle our affairs much better than is supposed."

THE CANADAS.—Speaking of the prompt and judicious measures that have been taken from the removal of the discontents which have been generated in Upper Canada by the alien law of that province, the Globe says, "similar steps will, we hope, be taken to remove the discontent in Lower Canada where the rancour which prevails appears to be much more serious than in the upper province."

It is rumoured that the British Government have it in contemplation to despatch a squadron of steamboats to the Archipelago, for the more effectual protection of commerce against the pirates.

SPAIN.—The last intelligence from Spain, boasts loudly of the magnificent reception of the valiant king and his poetical consort* at Valencia. It also asserts, that all the insurgent bands in Catalonia had laid down their arms, or had fled out of the kingdom. Jep del Estang is mentioned as the only chief who still maintained himself, with a handful of men in the mountains of Cerdagne, where he was closely pursued. It appears however from the attack lately made on Count d'Espagne, as he was returning to Tarragona, that if the rebels have ceased to show themselves in the parts bordering upon France, it is because they have returned to the heart of the province, and from ambushes at the very gates of its principal fortresses. It appears, however, that the Catalonian insurrection has not been put down without effusion of blood. No less than 400 of the Royal troops were desperately wounded in the affair of Castellon Ampurias alone, besides a great number killed. Gen. Manso is actively employed in scouring the country, but in many of the districts of upper Catalonia, the rebels are already beginning to recruit again. They have received orders from their leaders, it appears, to remain quietly, in their houses until a fresh campaign is commenced.

*The queen made some metre, on the occasion of setting out with her husband to quell the rebellion.—(Ed. Com.

RUSSIA.—The St. Petersburg Journal states that on the 26th September (8th Oct.) last, a shower of aerolites fell near Belostok between nine and ten in the morning. The inhabitants were alarmed by an extraordinary noise, which proceeded from a large black cloud that hung over their heads, and which continued for three (some say six) minutes, resembling a running fire of musketry. This noise which was heard by several persons at distances of more than 14 wersts, was succeeded immediately by a shower of stones, which only four were picked up; the largest weighing four pounds, the smaller three quarters of a pound. The Constadt steam passage-boat had been obliged to return by the floating ice on the bar—the the quantity of which, however, was not very considerable.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr. Editor—

If you can engrave pictures without plates, you will oblige me by publishing a series of them, in your paper.—A picture of the Peninsula, I have never seen drawn, and no imaginable reason can I assign for the neglect:—The scenery is faultless, for the best of reasons—God made it, and it is, of its kind, "very good."—Its glebe is not so rich as western loam, its timber less luxuriant than woods yet unattempted by the axe, and its waters less sweet; but its manners are more cultivated—its education more refined—its Gospel as sweet in its music to the ear, its political institutions more powerful—more studied, and till of late, more royal in their aspect.—We have a sparse population and not the most active and enterprising one—a motley one, in complexion—white, yellow, and black—a high spirited, but too irascible a race—a hospitable, but too luxurious generation.—We have plenty to eat and to spare, and alas! plenty to drink.—Our waters abound with the finest fish, finn'd and shell—Our orchards yield plenty of fruit—Our fields furnish, with good cultivation, sufficiency for man and beast, and our marshes yield provender for the cattle, spontaneously.

Our health is on an average equal to any other section of the country known to me, and our lives, if not curtailed by indulgence in luxury and sloth, as long.

But alas! our vices are more numerous and more fascinating than theirs—and recreation is pursued by many as a business.

One fox-hunter is mentioned in the Old Testament, and he learned the art probably among the Philistines, who were not the best of people we have ever read of; but we can shew scores of men who are for ridding the land of such pests, as foxes, without making that use of them that they subserved anciently.

The Persians dedicated horses to the sun, because, possibly, their speed was emblematic of his course—but whether they raced them for recreation or not, is left untold. How many devotees of the sun have we!—who, without Persian piety, use the noble animal for pastime at the risk of the rider's life—wasting time, and character and money—and sometimes violating the Sabbath.

The Romish Church traded in every thing, that you can name—and among other things, they sold "slaves" and bought "men's souls."—We have left off buying men's souls out of purgatory, but we sell slaves still. Genuine children of the Church of Rome, tho' born of the men of the Reformation. How much we need a second Reformation! If any thing can apologize for the practice, it is poverty. The laws seize them as the most merchantable property,—tho' furniture, beds and bedding remain, unsold.—Necessity knows no law, is an old, and ought now to be, an obsolete adage.—The laws of God are paramount, and no necessity can warrant their infraction. They are all of the kindest and most benevolent tendency, and I never knew of one, in my Bible, that reads, "thou shalt sell men and women"—or "thou mayest sell them." They are in fact the farmers of the land—and when they go away, what is to be done without them. Yet, I congratulate the owners, in getting rid of them, though not in such a way as that.

You might see them, as they go weeping along in carts and wagons—cooped up like poultry, or penned like pigs, or driven like felons!—Oh! how honorable to humanity—how glorious in the land of freemen!—Such scenes are the foil of liberty—they set it off to fearful advantage.

My soul! come not into their secret! mine honor! be not united to their assembly!

Waste and desolate is the land of bondage—blooming and beautiful the land of glorious freedom. Sister States of the North, envy ye, for our sakes, our ease—our refinement—our luxury—our finery and fashion! We long to share in your distinction—We wish to rear a hardy yeomanry inured to toil, and not ashamed of it—We would copy your more rustic manners, to imbibe your more dauntless spirit of enterprise, and shake off the effeminacy of our habits, to keep pace in your march of improvement.—Yours is a golden age—Ours an iron one. I am, sir, yours.

R. T.——

THE RUSSIAN CHRISTIANS IN CHINA.

The establishment at Pekin, of a Christian Chapel, with its several students of Christian Theology, under the protection of, and guaranteed by a treaty between China and Russia, since 1728, is still continued. Some of our cotemporaries are wondering at the nullity of the effect of this treaty of Christians, if considered as Missionaries among these Pagans.

But it is not surprising to us, that this small party of Bible believers, in the midst of this great nation, should use such remarkable caution in the exercise of their privileges, as to have made their existence even doubted more than once. The fact must be in the recollection of the reader of the history of the Catholic Church, under the reign of Louis XIV. of that nation.

The Missionaries, at one time, in the first year of the eighteenth century, had such an open field left for them to sow the seeds of Christianity in the Chinese Empire, as to have promised in a short time, the entire conversion of its millions of people. But such was the fatal effect of a feud which broke out among the missionaries themselves, regarding the orthodox of true Catholicism, that, after thousands had been converted, including the son and heir of the throne, the Emperor issued a proclamation banishing them, and all other priests, from his Empire, forever.

The disputes had arisen, in the end, to such a height, that it cost the lives of many, and of one of the Emperor's sons. It may be remembered, the Monarch said to the two parties,—"Now, we have all one belief; but you two have spread tenets, each declaring the other's belief wrong—I forbid them both, because I cannot decide on either.—Nat. Adv.

Steam Engines in England.—M. Dubin, in speaking of the immense mechanical force set in action by the steam engines of England, gives the following illustration of its amount:—The great pyramid of Egypt required for its construction the labor of above 100,000 men (Diodorus Siculus says 350,000 for 20 years. But if it were required again to raise the stones from the quarries, and place them at their present height, the action of the steam-engines of England, which are managed at most by 36,000 men, would be sufficient to produce the effect in 18 hours. And M. Dubin says, that if it were required to know what time they would take to cut the stones and move them from the quarries to the pyramid, a very few days would be sufficient. The calculation of Dubin is as follows:—The volume of the great pyramid is 4,000,000 cubic metres; its weight 10,400,000 tons, or 10,400,000,000 kilogrammes. The centre of gravity of the pyramid is elevated 40 metres from the base, and 11 metres as the mean depth of the quarries, the total height of the elevation is 60 metres, which multiplied by 10,400,000 tons, gives 624,000,000 tons raised one metre. Then the total steam engines in England represent the power of 320,000 horses. Those engines moved for 24 hours, would raise 862,100,000 tons one metre high, and, consequently, 647,100,000 tons in 11 hours! which exceeds the produce of labor spent in raising the materials of the great pyramid.

Among the peculiarities of our speech is that, when speaking of the metropolis of the Union, of calling it Washington City. We no longer say London town, or Paris city. Whether this addition be more necessary in the case of Washington, whose claim to it might otherwise be forgotten, we do not know. As the eyes in which this appears from our metropolis, we shall perhaps grow less punctilious in thus giving it its style and title.—Inter.

The island of "Rhode Island," 14 miles long and less than three wide, has more then 30,000 sheep upon it. There are about 200,000 in Berkshire county, Mass. Many in the western parts of Virginia: one gentleman in Ohio county has more then 3,000; he sold his crop of wool to Mr. Rapp, at Economy, for 2,400 dollars. There are in the state of New York about four millions of sheep, between two and three millions in Pennsylvania, a million in Vermont, &c.

LIST OF LETTERS

Remaining in the Post-Office at Princess-Anne, Md. on the 1st day of January, 1828.

B—Harriott Brown, John P. Brereton.

C—Levin Cottman, Mrs. Hetty A.W. Crawswell

D—Littleton P. Dennis, Stephen Drura.

F—David Ford

G—Mrs Mary Gannt, Mrs Sarah Gibson

H—William Hovington, George Hall

J—John H. Jones, Levin D. Jones, Thomas Jones, Dr. Thomas D. Jones, Charles Jones, Doct. M. Jones, Mrs Elizabeth Jones, J. T. L. R. Joynes

K—Robert I. H. King, 2: Lambert Kerr

L—Charles L. Laurence

M—Col Saml. Maddux, Mrs Sarah Miles, Samuel S Miles

N—Algernon S S Newton

P—Mrs M Powell, James Powell, Littleton Pollitt

R—Miss Mary Riggin

S—James D Smith, Mrs Elizabeth Sasser

W—Captain Robert Waters, George Waters, Capt William H Waters, William Wilson

SAM'L. BROWN, Post Master.

Jan 8 3s

HYMENEAL.

MARRIED, on the first inst. by the Rev. Mr. David Dailey, Mr. Louden Campbell, of the city of Alexandria, to Mrs. Hetty Gibbons, of this county.

Baltimore Prices Current.

From the papers by Thursday's mail

FLOUR, best family,		$5 00
Susquehanna,		4 62
WHEAT, best white, per bu.		1 00
red	do	90
CORN,		40

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Thomas W. Handy

v.

Isaac Henry, William Fassitt and Dorothy his wife—George G. Henry, and Charles R. Henry.

IN this cause it appears to the Court that Isaac Henry and George G. Henry do not reside in the state of Maryland and within the reach of the process of this Court, and the Sheriff having returned to the subpœna issued in this cause "non est"—It is therefore this 28th day of November, 1827, by this Court ordered that the complainant give notice by publication of a copy of this order in some newspaper, printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for four successive weeks, four months before the third Monday of May next, to the said absent defendants, that they be and appear on or before the third Monday of May next, in this Court, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by the bill, and that in case the said defendants shall not appear within the term above limited—the said bill will as to the said defendants be taken pro confesso.

The bill in this cause states that Hugh Henry was in his life time indebted to the complainant and hath departed this life, the said debt remaining unpaid—that administration of his personal estate has been had, and the same is exhausted and insufficient to pay his debts—that he hath left real estate in Somerset County which has descended to the defendants in the cause.

The object of the said bill is, to obtain a sale of the said real estate for the payment of the debts of said Hugh

ARA SPENCE.

True copy. Test,

GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 8. 4m

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Thomas Robertson

v

Nathaniel Dixon and Nancy his wife, and Amelia Jenkins.

IN this cause it appears to the Court that Amelia Jenkins doth not reside in the State of Maryland and within the reach of the process of this Court, and the Sheriff having returned to the subpœna issued in this cause "non est."

It is therefore on this 28th day of November, 1827, by this Court ordered that the complainant—by inserting a copy of this order in some newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne once a week for four successive weeks—give notice to the said absent defendant that she be and appear on the third Monday of May next, in this Court in person by a solicitor to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed for by the bill, and that in case the said defendant shall not appear within the term above limited—the said bill will as to the said defendant be taken pro confesso—and the first insertion of such copy shall be made at least four months before the said third Monday of May next, in the said paper.

The bill in this case states that Thomas Jenkins was in his life time indebted to the complainant for the purchase money of certain real estate sold by the complainant to the said Thomas—that the said Thomas hath departed this life without paying the said debt, and without leaving any personal estate to pay his debts that he left the defendant Nancy and Amelia his heirs at law—and the defendant Nancy hath intermarried with the defendant Nathaniel. The object of the bill is to obtain a sale of the said real estate for the payment of the said purchase money.

ARA SPENCE,
WILLIAM TINGLE

True copy. Test,

GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 8, 1827. 4t

Wanted, Immediately,

An Apprentice to the Printing Business, about 15 years of age. Apply at the office of the Village Herald.

Dec. 18. 3t

Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county, Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also, another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr. Levin Ballard, senior, known by the name of Moore & Casset, situated on Monokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm. Jones and Dr. J. King.—This tract contains about 130 acres—and, besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises.

As no person will purchase without viewing the property a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to

L. W. BALLARD.

Dec. 18, 1827. 4d

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Lankford against Fleet C. Chelton, I have seized and taken in execution the following tracts or parcels of land, to wit: Part of a tract of land commonly called Erskriges, also part of another tract of land commonly called Robbins's, or by whatever name or names the aforesaid lands may be known or called, all which will more fully appear by reference to a deed from John Irving to said F. C. Chelton, bearing date the 18th December, 1823—containing in the whole two hundred and fifty-two acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court House door, on Tuesday the 22nd day of January, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 4 P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

Jan. 1, 1828. 1s

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11th, 1827.

ON application of Gertrude Kellum, administrix of John Kellum, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court that she give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess Anne.

True copy, Test,

JAMES FOLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county

In compliance with the above Order.

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of John Kellum, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 24th day of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of Dec. 1827.

GERTRUDE KELLUM, Adm'x. of J. Kellum, dec'd.

Dec. 18

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Dec. 11th, 1827.

ON application of Mary Porter, Extrix of Richard B. Porter, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that she give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,

JAMES FOLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order.

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Richard B. Porter, late of said county, dec'd. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th of June next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of Dec., 1827.

MARY PORTER, Adm'x. of R. B. Porter, dec'd.

Dec. 18

LAND FOR SALE,

IN POTATO NECK.

344 ACRES,

The westerly half of the farm late the property of Francis H. Waters, esq. (dec'd.)—About 100 acres are under improvement, a good part of which produces luxuriantly. The residue is heavily timbered with oak and pine, &c., and conveniently situated to market. The farm is washed on one side by the Annamessex river, and on the other it lies contiguous to the Monokin.

On the premises upon the Annamessex side is a delightful building spot, of high ground, in full view of the river, intercepted only by a small grove of lofty pines, and near it a delightful well of water, said to be surpassed by none in the county. Further particulars are deemed unnecessary, as those wishing to purchase will doubtless view the premises for themselves. Half of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for five or more years—interest to be paid annually.

For further particulars enquire of Dr Ballard, near the premises, or to Mr. Lazarus Maddux, Potato Neck, or to the Rev. Dr. Waters, Washington Academy, or a line addressed to the subscriber, Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. York, will meet with attention.

FREEBORN GARRETTSON.

December 18, 1827. tf

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Thos. Brown against Tubman Crown, terretenant of William Fleming, dec'd. I have seized and taken in execution a tract or part of two tracts of land, the one called Ridge and the other My Own, which was formerly the property of said William Fleming, dec'd. and on which the said Tubman Brown now resides, containing 70 acres, more or less, which I will sell at the Court House door on the 8th of January next, between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

Dec. 18.—2s

PHILADELPHIA ALBUM AND Ladies' Literary Gazette.

"ALBUMS," says an agreeable writer, "are things, in which are gathered many sweets from the flowers of genius and taste in the garden of literature. They also serve as pleasant mementos of those friends who are absent, and tend to instruct as well as to please—to enlighten, as well as to amuse."

The Album, to which the publishers respectfully invite attention, has during the brief space of its publication, met with such flattering and universal esteem as to warrant the printing, each week, of near six thousand copies.

The work is enriched with original articles on a variety of interesting and valuable subjects. Fine Arts; Sciences; Botanical, Historical, Biographical and Moral Essays, Sketches, &c.; Reviews of new books; Fashionable and Literary Intelligence; Manners, Conversation, Dress, and Beauty; the cultivation of Plants and Flowers; Amusing and Moral Tales, together with choice articles in every department of polite and useful literature.

It is handsomely printed (8 pages every Wednesday) on fine white paper, royal size, quarto form, making an elegant annual volume of upwards of four hundred pages, embellished with appropriate engravings.

The publishers are determined to spare neither pains nor expense in their ambitious exertions to make their work an acquisition to literature. To sustain its character, they have made (at great expense) arrangements with some of the first writers in this country, and are at the same time enabled, from European Journals which they receive, to make the choicest selections from the richest sources of foreign literature.

To give the parents or brothers—the friends or guardians of their fair readers an assurance of that strict sense of purity, chasteness and general propriety which should eminently characterize a work of this kind, constituting a bouquet of the "flowers of literature," which must form to the cultivated and accomplished mind, a "token of esteem," the most valuable and pleasing—a "forget me not," of the most appropriate, endearing, and lasting nature, the publishers have associated with its former conductors in their editorial duties a body of distinguished literary reputation and talent, whose watchful attention and acknowledged abilities they are confident will add materially to the character of the work.

Price, $2 50 per annum, payable in advance. Address the Publishers of the Philadelphia Album, and Ladies' Literary Gazette, 45 Chesnut street, Philadelphia.

BLANK BILLS OF SALE,

Printed on fine Paper,

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

THE WORLD TO COME.

When in the deep brown shade of even,
High rolls in air the thunder drum,
And clouds obscure the face of Heaven,
I think upon the world to come.

Strange! mysterious! Heav'nly Pow'r!
Who shall say thy glorious works are done,
Whilst storms convulsive o'er us
 low'r
And bring to mind, a world to come!

Wretch who trembl'st on the brink,
Stop! oh, stop e'er thou 'rt undone—
From thy guilt and folly shrink,
Repent—there is a world to come!

Repentance is a joyful sound;
Salvation is refus'd to none—
Oh! how my fainting spirits bound
When thinking of the world to come!
MIRA.

STANZAS.

Suggested by the sight of some late Autumn flowers.

Those few pale autumn flowers,
How beautiful they are!
Than all that went before,
Than all the summer's store,
How lovelier far!

And why?—They are the last!
The last! the last! the last!
Oh! by that little word,
How many thoughts are stirr'd,
The sister of the past!

Pale flowers! pale perishing flowers!
Ye're types of precious things;
Types of those bitter moments,
That flit like life's enjoyments,
On rapid, rapid wings.

Last hours with parting dear ones,
(That time the fastest spends)
Last tears in silent shed,
Last words half uttered,
Last looks of dying friends.

Who but would fain compress
A life into a day,
The last day spent with one
Who, o'er the morrow's sun,
Must leave us, and for aye?

Oh, precious, precious moments!
Pale flowers! ye're types of those;
The saddest! sweetest! dearest!
Because, like those, the nearest
To an eternal close.

Pale flowers! pale perishing flowers!
I woo your gentle breath—
I leave the summer rose
For younger, blither brows.
Tell me of change and death.

A MIRROR FOR THE PETIT MAITRES.

A skipping, dancing, worthless tribe,
 you are,
Fit only for yourselves: you herd together;
And when the circling glass warms
 your vain hearts,
You talk of beauties that you never saw.
And fancy raptures that you never felt.

In all collections of essays, I invariably find some paper addressed to the women, that is either offered as a lecture of advice, or levelled at them with all the severity of satire; while the men, the lords of the creation! are suffered to grovel on in vice, or to sneak through the world as ignorant and worthless characters.—Why are the eyes of these authors shut against the follies of their own sex? Why will the learned mind labour to seduce woman again to taste of the Tree of Knowledge, to make her see the nakedness of those around her?—how many youth may blush, at the awful neglect of their understandings! blush, when they recollect the high, the sublime nature of the soul. Good Heaven! can a modern fine gentleman suppose himself in the same class of beings with an Essex, or a Sydney, the ornaments of the sixteenth century? To mention the sacred names of a Newton, or a Locke, would be to draw a comparison between the feeble glimmer of a glowworm and the effulgence of the sun.

The first emotion of the human heart is a strong desire of happiness; and, in minds of any worth, an ambition to be eminent in something form two biases, which emphatically mark the grandeur and immortality of the soul; and, if properly directed, would raise man to the highest perfection that his frail nature is capable of.—The ambition of a manly soul ought to soar to intellectual attainments—a perfect gentleman must not be ignorant on any subject. To be uninformed of the histories of Greece and Rome, setting aside that of our own country, is absolutely shameful: yet two thirds of our Jeus d' Esprit would rub their vacant foreheads, if you happened to ask them any questions about either of the Gracchi; but hint in their ears the names of Alcibiades or Phocion, and perhaps they will think you are talking of some old clothesmen! I have heard mistakes made by fashionable young men, that a schoolboy of ten years old would blush to be caught in. I will take the liberty of giving two or three examples.

Some ladies, in company with one gentleman; were expressing their approbation of the graceful manner in which Helen leaves her loom to go to Paris, after his flight from Menelaus: "Ah ladies!" says he, "it is fine in Pope; but I have read it in the original Latin, and there it is beautiful!"—"In Latin, Sir!" said a female friend of mine, who was present: "I beg your pardon; but Homer was a Greek poet."—No, no, madam!" he hastily replied; "you mean Horace, I assure you, Homer was a Roman, for I have read him!"

One evening, I was with some other ladies, in a room with three young men. How the subject came into their heads I know not, because I was not listening to their conversation; but my attention was arrested, by one of them saying rather loudly—"Mark Antony was made king of one of the Assyrian provinces."—"Perhaps so: but I am sure," replied a second, "he was Cæsar's son."—"You both mistake," interrupted the third; "he was one of the villians who helped Brutus to kill Cæsar!" I was astonished and speechless with surprise, gazed at the three "gay, charming fellows!" who, in my opinion, better deserved the appellation of the blockhead triumvirate.

Are these illiterate, shameless ignorant animals, of that noble species, Man!—that supereminent creature, whose form was shaped to gaze on the heavens, and the faculties of whose soul were expanded by his creator that he might count the stars! And how does he now employ his time? Not even in walking the plain track of literature—not in comparing the histories of republics, kingdoms and empires; and while he reads, conversing with wise lawgivers and holy patriarchs!—not in searching through the labyrinths of the human mind with Locke; nor in reading the stars, and making the vast tour of the universe, in company with the divine Newton! No, these are not his pursuits; he reads no books, save now and then a flimsy play, that has nothing but its novelty to commend it—and perhaps, the history of some popular divorce. Besides the theatre, that inestimable fountain from whence he derives all his classical knowledge, a slight acquaintance with the geography of France, just sufficient to enable him to understand the news of the day, as all the learning he aspires after. Talk of the stars to him, and he will say he never looks at any, but those in a woman's face. Talk of the soul, friendship, mind, &c. and he will interrupt you, by saying, that is a jargon he does not understand. There is one science, I believe, the whole of his sex are perfectly conversant in—that of eating and drinking: on the subject of which they could outtalk Apicius himself. And I will do them the justice to say, that even the most stupid of them could reduce it to a system, in a very elaborate treatise on tarts and custards.

Many of our youth are so monstrously barren, that I can positively affirm, that there are not eight out of ten who can spell an epistle of one page in length without the immediate aid of a dictionary. As to their accomplishment in the most delightful of all studies, the works of the poets, I can say little or nothing to their advantage. The swift though tender ray of Apollo's halo cannot penetrate their opake brows. Ignorance, if not vitious hardiment, has shielded their brazen foreheads; and to their dull ear, the "concord of sweet sound" is charmless.

I know that there are some, who have skimmed the face of literature; and being swoln with the little preeminences they have over their companions, they are wild to show their superiority over common sense. Flinging reason behind them, they set up for men of extraordinary genius; and like the Persian glassman, in his foolish vision, they kick about their earthly happiness, and hopes of future felicity, with a real lunantic fury.

Yet there are others of our young men, who are an honour to their country—who join, with all the charms of a beautiful form, the more attracting, the more fascinating graces, of a rich cultivated understanding, and a poetical and delicate taste; whose society will always be sought after with eagerness; and when absent, the remembrance of their virtues and accomplishments will pay a lambent flame around our hearts, and no time can erase their lovely ideas from our memories. How different are the sensations which agitate the bosom of a female, in the company of a thoughtless coxcomb! She lets the poor little butterfly flutter round her, and buz its empty nothings in her ear; and when it takes its flight, thinks no more of it than of those insects which sparkle in the summer's blaze.

I am well aware, that if this ever meets the eye of those to whom I address it, they will set me down as a disappointed—ugly—old maid; but I deny the charge—I am not old for I have not yet lived twenty two years; I think I am not ugly, provided I may believe the daily rhapsodies of at least half a dozen of these popinjays; and I know I am rich. So I make out that I am neither the disappointed, the ugly, nor the old.

SETTLEMENT OF WEST AMERICA.

That part of the territory of the United States which borders on the Pacific ocean, and extends from lat. 42 deg. to lat. 54 deg. N. is represented by all; who have visited it, to be superior in climate and soil, to any other country on the Globe; and to be full of advantages to any free and civilized people, that may settle it. The occupancy of it has engaged the deliberations of Congress for many years.—There can be no reason why they should not be as ready to pass, as the people are to approve, of any law, which shall authorize its immediate possession and colonization. It must be pleasing to every American, who is a friend to his country to know, that a company of enterprising young men, are about to memoralize the general government for permission and aid to effect this object. The fisheries and fur trade and other advantages of commerce on that coast worth to this country a million of dollars per annum, ought not to be lost for the want of the appropriation by government of half a million for their security and advancement. A naval station, a port of entry, and a safe and convenient harbour in which vessels may recruit, obtain stores and make repairs, are nothing more than the protection and facilities which the invaluable trade demands. That it is invaluable the concurrent testimony of our merchants goes to prove—they say "there are made no voyages on the same capital employed, more profitably than those to the N. W. Coast." This trade secured and fostered by the establishment of a colony flourishing under the auspices of government would yield a hundred fold. If it is not protected in this manner, it will inevitably fall into the hands of Great Britain. Perhaps, there is no time more favourable for Congress to act upon this subject than the present. To have taken an exclusive possession of the Territory in question before A. D. 1828, would have been premature, and a contravention of a treaty made in 1818, between Great Britain and this country, in which it is stipulated, "that any country that may be claimed by either party on the North West Coast of America, westward of the Stony Mountains, shall, together with its harbours, bays and creeks, and the navigation of all the rivers within the same, be free and open for the term of ten years from the date of the signatures of the two powers." The time has nearly arrived when in their respective legislative assemblies, and when ours will be free, and just in the full exercise of the right of possession.

The immediate occupancy of this country, may wrest it forever from the iron grasp of England, who at this time claims a small trading settlement there, and who thinks the country so desirable, that she has used every diplomatic art, and has even violated her good faith to acquire it. Let therefore, this country be settled, and that too, by adventurers carrying with them the holy and inexhaustable fire of patriotism. If emigrating from a free Republic, they will be likely to possess a superiority in virtue, and energetic character.

It is not impossible, it is even probable, that in less than two centuries, this delightful district of creation, will, by the consent of all nations, become a separate and independent people; hence it is desirable that the colonists should be bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh, that they should be educated in our language, accustomed to our laws, and supporters of the same scientific and religious institutions; thus carrying with them the elements of this republic, with which to construct their own; their children will breathe with their first breath a love for their country, and will be taught lessons of patriotism and heroic virtue. The God of nature has not so beautifully diversified this extensive country, and watered it with one of the largest rivers in America, and blessed it with a thousand natural conveniences for civilized man, to remain forever the uncultivated tract, and a haunt for savages and wild beasts. Shall the thrifty oak that has withstood the storms of a century unheeded, fall? Shall the noble horse waste his strength in idol prance? Shall the earth lose its fatness? and an exuberant vegetation, drop its fruit only for the riot and banquet of worms?—Surely this country, the most distinguished in the plentitude of nature, is for enlightened and social man to improve. Already has he viewed it from Pisgah's top and has tasted the clusters of grapes, and ere long he will enter in to possess. At a period not far remote it will teem with a population free and happy in government, great and glorious in character. What beneficial results may arise to the world from the settlement of that country is known only to him who holds the destinies of man; they may be the final work of the consummation of universal peace and knowledge.

THE TOBACCO PLANT.

Tobacco being one of the principal staple commodities of a considerable portion of the United States, its history may not be uninteresting to many of our readers. Almost all descriptions of persons are attached to it in some way or other. The savage and the barbarous, as well as the civilized man, becomes the votary, and, to a certain degree, the slave of it; and there is something so fascinating in the relish of this soothing narcotic that not only men, but even women and children are prone to partake of it in some of the forms of chewing, snuffing, or smoking. The custom of useing tobacco is derived from the aborigines of America, and is one of the novelties resulting from the discovery of this country. It is a plant peculiar to this country, and its taste and smell are at first disagreeable and nauseous to every one who partakes of it, and yet strange as it may appear, men become so infatuated with it as to forego food, and other necessaries, for the possession of this favourite luxury, which is sought after and enjoyed with a kind of passion. So strong is the desire for it that travellers inform us, that among the Highlands of Scotland the peasants can more easily be procured as guides in the mountains, by a present of snuff, that by a compensation in money—Professor Hooker relates in his tour through Iceland that on one occasion he presented a small box of snuff to a female of that island for the civilities he received under her roof during a short stay and that the present was considered so extraordinary and so valuable, as to throw her into raptures, and she immediately clung around his neck and lavished upon him kisses without number.

The stimulating and narcotic virtue of the plant resides in its leaves, which, when it is ripe, are dried in the shade and packed up for sale.—The manufacture or preparation of it is diversified in a great variety of ways, as it is intended for chewing, snuffing, or smoking; all too well known to require explaining. As far as we can ascertain, the original and only method of useing tobacco by the natives of this country, when first discovered, was smoking.

It is said to have been imported into Europe from America, about the middle of the 16th century (1550) by Hermandez de Toledo, who sent it to Spain and Portugal. At that time the ambassador of Francis 2d resided at the court of Lisbon, and in 1560 he carried tobacco into France, where it was presented to Catharine de Medicis as a plant from the New World possessing extraordinary virtues—the Ambassador's name was Nicot and in honour of him the plant was named Nicotiana, which as a genuine name has been retained by Botanists to this day. According to the elaborate and faithful annals of Abiel Holmes D. D. tobacco was carried into England by Mr. Lane in 1556; but Sir Walter Raleigh being the leading man in western enterprises at that time, the credit is given to him, and not to Lane. Count Nicot, however, had forestalled the market, and given his name to this new plant from the new world.

Lobel states, the tobacco plant was cultivated in England as early as 1570 and Sir Walter Raleigh is said to have set the fashion of smoking it in that country after the Indian manner, in a long pipe. It is alleged that its specific name is derived from Tobago, one of the West India islands, whence it was also carried to Europe and thence called the Tobago plant, and by an easy translation it has become the Tobacco-plant. Hence Botanists have contrived a Latin specific name Tabacum and its scientific name is Nicotiana tabacum. It is arranged in the system of Linnæus as follows:

In the Class Pentandria
" Order Monogynia
" Genus Nicotiana
" Species Tabacum.

The most complete botanical work on tobacco is that of Professor Lehman of Hamburg, printed in 1818, in quarto, under the title of Generis Nicotianarum historia, or history of the different species of tobacco. It is more important as being the result of the joint labors of himself and his friend Dr. Siners, of the same place, an industrious and practical cultivator of the scenes of botany. Lehman mentions 21 species of (Nicotiana) tobacco. Of these 21, almost every species is indigenous to America. Not one grows spontaneously in Europe. Even in Asia and Africa, the tobacco plant is believed to have been introduced directly or indirectly from America. In New Holland there is a single species of a very peculiar character which does not seem to grow spontaneously any where else. This has been designated as the Nicotiana Suaveolens.

All the governments of Europe levy high duties on the introduction of tobacco, and in Great Britain a large revenue is derived from these; and the excise upon its manufacture. Still the people will have it, and it has become an essential article in the luxury of the times. Its cultivation is accordingly extending both in our own and other countries. From those facts and considerations, it appears well worthy the attention of the statesman, the merchant, and the politicial economist. We shall reserve our observations on the use of it as an article of luxury, and as a medicine, for another time.—N. Y. Journal of Com.

From the Medical Intelligencer.

MODERATE DRINKING LEADS TO INTEMPERANCE.

The late discussions and publications on the grave subject of intemperance, have not brought to notice a single fact or sentence so important as that which we have just copied as the topic for a few remarks. This importance is equally great whether we regard the habit as a leading cause of intemperance, or its discontinuance as a most influential means of its suppression. That this opinion is but too well founded, the experience, of many, and the observation of all, who have observed but a part of what has been going on about them, will unequivocally prove. Men do not generally arrive suddenly at the last stage of any vicious indulgence: it is the occasional and permitted gratification which ends in excess and ruin. So it is in the use of ardent spirit: most drunkards have been in their day, and in many instances for a long day, but moderate drunkards, and during all this period they have intended never to exceed the bounds of safe and allowable indulgence.

The idea that a little brandy, gin, rum, noyeau, or any other spirituous potation, can be frequently, perhaps daily, taken with impunity,—when carried into effect, will ever prove, as it ever has done, a most prolific source of intemperance. Multitudes of men, and not a few women, too numerous to think of, otherwise temperate, regular and even commendable in their modes of life,—by this apparently harmless, though most insidious gratification, have been ensnared and destroyed. By this indulgence, too, the practice we deplore, is made familiar to the young: and thus situated, how can the young be made to view the practice as they ought? Can a child be supposed to regard the liquor he sees a parent drink as a poison? Can he view a beverage which he sees to be considered as the symbol of hospitality, and as a means of social enjoyment, as full of danger, and leading to the loss of all that is dear in possession or bright in prospect? Here, too, we see the influence of example, and the weight of responsibility resting not on parents only, but on every individual in society whose conduct affects unfavourably the moral principles and men, is so low and obscure as not to incur more or less of this frightful responsibility?

Another idea which tends to justify this practice of moderate drinking, is a persuasion that a little spirit is good for the health of those who are well without it. All history is living testimony, as given by correct observers, and by all whose judgement is not perverted by a vice which they are determined to defend and indulge, are totally opposed to this sentiment. Another idea, not less destitute of all truth, is an opinion that some degree of excitement and exhilaration from some artificial stimulant is required to enable labourers, sailors, mechanics, &c. to put forth the greatest muscular strength of which they are capable.

That a man, or a number of men, may for a time move more briskly, and for a short period perform more labour, when under a certain degree of unnatural elevation from spirit, we will not undertake to deny. But that men for a long period, for the whole of a life for example, will perform more work of any kind, is entirely opposed to the conviction of those persons who are best qualified to judge. We mean men who have had the care and employment of labourers of all descriptions, such as captains of vessels, travellers, superintendents of farms, manufactures, &c. These will all tell you that they can do better without spirit than with it. It is not to be denied, that spirit is sometimes truly medicinal: so is opium, hyosciamus, prussic acid and fifty other poisons. These are all medicines or poisons, according to their preparations, mode of exhibition and the situation of those to whom they are administered. In this light should all distilled spirit be viewed; it has nothing neutral in its character and effects, it is an agent always for us or against us, if not a friend an enemy.

We find the following in the the Rochester N. Y. Daily Adv. of the 18th ult.

"Horrible.—A case which report assimilates to the late act at Albany, has just occurred in Genessee county. James Merry of Le Roy died suddenly on the 7th, was buried on the 9th, and, owing to some suspicious circumstances, disintered on the 12th inst.; when the inquest held over the body returned a verdict of death by poisoning! The widow was immediately committed to Batavia jail, as the supposed perpetrator of the horrid deed!

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1828. NO. 42.

L. D. Teackle

Terms of Publication.

THE VILLAGE HERALD is published weekly at $2 50, per annum, or at $2 if sent by mail and subject to postage, in either case to be paid half-yearly in advance. No subscription taken for a shorter period than six months; none discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for each continuance: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Monday, Dec. 31, 1827.

This being the day appointed by the Constitution for the meeting of the Legislature of this state, 75 of the members of the House of Delegates appeared and qualified; after which they adjourned until to-morrow.

Tuesday, Jan. 1, 1828.

The house met; 77 members present.

On motion, the house proceeded to the election of a Speaker. John G. Chapman and Francis Thomas, in nomination. On counting the ballots it appeared that the former gentleman had received 41 votes, and the latter 35. J. G. Chapman was therefore declared duly elected. He was handed to the chair by Messrs. Rogerson and Semmes. He then in a brief address to the house expressed his gratitude for the distinguished honor conferred upon him.

Mr. Semmes submitted the following order, which was unanimously adopted.

Ordered, That Mr. Gideon Pearce, be appointed Chief Clerk.

The clerks and officers who served at the last session were all re-elected.

Mr. Martin submitted the following order:

Ordered, That this house will not make any additional allowance to any committee clerk, more than the usual per diem and itinerant charges.

Mr. Turner moved to amend the same by striking out the words 'committee clerks,' and inserting in lieu thereof the words 'the officers of this house.'

On motion of Mr. Lee, the order, with the amendment, was laid on the table.

THE SENATE

Formed a quorum on Monday, when the following letter was received and read:

Wye-House, Dec. 26, 1827.

To the honorable,
The Senate of Maryland.

Gentlemen,

My health, and other circumstances, compel me to relinquish the Chair of the Senate. With grateful recollections of your confidence and kindness, I remain with sincere respect, your obt. servt.

EDWARD LLOYD.

The senate adjourned at an early hour.

Tuesday, Jan. 1, 1828.

The Senate met. Mr. Thomas appeared and took his seat.

Mr. William H. Marriott, was this day elected President, and the other clerks and officers re-appointed.

Wednesday, January 2.

Mr. Nelson obtained leave to introduce bills of the following titles:

A supplement to an act against excessive usury; And

A further additional supplement to the act for the relief of sundry insolvent debtors.

Mr. Kennedy obtained leave to bring in a bill to abolish imprisonment for debt in certain cases.

TREASURY OF MARYLAND.

The Treasurer of the W. Shore, on the 2nd instant, transmitted to the Legislature his Annual Report, exhibiting the state of the Treasury, during the past financial year, which terminated on the first of December, 1827. It appears from this report, that the receipts into the treasury from the 1st of December, 1826, to the 1st of December, 1827, amounted to

	$266,116 42½
And that the balance in the treasury, on the 1st of Dec. 1826, was	103,284 28
Which added to the receipts made the aggregate in the treasury in 1827,	369,700 70½

The Expenditures

During the same period amounted to	293,409 31
This sum taken from the whole amount in the treasury left a balance therein on the 1st of December last, of	76,291 30½

MESSAGE

OF

JOSEPH KENT,

Governor of the State of Maryland,

Transmitted to the Legislature on Wednesday, 2nd Jan. 1828.

Fellow Citizens of the Senate, and of the House of Delegates,

The usual period has again arrived when by the provisions of our Constitution the Representatives of a free people, selected for their wisdom and integrity, are convened for the purpose of consulting together for the general good of the State; and coming as you do from every part of it, necessarily bring with you a perfect knowledge of the wants and wishes of our common constituents.

That the enviable distinction which you have received is well merited, and that the confidence of the people will be fully rewarded by the wisdom of your measures, we feel the most satisfactory anticipations; and if by an entire co-operation on our part which we cordially tender you, the public welfare shall be promoted and the business of the session facilitated, it will afford us the highest satisfaction.

The subjects referred to the Executive by the last general Assembly, were but few, and of minor importance—they have all been attended to.

The weights and measures directed by An Act of December session, 1825, to be procured, have all been obtained, and delivered in the course of the past summer, to the respective Levy Courts of the several Counties. They appear to have been well made, of the best materials, and may be considered correct standards.

We submit herewith the annual report of the Directors of the Penitentiary, which shews that the concerns of that institution have been well conducted; the additional building authorized to be erected, and which is designed to provide cells for solitary confinement, from which the happiest results are anticipated, in the reformation of criminals, is not yet completed.

Under the present discipline, (and the building admits of no other arrangement,) the Penitentiary may be considered a school for vice where the depravity of one, more conspicuous in crime than the rest, is freely communicated and impressed upon the minds of those less wicked. Every effort should be made to perfect the Penitentiary system. Its institution forms a new era in the criminal jurisprudence of our State; and from its superior humanity and benevolence, over the former code, has a natural connection with our republican institutions, every feature of which is at variance with the cruelty of unnecessary sanguinary punishments.

It affords us the highest satisfaction to inform you that the subject of Internal Improvement, so interesting to the Citizens of this State begins at last, to assume a shape that promises speedily, beneficial results.—The intelligent and enterprising individuals having the directions of the Baltimore Ohio Rail Road Company, aided by the United States Topographical Engineers, promptly furnished them, at Washington have so far completed the examination of the ground between the City of Baltimore and the Ohio river as to ascertain the practicability of the undertaking and enable the President of the Company to advertise for materials preparatory to commencing this important work the next season.

By the provisions of the act of incorporation, the State has reserved to itself the right to subscribe for stock to the amount of one million of dollars; and upon so subscribing, to appoint four directors to assist in the management of the affairs of the company, provided, the subscription be made within 12 months from the passage of the said act. The time limited for the state to make this subscription will expire on the twenty eighth day of February next. It will therefore be necessary if you should decide to take the Stock, to authorize the subscription on or before that day, as no extension of the time can take place without the assent of the Company.

The amount of subscriptions to the Stock of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, have been such as lead us to believe that that equally important work will also have an early commencement.

With these two great works completed, Maryland would begin to realize those commercial advantages which from her geographical position, the fertility of her soil, the variety of her productions the value of her fisheries and the abudance and richness of her minerals she is so justly entitled to. The shortest and most direct communication the Western States can have with the Atlantic, is through Maryland. Let us then afford them every facility of intercourse with us, and they will richly reward us by the contribution of their valuable productions, to swell our foreign commerce, at the same time that we shall greatly extend our inland trade always more important to a country than its foreign traffick.

Notwithstanding the great advantages Maryland will obviously derive from those works they possess more of a national than local character, and we have no doubt will receive the fostering aid of the National Government which has heretofore been so wisely extended to works of a similar nature, though of minor importance.

Roads and Canals are so essential to the growth and prosperity of a Country, as arteries are to the health and vigor of the human body. They facilitate intercourse, bring citizens of remote districts together, and thereby remove local prejudices and diffuse wealth and comfort through the land by affording a cheap and easy interchange of the surplus productions of one section of the country for those of another.

You will receive, herewith, Doctor Howard's report of the survey of a rout for a canal from the Potomac to Baltimore, and of an examination, of the country towards this city, with a view of connecting it with the proposed canal. The execution of this survey and examination is highly creditable to that enlightened and worthy citizen, and it contains information very desirable to be possessed by both the General and State Governments, which can be resorted to for practical purposes either at the present or any future period. It is very gratifying to observe that the United States Topographical Engineers are so freely detailed on works of this sort. This corps consisted principally of graduates from that invaluable Military School at West Point, and were no other advantages to be derived from that highly interesting National institution than the extensive surveys they have been engaged in making through the Country, the Republic would be amply remunerated for all the expense attending the establishment.

We regret to have to communicate that the Militia are in a state of great deterioration, and that nothing short of the invigorating hand of the Legislature can make them what they ought to be.

We have been looking to Congress for sometime for a general System, and under its direction considerable efforts have been made to collect information, and to obtain the opinions of intelligent military officers upon the subject.—The present session may probably produce something decissive in relation thereto.

We must again call your attention to the all important subject of Education. The law for the establishment of Primary Schools, so well received by the people, is believed to be so defective that but a very partial attempt has been made to carry it into effect; and that without revision and material amendment it will be useless. So much depends upon the intelligence and just discrimination of our citizens that unless the benefits of Education shall be generally diffused amongst them, strong apprehensions may be entertained for the durability of our Republican institutions. Our government essentially depends on public opinion for its support, and what reliance can be placed on, what stability looked for, in the opinions of an uneducated population?—Men are rash and inconsiderate generally in proportion to their ignorance.—We should bear in mind that in this country alone, the experiment is now making whether man is capable of self-government, and that deeply as we and our posterity are interested in its success, its propitious influence, may be expected not to be confined to us, but to extend to the whole human family.

The donations of the state for purposes of education to its colleges academies and common schools, amount annually to about the sum of thirty thousand dollars—and although this appears to be a liberal grant; yet when we take into consideration, the importance of the subject, we shall at once see, the propriety of extending it to the utmost limit that the resources of the state will justify. It is a lamentable fact, that most of our colleges and academies, are not on as good a footing as they were formerly. A youth in order to complete his education has to travel to a distant state, which greatly enhances the expense. A Parent could often afford to give his son an education at a College within the state, which he could not afford to do out of it.

Some further pecuniary aid of St. John's College: with the improvement in the conditon of which you must be well acquainted: and it has advantages which would enable it to vie with any similar institution in the country. Since our last communication, Washington College on the Eastern Shore, has been burnt, which fact was communicated to the General Assembly at the last session in a memorial praying for aid to re-build it. The prayer of the memorial has not yet been granted, but we hope it will receive your favorable consideration during the present session.

Experience has satisfied us, that some small alterations of the Constitution might be made, which would save unnecessary trouble, as well as facilitate the transaction of public business. At present it is required that the laws be signed by the Governor in the presence of both Houses of the General Assembly. Was this requisition dispensed with, and the laws authorised to be signed by the Governor in the Council Chamber, and attested by the Clerk of the Council it would conform more to the modern improvements in the science of Government, and contribute greatly to the convenience of the Legislature. The great Seal of the State, we would respectfully suggest ought to be in charge of the Executive; and we recommend an alteration to that effect, and further that all commissions and executive acts now required to be attested by the Clerk of the Council. This alteration would relieve the Chancellor from much interruption; and the more appropriate duties of that able and faithful officer, are sufficiently arduous without his being diverted therefrom to participate in executive labours; and it would at the same time give more symetry to our constitution.

We submit herewith for your consideration a communication from the Honorable Nicholas Brice, Chief Judge of Baltimore City Court, which states the necessity of a revision of our criminal code, which from the importance of the suggestions it contains, deserves your serious consideration.

Considerable excitement prevails at this time throughout the country in relation to a contemplated change in the present tariff of duties upon foreign importations. This excitement is the natural consequence of our free institutions which properly impose no restraint on the freedom of speech or the liberty of the press.

In a country extensive as is ours, embracing every variety of climate, capable of almost every production, and filled with an enteprising skilful population, doubling itself in less than a quarter of a century, we must expect considerable diversity of views and contentions among its citizens in relation to the measures to be adopted by the government, for the promotion and protection of the general interests of the country.

In discussing the measures of the national government we should always bear in mind that the constitution itself was found in compromise, and that excellent as it is acknowledged to be, it requires great moderation, forbearance and liberality on the part of the people towards the conflicting views, feelings and even predjudices of each other, to preserve and perpetuate its blessings.

Confined by the peculiar nature of our government to measures of domestic policy and internal police, operations only within the limits of our own State, whilst the great and leading interests of the country of which we are a component part is committed to the management of a separate authority embracing the whole union in the sphere of its action, we do not deam it necessary to descend to particulars in the expression of our opinion of measures over which we have no control. But with the fullest reliance on the integrity, talents and experience of the functionaries to whom those great interests are entrusted, we rest with entire confidence that they will continue to be as they have heretofore been, so managed as to promote the general interest and prosperity of the country, and secure to us all the blessings and advantages which our incomparable system of governments was designed to secure and perpetuate.

During the past year, we have been favoured with abundant productions of the earth, and a general prevalence of health throughout the country. Grateful for these blessings, let us look to Him with thankfulness, who in his munificence bestowed them, and who formed, and can influence the human mind, to direct our attention to such public measures as may be best calculated to promote the real and substantial interests, and prosperity of the state. In all measures calculated to promote those ends, you will, assuredly have our prompt and zealous co-operation.

With the highest respect, we have the honor to be, your obedient servant.

JOSEPH KENT.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis	par
Easton	par
Frederick	par
Frederick County Bank	par
Bank Westminster	par
Hager's Town	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co	par
Elkton	1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	3
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	½
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	3
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

($5 and upwards — Annapolis to Planters' Bk. P. G. Co)

LITERARY PREMIUMS.

The editor of the Amulet, and Ladies' Literary Cabinet, desirous of drawing forth the talents of the Ladies, offers

For the best original Tale, not exceeding two columns of the Amulet, Twenty Dollars.

For the best Poem, not exceeding fifty lines Ten Dollars.

The premiums will be awarded by competent female judges, and the envelope containing the names of the unsuccessful competitors, will not be opened. All communications must be sent in, post paid, by the first of February next, addressed to the Editor of the Amulet, Philadelphia.

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JAN. 15, 1828.

☞The late hour at which the mail arrived, last night, precludes the possibility of presenting lengthy extracts of late news.

Extract of a letter to the Editor, dated "Annapolis, Jan. 11.

"The bill to authorize the Levy Court of our County to contract for the removal of the remains of ancient weirs, in Menokin river, and its several branches, has passed the House of Delegates, and will probably go through the Senate to-day."

JOSEPH KENT was on the 7th inst. re-elected Governor of this State for the ensuing year, in joint ballot of the two Houses of the Legislature, and by an almost unanimous vote.

The Legislature, on Tuesday last, went into joint ballot for the election of the Executive Council for the ensuing year. The vote stood as follows:

Daniel Martin, of Talbot,	56
William Steuart, of Balt.	54
Thomas Davis, of Montgomery	54
Arnold E. Jones, of Somerset	52
Rezin Estep, of Anne Arundel	47
Otho Scott, of Harford	46
Wm. McMahon, of Alleghany	43
Samuel Le Compte, of Dorch'r.	43
One blank vote.

The five first named were therefore chosen.

The Resolution offered by General Steuart for an adjournment of the Legislature on the 15th of February, passed the House on the 9th inst. by a large majority. It is believed it will pass the Senate; and persons having petitions for the Legislature would do well to transmit them early, under cover, to their delegates.

Mr. Scudder of the New-York Museum has furnished Mr. J. W. B. Parsons an artificial eye so exactly resembling the natural one, that it is difficult to distinguish one from the other.

FROM COLUMBIA.—Accounts from Maracaibo state that a terrible EARTHQUAKE was felt at BOGOTA, and its neighbourhood, on the 16th of November, which left half of the houses of the city uninhabitable and injured all the churches but one.

FROM RIO JANEIRO.—The ship Portia, from Rio Janeiro at N. York, left the former place on the 18th of November.

The law which had passed the Brazilian Cortes, equalizing the duties on foreign merchandise, had not received the Imperial sanction.

A force of about 3000 men sailed from Rio about the 10th, to reinforce the army in Rio Grande.

S. AMERICA.—The New York Commercial says that intelligence has been received from Havanna, that the King of Spain has acknowledged the Independence of South America.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Wednesday, January 2.

Mr. John W. Thomas obtained leave to introduce a bill to be entitled, an act to alter and abolish all such parts of the constitution, as relate to the election of two Delegates from the City of Annapolis.

Mr. Gantt obtained leave to introduce a bill to be entitled, an act concerning the inspection of Tobacco in this State.

Mr. Sellman, obtained leave to introduce a bill entitled, an act to regulate the manner of marketing by slave & free negroes in Anne Arundel county, and the city of Annapolis.

Mr. John Douglass submitted a motion for leave to introduce a bill to be entitled, an act to prohibit any person owning a slave or slaves for life or for a certain term of years, from hiring the same to any free negro or negroes so far as relates to Dorchester county, and for other purposes.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, the same was amended by the insertion of "Somerset," after "Dorchester."

On motion by Mr. Ringgold, the same was further amended by inserting "Kent," after "Somerset."

The motion so amended, was then adopted: and Messrs John Douglass, Teakle, Ringgold, John Williams and Isaac F. Williams were appointed a committee to prepare the same.

Thursday, January 3.

LEAVES GRANTED TO REPORT BILLS.

An act to abolish all such parts of the constitution and form of government, as relate to the time and manner of electing the senate, and the mode of filling up vacancies in that body, so that each county and the city of Baltimore may have one senator, to be elected by the people.

On motion of Mr. Teackle, the following order was read and ordered to lie on the table.

Ordered that so much of the Executive communication as relates to the weights and measures be referred to a select committee—that so much thereof as relates to the penitentiary, be referred to a standing committee, to be called the committee on crimes and punishments—That so much thereof as relates to internal improvement, to the militia, and to education, be severally referred to the standing committees to be appointed on those subjects: That so much thereof as relates to the authentication of the laws—to official commissions, and to a communication from the chief judge of the criminal court of the city of Baltimore, be referred to the standing committee, to be appointed on grievances and courts of justice—that so much thereof as relates to manufactures and domestic policy, be referred to the standing committees to be called the commitee of industry and liberal trade; that each of the said committees shall consist of seven members, and that the same shall be appointed by the speaker.

On motion by Mr. Donoho,

Ordered, That the treasurers of the Western and Eastern shores be required to report to this house the variances of construction, by the clerks of the county courts, of the act of December session 1826, ch. 247, commonly called the fee bill with reference to the mode of taxing fees on license, commissions, and other charges in the settlement of their respective accompts with the said Treasurers; if any such variances have been found to exist.

On Motion by Mr. Teackle, Ordered.

That a committee to consist of seven members, be apponted by the speaker, to enquire into the expediency of amending the laws relating to the treasury department, with a view to the enforcement, and more efficient collection, and distribution of the revenues of this state.

Messrs. Teackle, Fitzhugh, Mercer, J. S. Williams, King, Hope, and Lake, were appointed a committee pursuant to the above order.

PETITIONS PRESENTED.

Friday, January, 4.

By Mr. Teackle, a petition from Esther Robertson, of Somerset county, praying that she may be authorised to recover at law a reasonable compensation for her services in the cure of cancers and ulcerous eruptions; which was referred to Messrs. Teackle, Dennis and Gibbons.

And a petition of sundry inhabitants of Somerset county, praying that a law may pass to authorize the levy court to contract for the removal of stakes, sticks and other obstructions, arising from ancient weirs, in Menokin river and its various branches and to levy the expenses thereof upon the said county; which was referred to Messrs. Teackle, Donoho and Dennis.

Mr. Williams of Worcester county, from John Holland of said county, praying for support—and the petition of Levin Conner, praying for the support of himself and an insane son, at the expense of said county, which were referred to the committee to be appointed on the subject of pecuniary relief by county assessments.

LEAVES GRANTED.

By Mr. Donoho; An act to abolish all such parts of the constitution and form of government as relate to the mode of appointing the registers of wills for the different counties of this state. Messrs, Donoho, Boon, Somervell, Douglas, of Caroline, Orrell, Lake and Teackle, were appointed a committee to prepare and report the bill.

The following is Mr. A. Donoho's bill for amending the Constitution, in respect to the election of Register of Wills.

AN ACT to alter and amend so much of the Constitution and form of Government as relates to the appointment of Register of Wills, in each of the Counties of this State.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That, in lieu of section forty-one of the Constitution and form of Government of this state the following clause shall be substituted, to wit: that there be a Register of Wills appointed for each county, who shall be commissioned by the Governor, on the Joint Recommendation of the Senate and House of Delegates, who shall hold his office during four years from the date of his appointment, and until the end of ten days from the commencement of the next session of the General Assembly, which shall happen thereafter, unless sooner removed upon the recommendation of the General Assembly, two-thirds of both branches concurring therein, and that in the event of such removal or before the expiration of his term, or upon death, resignation, disqualification, or removal out of this state, of any Register of Wills in the recess of the General Assembly, the Governor, with the advice of the Council, may appoint and commission a fit and proper person to such vacant office, to hold the same until ten days after the next meeting of the General Assembly.

And be it enacted, That if this act shall be confirmed by the next General Assembly, after the next election of Delegates, in the first session after such new elections as the Constitution and form of Goverment direct, in such case, this act and the alterations in the said Constitution contained therein, shall be considered as a part, and constitute, and be valid as a part of the said Constitution and form of Government, to all intents and purposes, and every matter and thing in the said Constitution and form of Government in any wise conflicting with or contrary thereto, shall be, and the same is hereby repealed, abrogated and annuled.

The Speaker laid before the house reports from the clerks of Charles and Worcester county courts, relative to the attendance of the judges of those courts; which were referred to the standing committee on grievances and courts of justice.

By Mr. Teackle, An act to authorize the levy court of Somerst county to contract for the removal of certain obstructions in Menokin river and its several branches, and to levy the expenses therefor upon the said county. And,

An Act for the relief of William Robertson of Somerset county.

The Speaker announced the appointment of the standing committees, made pursuant to the several orders adopted for that purpose, as follows:

1. On Ways and Means, consisting of Messrs Semmes, Teackle, Potter, Fitzhugh, Tilghman, Steuart, of Baltimore city, and Tancy.

2. On Grievances and Courts of Justice consisting of Messrs. Thomas of Frederic, M'Mahon, Dennis, Somervell, Goldsborough, Watkins, and Boon.

3. On Claims, consisting of Messrs. Stevans, Banning, King, Hoffman, Lloyd, Harlan, and Stewart of Anne-Arundel.

4. On Elections and Privileges, consisting of Messrs. Gibbons, Thomas of Cecil, Hope, Lansdale, Bourne, Duvall and Orrel.

5. On Pensions and Revolutionary Claims, consisting of Messrs. Rogerson, Price, Mackey, Shriver, Comegys, Powell and Rentch.

6. On Internal Improvement, Messrs Lee, M'Culloh, Thomas of Saint-Mary's, Williams of Worcester, M Mahon, Dennis, and Fitzhugh.

7. On Militia, Messrs. Beall, Hawkins, Steuart of Baltimore City, Potter, Shower, Hooper and Ruth.

8. On Insolvency, Messrs. Gough, Ridgaway, Ringgold, Wells, Sellman, Mercer, and Ely.

9. On Education, Teackle, Semmes, Hughes, of Charles, McNeil, Hitch, Steuart, of Balt.

10. On Divorces, Thomas, of St. Mary's, Peter, Martin, Turner, Linthicum, Jones, Williams.

11. On Pecuniary Relief, Gantt, Sutton Brown, Douglas, of Caroline, Parran, Blackistone, Donoho.

12. On Lotteries, Hughes, of Mont. Kemp, Thomas, of Frederic, Teackle, Lake.

PRINTING FOR THE BLIND.

Books have been printed by order of the Edingburg Blind Asylum, by which blind persons are enabled to read; and an apparatus by which they may communicate one with another by writing, is also said to be in a state of considerable forwardness.—The method of printing or writing we have not seen explained; but its practicability may be easily understood on reflecting that the forms of letters, and their relative positions in syllables and words, may be as correctly conveyed to the mind through the sense of feeling as through that of sight. The signification of words and sentences are to be obtained through operations of the mind, unconnected with the mediums through which the words and sentences reach it.

SOLAR MICROSCOPE.

Of all the instruments ingenuity has contrived to aid in developing the mysteries of nature, there is none, which by its exhibitions, affords more instruction and amusement than the Solar Microscope. Objects, the most minute, are extended as if by magical power, to gigantic proportions and colossal size. All those little wretches which politeness forbids us to suppose infest the heads or houses of any of our readers, when placed before this splendid instrument, appear like herds of elephants. Fluids are shown to be teeming with population. Life seems busy among those substances in which the eye, unaided by artificial assistance, could detect no symptom of animated existence. Earth, air and water, seem filled with minute beings, and swarming with insects, hosts of whose presence or absence the unassisted sight takes no note. The common articles of food seem animated, and the observer discovers, with some surprise, than at each meal, he may have destroyed his thousands, like Sampson, an ill-natured enemy might perhaps add, with the same weapon. The comparison of the finest fabrics, with threads like cables, and the roughest workmanship of nature, is far from complimentary to human skill. The organization of plants and insects, and the process of crystallization, are shown with a distinctness and elegance which cannot be rivalled in any other mode of display. More instruction and gratification may be derived from review, than from witnessing the grimaces of all the monkeys, or the tricks of the mountebanks that every gathered idle crowds round them.—N. Ægis.

From the Indiana Recorder.

COTTON SEED GAS.

"We witnessed with much pleasure, a few evenings since, an experiment conducted by Dr. Pendergrass, of Louisville, from manufacturing gas lights from cotton seed. The gas produced from this substance, exceeds all others for beauty, brilliancy, and permanency. It is the pure elefient gas, or heavy carburated hydrogen of the English chemists. It burns without any smoke, and is perfectly clear from any disagreeable smell. The apparatus by which it is obtained is simple, and free from all the objections attending those hitherto invented, and does the highest credit to the ingenuity and scientific research of its inventor, who we understand, will shortly receive letters patent from the President of the United States, for his truly valuable invention. In the Southern States, vast quantities of cotton seed are used to manure the fields, which, by this invention, will become a greater source of national wealth. Dr. P. has long been known to the scientific world, as a gentleman of the highest philosophical attainments, and in this useful improvement, he has certainly evinced the great obligations which chemical philosophy is under to his indefatigable exertions."

REMARK.

It would seem from the above, that cotton seed is at length coming into use for the production of gas. There is no doubt that it will yet become the principal if not the only article used, for lighting cities, and in the sugar planting states, for lighting sugar houses, &c. &c. For the latter purpose it is already about to be adopted in some parts of Louisiana. The patent which Dr. Pendergrass is about obtaining, it is presumed is for the apparatus, "by which the gas is obtained," by him, and not for the right to use cotton seed for the production of gas; for this right has long since been vested in the public by the original discoverer, and any attempt to appropriate it to individual use exclusively will be resisted. One attempt to appropriate "the honor" of the discovery, that gas of a superior quality could be advantageously obtained from cotton seed, by an individual to whom it did not belong, was put down a year or two ago, and the ability still exists to put down all pretenders to "the honor or the profit of the discovery. If Dr. P. only claims the right to the exclusive use of his apparatus, he will certainly meet with no disturbance on that score; but every body has an equal right to use cotton seed for the production of gas, (and the common apparatus for the purpose, are as simple as can be wished,) long since conveyed to him and now repeated by the original DISCOVERER.

THE CIRCUS.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr Editor—

It would be wrong for a paper professing "Truth without reserve" to omit mention of the entertainments of the Circus. Circum in Latin means roundabout, and Circus in English must mean something like it. Roundabout, then, or topsey turvey, things, are the order of the day, and the disorder of the night. The amusement turns day into night, and tho' it cannot make night day, yet the substitute of good candles or lamps throws light enough upon so darksome a recreation. Whence the amusement of wheeling, counter-wheeling, galloping and walking horses round a yard, originated, let the learned tell. Judging from the local habitation of men and horses employed in the sublime amusement, I should ascribe it to Arabian origin.

Much like a caravan of eastern freebooters, they proceed from village to village where the best prices can be had for their industry, and highly sentimental avocation. Plates of the Gypsies are contained in some little primer books, and elsewhere, that represent their encampments, which look so much like the booth of the circuitous men and animals, as to make one think them a tribe of that forlorn race, that stroll and live by what they can pick up. Roundabout is the employment, and roundabout heads, or crazy folks are the best supporters of it. What a dizzy movement—what a dexterous leap—what a hair-breadth escape—what a feat of dexterity!—is the generous applause of bystanders and lookers on. It is withal so delicate and refined—so well suited to moralize community, that it deserves what it does not get—any patronage from the sober and serious and devout part of society. It is admirably planned for the worship of sundry favorite divinities of some regions—such as Bacchus, Venus and Co. and much they love it no doubt. I wonder, Mr. Editor, whether we cannot obtain from Legislature a pension for superannuated gentlemen who have worn out their boots and shoes—their life, their character and their conscience in merry dancing upon the horses' backs. It would be so humane—so benevolent—but then why not pension the horses too!—Poor horses, they have the labor of dancing and prancing, and heeling and wheeling it, till they must get dizzy, and long to have it over before the owners put a finis to the amusement. I have read, sir, of hospitals in the East Indies where favorite cows, and birds, &c find an asylum in old age and in sickness—and are kept with care like widows and orphans by men appointed for the purpose. Much like that practice is this fashion of men and horses herding it together in one enclosure, where, after feats of skill, in which the competition lies between the man and the brute, they lie down and snore together till the hour of eating comes.

Quere. May not that detestable vice, referred to in Leviticus, be there secretly practised? I see no reason why men should be so badly treated as to be never suffered to enter even an ordinary public house, and there refresh their weary limbs tired of the jerking, and swinging and twisting, and bouncing motions of the Circus yard—At best I see not why additional linen houses should be built in our open places, our streets and lanes, to accommodate genteel visiters to the town. What a violation of the rules of hospitality! Why should not such worthy men be received into the polite circles whom they entertain—be fed, be clothed, and provided for, gratuitously?

Time would fail one, sir, or if time did not, paper and patience would, I fear, in attempting to defend the employment of these men of elegant leisure, who live but to amuse the public eye with feats of agility—and who are never more pleased than when they get mobs crowded together, out of whose purses they may help themselves, at pleasure.

"O tempora, O mores!"
I am, sir, this time
my own—
B. D.

HYMENEAL.

MARRIED, on the 9th inst. by the Rev. Mr. Quinn, Mr. John Robertson to Miss Priscilla C. Handy, all of this county.

CONSTABLE's SALE.

By virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by James L. Waller, a Justice of the Peace, and to me directed, will be sold at the house of Henry I. Riggin, on Tuesday the 5th of February next, at the hour of 3 o'clock P. M. the following property, to wit:—1 negro man Jim, 1 do Dave, 1 woman Anne and child, 3 head of horses, 3 yoke of oxen, 5 head of cattle, 1 carriage and harness, and 1 cart, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of said Henry I. Riggin, at the suit of Ebin Fooks, and will sell, as aforesaid, to the highest and best bidder, for cash.

LEVIN D. COLLIER,
Jan. 9th—15 Constable.

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Isaac Harris
vs.
William Harris and Elizabeth Harris, Sally Harris, Martha Harris, Isaac Harris and Alice K. Harris.

THE Report of Ephraim K. Wilson, the trustee, having been made—Ordered by the Court that the sale of the lands called Ferry Quarter mentioned in the proceedings as made by the Trustee in this cause be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of next term; provided a copy of the order be inserted in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three weeks successively before said second day of the next term of this Court.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15. XY

WM. DONE,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,

Has removed his office to the room in the second story over the office of James Polk, Esq. Register of Wills, where he will be found from 9 to 12 o'clock every morning, and will diligently attend to any business placed in his hands. The office of Auditor in Chancery is kept in the same room.
Jan. 15. XV

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT.

William Collins, administrator of Stephen Collins,
vs.
Daniel Dykes, Henry Moore and Polly his wife, Isaac Ward and Mary his wife, William Adams and Priscilla his wife, John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, heirs of Stephen Dykes.

IT being stated in this case that the defendants John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, do not reside in the state of Maryland and within the reach of the process of Somerset County Court—It is therefore this seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, ordered that the complainant give notice to the said John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, that they be and appear in Somerset County Court on the first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by the bill—And it is further ordered, that the said notice shall be given by a publication of a copy of this order in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three successive weeks, the first publication of which shall be at least four months before the said first Wednesday after the said third Monday of May next. The bill in this case states that the said Stephen Dykes was in his life time indebted to the said Stephen Collins in his life time in a large sum of money, and that the same has never been paid—that the said Stephen Collins hath departed this life, and that letters of administration of his personal estate have been granted to the complainant—Also that the said Stephen Dykes hath departed this life and letters of administration of his personal estate have been granted to the defendant Daniel Dykes, who hath administered the same, and that the same is exhausted and is insufficient to pay the debts of the said Stephen Dykes—that the said Stephen Dykes died intestate, seized of real estate in said county, which descended to the defendants his heirs at law—that is to say to the said defendants Daniel, Polly, Mary, Sally, Priscilla and Peggy, and that the defendant Polly hath intermarried with the defendant Henry, the defendant Mary with the defendant Isaac, the defendant Priscilla with the defendant William, and the defendant Sally with the defendant John. The object of the bill is to obtain a decree for the sale of the said real estate for the payment of the debts of the said Stephen Dykes.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15. XY

Somerset County Court,

Chancery Side, November Term, 1827.

Isaac Harris
vs.
William Harris, Elizabeth Harris, Sally Harris, Martha Harris, Isaac Harris and Alice K. Harris.

ORDERED by the Court that the sale of the real estate mentioned in the proceedings in this cause as made and reported by Ephraim K. Wilson, trustee be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of the next term of this Court; provided a copy of this order be inserted once a week for three weeks successively in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, before said second day of next term.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 XY

Somerset County Court,

In Chancery, November Term, 1827.

Smith Brereton's Petition for the sale of William Brereton's estate.

ORDERED by the Court that the Report of the Auditor made in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn to the Court before the 2nd day of the next term of this Court; provided a copy of this order be set up at the Court-House door, in the town of Princess-Anne, three weeks before said second day of next term, and inserted in a newspaper published in said town three successive weeks before said day.

ARA SPENCE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 XV

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT—Also Supplemental Bill, &c.

Henry Hyland, Levin L. Waters and Eliza his wife
vs.
Levin D. Jones, Hiram Jones, Eleanor Jones, John Jones, Henry Jones, Charles Jones, and Alfred Jones, children and hiers at law of Charles Jones, (dec'd.) and George Jones and Robert Jones, Executors of the said Charles, dec'd.

THE Bill in this cause states that the complainant, Henry Hyland, sold to the said Charles Jones, deceased, in his life time a part of a tract of land situated in said county called Peach Blossom, for a large sum of money, to wit: the sum of six hundred and two dollars and twenty-five cents, and that the said Charles, deceased, gave his bill obligatory for the same to the complainant Henry—that the said complainant, Henry, hath assigned the same to the complainant Eliza—and that no part of the purchase money hath been paid—the supplemental bill states that since the failing of the original bill the complainant hath intermarried with the complainant Levin L. Waters. The bills further state that the said Charles Jones, deceased, hath died having first made his will in due form and appointed the defendants George Jones and Robert Jones his executors of said will, who have taken upon themselves the execution of the same, and that he has left as his heirs and devisees all of the other defendants above named his children. The bill further states that his personal estate is insufficient to pay his debts, and that the same will be entirely absorbed by judgements rendered against the said Charles, deceased, in his life time, and claims of preference. The object therefore of the bill, is, to obtain a sale of the said tract of land called Peach Blossom—that is the interest which the said Charles, deceased, had in the same at the time of his death, and which was devised to his said children or which descended to them, and the proceeds of sale applied to the payment of the said debt—The bills also state that the said defendant Eleanor doth not reside in the state of Maryland or within the reach of the process of Somerset County Court. It is therefore this seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, Ordered, that the complainants give notice to the said Eleanor by publication of a copy of this order in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne—that she be and appear in Somerset county Court on the first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next, in person or by solicitor, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by this bill—And it is further ordered that the first publication of said copy of this order in said paper shall be at least four months before the said first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next, and shall be continued once a week in said paper for at least three successive weeks.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15, 1828. qz

Somerset County Court,

Chancery Side, November Term, 1827.

Elizabeth A. W. Waters
vs.
William E. Waters.

ORDERED by the Court that the sale of the lands of William E. Waters, as made and reported by Ephraim K. Wilson, trustee in this cause, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of next term; provided a copy of this order be inserted in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three weeks successively before said 2nd day of the next term of this court.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15. XY

IN CHANCERY.

SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, November Term, 1827.

Harry Pollitt
vs.
Randal R. Hayman and others heirs of Randal Hayman, deceased.

ORDERED by the Court that the report of the Trustee made in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause be shewn to the contrary before the second day of the next term of this Court. Provided a copy of this order be inserted in a newspaper published in Princess-Anne town, three successive weeks, before the second day of the next term of this Court, and also by a copy of this order set up at the Court-House door for three weeks before said day.

ARA SPENCE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 qz

Somerset County Court,

In Chancery, November Term, 1827.

Eleanor Wailes, by George Hopkins her guardain,
vs.
Eleanor Mezick, widow, and Martha H. W. Mezick, and Elizabeth Mezick, infant children of William Mezick.

ORDERED by the Court that the audit made and reported by the Auditor in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn to the Court before the 2nd day of the next term of this Court—provided a copy of this order be set up at the Court-House door in the town of Princess-Anne, and inserted in a newspaper published in said town, at least for three successive weeks before said 2nd day of said term.

ARA SPENCE.
True copy. Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 KV

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Thomas Robertson
v.
Nathaniel Dixon and Nancy his wife, and Amelia Jenkins.

IN this cause it appears to the Court that Amelia Jenkins doth not reside in the State of Maryland and within the reach of the process of this Court, and the Sheriff having returned to the subpœna issued in this cause "non est."

It is therefore on this 28th day of November, 1827, by this Court ordered that the complainant—by inserting a copy of this order in some newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne once a week for four successive weeks—give notice to the said absent defendant that she be and appear on the third Monday of May next, in this Court in person by a solicitor to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed for by the bill, and that in case the said defendant shall not appear within the term above limited—the said bill will as to the said defendant be taken pro confesso—and the first insertion of such copy shall be made at least four months before the said third Monday of May next, in the said paper.

The bill in this case states that Thomas Jenkins was in his life time indebted to the complainant for the purchase money of certain real estate sold by the complainant to the said Thomas—that the said Thomas hath departed this life without paying the said debt, and without leaving any personal estate to pay his debts that he left the defendant Nancy and Amelia his heirs at law—and the defendant Nancy hath intermarried with the defendant Nathaniel. The object of the bill is to obtain a sale of the said real estate for the payment of the said purchase money.

ARA SPENCE,
WILLIAM TINGLE.
True copy. Test.
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 8, 1827. jff

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Thomas W. Handy
v.
Isaac Henry, William Fassitt and Dorothy his wife—George G. Henry, and Charles R. Henry.

IN this cause it appears to the Court that Isaac Henry and George G. Henry do not reside in the state of Maryland and within the reach of the process of this Court, and the Sheriff having returned to the subpœna issued in this cause 'non sunt'—It is therefore this 28th day of November, 1827, by this Court ordered that the complainant give notice by publication of a copy of this order in some newspaper, printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for four successive weeks, four months before the third Monday of May next, to the said absent defendants, that they be and appear on or before the third Monday of May next, in this Court, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by the bill, and that in case the said defendants shall not appear within the term above limited—the said bill will as to the said defendants be taken pro confesso.

The bill in this cause states that Hugh Henry was in his life time indebted to the complainant and hath departed this life, the said debt remaining unpaid—that administration of his personal estate has been had, and the same is exhausted and insufficient to pay his debts—that he hath left real estate in Somerset County which has descended to the defendants in the cause.

The object of the said bill is, to obtain a sale of the said real estate for the payment of the debts of said Hugh.

ARA SPENCE.
True copy. Test.
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 8. ffm

LAND FOR SALE,
IN POTATO NECK.
344 ACRES,

The westerly half of the farm late the property of Francis H. Waters' esq. (dec'd.)—About 100 acres are under improvement, a good part of which produces luxuriantly. The residue is heavily timbered with oak and pine, &c., and conveniently situated to market. The farm is washed on one side by the Annamessex river, and on the other it lies contiguous to the Menokin.

On the premises upon the Annamessex side is a delightful building-spot, of high ground, in full view of the river, intercepted only by a small grove of lofty pines, and near it a delightful well of water, said to be surpassed by none in the county. Further particulars are deemed unnecessary, as those wishing to purchase will doubtless view the premises for themselves. Half of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for five or more years—interest to be paid annually.

For further particulars enquire of Dr. Ballard, near the premises, or to Mr. Lazarus Maddux, Potato Neck, or to the Rev. Dr. Waters, Washington Academy, or a line addressed to the subscriber, Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. York, will meet with attention.

FREEBORN GARRETTSON.
December 18, 1827. ||t|

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Thos. Brown against Tubman Brown, terretenant of William Fleming, dec'd. I have seized and taken in execution a tract or part of two tracts of land, the one called Ridge and the other My Own, which was formerly the property of said William Fleming, dec'd. and on which the said Tubman Brown now resides, containing 70 acres, more or less, which I will sell at the Court House door, on the 8th of January next, between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
Dec. 18,—25

☞The above Sale is postponed to the 29th instant, at the hour and place above-mentioned. Jan. 9—15.

PHILADELPHIA ALBUM
AND
Ladies' Literary Gazette.

"ALBUMS," says an agreeable writer, "are things, in which are gathered many sweets from the flowers of genius and taste in the garden of literature. They also serve as pleasant mementos of those friends who are absent, and tend to instruct, as well as to please—to enlighten, as well as to amuse."

The Album, to which the publishers respectfully invite attention, has during the brief space of its publication, met with such flattering and universal esteem as to warrant the printing, each week, of near six thousand copies.

The work is enriched with original articles on a variety of interesting and valuable subjects, Fine Arts; Sciences; Botanical, Historical, Biographical and Moral Essays, Sketches, &c.; Reviews of new books; Fashionable and Literary Intelligence; Manners, Conversation, Dress, and Beauty; the cultivation of Plants and Flowers; Amusing and Moral Tales, together with choice articles in every department of polite and useful literature.

It is handsomely printed (8 pages every Wednesday) on fine white paper, royal size, quarto form, making an elegant annual volume of upwards of four hundred pages, embellished with appropriate engravings.

The publishers are determined to spare neither pains nor expense in their ambitious exertions to make their work an acquisition to literature. To sustain its character, they have made (at great expense) arrangements with some of the first writers in this country, and are at the same time enabled, from European Journals which they receive, to make the choicest selections from the richest sources of foreign literature.

To give the parents or brothers—the friends or guardians of their fair readers an assurance of that strict sense of purity, chasteness and general propriety which should eminently characterize a work of this kind, constituting a bouquet of the "flowers of literature," which must form to the cultivated and accomplished mind, a "token of esteem," the most valuable and pleasing—a "forget me not," of the most appropriate, endearing, and lasting nature, the publishers have associated with its former conductors in their editorial duties a lady of distinguished literary reputation and talent, whose watchful attention and acknowledged abilities they are confident will add materially to the character of the work.

Price, $2 50 per annum, payable in advance. Address the Publishers of the Philadelphia Album, and Ladies' Literary Gazette, 45 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county, Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also, another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr. Levin Ballard, senior, known by the name of Moore & Casset, situated on Menokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm. Jones and Dr. J. King.—This tract contains about 130 acres—and, besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises.

As no person will purchase without viewing the property a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to

L. W. BALLARD.
Dec. 18, 1827. 8d

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Lankford against Fleet C. Chelton, I have seized and taken in execution the following tracts or parcels of land, to wit: Part of a tract of land commonly called Erskriges, also part of another tract of land commonly called Robbins's, or by whatever name or names the aforesaid lands may be known or called, all which will more fully appear by reference to a deed from John Irving to said F. C. Chelton, bearing date the 16th December, 1825—containing in the whole two hundred and fifty-two acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, on Tuesday the 22nd day of January, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 4 P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
Jan. 1, 1828.

LIST OF LETTERS

Remaining in the Post-Office at Princess-Anne, Md. on the 1st day of January, 1828.

B—Harriott Brown, John P. Brereton.
C—Levin Cottman, Mrs. Hetty A.W. Crawswell
D—Littleton P. Dennis, Stephen Drura.
F—David Ford
G—Mrs Mary Gannt, Mrs Sarah Gibson
H—William Hovington, George Hall
J—John H. Jones, Levin D. Jones, Thomas Jones, Dr. Thomas D. Jones, Charles Jones, Doct. M. Jones, Mrs Elizabeth Jones, J. T. L. R. Joynes
K—Robert I. H. King, 2; Lambert Kerr
L—Charles L. Laurence
M—Col. Saml. McBryde, Miss Sarah Miles, Samuel S Miles
N—Algernon S S Newton
P—Mrs M Powell, James Powell, Littleton Pollitt
R—Miss Mary Riggin
S—James D Smith, Mrs Elizabeth Sasser
W—Captain Robert Waters, George Waters, Capt William H Waters, William Wilson

SAM'L. BROWN, Post Master.
Jan 8 38

District of Maryland, to wit:

[L. S.] BE IT REMEMBERED,

That on this 23d day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the U. S. of America, William Hollins, of the said district, hath deposited in this office, the title of a book, the right whereof he claims as proprietor, in the words following, to wit:

"Rail roads in the United States of America: or, a protest and argument against a subscription, on the part of the State of Maryland, to the Baltimore & Ohio rail road company, addressed to the officers and representatives of the people in the several States of the Union, and to the General Government—By a Citizen of Baltimore."

In conformity with the act of Congress, of the U. S. entitled "An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies during the time therein mentioned:" and also to the Act, entitled "An Act, supplementary to the Act, entitled An Act, for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned, and extending the benefits thereof, to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints.

PHILIP MOORE,
Clerk of the District of Md.

A few copies of the above work are for sale at this office.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

The Eclectic Review for September, notices a work recently published in Eng., entitled "Solitary Hours." It is anonymous. It appears, however, to have been written by a lady, who had published before with some success. Among the pieces quoted from this work by the Eclectic, is the following, of which, in connexion with another to which the reviewer alluded, he says—"Such poems as these set us critics at defiance, and make us forget our craft."—[N. Y. Observer.

"IT IS NOT DEATH."

It is not death—it is not death,
From which I shrink with coward fear;
It is, that I must leave behind
All I love here.

It is not wealth—it is not wealth,
That I am loath to leave behind;
Small store to me, (yet all I crave,)
Hath faith assign'd.

It is not fame—it is not fame,
From which it will be pain to part,
Obscure my lot—but mine was still
An humble heart.

It is not health—it is not health,
That makes me fain to linger here;
For I have languished in pain
This many a year.

It is not hope—it is not hope,
From which I cannot turn away;
Oh, earthly hope hath cheated me
This many a day.

But there are friends—but there are friends,
To whom I could not say 'Farewell!'
Without a pang more hard to bear
Than tongue can tell.

But there's a thought—but there's a thought,
Will arm me with a pang to cope;
Thank God! we shall not part with those
Who have no hope.

And some are gone—and some are gone—
Methinks they chide my long delay—
With whom, it seem'd, my very life
Went half away:

But we shall meet—but we shall meet,
Where parting tears shall never flow;
And when I think thereon, almost
I long to go.

The Saviour wept—the Saviour wept
O'er him he love'd—corrupting clay!
But then he spake the word, and Death
Gave up his prey!

A little while—a little while,
And the dark grave shall yield its trust,
Yea, render every atom up
Of human dust.

What matters then—what matters then,
Who earliest lays him down to rest?
Nay, 'tis depart, and be with Christ,
Is surely best.

OF SABBATH-BREAKING.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr. Zieber,

The subject of the following narration is well known to the writer of these lines. He has frequently heard her relate her adventure, and he has no doubt of the truth of it. If you think it worthy a place in your paper, it is at your service.

Mary Collins, of Gloucester county, N. J., was deprived of her sight, when a child, by the small pox; yet such was her disposition, that she was beloved by all who knew her.—She manifested, as she grew up, a more than ordinary genius. She embraced religion when very young, and, as she was poor, she had no way of getting to the house of God, (which was several miles distant from the place of her mother's residence,) but by going on foot, and as there were few who cared for the worship of God, she was compelled to grope her way alone.—One fine Sunday morning she called at the house of a neighbor, to meet with a young lady who had promised to accompany her to meeting. But she was surprised to find her, with other young people of both sexes, making preparations to go on a pleasure voyage across the Bay, to the Beach, to see the surf, &c. The young lady alluded to, not only declined going with Mary, but proposed that Mary should accompany them to the Beach. This proposal was, however, decidedly rejected. The young men insisted she should go with them, but she said she was on her way to meeting, and if none of them would go with her, she would go alone. Having a creek to cross, they promised to set her over—Confiding in their promises she ventured aboard the boat. But such was their treachery that they immediately sailed for the Beach. In vain she remonstrated and reminded them that it was the Sabbath; that they had broken their promises; that they were preventing her from going to the house of God; that her mother would be alarmed for her, not knowing where she was, &c. When they had got out into the Bay poor Mary was the object of their sport. They mocked her, and laughed at her distress. When Mary found that they were deaf to her entreaties she endeavoured to reconcile herself to her situation, and spent the day in mental ejaculations to Heaven, while they thought of nothing but pleasure and sport. Late in the afternoon they embarked for home—but when they had proceeded half way across the Bay, suddenly a storm of thunder and rain blackened the heavens, and burst forth from the clouds in awful claps and incessant torrents, while the wind wrought up the irritated waters "to a foaming fury." Unable to sail under such circumstances they plied the oars, aiming, as they thought, towards the shore, but the torrents of rain, with the approach of night entirely obstructed their vision, and the momentary flashes of lightning served only to show them the angry elements which raged beneath, and all around them, and leave them in still more dismal gloom. Thus situated they rowed they knew not whither, having continually to bale out the water, which from the rain, together with the splashes of the seas, fell continually in the boat and threatened them with instant death by sinking them to the bottom, which they expected every moment would take place. Now their laughter was turned into mourning, and their merriment into the loudest lamentations. They begged poor Mary, who a little before was the object of their derision, to pray for them. Mary, in the mean time, conscious of the integrity of her heart, sat with the greatest composure, praising the Lord, and exhorting her treacherous companions to receive their distress as a judgement from the Lord for violating the Sabbath day, and their solemn engagement to her in the morning—and entreated them to pray for themselves if haply the Lord might have mercy upon them. The rain, thunder, lightning and wind continued until night, aided by a cloudy sky, had cast her satisfe shade around them, and enveloped them in the deepest gloom. No shore, no star, no sky was visible, and they were drenched from head to foot and almost entirely exhausted; still, however, tugging at the oars and calling upon the Lord to have mercy upon them. They continued rowing the whole night, and although they could find no shore, yet the Lord heard them cry and mercifully preserved them from a watery grave—so that when day-light began to render distant objects visible, they found themselves about midway of the Bay: probably they had been proceeding in a rotary motion during the night. They now pulled for the shore with what remaining strength they had, and, by the mercy of God, they were all landed. PEREGRINUS.

PARENTAL LIES.

We believe that the slight regard in which strict truth is held among mankind, is principally owing to the lies which are told to the children by their parents during the few first years of their lives. Then is the time that permanent impressions may be as well made as at any latter period. It is then, probably, that what is called the natural propensity of a child is unfolded. Many persons, who have an abhorrence of lying, whip their children if they detect them in it, yet make no scruple of telling and acting to them the most atrocious falsehoods. There are few parents who do not do this in a greater or less degree, tho' doubtless without dreaming that they are guilty of criminal deception.—With many the whole business of managing their children is a piece of mere artifice and trick. They are cheated in their amusement, cheated, in their food, cheated in their dress. Lies are told to them to do any thing that is disagreeable.—If a child is to take physic, the mother tells him she has something good for him to drink: if reluctant she says she will send for a doctor to cut off his ears, or pull his teeth, or that she will go away and leave him, and a thousand things of the same kind, each of which may deceive once and answer the present purpose but will inevitably fail afterwards. Parents are too apt to endeavour to pacify their children by making promises which they never mean to perform. If they wish for instance, to take away some eatable which they fear will be injurious, they reconcile them by the promise of a ride, or a walk, or something else which will please them but without any intention of gratifying them. This is downright lying. People think nothing of breaking their promise to children, if the performance be not perfectly convenient. But they are the last persons to whom promises should be broken, because they cannot comprehend the reason, if there be one, why they are not kept. Such promises should be scrupulously redeemed, though at a great inconvenience, and even when inadvertently made. For the child's moral habits are of infinitely more consequence than any other inconvenience can be to the parent.

SAVAGES FIRST SEEING A WATCH.

One morning during Fennaw's stay at this island some of the natives brought Mr. Mariner's watch, which they had procured from his chest, and with looks of curiosity inquired what it was. He took it from them, wound it up, put it to the ear of one of them and returned it. Every hand was now outstretched with eagerness to take hold of it—it was applied in turn to their ears—they were astonished at the noise it made—they listened again to it—turned it on every side and exclaimed "Moo-ovi" (it is alive.)—They then pinched and bit it, as if expecting it would speak out—they looked at each other with wonder, laughed aloud and snapping their fingers. One brought a sharp stone for Mr. Mariner to force it open with.—He opened it in a proper way and showed them the works. Several endeavoured to seize hold of it at once but one rushed off with it and all the rest after him. About an hour after they returned with the watch completely broken to pieces, and giving him the fragments made signs for him to mend it as it did before. Upon his making them understand that they had killed it, and that it was impossible to bring it to life again. The man who considered it as his property, exclaiming mow—mow (spoiled) and making a hissing noise expressive of disappointment, accused the rest of using violence, and they in their turn accused him and each other. Whilst they were in high dispute, another native approached who had seen and learned the use of a watch on board a French ship. Understanding the cause of their dispute, he called them all cow-vale (a pack of fools,) and explained in the following manner the use of a watch. Making a circle in the sand, with sundry marks about its circumference, and turning a stick about the centre of the circle to represent an index, he informed them that the use of the watch was to tell where the sun was—that when the sun was in the east, the watch would point to such a mark, and when in the west, it would point there, and this he said the watch would do, although it was in a house, and could not see the sun; adding that in the night time it would tell what portion of a day's length it would be before the sun would rise again. It would be difficult to convey an adequate idea of their astonishment. One said it was an animal, another said it was a plant; but when he told them it was manufactured, they all exclaimed—Poonnon hoto! What an ingenious people.—Mariner's account of the Tonga Islands.—London Mag.

I was told here that a Lion had just killed an Ox, and been shot in the act. It is the habit of the lion, it seems, when he kills a large animal, to spring upon it, and seizing the throat with its terrible fangs, to press the body down with its paws till his victim expires: the moment he seizes his prey, the lion closes his eyes, and never opens them again until life is extinct. The Hottentots are aware of this, and on the present occasion, one of the herdsmen ran to the spot with his gun, and fired at the lion within a few yards distance; but from agitation of his nerves, entirely missed him; the lion, however, did not even deign to notice the report of the gun, but kept fast hold of his prey. The Hottentot reloaded, fired a second time, and missed, reloaded again and shot him through the head. This fact, being well authenticated, seemed to me curious, and worthy of being mentioned. Thompson's Travels and Adventures in South Africa.

THE WEDDING RING.

The use of the wedding ring may be traced to the Egyptians, who placed it, as we do, upon the fourth finger of the left hand, because they believed that a vein or nerve ran directly from that finger to the heart. The Greeks and Romans adopted, their belief, and followed their example, the Jewish wives wore it on the index or forefinger. Christian usage have been very various in this respect. In the early Greek church, the ring was worn on the right hand by both husband and wife; and in the north of Europe, it was put upon several fingers successively, in the names of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—being finally left upon the fourth.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

The last number of the Annales de Chemie contains an extraordinary communication from M. H. Boss, on the iron which forms the coloring matter of the blood. The fact has been doubted by many physiologists, from the difficulty of precipitating the small portion of iron from the earthy and alkaline with which it is in combination. If the coloring matter be separated, all the iron may be precipitated by reagents. Indeed, there is no more adequate explanation of the coloring matter, than ascribing it to the presence of this metalic substance; the difference of shade between the dark venous blood, and the bright red of arterial blood, being nothing more than the additional oxygen which the latter has recently acquired from the atmosphere, by passing through the lungs.

ACCOUNT OF E. DRINKER.

Edward Drinker was born in a cottage, in 1680, on the spot where the city Philadelphia now stands, which was at that time inhabited by Indians, and a few Swedes and Hollanders. He often talked of picking blackberries, and catching wild rabbits, where this populous city is now seated. He remembered Wm. Penn arriving there his second time, and used to point out the spot where the cabin stood, in which Wm. Penn and his friends were accomodated on their arrival.

The life of this aged citizen is marked with circumstances which perhaps never befel any other individual. He saw the same spot of earth, in the course of his own life, covered with wood and bushes, the receptacle of wild beasts, and birds of prey, afterwards become the seat of a great city, not only the first in wealth and in arts in America, but equalled by few in Europe. He saw great and regular streets where he had often pursued hares and wild rabbits; he saw fine houses rise upon morasses, where he used to hear nothing but the croaking of frogs; great wharves and ware-houses, where he had so often seen the Indian savages draw their fish from the river, and that river afterwards full of great ships from all parts of the world, which in his youth had nothing larger than an Indian canoe; and the place where he had gathered berries, he saw their City hall erected, and that hall filled with Legislators, astonishing the world with their wisdom and virtue. He also saw the first treaty ratified between the united powers of America, and the most powerful prince of Europe, with all the formality of parchment and seals, had on the same spot where he before saw Wm. Penn ratify his first and last treaty with the Indians. And to conclude, he saw the beginning and end of the British empire in America. He died on the 17th November, 1782, aged 103 years.—Poulson's Adv.

CHARACTER OF THE TURKS.

The primitive character of the Turks is a simple one; it is that of the pastoral or warlike nation; they are by turn active and indolent, fervent and mercifull, easily excited to combat but with difficulty induced to labor, equally pleased amidst the toils of war and the luxury of repose. In their mode of living, they are temperate and even abstemious; implicit followers of the commands of their prophet, and haughty despisers of other institutions. By nature they are frank, candid and sincere; but too barbarous to consider properly the obligation of a treaty, or the sanctity of a promise; more especially with regard to nations of a different faith. Venality seems to have been long a plot upon their character. Integrity is the virtue of extreme simplicity or extreme refinement; the Turks soon passed the one point, and never reached the other. Yet although the possession of a rich empire has tended greatly to corrupt their manners, the noble nature of the savage still perceptible, the generosity of the Turk is spontaneous; and even his injustice, though violent has something which savours of hardiood and grandeur. The Turks appear to be distinguished from the nations which occupy the rest of Europe in nearly every circumstance. The ample folds of their garments, their shorn heads covered by a turban, their long beards, their stately bearing, form a direct contrast with the trim dress and coxcomb fashion of our Christian communities. Nor is there less difference in substance than in outward appearance. The Turk is moved by few passions, and those few carry his thoughts to their object; if he is amorous, he buys and shuts up in his seraglio the object of his love. His life is simple, tranquil, dull, we should say, when not moved by the great passion of our nature. The busy motion of commerce, the disinterested ardour of science, the continual desire of distinction, the slow advancement of patient industry, the passion for notoriety, and the favours of what is called public opinion, are the wheels upon which the great machine of civilized society is moved forward; they are all unknown to or cheapened by the Turks.

Wanted, Immediately,

An Apprentice to the Printing Business, about 15 years of age. Apply at the office of the Village Herald.

Dec. 18.

Blank Warrants, for sale at THIS OFFICE.

T. L. DISHAROON,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an old sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. tf

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

Certificate.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an anodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUBLER,
Princess-Anne, Md.

Nov. 20, 1827.

JOB PRINTING,
SUCH AS
Handbills, Cards, Blanks, PAMPHLETS, &c.
Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,
At the Office of the Village Herald.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1828. No. 43.

Terms of Publication.

THE VILLAGE HERALD is published weekly at $2 50, per annum, or at $2 if sent by mail and subject to postage, either case to be paid half-yearly in advance. No subscription taken for a shorter period than six months; none discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid, and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for each continuance; those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞ Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞ Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞ All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Balt. prices papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches		par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	$5 and upwards	par
Annapolis		par
Easton		par
Frederick		par
Frederick County Bank		par
Bank Westminster		par
Hager's Town		par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co		par
Elkton		1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia		20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown		par
Union Bank Georgetown		par
Bank of Washington		par
Bank of the metropolis		par
Patriotic Bank		par
Bank of Alexandria		par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria		par
Bank of Potomack		par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria		par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches		par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches		par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester		par
Do at Charlestown		par
Do at Leesburg		par
Do at Romney		par
Lynchburg Branches		par
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling		par
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware		par
Farmers' Bank		par
Wilmington & Brandywine		par
Commercial Bank of Smyrna		par
Branch Bank at Milford		par
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks		par
York Bank		par
Carlisle Bank		par
Chambersburg Bank		par
Gettysburg Bank		par
Lancaster Bank		par
Harrisburg Bank		par
Chester County Bank		par
Germantown Bank		par
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster		par
NEW-YORK
City Banks		par
Albany Banks		1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank		5
Cape Fear Bank		5
State Bank and Branches		5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks		2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah		2½
Bank of Augusta		2½
Bank of Darien		30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank		15
Trenton Banking Company		15
Newark Bank		15
State Bank at Camden		15
Do Elizabethtown		15
Do Trenton	no sale	15
Do Morristown		15
Do New Brunswick		15
Salem Banking Company		15
People's Bank at Paterson		15

CONSTABLE'S SALE.

By virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by James L. Waller, a Justice of the Peace, and to me directed, will be sold at the house of Henry I. Riggin, on Tuesday the 5th of February next, at the hour of 3 o'clock P. M. the following property to wit:—1 negro man Jim, 1 do Dave, 1 woman Jane and child, 3 head of horses, 3 pieces of corn, 3 head of cattle, 1 carriage and harness, and 1 cart, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of said Henry I. Riggin, at the suit of Elijah Pooks, and will sell to the highest and best bidder, for cash.

LEVIN D. COLLIER,
Jan. 9th—15 Constable.

T. L. DISHAROON,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an old sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. tf

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

Certificate.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an anodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUBLER,
Princess-Anne, Md.

Nov. 20, 1827

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Isaac Harris
vs.
William Harris and Elizabeth Harris, Sally Harris, Martha Harris, Isaac Harris and Alice K. Harris.

THE Report of Ephraim K. Wilson, the trustee, having been made—Ordered by the Court that the sale of the lands called Ferry Quarter mentioned in the proceedings as made by the Trustee in this cause be ratified and confirmed unless cause be published in many be shewn by the 2nd day of next term; provided a copy of the order be inserted in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three successive weeks before said second day of the next term of this Court.

WILLIAM TINGLE.

Test. GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 15. xv

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Thos. Brown against Tubman Brown, terretenant of William Fleming, dec'd. I have seized and taken in execution a tract or part of two tracts of land, the one called Ridge and the other My Own, which was formerly the property of said William Fleming, dec'd, and on which the said Tubman Brown now resides, containing 70 acres, more or less, which I will sell at the Court House door, on the 9th of January next, between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock, P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

Dec. 18.—3w

☞ The above Sale is postponed to the 29th instant, at the hour and place above mentioned. Jan. 9 15.

PHILADELPHIA ALBUM AND Ladies' Literary Gazette.

"ALBUMS," says an agreeable writer, "are things, in which are gathered many sweets from the flowers of genius and taste in the garden of literature. They are a pleasant monitor of those friends who are absent, and tend to instruct, as well as to please—to enlighten, as well as to amuse."

The Album, to which the publishers respectfully invite attention, has during the brief space of its publication, met with such flattering and unusual extent as to warrant the printing, each week, of near six thousand copies.

The work is enriched with original articles on a variety of interesting and cheerful subjects, Fine Arts, Sciences, Botanical, Historical, Biographical and Moral Essays, Sketches, &c., Reviews of new books; Fashionable and Literary Intelligence; Manners, Conversations, Dress, and Beauty; the cultivation of Plants and Flowers; Amusing and Moral Tales, together with choice articles in every department of polite and useful literature.

It is handsomely printed (8 pages every Wednesday) on fine white paper, royal size, quarto form, making an elegant annual volume of upwards of four hundred pages, embellished with appropriate engravings.

The publishers are determined to spare neither pains nor expense in their ambitious exertions to make their work an acquisition to literature. To sustain its character, they have made (at great expense) arrangements with some of the best writers in this country, and are at the same time enabled, from European Journals which they receive, to make the choicest selections from the richest sources of foreign literature.

To give the parents or brothers—the friends or guardians of their fair readers an assurance of that strict sense of purity, chastenessand general propriety which should eminently characterize a work of this kind, constituting a bouquet of the "flowers of literature," which must form to the cultivated and accomplished mind, a "token of esteem," the most valuable and pleasing—a "forget me not," of the most appropriate, enduring, and lasting nature, the publishers have associated with its former conductors in their editorial duties a lady of distinguished literary reputation and talent, whose watchful attention and acknowledged abilities they are confident will add materially to the character of the work.

Price, $2 50 per annum, payable in advance. Address the Publishers of the Philadelphia Album, and Ladies' Literary Gazette, 45 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Somerset County Court,

In Chancery, November Term, 1827.

Smith Brereton's Petition for the sale of William Brereton's estate.

ORDERED by the Court that the Report of the Auditor made in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn to the Court before the 2nd day of the next term of this Court; provided a copy of this order be set up at the Court-House door, in the town of Princess-Anne, three weeks before said second day of next term, and inserted in a newspaper printed in said town three successive weeks before said day.

ARA SPENCE.

Test. GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 15 xv

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Lankford against Fleet C. Chelton, I have seized and taken in execution the following tracts or parcels of land, to wit: Part of a tract of land commonly called Erskrigs, also part of another tract of land commonly called Robbins's, or by whatever name or names the aforesaid lands may be known or called, all which will more fully appear by reference to a deed from John Irving to said F. C. Chelton, bearing date the 16th December, 1825—containing in the whole two hundred and fifty-two acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, on Tuesday the 22nd day of January, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 1 P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

Jan. 1, 1828.

LIST OF LETTERS

Remaining in the Post-Office at Princess-Anne, Md. on the 1st day of January, 1828.

H—Harriott Brown, John P. Brereton.
C—Levin Cottman, Mrs. Hetty A.W. Crawswell
D—Littleton P. Dennis, Stephen Drain.
F—David Ford
G—Mrs Mary Gaunt, Mrs Sarah Gibson
H—William Hovington, George Hall
J—John H. Jones, Levin D. Jones, Thomas Jones, Dr. Thomas D. Jones, Charles Jones, Doct. M. Jones, Mrs Elizabeth Jones, J. T. L. R. Joynes
K—Robert I. H. King, 2; Lambert Kerr
L—Charles L. Laurence
M—Col. Saml. McBride, Miss Sarah Miles, Samuel S Miles
Ns—Algernon S S Newton
P—Mrs M Powell, James Powell, Littleton Pollitt
R—Miss Mary Riggin
S—James D Smith, Mrs Elizabeth Sasser
W—Captain Robert Waters, George Waters, Capt William H Waters, William Wilson

SAML. BROWN, Post Master.

Jan 8 3t

District of Maryland, to wit:

[L. S.] BE IT REMEMBERED, That on this 23d day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the U. S. of America, William Hollins, of the said district, hath deposited in this office, the title of a book, the right whereof he claims as proprietor, in the words following, to wit:

"Rail roads in the United States of America: or, a protest and argument against a subscription, on the part of the State of Maryland, to the Baltimore & Ohio rail road company, addressed to the officers and representatives of the people in the several States of the Union, and to the General Government—By a Citizen of Baltimore."

In conformity with the act of Congress, of the U. S. entitled "An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies during the time therein mentioned," and also to the Act, entitled "An Act, supplementary to the Act, entitled An Act, for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the time therein mentioned, and extending the benefits thereof, to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints."

PHILIP MOORE,
Clerk of the District of Md.

A few copies of the above work are for sale at this office.

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Thomas W. Handy
vs.
Isaac Henry, William Fassitt and Dorothy his wife—George G. Henry, and Charles R. Henry.

IN this cause it appears to the Court that Isaac Henry and George G. Henry do not reside in the state of Maryland and within the reach of the process of this Court, and the Sheriff having returned to the subpœna issued in this cause "non est," It is therefore this 28th day of November, 1827, by this Court ordered that the complainant give notice by publication of a copy of this order in some newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for four successive weeks, four months before the third Monday of May next, to the said absent defendants, that they be and appear on or before the third Monday of May next, in this Court, to show cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by the bill, and that in case the said defendants shall not appear within the term above limited—the said bill will as to the said defendants be taken pro confesso.

The bill in this cause states that Hugh Henry was in his life time indebted to the complainant and both departed this life, the said debt remaining unpaid—that administration of his personal estate has been had, and the same is exhausted and insufficient to pay his debts—that he left real estate in Somerset County which has descended to the defendants in the cause.

The object of the said bill is, to obtain a sale of the said real estate for the payment of the debts of said Hugh.

ARA SPENCE.

Test. GEO. HANDY, Clk.

True copy.

Jan 8. 4m

Somerset County Court,

In Chancery, November Term, 1827.

Eleanor Weakes, by George Hopkins her guardian,
vs.
Eleanor Mezick, widow, and Martha E. W. Mezick, and Elizabeth Mezick, infant children of William Mezick.

ORDERED by the Court that the audit made and reported by the Auditor in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn to the Court before the 2nd day of the next term of this Court—provided a copy of this order be set up at the Court-House door in the town of Princess-Anne, and inserted in a newspaper published in said town, at least for three successive weeks before said 2nd day of said term.

ARA SPENCE.

Test. GEO. HANDY, Clk.

True copy.

Jan. 15 xv

Somerset County Court,

Chancery Sale, November Term, 1827.

Isaac Harris
vs.
William Harris, Elizabeth Harris, Sally Harris, Martha Harris, Isaac Harris and Alice K. Harris.

ORDERED by the Court that the sale of the real estate mentioned in the proceedings in this cause as made and reported by Ephraim K. Wilson, trustee be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of the next term of this Court; provided a copy of this order be inserted once a week for three weeks successively in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, before said second day of next term.

WILLIAM TINGLE.

Test. GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 15 xv

Somerset County Court,

Chancery Sale, November Term, 1827.

Elizabeth J. W. Waters
vs.
William E. Waters.

ORDERED by the Court that the sale of the lands of William E. Waters as made and reported by Ephraim K. Wilson, trustee in this cause, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of next term; provided a copy of this order be inserted in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three successively before said 2nd day of the next term of this court.

WILLIAM TINGLE.

Test. GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 15 xv

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JAN. 22, 1828.

FIRE!—We have received information that the storehouse and goods of Mr. Marcellus Jones, of White-Haven, in this county, were consumed by fire on the night of the 19th instant. The fire originated from a stove in an adjoining building, which was occupied as a tailor-shop by Mr. Blake. The loss is estimated at 6 or 7000 dollars.

The resolution offered by Mr. Steuart for an adjournment of the Legislature on the 15th of February next, passed the Senate on the 10th, with an amendment, which went only to strike out the preamble. It was then sent back to the House, and on a motion of Mr. Steuart to concur in the amendment, Mr. Lee moved to postpone the resolution to the 10th of February. This Mr. Steuart opposed. But it was decided in favor of the postponement as follows:

For the postponement—

Messrs. Thomas, of St. Mary's, Gough, Blackistone, Browne, Linthicum, Taney, Bourne, Parran, Somervell, Rogerson, King, Hughes, Millis, Teackle, Donoho, Gibbons, Dennis, Douglass, Goldsborough, Thomas of Cecil, Mackey, Harlan, Mercer, Semmes, Beall, Duvall, Wells, Watkins, Ridgaway, Stevens, Ruth, Kemp, Holtz, Jones, Douglas of Caroline, Lee, Hughes of Montgomery, McNeill, McCulloh—39.

Against it:

Messrs. Speaker, Comegys, Ringgold, Boon, Kent, Stewart of A. Arundel, Sellman, Turner, Price, Shower, Ely, Lloyd, Martin, Williams of Dorchester, Lake, Tilghman, Williams of Worcester, Hitch, Hooper, Thomas of Frederick, Shriver, Hope, Montgomery, Sutton, Potter, Orrell, Steuart of Balt. McMahon, Fitzhugh, Walgamot, Rentch, Peter, Dansdale, Hoffman, Hoblitzle—35.

Thus it appears that some of those who. on the 9th, voted for the resolution to adjourn on the 15th of next month, after a night's reflection, could not again give their votes in favor of an act which would save, to the State, $20,000.

Annapolis, Jan. 15.

Times of holding Elections.

It will be remembered, that since our last election of congressmen in this state, a law has passed, for changing the time at which representatives shall in future be chosen, from the October previous to the second session of their service to the April immediately after the expiration of their service. One of the objects of the change was to give the votes a more complete control over the doings of those they entrusted to represent them. No election has yet been held under the new. Mr. Thomas of Frederick on Tuesday last, offered an order which was adopted, directing a select committee consisting of Messrs. Thompas, Stevens. Stewart. of Balt. Semmes and Boon, "to enquire into the expediency of changing the time of holding the elections for representatives in congress, and delegates of the state."

The bill reported by Mr. Sellman for regulating the manner of marketing by slaves and free negroes in Anne Arundel County and the City of Annapolis, passed the House of Delegates yesterday, by a vote of 36 to 21. We understand that it subjects persons that purchase marketing from a slave, not having a written permit from his owner, to a penalty of five dollars; and the same penalty for purchasing from a free negro or mulatto, not having a permit or lisence from a justice of the peace.

Anchors.—Two of the largest anchors ever made in this country, were a few days since proved at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.—The largest weighed 10,171 pounds, and the other 9850 pounds.

Something New.—Tomatoes and Green Peas were selling in considerable quantities on the 4th instant, in Charleston.

An account from Augusta, Georgia, of Jan. 7 says, "Watermelons and mutton corn have been announced in southern markets, and a fortnight since, ripe strawberries were pulled in the gardens in Augusta.

On the 9th inst. a rose-bud, nearly expanded, was pulled in a garden at Wheeling, Va.

Savannah, Jan. 3.

THE SEASON.—As an evidence of the singularity of the season, we acknowledge the receipt of a bouquet of the sweet Jasamine and Woodbine sent to our office this morning, with a note from the fair donor who says—"In our garden, Flora is fast putting forth all her beauties—she must, however, soon repent her forwardness, and be imprisoned for her rashness in the icy walls of rude Boreas." Many of the Pride of India trees in our city are in full blossom—a sprig of the flowers from one of them has been left with us. Green Peas and fresh Shad, have likewise been at the market for the last two or three days.—The shad exposed for sale this morning we are told were very fine. In fact we have had no winter here as yet this season—the weather now feels more like that of May-day, than the month of January.

The brig Enterprise, at New York from Key West, reports that the Spanish brig Guerrera, from Africa with 530 slaves, was chased ashore on the 17th ult. on Carrysford Reef, near the light boat, by the Br. Government schr. also went ashore, but was got off by the wreckers, and brought to Key West, with loss of rudder. The negroes were taken off the wreck by sch. Thorn, sloop Surprise and Smack Florida. The night following the Spanish crew, 90 in number, rose on the Thorn and Florida, having on board 300 slaves, got the vessels under way and proceeded to St. Cruz, Cuba, where they landed the slaves and left the vessels at liberty, both of which had again arrived at Key West. The sloop Surprise brought 120 slaves to Key West, where they were seized by the Collector to wait the orders of Government.

BOLIVAR's REVENUE SYSTEM.

A letter from Maricaibo to a gentleman in Norfolk, dated the 8th Dec. last, says—

Commerce in this place, as well as in all other places in the Republic has been cramped, almost destroyed, by the imbecile decrees of the law-giver, Bolivar: I call him law-giver, because he has only to decree, and it is sanctioned by a servile Congress, however preposterous it may be. There have been but four arrivals from the U. States for the last five months. Of five vessels lying in the port, two have been condemned and sold, one of them, a Danish brig, for the value of 5 rs., equal to 62 cents' worth of tobacco, that was found on board—and very little more than this was found on board the other, an American schr., the Captain and mate of which were sentenced to six years close imprisonment, and only avoided it by making their escape, though surrounded by guards.

A Dutch Captain drowned himself last night to avoid a similar punishment, his schr. having been condemned some time since. These severe measures against contraband are the least of the evils of Bolivar's commercial System

A Vienna (Austria) paper of Nov. 8 says. The celebrated place of pilgrimage Maria Zell, was totally destroyed by fire, on the 1st inst. and a furious storm was raging at the same time. 140 houses, the beautiful church, the convent, and the post office are reduced to ashes. One family of 11 persons perished in the flames, and it is feared that many children, old people and sick persons had lost their lives. The image of the Virgin was saved!

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

RELIGION IN MARYLAND.

Mr Editor—

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is the reproach of any people," said the wisest of men, king Solomon.

Which of the States of this vast Union does not exemplify the truth of this inspired sentence? Where shall we find most of true dignity, and of real prosperity, within the compass of our Confederacy? Without disparaging any of the rest, I venture to say, in New England, New Jersey, and Ohio—just where most moral worth, and of the fear of God is found.—In Maryland, considered as a State, religion is not conspicuous.—It is even anathamatized by its Legislature, to its everlasting disgrace be it spoken, insomuch that it is, in certain cases, excluded from eligibility to its civil functions. Is it, that corruption dreads the supervisorship of its purity and fears coming into contact with its vigilant eye and reproving tongue? Too true—too true! and well it may. Look over the Executive Message, and in addition to its other singular defects as a Public Document from so high a source, there is found hardly the slightest mention of Almighty God, giver of all good, and no mention of the Lord Jesus, the Son of God, the Medium of all mercy to man, to the Governor himself and to every other citizen.—The reference to the Most High is only distinguished by a capital H, from many other things mentioned in the Message: a distinction given to every initial letter of a paragraph and to every proper name used throughout it. Are we, Mr. Editor, turning to be Sans Culottes, that we fear to be unpopular, if we too openly avow, in public documents, our reverential regard for the Holy Trinity, our confidence and humble trust in the Divine Care, and Protection, as our National Sheet Anchor, rather than in the hackneyed jargon, "the wisdom and integrity," of a people who are much devoid of both. In regard to this boasted pillar of our Republic. we fear "stat nominis umbra—et nil amplius!—Where shall we look for it? Not in our circumscribed sphere of observation.—Happy are the eyes, we had almost said, which labor under illusion—the naked fact seen without a colored medium, would render few happy, we apprehend.

When, Mr. Editor, when, sir, are we to have a Proclamation from his Excellency, to assemble the wise and virtuous people, in observance of a Day of Thanksgiving, to God, who has formed us with "abundant productions of the earth, and a general prevalence of health throughout the country"?—Are we never to have that delightful privilege, as a State—simultaneously to meet and pour out our free will and devout acknowledgments to the Governor of governors, the King of kings and Lord of lords, in our churches, our legislative halls, our cities, towns, and villages? The style of drafting such a Proclamation being better understood to the North may serve to instruct our less devout Rulers. and it is respectfully submitted to their perusal It comes from De Witt Clinton, Governor of the State of N. York, and is richly worthy of an insertion in your paper, Mr. Editor, and of any other paper in the realm. Assembled, at its grateful summons, the citizens of that vast State, were seen going up, like the tribes of ancient Israel, to pay their vows, and sing their songs of sweetest melody to God and the Lamb in the sanctuary.

Here follows the Proclamation:

"Whereas public demonstrations of gratitude to Almighty God, especially for signal and unmerited blessings, are enjoined by the most impressive considerations of patriotism and the most solemn obligations of religion: and whereas it has been His Divine Pleasure to constitute His manifestation of goodness to the people of this state, in averting the ravages of disease, multiplying the fruits of the earth, promoting the diffusion of religion and useful knowledge, advancing the interests of agriculture, manufactures, trade and commerce, prospering internal improvements, vouchsafing the enjoyments of liberty, peace and plenty. and infusing an increasing spirit of good will and harmony into this great community: Now, therefore, under a solemn sense of these indulgent dispensations, a solemn conviction that private happiness and prosperity are indissolubly connected with the cultivation of religion' (mark this) 'and a deep solicitude to endeavor to merit the favor of Divine Providence, I do hereby recommend to the good people of this State, the observance of——next, as a day of public thanksgiving."

I am in Christian love
Yours, J. L.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Friday, Jan. 11.

Mr. Teackle, chairman of the committee therein mentioned, delivered the following report, accompanied by a bill, entitled, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department, and to improve and distribute the public revenue of this state; which were severally read the first time and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

The committee to whom was referred an order to enquire into the expediency of amending the laws relative to the treasury department, with a view to the improvement and more efficient collection and distribution of the revenues of this state, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to present the following report:

With respect to the existing organization of the treasury department, there appears to be a total absence of the controling power and essential supervision, which the public interest very obviously demands. The entire management of the public money is, in effect committed to a single individual, without control or sufficient check; and admitting the integrity of that individual to be above reproach, which the committee are ready to admit and that his intelligence is of the first order: they cannot consent at the same time, that it consists with a due regard to the financial relations of the state to permit the continuance of a system so very imperfect and defective. In the view of this committee the proper duties of a treasurer are to receive, disperse, and account for the revenues; and a faithful discharge of those duties is sufficient to employ the diligent attention of an able officer, from day to day, throughout the year. But for the beneficial administration of the treasury department, the public welfare demands more than a faithful discharge of these duties. It demands, in fact, the constant vigilance of a competent statesman to superintend the collection, to avoid evasions, and to secure a similarity of construction, and unity of action, in every fiscal regulation.

The committee have reason to believe that many of the revenue laws are either dormant and inoperative, or that they are very partially, and consequently very unjustly, executed; and they have understood that immense losses have accrued from numerous delinquents escaping through the inadequacy of the laws, or thro indiscreet indulgences, and the insufficiency, in point of form, of official bonds; and that the inequality of contributions, and the great injustice which arise from these defects, might be avoided by a modification which would not only provide the necessary checks and salutary control, in the receipt and expenditure, but protect the treasury from frauds and wasteful evasions of the revenue laws; they therefore respectfully recommend the appointment of an officer, under the title of Comptroller of the Treasury, whose duty it shall be to have in charge, and be responsible for, the administration of these concernments.

The expediency and political justice of a general valuation of all estates, to include the mass of productive property which hitherto has escaped taxation, as an equitable basis of contribution, has presented itself to the consideration of the committee; and after the best reflection which they have been able to devote to this branch of the subject matter referred to them, they have concluded, that according to the true understanding of the character of our rights, every able adult person within the state is presumed to possess some estate, and ought to pay in due propotion for its support; and that actual paupers only are excepted from the operation of this rule.—And this principle being assumed, the committee proceeded to mature a system of valuation. which they conceive will correspond with the equal rights of every interest, and harmonize with the intent and meaning of the constitution.

The committee would also suggest, and beg leave to recommend, the establishment of a fiscal institution, which shall exclusively belong to the state, and be conducted by independent and disinterested officers, for the common convenience of the several departments of industry, and the improvement of the treasury. The foundation of this institution to consist of so much of the state's capital as is now invested in the funded debt of the United States, and the stocks of different banks, or is loaned out to individuals or corporations. And when it is ascertained that these investments have long been, and now are, of greater amount than the silver and gold of all the banks of this state, they feel justified in believing, that an institution so strong in its first formation, and which would be so powerfully aided in its progression by the invigorating effects of incidental operations, would be found competent, not only to nourish and augment the public revenue, but very extensively to promote the convenience and accommodation of individuals. And they would propose, in the apportionment of its distributions, that the one moiety should be upon personal or commercial security at common interest, and the other upon real estate, in the several counties, at the reduced rate of five per centum per annum; and this distinction, in their conception, would be founded upon the ground of substantial justice, as commercial drafts are calculated to abstract the specie, and to drain away the essential sources of nutrition, whilst loans on land would be free from this effect, and would moreover diffuse the advantages of circulation throughout the interior of the state.

The committee reserve the illustration of various facilities for the essential advancement of agriculture, manufactures and commerce, for the purposed enactments to result from this report; and would barely remark, at the present moment, that when they reflect upon the long neglect of this great fountain of our wealth, they have cause to marvel at an omission which is now so apparent to their view; and when they consider, that privileged classes have monopolized its vast avails, they are constrained to ascribe the existing scarcity of circulating medium, and the distressing depression which rises from the cause to the gross misuse, and wanton waste of this sovereign right and prerogative.

As a measure of finance, warranted by the most palpable justice, the committee would recommend a resort to duties on sales at auction, and licenses to auctioneers. This resource has, bitherto, been exclusively devoted to the special interest of the City of Baltimore; but as these duties, and the tax reserved or licenses, are in effect and practical operation, an imposition upon the consumption of the whole state, it is but just that the public treasury should receive the accruing fruits for the common good of the whole people; and if the deepening and clearing of the harbor of Baltimore be a concernment of general charge, which the committee are not disposed to admit in its utmost latitude. the superintendence and disbursements for that object, they apprehend, should be committed to an approved assent of the state; and in the spirit of conciliation upon this matter, the committee respectfully would recommend, that the necessary funds for that purpose should be provided and appropriated at the joint and equal charge of the state's treasury, and that of the corporation of Baltimore.

With regard to the order of distribution, the committee beg leave to recommend, that the revenues arising under the existing law, and the avails of those herein proposed, shall be appropriated, and applied. in the following cause of expenditure; that is to say.

1st. To the general support of the government of this state. 2. To the payment of pensions, donations, specific appropriations and incidental charges. 3. To the promotion of public instruction. 4. To the extension of internal improvement. 5, To the institution of a redeeming fund; and 6, That all unappropriated balances in the treasury, at the end of every successive fiscal year, shall be transferred and added to the capital stock of the state's bank.

Detailed enactments for each and every of these foregoing suggestions and recommendations will be prepared, and the committee indulge the confident hope and expectation, that the several improvements in contemplation, might be achieved from the effects of their operation, without the pressure of any onerous taxation.

All which is respectfully submitted.

L. D. TEACKLE, Chairman.

By order. G. A. Farquhar, C. Clk.

By a note to the editor of the Md. Republican we perceive that 'the bill, to alter the method of appointing clerks,' &c. was reported by Mr. Williams of Dorchester, and not by Mr. Williams of Worcester, as copied from the Republican into our last paper.

PAINFUL OCCURRENCE.

New-York Jan. 3.

Mr. Oliver G. Kane, Secretary of the National Insurance Company, in Wall street, put a period to his life last night, by shooting himself through the head. The inducement to commit the fatal deed, may perhaps be inferred, from his having left a slip of paper in the office of the National Insurance Company, of which he was Secretary, on which he had writen the following:

"My fate may be read in the tragedy of the Gamester." O. G. K.

TO HIRE,

A NEGRO WOMAN with a child. The child is about 4 years old.

J. P. MARSHALL.

Jan. 12. FF

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of fieri facias issued by Theodore G. Dashiell, a justice of the peace, to wit: one. Elijah Broughton use of Seth Wilkins, 1 do. John W. King use of Seth Wilkins, 2 do. Thomas Robertson use Seth Wilkins, Isaac Beauchamp use Seth Wilkins, 1 do. Ann Beauchamp use Seth Wilkins against John Turpin of Jno., 1 do. issued by Wm. H. Curtis, a justice of the peace, Stephen Coulbourn, adm'r. of Wm. Coulbourn, use of William Wood against said John Turpin of John, and 2 do. issued by William Waters, a justice of the peace, Seth Wilkins against John Turpin of John, and to me directed, a Constable in and for Somerset county, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 1 pine do. 1 safe, 2 trunks, 1 bedstead, 6 windsor chairs, 5 flag do. 1 gun, 2 saws, 12 chickens, 4 turkeys, 5 geese, 5 ducks, 10 barrels, 6 weeding hoes, 1 spade, 1 shovel, 1 grubbing hoe, 3 axes, 2 ox chains, 3 ox yokes, 1 pair traces, 1 meat tub, 2 iron pots, 1 set cypress ware, 1 wooden bowl and tray, 2 ploughs, 2 harrows, 300 bushels of corn, more or less, 7 stacks fodder, 1 horse, 1 colt, 1 cow and calf, 1 saddle, 1 lot flax, 1 hand saw, 1 lot old iron, 1 large box, 2 half bushel measures, 1 woollen wheel, 1 looking glass, 3 cups and saucers, 1 lot old books, 1 lot earthen ware, 5 knives and forks, 1 lot bottles, 1 tin coffee pot, 1 salt sellar, 1 vinegar cruet, 1 lot phials, 1 pair andirons, 1 pair tongs and shovel, 1 arm chair, 1 loom, 2 table cloths, 1 towel, 1 canoe, and sail, 1 cart, 1 yoke oxen and 120 acres of land, more or less, or all the land whereon the said Turpin lives—all which said property I shall sell as the goods and chattels, lands and tenements of said John Turpin, of John, at his house, on Wednesday the 13th day of February next, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above writs.

DANIEL BENSON, Constable.

Jan. 21—22. 5

SINGULAR OCCURRENCE.

In one of the western counties of England, an occurrence has taken place, calculated to uphold the opinion entertained by Dr. Johnson, to his dying hour, of the probability of supernatural appearances.

A highly respectable family had parted with a female servant, who had resided with them for several years, and she immediately proceeded to Bristol, where she entered into the service of a respectable tradesman.—The gentleman whose services she had quitted, had an only daughter, and strange to say, that from the very day the servant quitted the house, this young lady never entered her chamber, even in the middle of the noon-day, that she did not see, or fancy that she saw, the girl standing with her arms extended, on the floor near the middle of the room. It was in vain to reason with her on the impossibility of the thing. So powerful was the illusion under which her senses labored, that she imagined she had really occular demonstration for what she asserted. In vain was she accompanied by her friends into the room—still she saw the same spectacle before her, which at length made such a powerful impression upon her mind, that her health, naturally weak, began to give way and in proportion as her bodily strength declined, the dominion of her imagination became more absolute. In this dilemma, the aid of medicine was resorted to in vain; and at length, the professional attendants, feeling convinced that her malady was to be attributed solely to the baleful operations of a heated imagination upon a weak mind, determined to try the experiment of opposing reality to fiction. The girl who had quitted their service was accordingly sent for, unknown to the young lady, who was by this time growing so weak as to require to be supported, even in the slight exertion of crossing her father's drawing room.

Every particular as to the position in which the young lady usually saw the vision having been ascertained, as soon as the girl arrived they conducted her into the bed room of her young mistress, and placed her exactly in the positon which had been described to them as that in which the young lady declared that she continually saw her whenever she entered the chamber.

She received her instructions also, as to the line of conduct she was to adopt, the object being to let the patient first imagine that she saw a spectre, and then, by undeceiving her upon the spot, to impress her mind with the conviction that it was the servant in reality whom she had always seen. With this view, as soon as every thing was arranged in proper order, with the mother of the lady on one side, and the doctor on the other, they all three passed the threshold of the door, when the young lady cast ing a heavy glance towards the spot where she usually saw the apparition, shricked with terror, then flinging herself convulsive into her mother's arms she exclaimed, "Great God! there are two of them," and almost instantly expired.

PEAR TREES.

It is really surprising, says a scientific writer, in allusion to the grafting of pears on a quince stock, that English gardeners should so long have neglected the practice, which has long been followed in France and to which the excellence of French pears is in a degree to be attributed. The quince used as a stock has the property of stunting the growth of pears, of forcing them to produce bearing branches instead of sterile ones and of accelerating the maturity of the fruit. No small garden should contain pear trees grafted any other way, nor any large gardens be without them to a considerable extent.—New Monthly Mag.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Jona-
§§ SEAL.§§ than Huffington, Executor
§§§§§§§§§ of Gabriel Banks, late of Somerset county, dec'd., it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order.

Notice is hereby given.

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Gabriel Banks—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of January, 1828.

JONATHAN HUFFINGTON, Ex'tor of G. Banks, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court.

Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Levin
§§ SEAL.§§ Tyler, Executor, of Samuel
§§§§§§§§§ Milbourne, late of Somerset county, dec'd. it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order.

Notice is hereby given.

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Samuel Milbourne, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 24th of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th of Jan., 1828.

LEVIN TYLER, Executor of S. Milbourne, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Henry
§§ SEAL.§§ Lankford, Adm. of Wm.
§§§§§§§§§ H. Adams, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Md. letters of administration on the personal estate of Wm. H. Adams, late of Somerset county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of January, 1828.

HENRY LANKFORD, Adm. W. H. Adams, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias, issued by Jacob W. Bayly & by James L. Waller, Justices of the Peace, and to me directed, will be sold at the house of Levin G. Pollitt, on the 12th day of February next, at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M. the following property, to wit: one negro woman Peggy, seized and taken in execution as the property of said Pollitt, at the suits of Elijah C. Johnson and William B. Skinner and to be sold as aforesaid, to the highest and best bidder, for cash.

LEVIN D. COLLIER, Constable.

Jan. 19—22.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

Jan. 15, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Nath'l
§§ SEAL.§§ Dixon, adm. c. w. a. of Thos.
§§§§§§§§§ Jenkins, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Thomas Jenkins—late of Somerset county, deceased.—all persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July, 1828,—they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of January, 1828.

NATHANIEL DIXON, Adm'r. of T. Jenkins, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

MARRIED, on the 16th inst. by the Rev. Mr. Quinn, Mr. John Scott to Miss Julina White, all of this county.

NOTICE.

BY virtue of a decree of Somerset County Court, sitting as a Court of Chancery, passed at November Term, 1827, will be offered at public sale to the highest and best bidder, part of a tract of land called 'Deer Park,' containing 562¾ acres, more or less, the property of Arnold E. Waters, (minor,) This land is situated near Pocomoke river, in Somerset county; it is well timbered, and has excellent buildings.—The terms of sale will be, twelve months credit, the purchaser, or purchasers, giving bond or bonds to the Trustee with security, to be approved by the Trustee.

Sale to take place at Mr. Long's Tavern, in the town of Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the 12th of February next, between the hours of one and two o'clock P. M.

JAMES WILSON, Trustee.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court and to me directed, at the suit of Thomas Jenkins use of Sewell Turpin use of John P. Lankford, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:

1 pair pistols, 1 set surveying instruments, 1 lot pork, 1 lot leather, 1 old chest and trunk, 2 chests with tools, 2 do. with sundries, 1 old trough and press box 1 large stone jug, 1 cross cut saw, 1 old pit saw, 1 demijohn, 3 kegs, 1 bag with feathers, 2 pot racks, 1 lot dried fruit, 1 hone, 5 powder horns and gourds, 1 cloth brush and shoe brushes, 3 boxes and trumpery. 1 lot books, 1 pair old compasses and scales, 1 half bushel measure, 1 old collar, 2 old ploughs, 1 lye stand, 1 lot potatoes, 3 wheat scythes, 2 pair scales and weights, 5 bags and beans, and 1 lot wool and sleep skins, which I shall proceed to sell as the goods and chattels of Samuel Smith, of Saml. on Monday the 4th day of February next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M. at the late dwelling of Samuel Smith, dec'd. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the aforesaid writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

Jan. 14—22, 1828. LF

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT.

William Collins, administrator of Stephen Collins,

vs.

Daniel Dykes, Henry Moore and Polly his wife, Isaac Ward and Mary his wife, William Adams and Priscilla his wife, John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, heirs of Stephen Dykes.

IT being stated in this case that the defendants John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, do not reside in the state of Maryland and within the reach of the process of Somerset County Court—It is therefore this seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and twenty eight, ordered that the complainant give notice to the said John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, that they be and appear in Somerset County Court on the first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by the bill—And it is further ordered, that the said notice shall be given by a publication of a copy of this order in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three successive weeks, the first publication of which shall be at least four months before the said first Wednesday after the said third Monday of May next. The bill in this case states that the said Stephen Dykes was in his life time indebted to the said Stephen Collins in his life time in a large sum of money, and that the same has never been paid—that the said Stephen Collins hath departed this life, and that letters of administration of his personal estate have been granted to the complainant—Also that the said Stephen Dykes hath departed this life and letters of administration of his personal estate have been granted to the defendant Daniel Dykes, who hath administered the same, and that the same is exhausted and is insufficient to pay the debts of the said Stephen Dykes—that the said Stephen Dykes died intestate, seized of real estate in said county, which descended to the defendants his heirs at law—that is to say to the said defendants Daniel, Polly, Mary, Sally, Priscilla and Peggy, and that the defendant Polly hath intermarried with the defendant Henry, the defendant Mary with the defendant Isaac, the defendant Priscilla with the defendant William, and the defendant Sally with the defendant John. The object of the bill is to obtain a decree for the sale of the said real essate for the payment of the debts of the said Stephen Dykes.

WILLIAM TINGLE.

Test, GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 15 YY

NOTICE.

I hereby give notice to my creditors for them to appear at the County Court, to be held for Somerset County, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, (if any they have) why I shall not have the benefit of the insolvent laws of Maryland.

JOSHUA REECE.

Jan. 22, 1828 k

Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county, Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also, another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr Levin Ballard, senior, known by the name of Moore & Casset, situated on Menokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm. Jones and Dr. J. King.—This tract contains about 130 acres—and, besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises.

As no person will purchase without viewing the property a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to

L. W. BALLARD.

Dec. 18, 1827. 'd

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT—Also Supplemental Bill, &c.

Henry Hyland, Levin L. Waters and Eliza his wife

vs.

Levin D. Jones, Hiram Jones, Eleanor Jones, John Jones, Henry Jones, Charles Jones, and Alfred Jones, children and hiers at law of Charles Jones, (dec'd.) and George Jones and Robert Jones, Executors of the said Charles, dec d.

THE Bill in this cause states that the complainant, Henry Hyland, sold to the said Charles Jones, deceased, in his life time a part of a tract of land situated in said county called Peach Blossom, for a large sum of money, to wit: the sum of six hundred and two dollars and twenty-five cents, and that the said Charles, deceased, gave his bill obligatory for the same to the complainant Henry—that the said complainant, Henry, hath assigned the same to the complainant Eliza—and that no part of the purchase money hath been paid—the supplemental bill states that since the filing of the original bill the complainant hath intermarried with the complainant Levin L. Waters. The bills further state that the said Charles Jones, deceased, hath died having first made his will in due form and appointed the defendants George Jones and Robert Jones his executors of said will, who have taken upon themselves the execution of the same, and that he has left as his heirs and devisees all of the other defendants above named his children. The bill further states that his personal estate is insufficient to pay his debts, and that the same will be entirely absorbed by judgements rendered against the said Charles, deceased, in his life time, and claims of preference. The object therefore of the bill, is, to obtain a sale of the said tract of land called Peach Blossom—that is the interest which the said Charles, deceased, had in the same at the time of his death, and which was devised to his said children or which descended to them, and the proceeds of sale applied to the payment of the said debt—The bills also state that the said defendant Eleanor doth not reside in the state of Maryland or within the reach of the process of Somerset County Court. It is therefore this seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, Ordered, that the complainants give notice to the said Eleanor by publication of a copy of this order in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne—that she be and appear in Somerset county Court on the first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next. in person or by solicitor, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by this bill—And it is further ordered that the first publication of said copy of this order in said paper shall be at least four months before the said first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next, and shall be continued once a week in said paper for at least three successive weeks.

WILLIAM TINGLE.

Test, GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 15, 1828. QZ

BLANK BILLS OF SALE,

Printed on fine Paper,

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE

WM. DONE,

ATTORNEY AT LAW,

Has removed his office to the room in the second story over the office of James Polk, Esq. Register of Wills, where he will be found from 9 to 12 o'clock every morning, and will diligently attend to any business placed in his hands. The office of Auditor in Chancery is kept in the same room.

Jan. 15. KY

LAND FOR SALE,

IN POTATO NECK.

344 ACRES,

The westerly half of the farm late the property of Francis H. Waters esq. (dec'd.)—About 100 acres are under improvement, a good part of which produces luxuriantly. The residue is heavily timbered with oak and pine, &c., and conveniently situated to market. The farm is washed on one side by the Annamessex river, and on the other it lies contiguous to the Menokin.

On the premises upon the Annamessex side is a delightful building spot, of high ground, in full view of the river, intercepted only by a small grove of lofty pines, and near it a delightful well of water, said to be surpassed by none in the county. Further particulars are deemed unnecessary, as those wishing to purchase will doubtless view the premises for themselves. Half of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for five or more years—interest to be paid annually.

For further particulars enquire of Dr. Ballard, near the premises, or to Mr. Lazarus Maddux, Potato Neck, or to the Rev. Dr. Waters, Washington Academy, or a line addressed to the subscriber, Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. York, will meet with attention.

FREEBORN GARRETTSON.

December 18, 1827. 6t

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Thomas Robertson

v

Nathaniel Dixon and Nancy his wife, and Amelia Jenkins.

IN this cause it appears to the Court that Amelia Jenkins doth not reside in the State of Maryland and within the reach of the process of this Court, and the Sheriff having returned to the subpoena issued in this cause "non est."

It is therefore on this 28th day of November 1827 by this Court ordered that the complainant—by inserting a copy of this order in some newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne once a week for four successive weeks—give notice to the said absent defendant that she be and appear on the third Monday of May next, in this Court in person by a solicitor to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed for by the bill, and that in case the said defendant shall not appear within the term above limited—the said bill will as to the said defendant be taken pro confesso—and the first insertion of such copy shall be made at least four months before the said third Monday of May next, in the said paper.

The bill in this case states that Thomas Jenkins was in his life time indebted to the complainant for the purchase money of certain real estate sold by the complainant to the said Thomas—that the said Thomas hath departed this life without paying the said debt, and without leaving any personal estate to pay his debts that he left the defendant Nancy and Amelia his heirs at law—and the defendant Nancy hath intermarried with the defendant Nathaniel. The object of the bill is to obtain a sale of the said real estate for the payment of the said purchase money.

ARA SPENCE.
WILLIAM TINGLE.

True copy. Test,

GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 8, 1827. 2f

IN CHANCERY.

SOMERSET COUNTY COURT.
November Term, 1827.

Harry Pollitt

vs.

Randal R. Hayman and others heirs of Randal Hayman, deceased.

ORDERED by the Court that the report of the Trustee made in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause be shewn to the contrary before the second day of the next term of this Court—Provided a copy of this order be inserted in a newspaper published in Princess-Anne town, three successive weeks, before the second day of the next term of this Court, and also by a copy of this order set up at the Court House door for three weeks before said day.

ARA SPENCE.

Test,

GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 15 QZ

Magistrates' Blanks

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

THE SLEEPING FIGURE OF MODENA.

Upon a couch of silk and gold
  A pale enchanted lady lies,
And o'er her many a frowning fold
  Of crimson shades her closed eyes,
And shadowy creatures round her rise,
And ghosts of women masked in wo.
  And many a phantom-pleasure flies,
And lovers slain—ah, long ago!

The lady, pale as now she sleeps,
  An age upon that couch hath lain,
Yet in one spot a spirit keeps
  His mansion, like a red rose stain;
  And, when lover's ghosts complain,
Blushes like a new-born flower.
  Or as some bright dream of pain
Dawneth thro' the darkest hour.

Once—but many a tho't hath fled,
  Since the time whereof I speak—
Once the sleeping lady bred
  Beauty in her burning cheek,
  And the lovely morn did break
Through the azure of her eyes,
  And her heart was warm and meek,
And her hope was in the skies.

But the lady loved at last,
  And the passion pained her soul,
And her hope away was cast,
  Far beyond her own control;
  And the clouded tho'ts that stroll
Thro' the midnight of the mind,
  O'er her eyes of azure stole,
Till they grew deject and blind.

He to whom her heart was given,
  When May music was in tune,
Dared forsake that amorous heaven.
  Changed and careless soon!
  O what is all beneath the moon,
When his heart will answer not;
  What are all the dreams of noon,
With our love forgot.

Heedless of the world she went
  Sorrow's daughter meek and lone,
Till some spirit downwards bent
  And struck her to this sleep of stone.
  Look! Did old Pygmalion
Sculpture thus, or more prevail,
  When he drew the living tone
From the marble pale?

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr Editor—

Good advice is so seldom well received, and those who give it so frequently despised, that it is with reluctance I present the Cause and Cure of Hard Times—Yet I am willing to bear the scowl of those whom it may affect, being conscious that the piece cannot be justly condemned. As for your part, I presume you are not ignorant of the fact, that it would be as silly in an Editor to try to please all, as the idea of Garrick's tailor becoming an actor was presumptive.*

ALUMNUS.

Snowhill, Jan. 16, 1828.

HARD TIMES—Cause and Cure.

When I see a man buying what he does not want, on credit, I say to myself this man will be apt to complain of hard times.

When I see a man often going to the merchants, and leaving his store loaded with goods, I think that man before many years will find he has purchased many Evils and will cry out hard times.

When I see a farmer or mechanic frequenting the ball-alley, race field, gambling table, tavern or grog shop: ah, says I, friend you had much better be in your shop or on your farm, and before many years the sheriff or constable will make you pipe hard times.

When I see a merchant running largely in debt for goods, and then trusting them out to such folks as I have named above I say 'tis ten to one if his costs of collection and bad debts do not eat up all his profits, and he be ruined by the expenses of suits brought against him in the meantime. while exclaiming hard times.

When I see the mechanic quitting his shop and the farmer his farm, I say better not, Bill, for you have ten chances of loss to one of gain against you, which will make you exclaim hard times.

When I see a man spending his time and money every morning or evening for a bitter or a dram, I exclaim better lay that money up for some future day of want, and it may save you many cries of hard times.

When I see a man often lounging about the billiard tables and places of amusement, I am apt to suppose some creditor will ere long pounce upon him, and make him exclaim hard times.

When I see a mechanic labouring only two or three hours in a day, and charging treble price for what he does, I exclaim, better work more constantly and charge less, else some more industrious mechanic in your neighborhood or in some adjoining town, will get the business from you, and leave you bewailing the hard times.

When I see a man who lets his expenses exceed his earnings or income. I say that man will surely see hard times.

When I see a man who is involved in debt dipping deeper by buying things he might dispense with, I exclaim—poor man! your destiny is fixed—the sheriff will always keep you crying hard times.

When I see a man often tipling at home or abroad—tottering about the streets or his farm, I exclaim, the time hastens rapidly on when you will cry hard times.

When I see a man neglecting or refusing to pay his honest debts, but is determined to take the law's delays, and pay them according to law, deluded may say I, pay day will finally come and costs with it, and you will then find hard times.

Cure for this Complaint.

Constant and regular industry compounded with strict economy and frugality, and tempered well with discretion, inflexibly persevered in, has never failed to effect a complete cure.

Specific Directions.

1st. Have some regular business and pursue it as many hours in the day as your health will permit.

2d. Make every day's income exceed by a few cents its expenses. If in debt lay out by this surplus as a sacred deposite to pay that debt.

3d. Remember that while able to work time is money, and must not therefore be wasted at the tavern, gaming table, store or any other lounging place.

4th. Buy only such things as you really want, and do not buy them on credit if avoidable.

5th. Never go bail for any man who does not observe these rules.

If you persevere in the strict observance of these rules for few years you will cease to cry hard times.

*I will send you a copy of the piece alluded to for your next paper.

FROM THE NATIONAL ÆGIS.

THE SHAKERS.

In the county of Worcester, the Shakers have established themselves in Harvard, in a retired situation, about thirty miles from Boston, in a northwest direction.—The settlement here commenced in 1780, under the ministration of Ann Lee herself, who made it the place of her residence during two years. The society now contains about two hundred members, who have in common, a large and valuable tract of land. The appearance of the village to the eye of a stranger, is picturesque and singular. Seated in a retired and solitary spot, cradled among the hills, the mixture of large and spacious dwelling houses painted yellow, with extensive work-shops and store houses of deep red color, and the pure white of the house for devotional exercise, presents a curious and remarkable view. The application of wind to the motion of machinery, very rare in the interior of a state abounding with streams, forms a prominent object in the landscape. Rich and highly cultivated fields, and extensive gardens, flourishing orchards, and green forests, are blended in beautiful union. The buildings are principally clustered together on either side of a broad street, whose perfect neatness corresponds with the general air of fastidious order and cleanliness. Among them the meeting house stands conspicuous A recent visit afforded an opportunity of witnessing the remarkable mode of worship adopted by this singular people. On arriving at the village, a shrill sound, not unlike the melody of a frightened fowl, gave information that the public services of the sabbath had commenced. On entering the door assigned to the male part of the congregation, a spectacle of no little novelty was presented. In the centre of a spacious hall, whose floor was as smooth and white as polished marble, stood the eldest of both sexes, arranged in an oval figure.

The brethren by two's and the sisters by three's were parading in a kind of procession around them, and with a step intermediate between the measured steps of a march and the livelier movement of a dance. The hands, by a singular gesture, beat time to the music of the hymn, of which the words "singing and dancing" seemed to form a chorus. On arriving to its conclusion, the column halted, every individual bent forward with a gesture much like the "bow" of the people of the world, and the hands were most ungracefully clasped before. After a short pause the singing re-commenced, and the assembly again moved on its circular course.—The movement was performed with a grave decorum, which excluded every appearance of ridiculous effect. Much agility was manifested by the young, and the old seemed habitually to fall into the exercise: the female portion of the society possessed an elasticity of step and grace of motion not often seen in the proud halls where the votaries of pleasure bound to the merry notes of the viol, amid the fluttering of snowy dresses and the bright glances of sparkling eyes. A military exactness and rigid uniformity prevailed. Every motion was as regular as the revolution of machinery.—Every foot fell with the cadence of the song, and was lifted at its rising. At times, the arms were raised above the head, the hands clasped together with great energy.—The labor of this exercise continued about half an hour, when the congregation was formed by a simultaneous movement, the brethren separate from the sisters on opposite sides of the hall, facing, each other, in lines curving inward, so as to leave a considerable space between the two grand divisions. The singing was resumed in this position, and on its conclusion, benches taken from the walls were placed across the floor, and the assembly was seated. After a short interval, a speaker advanced into the area between the brethren and sisters, and addressed himself to the people from the world collected to witness the peculiar worship, and was succeeded, after a short exhortation, by a second. Both enforced with more zeal than rhetorical grace, the necessity of repentance, of taking up "a cross against sin," denouncing the works of Anti-Christ, and forsake the world to enjoy the pure light and suffer the austerities of their community; and dwelt with affectionate regard on the virtues and the power of the foundress of the sect. A third speaker, after a few remarks to the members of the society, dismissed the assembly. They retired thro' opposite doors, in little processions, to their dwellings.

The commencement of the exercises is by singing, while arranged in the files mentioned before, and is followed by the movement in procession described. About fifty men and seventy females attended. The most exact uniformity in costume prevailed among both. The dress of the latter was white, with a neat cap of becoming plainness, and a handkerchief thrown triangularly over the shoulders, concealing the neck. Many were young—some fair.—The labor of the dance on a July morning had rendered the coats of the men unnecessary incumberances. Each sleeve was encircled by a black string.

The march is said to have been substituted for the less dignified figure which has formerly been seen in other societies. In those the singing commenced, the whole assembly advanced a few paces with a step intermediate between a walk and run—then making the shuffling of the feet correspond to the haulting voices of the singers, the file turned about, and on arriving at the first position, again turned; after a shuffle, they again advanced to return in the same manner.

On contemplating such an assembly, the spectator is irresistibly reminded of the convent and monastery. The same calm expression of religious devotion, associated with the idea of a monk, is impressed on many a fine countenance, where the indication of sincerity, intelligence, and subdued passions, seemed unmixed with Jesuistical cunning or hypocrisy. The abstraction from the cares of the world, contempt of its pleasures, and pious contentment, the essential characteristics of the nun, "the bride of heaven," were seated on many a pale face. Here, as within the gloomy walls reared by the piety or superstition of the catholic, the unhappy and disappointed may find an asylum.—The sect of "believers," rejecting that institution whose links connect the family of man in social intercourse, disavowing the hallowed influences of love, on which society is dependent for existence and preservation, regarding the rite of marriage as the forbidden fruit whose enjoyment was the great original sin that drove our first parents from the powers of paradise, draws its recruits from the community, whose foundation principle it disowns, and whose burden it refuses to share.—Possessed of great wealth in the common stock of property, it allures the miserable to its bosom, and increases its numbers from those who might otherwise free themselves from despair by the strong remedy of suicide, and rush into the grave as a sanctuary. When fortune has frowned on the efforts of enterprise and industry; where a wife and children have drunk of the cup of suffering, an union with this family will secure an ample and luxurious support. When the widow has been left destitute, with little ones crying for food, it is easy to conceive the motives which might bring her to such a society.—Where the wife has been the victim of the vices and follies of a profligate husband, it is not difficult to imagine the reason that would lead her to the peaceful dwellings of this people. External conformity to manners and ceremonies may ripen into conviction of their propriety, and those who came from want remain for love.—Others, doubtless, are attracted by the belief of the efficacy of austerity and mortification in purifying the heart, or persuasion of the divine mission of Ann Lee. On the whole it is well that such associations exist.—Its prevalence would subvert society; limited and restrained, as it ever must be, it is made subservient to the designs of social institutions, and promotes human happiness.

While the utmost regularity, industry and order prevail in the dwellings of the "Shakers," the most profound silence is in the streets of their villages. The traveller ever sees the same construction of building, with double doors for the separate accommodation of the two sexes. The same state of improvement is visible on their lands, and equal neatness going through their whole establishments. In passing their towns, the cheerful shouts of "children just let loose from schools," are unheard; there are no chubby urchins frolicking on the green, or dabbling in the pool, as happy as youth and sunshine can make them: the feeble voice of infancy is not in their dwellings, or its tottering footsteps around the hearth. All is clean, in due order and flourishing; but it is as the maturity of an ancient tree, without fresh shoots to supply its place when its decaying branches shall be strewed upon the earth.

FROM ZION'S HERALD.

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

If the blessed command of our Saviour "thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," was obeyed on earth, how happy would be the condition of man! If he sought not only his own but his neighbor's good, how perfect would be his enjoyment while he travelled downward to the tomb! If all his selfish passions should be hushed, and, instead of hatred, love should take possession of his bosom, his inquiry then would not be, "how shall I get to myself riches," but, "what can I do for my fellow men?"

Would he but observe this one command, the promise made to the children of Israel, would be fulfilled to him, "blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out, and blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in."—But, alas, man—selfish man, will not comply with the command, which, if obeyed, would make this earth a paradise: he loves his neighbor, when it does not interfere with his own concerns, but if it does, he forgets his obligations and inquires,—"who is my neighbor?" and remembers not, that he is bound to love him as himself.

How perfect is the law of God! Had not this part of it been violated, the pages of history would not have been blackened with the accounts of crime and blood-shed that have disgraced our world. Look at the millions who have been slain in battle, and the numbers who have been destroyed by the hand of the assassin, and tell the amount of misery that would have been avoided, had man only been willing to love his neighbor as himself.—So every departure from the path of duty will bring misery in its train; if we would be perfectly happy, we must make the law of God our rule of action. But it may be asked, will the day ever come, when man will regard the rights of his neighbor as his own? will the time ever arrive when it shall be said of nations, "behold how they love one another." Yes, that day will come; its dawn is fast approaching—when locks and bars will not be needed, to "keep our goods in peace"—when navies that are now employed to defend the rights of man by force, shall be engaged in carrying the gospel to lands that know not God—when armies that have carried destruction and misery in their train, shall be disbanded, and they who compose them, return to their homes to learn the art of war no more.

Happy day, and thrice happy year! Who shall live to see the dawn of such a time? "Then no man need say to his neighbor, know the Lord, for all shall know him from the least to the greatest. How perfect the state of society, when the law of God shall be made the rule of action, and its divine requirements loved and obeyed—when man shall be willing to love his neighbor as himself!

C. H. C.

AN OLIO.

The following pieces were selected from a medley of matter received by our letter box, and otherwise,—whether any of them are original we know not—care not—as they will doubtless meet the approbation of some of our readers:

A CURE FOR LOVE.

I have often observed through the course of my life, a disorder that molests our young men and women called love: it sometimes takes so deep a root as to deprive them of their reasonable faculties. There have been a great many remedies prescribed for the disease; but they are so difficult the patient would not know where to get the ingredients. I shall now lay down a cure that is plain and simple, and inform the patient where the ingredients may be had.

Take a grain of sense, half a grain of prudence, a drachm of understanding, one ounce of patience, a pound of resolution and a handful of dislike, intermix them altogether and fold them up in the alembic of your brain for 24 hours then set them on a slow fire of hatred, and strain them clean from the drugs of melancholy, sweeten them with forgetfulness, then put them down with the cork of sound judgement, then let them stand fourteen days in the water of cold affection.—This rightly made and properly applied is the most effectual remedy in the universe—and was never known to fail.

You may get the ingredients at the house of Understanding, in Content street, going up the hill of Self-denial, in the country of Forgetfulness.

DEVOTION.—An Extract.

Bless my eyes, cried I, as I happened to look towards the door, what do I see! one of the worshipers fallen fast asleep, and actually sunk down on his cushion—is he now enjoying the benefit of a trance, or does he receive the influence of some mysterious vision!—Alas! alas! replied my companion, no such thing! He has only had the misfortune of eating too hearty a dinner, and finds it impossible to keep his eyes open. Turning to another part of the temple, I perceived a young lady in the same situation and attitude. Strange cried I, can she too have overeaten herself! Oh, fie, replied my friend, you now grow censorious—she grow drowsy from eating too much—that would be profanation! she only sleeps now from having set up all night at a brag party. Turn me where I will then, says I, I can perceive no symptom of devotion among the worshipers, except from that old woman in the corner, who sits groaning behind the long sticks of a mourning fan, she indeed seems greatly edified with what she hears!—Ah! replied my friend, I knew we should find some to catch you—I know her; that is the deaf lady, who lives in the cloisters!

JOHN HANCOCK.

During the siege at Boston, Gen. Washington consulted Congress upon the propriety of bombarding the town of Boston.—Mr. Hancock was then president of Congress. After the letter was read, a solemn silence ensued. This was broken by a member making a motion that Mr. Hancock might give his opinion on the important subject, as he was deeply interested, from having all his estate in Boston. After he left the chair, he addressed the chairman of the committee of the whole in the following words: "It is true, Sir, nearly all the property I have in the world is in houses and other real estate in the town of Boston, but if the expulsion of the British army from it, and the liberties of our country, require their being burnt to ashes, issue the order for that purpose immediately."

A Yankee trick for an English one.

A little before the commencement of the late war, between the U. States and Great Britain, two Yankees on a trading voyage crossed over to Montreal, and put up at a public house where a British recruiting officer was stationed. The Yankees for convenience in that inclement season of the year, had hoods to their top coats resembling those worn by women, on their cloaks. Shortly after their arrival, the officer, who had a wishful eye on them, watched his opportunity, and dropped a guinea into the hood of one of their coats as bounty money, and unobserved by him, but which was fortunately seen by his companion who without being noticed communicated the secret to him. Presently after, the one who had the guinea, called for their bill, and on receiving it, put up his hand and deliberately took out the guinea, and with apparent surprise exclaimed. "I have been robbed; for I had two guineas in the hood of my coat when I came into the house, and now I have but one." To which his comrad replied, "I saw that gentleman (pointing to the officer just now put his hand into the hood of your coat," upon which he immediately challenged him for a thief in the presence of all his companions.—His British majesty's officer, finding, the situation in which he was placed, having two Yankees to deal with, one to charge and the other as evidence to prove the fact, after a few flourishes, proposed a compromise, and actually paid him twenty guineas on the spot to get rid of so troublesome a bargain.

ANCIENT ADVICE.

Let your—
Tho'ts be divine, awful, chaste.
Conversation be brief, honest, true.
Works be profitable, holy, charitable.
Manners be grave, courteous, cheerful.
Diet be temperate, convenient, sober.
Apparel be frugal, neat, comely.
Will be constant, obedient, ready.
Sleep be moderate, quiet, seasonable.
Prayers be short, frequent, fervent
Recreations be lawful, suitable, seldom.
Memory be of death, punishment, glory.

Hear / Be silent / Understand / Remember — & learn to — be silent. / understand / remember. / do accordingly.

All that you — see, judge not. / hear, believe not. / know, tell not. / can do, do not.

On every occasion, when you discourse, think first, and look narrowly what you speak—of whom you speak—to whom you speak—how you speak—and when you speak, speak wisely speak truly, lest you bring yourself into great trouble

L. D. Teackle

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1828. NO. 44.

Terms of Publication.

THE VILLAGE HERALD is published weekly at $2 50, per annum, or at $2 if sent by mail and subject to postage, in either case to be paid half-yearly in advance. No subscription taken for a shorter period than six months; none discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for each continuance: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

CONSTABLE'S SALE.

By virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by James L. Waller, a Justice of the Peace, and to me directed, will be sold at the house of Henry I. Riggin, on Tuesday the 5th of February next, at the hour of 3 o'clock P. M. the following property, to wit:—1 negro man Jim, 1 do Dave, 1 woman Anne and child, 3 head of horses, 3 yoke of oxen, 5 head of cattle, 1 carriage and harness, and 1 cart, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of said Henry I. Riggin, at the suit of Ebin Pooks, and will sell, as aforesaid, to the highest and best bidder, for cash.

LEVIN D. COLLIER,
Jan. 9th—15 Constable.

CONSTABLE'S SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias, issued by Jacob W. Bayly & by James L. Waller, Justices of the Peace, and to me directed, will be sold at the house of Levin G. Pollitt, on the 12th day of February next, at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M. the following property, to wit: one negro woman Peggy, seized and taken in execution as the property of said Pollitt, at the suits of Elijah C. Johnson and William B. Skinner and to be sold as aforesaid, to the highest and best bidder, for cash.

LEVIN D. COLLIER,
Jan. 19—22. Constable.

CONSTABLE'S SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of fieri facias issued by Theodore G. Dashiell, a justice of the peace, to wit: one. Elijah Broughton use of Seth Wilkins, 1 do. John W. King use of Seth Wilkins, 2 do. Thomas Robertson use Seth Wilkins, Isaac Beauchamp use Seth Wilkins, 1 do. Ann Beauchamp use Seth Wilkins against John Turpin of Jno., 1 do. issued by Wm. H. Curtis, a justice of the peace, Stephen Coulbourn, adm'r. of Wm. Coulbourn, use of William Wood against said John Turpin of John, and 2 do. issued by William Waters, a justice of the peace, Seth Wilkins against John Turpin of John, and to me directed, a Constable in and for Somerset county, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 1 pine do. 1 safe, 2 trunks, 1 bedstead, 6 windsor chairs, 5 flag do. 1 gun, 2 saws, 12 chickens, 4 turkeys, 5 geese, 5 ducks, 10 barrels, 6 weeding hoes. 1 spade, 1 shovel. 1 grubbing hoe, 3 axes, 2 ox chains, 3 ox yokes, 1 pair traces, 1 meat tub, 2 iron pots, 1 set cypress ware, 1 wooden bowl and tray, 2 ploughs, 2 harrows, 300 bushels of corn, more or less, 7 stacks fodder, 1 horse, 1 colt, 1 cow and calf, 1 saddle, 1 lot flax, 1 hand saw, 1 lot old iron, 1 large box, 2 half bushel measures, 1 woollen wheel, 1 looking glass, 3 cups and saucers, 1 lot old books, 1 lot earthen ware, 5 knives and forks, 1 lot bottles, 1 tin coffee pot, 1 salt sellar, 1 vinegar cruet, 1 lot phials, 1 pair andirons, 1 pair tongs and shovel, 1 arm chair, 1 loom, 2 table cloths, 1 towel, 1 canoe, and sail, 1 cart, 1 yoke oxen and 120 acres of land, more or less, or all the land whereon the said Turpin lives—all which said property I shall sell as the goods and chattels, lands and tenements, of said John Turpin, of John, at his house, on Wednesday the 13th day of February next, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M and 3 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above writs.

DANIEL BENSON,
Jan. 21—22. § Constable.

TO HIRE.

A NEGRO WOMAN with a child. The child is about 4 years old.

J. P. MARSHALL.
Jan. 22. FF

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Thomas W. Handy
v.
Isaac Henry, William Fassitt and Dorothy his wife—George G. Henry, and Charles R. Henry.

IN this cause it appears to the Court that Isaac Henry and George G. Henry do not reside in the state of Maryland and within the reach of the process of this Court, and the Sheriff having returned to the subpœna issued in this cause 'non sunt'—It is therefore this 28th day of November, 1827, by this Court ordered that the complainant give notice by publication of a copy of this order in some newspaper, printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for four successive weeks, four months before the third Monday of May next, to the said absent defendants, that they be and appear on or before the third Monday of May next, in this Court, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by the bill, and that in case the said defendants shall not appear within the term above limited—the said bill will as to the said defendants be taken pro confesso.

The bill in this cause states that Hugh Henry was in his life time indebted to the complainant and hath departed this life, the said debt remaining unpaid—that administration of his personal estate has been had, and the same is exhausted and insufficient to pay his debts—that he hath left real estate in Somerset County which has descended to the defendants in the cause.

The object of the said bill is, to obtain a sale of the said real estate for the payment of the debts of said Hugh.

ARA SPENCE.
True copy. Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 8. 3m

Somerset County Court,

In Chancery, November Term, 1827.

Eleanor Wailes, by George Hopkins her guardain,
vs.
Eleanor Mezick, widow, and Martha H. W. Mezick, and Elizabeth Mezick, infant children of William Mezick.

ORDERED by the Court that the audit made and reported by the Auditor in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn to the Court before the 2nd day of the next term of this Court—provided a copy of this order be set up at the Court-House door in the town of Princess-Anne, and inserted in a newspaper published in said town, at least for three successive weeks before said 2nd day of said term.

ARA SPENCE.
True copy. Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 XV

Somerset County Court,

Chancery Side, November Term, 1827.

Isaac Harris
vs.
William Harris, Elizabeth Harris, Sally Harris, Martha Harris, Isaac Harris and Alice K. Harris.

ORDERED by the Court that the sale of the real estate mentioned in the proceedings in this cause as made and reported by Ephraim K. Wilson, trustee be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of the next term of this Court; provided a copy of this order be inserted once a week for three weeks successively in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, before said second day of next term.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 XV

Somerset County Court,

Chancery Side, November Term, 1827.

Elizabeth A. W. Waters
vs.
William E. Waters.

ORDERED by the Court that the sale of the lands of William E. Waters, as made and reported by Ephraim K. Wilson, trustee in this cause, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of next term; provided a copy of this order be inserted in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three weeks successively before said 2nd day of the next term of this court.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15. XV

T. L. DISHAROON,

 HATTER,
SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have hereto fore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. 6m

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC.

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

Certificate.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER.
Princess-Anne, Md.
Nov. 20, 1827.

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Isaac Harris
vs.
William Harris and Elizabeth Harris, Sally Harris, Martha Harris, Isaac Harris and Alice K. Harris.

THE Report of Ephraim K. Wilson, the trustee, having been made—Ordered by the Court that the sale of the lands called Ferry Quarter mentioned in the proceedings as made by the Trustee in this cause be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of next term; provided a copy of the order be inserted in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three weeks successively before said second day of the next term of this Court.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15. XV

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Thos. Brown against Tubman Brown, terretenant of William Fleming, dec'd. I have seized and taken in execution a tract or part of two tracts of land, the one called Ridge and the other My Own, which was formerly the property of said William Fleming, dec'd. and on which the said Tubman Brown now resides, containing 70 acres, more or less, which I will sell at the Court House door, on the 8th of January next, between the hours of 2 and 3 o clock, P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
Dec. 18,—25

☞The above Sale is postponed to the 29th instant, at the hour and place above-mentioned. Jan. 9—15.

PHILADELPHIA ALBUM

AND

Ladies' Literary Gazette.

"ALBUMS," says an agreeable writer, "are things, in which are gathered many sweets from the flowers of genius and taste in the garden of literature. They also serve as pleasant mementos of those friends who are absent, and tend to instruct, as well as to please—to enlighten, as well as to amuse."

The Album, to which the publishers respectfully invite attention, has during the brief space of its publication, met with such flattering and universal esteem as to warrant the printing, each week, of near six thousand copies.

The work is enriched with original articles on a variety of interesting and valuable subjects. Fine Arts; Sciences; Botanical, Historical, Biographical and Moral Essays, Sketches, &c.; Reviews of new books; Fashionable and Literary Intelligence; Manners, Conversation, Dress, and Beauty; the cultivation of Plants and Flowers; Amusing and Moral Tales, together with choice articles in every department of polite and useful literature.

It is handsomely printed (8 pages every Wednesday) on fine white paper, royal size, quarto form, making an elegant annual volume of upwards of four hundred pages, embellished with appropriate engravings.

The publishers are determined to spare neither pains nor expense in their ambitious exertions to make their work an acquisition to literature. To sustain its character, they have made (at great expense) arrangements with some of the first writers in this country, and are at the same time enabled, from European Journals which they receive, to make the choicest selections from the richest sources of foreign literature.

To give the parents or brothers—the friends or guardians of their fair readers an assurance of that strict sense of purity, chasteness and general propriety which should eminently characterize a work of this kind, constituting a bouquet of the "flowers of literature," which must form to the cultivated and accomplished mind, a "token of esteem," the most valuable and pleasing—a "forget me not," of the most appropriate, endearing, and lasting nature, the publishers have associated with its former conductors in their editorial duties a lady of distinguished literary reputation and talent, whose watchful attention and acknowledged abilities they are confident will add materially to the character of the work.

Price, $2 50 per annum, payable in advance. Address the Publishers of the Philadelphia Album, and Ladies' Literary Gazette, 45 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Somerset County Court,

In Chancery, November Term, 1827.

Smith Brereton's Petition for the sale of William Brereton's estate.

ORDERED by the Court that the Report of the Auditor made in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn to the Court before the 2nd day of the next term of this Court; provided a copy of this order be set up at the Court-House door, in the town of Princess-Anne, three weeks before said second day of next term, and inserted in a newspaper published in said town three successive weeks before said day.

ARA SPENCE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 XV

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT.

William Collins, administrator of Stephen Collins,
vs.
Daniel Dykes, Henry Moore and Polly his wife, Isaac Ward and Mary his wife, William Adams and Priscilla his wife, John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, heirs of Stephen Dykes.

IT being stated in this case that the defendants John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, do not reside in the state of Maryland and within the reach of the process of Somerset County Court—It is therefore this seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and twenty eight, ordered that the complainant give notice to the said John Fuller and Sally his wife, and Peggy Sturgis, that they be and appear in Somerset County Court on the first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by the bill—And it is further ordered, that the said notice shall be given by a publication of a copy of this order in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three successive weeks, the first publication of which shall be at least four months before the said first Wednesday after the said third Monday of May next. The bill in this case states that the said Stephen Dykes was in his life time indebted to the said Stephen Collins in his life time in a large sum of money, and that the same has never been paid—that the said Stephen Collins hath departed this life, and that letters of administration of his personal estate have been granted to the complainant—Also that the said Stephen Dykes hath departed this life and letters of administration of his personal estate have been granted to the defendant Daniel Dykes, who hath administered the same, and that the same is exhausted and is insufficient to pay the debts of the said Stephen Dykes—that the said Stephen Dykes died intestate, seized of real estate in said county, which descended to the defendants his heirs at law—that is to say to the said defendants Daniel, Polly, Mary, Sally, Priscilla and Peggy, and that the defendant Polly hath intermarried with the defendant Henry, the defendant Mary with the defendant Isaac, the defendant Priscilla with the defendant William, and the defendant Sally with the defendant John. The object of the bill is to obtain a decree for the sale of the said real essate for the payment of the debts of the said Stephen Dykes.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test, GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15. XV

IN CHANCERY.

SOMERSET COUNTY COURT.
November Term, 1827.

Harry Pollitt
vs.
Randal R. Hayman and others heirs of Randal Hayman, deceased.

ORDERED by the Court that the report of the Trustee made in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause be shewn to the contrary before the second day of the next term of this Court—Provided a copy of this order be inserted in a newspaper published in Princess-Anne town, three successive weeks, before the second day of the next term of this Court, and also by a copy of this order set up at the Court-House door for three weeks before said day.

ARA SPENCE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 4Z

Magistrates' Blanks

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

PRO PATRIÆ LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, JAN. 29, 1828.

☞The Orphans Court of Somerset will sit on Tuesday the 12th of February next.

The trial of Elizabeth Allen, white woman, for the murder of her infant child, (spoken of in a former number,) commenced on Wednesday last, at Easton, and on Thursday night following, at about 9 o'clock the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal.

On Friday morning last came on the trial of Jim Truxton, negro slave, who was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

In the House of Delegates, on the 22nd inst. Mr. M'Neill's resolution, declaratory of the power of the General Government to effect objects of internal improvement, was brought up, and produced a considerable discussion. Annexed to his resolution was another, authorizing a subscription of $1,000,000 to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

An amendment, or rather a substitute, was offered by Mr. Lee, and a substitute to the latter was offered by Mr. M'Mahon, declaring that it is inexpedient at this time to instruct our representatives in Congress on this subject.

After a warm and animated contest, the resolution of Mr M'Neill was stricken out; Mr. M'Mahon's substitute was rejected, and Mr. Lee's adopted.

Here follows Mr. Lee's substitute:

Resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That we do consider the Congress of the United States, as possessing full power, to subscribe to such objects of internal improvement as they may deem important to the prosperity and welfare of any portion of the community.

Mr. Teackle's bill, entitled, "An act to regulate sales by public auction," does not meet the approbation of the Baltimore editors. They hope it may "be rejected at once."

CONGRESS.—Among the memorials presented to Congress on yesterday a week, was one from J. N. Reynolds, transmitting memorials from different parts of the United States, signed by a number of citizens, recommending to the favorable consideration of Congress the importance of affording some efficient aid in fitting out a small expedition to explore the immense and unknown regions in the Southern Hemisphere.

On Friday following the bill to abolish imprisonment for debt, passed the Senate and was sent to the lower House for concurrence.

It is stated in the Hartford (Con.) Mirror, that Ward Nicholas Boylston, who died a few days since, at his seat in Roxbury, near Boston, aged 78, has left Mr. Adams, President of the U. S. no less than $400,000.

A note of the Commercial and Farmers Bank, altered from 5 to $10 was offered to a gentleman in Old Town. The alteration is well done, and calculated to deceive most persons. We have since been informed that several notes of the same description have been put off on persons in the western part of this city.—Balt. paper.

DUELLING.—The committee of the Legislature of N. York on this subject have introduced a bill declaring the killing of a person in a duel murder; sending a challenge a high demeanor, punishable by 14 years imprisonment in the state prison; seconds, aids, and surgeons to be fined $1000, disfranchised, and to give security for good behaviour.

Recival at Lexington, Ky.—Within a few weeks, nearly 200 members have been added to the Presbyterian church and 287 to the Methodist church.

A Preamble and Resolutions were adopted at a Quarterly Meeting Conference for Cambridge Circuit, held at Cambridge on the 12th inst. with a view to discountenance the practice of treating during the electioneering campaign, by prevailing on the people to withhold their support from candidates who practise this means of biasing the minds of voters.

In the House of Delegates the Committee on Claims reported, that the Treasurer of the E. Shore has rec'd. from 1st Dec. 1826 to 1st Dec. 1827,

On acct. of marriage licenses	$1855	63
Dry goods do	1460	10
Ordinary do	1257	91
Retailers do	4168	28
Billiard tables do	162	37
Direct Tax	6219	13
On various other accounts	2,948	89
Making the sum of	$18,170	51
During the same period the disbursements amounted to	7822	82
Leaving a balance of	$10,348	19

which was paid over to the Treasurer of the W. Shore.

The Baltimore Board of Health report the number of interments which took place in that city during the past year to have been 1498—845 males and 653 females. 417 of the whole number were persons of color—357 free and 60 slaves.

From the N. Y. Morning Courier.

EUROPEAN AFFAIRS.

By a perusal of our regular files of London papers to 5th Dec., it seems to us more and more apparent that war is inevitable in Europe.—The clouds have gathered too dark in the East, to pass away without pouring the bloodshed of war—the elements are too conflicting to subside to peace. The haughty Turk will not tamely submit, without reparation for the scene at Navarino, and the proud Allies will hold him at defiance. The Ottoman will allow no interference in behalf of his subject Greeks, while Christian Europe insists upon their independence. Austria stands in an uncertain posture, the seeming friend both of the Christian and Musselman, yet her tone and attitude convince us, that at the first sound of the trumpet of war, she will enrole herself under the Christian banners. For months we have looked upon the passing scenes of Europe with an anxious eye; we have marked the occurrences one by one, which have led us to the conclusion, that a war, not for power or territory, but for extermination, was fast approaching: the time at Navarino, which the allies seemed more anxiously to strike, than avert, has evidently accelerated and fixed the climax. When our private intelligence, published on 3d December, reached us, we were convinced, not only of its probability, but its certainty. At the time it did not meet general credence, but those who had looked with a watchful eye upon the affair of Europe, gave it unqualified belief!

We claim particular attention to the article from the Globe, (a ministerial paper,) which we give below:

Accounts have been received at the Foreign Office, through Austria, dated Constantinople, 10th inst. but no despatches from Mr. Strafford Canning of a later date than the 6th have been received. The Austrian account (the correctness of which there is no reason to doubt) states the Sultan had manifested great anger, and in breaking off the negociations, had declared that he would receive no communication from the Ambassadors until he knew whether the Allied Governments intended to make reparation for the affair of Navarino, at the same time continuing to protest against the right of intervention. The conquest of Scio (qy? Seyro) by lord Cochrane, was known to the Sultan, and had much increased the irritation already felt by him. He had ordered a levy en masse—had signified his intention of proceeding to Adrianople, and was otherwise busily employed in preparing means of warfare.

An account from Constantinople of the 7th Nov. states that the Reis Effendi informed the Ambassadors that the sublime Porte would strictly observe the law of nations, and take due care that their persons, and the lives of all Christian residents, should be respected.

At Constantinople the greatest activity prevailed in the arsenals to prepare for war. Orders have been sent to all the provinces to call upon the Musselmans to defend their lars and their religion.

We expect to be able to give further advices in our next paper.

Shocking.—We are informed, that on Sunday last a son of Mr. Chandler Humphreys of North Bridgewater, three years of age, was horribly murdered by one Daniel Perkins, a resident in the family, supposed to be deranged. The murderer, finding the child alone, seized an axe and instantly despatched his victim, by inflicting three blows with the weapon upon his head. A more cruel act could scarcely be perpetrated, even under the blind impulse of unconscious frenzy.—Boston Bulletin.

From a Cheraw, (S. C.) Paper.

We witnessed rather a novel as well as a melancholy spectacle in the streets of this town on Wednesday last. Nothing more nor less than a man driving a wagon loaded with four coffins, containing the dead bodies of two wives and two children. His last wife had died within a day or two, and having determined on burying her in North Carolina, about forty miles distant, he had disinterred the body of his former wife, who had been dead about four years, together with those of his two children some time since deceased, and was transporting them to a new place of sepulchre.

Mr. Lewis Werawag, of Virginia, near Harpers-Ferry, has set in motion, at his valuable saw-mill, a machine for cutting plastering laths, and stuff &c. By this improvement, 1000 laths can be sawed in an hour, of such uniformity of size as to make every one fit for use. They will use a vast saving, both of labor and expense, requiring less morter, and enabling the workmen to make a true wall without the use of a straight-edge, float, &c.

Mr. W. contemplates applying the improvement also to the making of shingles. His enterprise and ingenuity in useful improvements, beside his talent in bridge-building, have rendered him a highly valuable member of the community; and we sincerely hope he may meet, from public spirited citizens, such aid and encouragement as will enable him to give full scope to his talents and enterprise.—Free Press.

A lamp without flame.—If a cylindrical coal of fine platina wire be fixed, part of it round the cotton wick of a spirit lamp, and a little above the wick, and the lamp be lighted so as to heat the wire to redness, on the flame being extinguished, the end of the wire will continue red hot as long as there is a supply of alcohol. These lamps would be a very convenient in a bed chamber as they afford no offensive smell, and at the same time give sufficient light to tell the hour of night by a watch.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

On the 17th inst. the House proceeded to consider the bill reported by Mr. Hope on the 7th, entitled, An act to abolish all such parts of the Constitution and form of government as refer to the time and manner of electing the Senate, and the mode of filling up vacancies in that body, so that each county and the city of Baltimore may have a senator, to be elected immediately by the people.

Mr. Semmes moved to amend the said bill by striking out the 4th & 5th sections thereof in the following words:

Sec 4. And be it enacted, That in case any new county should hereafter be made in the state that the representation of the Western Shore in the Senate of the state shall not be in a greater proportion to the representation of the Eastern Shore in the Senate, than 12 to 8.

Sec. 5. And be it enacted, That no alteration in the said proportion of representation shall at any time hereafter be made unless for the alteration and confirmation thereof, at least two thirds of all the members of each branch of the General Assembly shall concur.

The question thereon being put—Will the House agree to the amendment proposed by striking out the said sections? The yeas and nays being required by 7 members, were taken and appeared as follow:

Affirmative.—Messrs. Thomas, of St. Mary's, Gough, Hawkins, Blackistone, Comegys, Brown, Boon, Kent, Stewart, of A. Arundel, Sellman, Linthicum, Taney, Bourne, Parran, Somervell, King, Hughes, of Charles, Millis, Douglas, of Dor. Semmes, Beall, Gantt, Duvall, Wells, Thomas, of Frederic, Kemp, Foltz, Shriver, Thomas, Stewart of Balt. M Mahon, Fitlugh, Walgamot, Retch, Yates, Lee, Peter, Hughes of Mont. Lansdale, Hoffman, M'Culloh—42.

Negative—Messrs. Rogerson, Turner, Price, Shower, Ely, Martin, Banning, Teackle, Donoho, Gibbons, Dennis, Williams of Dor. Goldsborough, Thomas of Cecil, Harlan, Mercer, Watkins, Tilghman, Ridgaway, Stevens, Roth Williams of Wor. Hitch, Powell, Hooper, Hope, Mongomery, Smithson, Sutton, Jones, Douglas of Car.—31.

So it was resolved in the affirmative, and the said sections were accordingly stricken out.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, the question was then taken, That the said bill be laid on the table, and it was determined in the negative.

The bill having been read thro' the question was put, Shall the bill pass as amended? The yeas and nays being required by 7 members, were taken and appeared as follow:

Affirmative—Messrs. Boon, Kent, Comegys, Powell, Hooper, Thomas of Fred. Stewart of A. Arun. Linthicum, Parran, Somervell, Rogerson, King, Turner, Price, Shower, Millis, Ely, Douglas of Dor. Thomas of Cecil, Harlan, Mercer, Semmes, Beall, Lee, Gantt, Duvall, Stevens, Williams of Wor. Hitch, Hemp, Holtz, Shriver, Hope, Montgomery, Smithson, Sutton, Potter, Jones, Orrell, Douglas of Car. Fitzhugh, Walgamot, Rentch, Yates, Peter, Hughes of Mont. Lansdale, M'Neill, Hoffman, M'Culloh; 50.

Negative—Thomas of St. M. Gough, Hawkins, Blackistone, Ringgold, Sellman, Brown, Taney, Bourne, Lloyd, Martin, Banning, Teackle, Donoho, Gibbons, Dennis, Williams of Dorch. Goldsborough, Wells, Watkins, Tilghman, Ridgaway, Ruth, Steuart of B. M'Mahon—25.

So it was resolved in the affirmative, and the said bill being passed, was sent to the Senate for concurrence.

Friday, January 18.

By Mr. Donoho, the petition of Arthur Dashiell of Somerset county, praying for the passage of a law to authorize the erection of a tide mill on Windson's creek, at Nanticoke point in said county; which was referred to Messrs. Donoho, Gibbons and Dennis.

And the petition of sundry citizens of Somerset and Worcester counties, praying the repeal of so much of the act of November session 1791, chapter 60, as relates to vessels employed solely within the State of Maryland; which was referred to Messrs. Donoho, Dennis, Williams of Worcester, Hoopper and Teackle.

On motion by Mr. Teackle it was Ordered, That the committee on claims be instructed to grant a certificate to William M'Nier, for one hundred and fifty dollars, on contract for printing for the legislature.

Saturday, January 19.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, it was Ordered, That the bill reported by him, entitled, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department, and to improve and illustrate the public revenue of this state; be referred to the consideration of the committee on ways and means.

Mr. Teackle, from the committee on ways and means, delivered the following report, accompanied by the bill therein referred to, entitled, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department; which were severally read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

The committee on ways and means, to whom was referred the report of the committee appointed to inquire into the expediency of amending the laws relative to the treasury department, with a view to the improvement and more efficient collection and distribution of the revenues of this state, and the bill prepared, in conformity to the said report, have had the matters of these references under consideration, and beg leave to present their unqualified assent to, and approbation of, the principles.

With respect to the bill, entitled, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department, and to improve and distribute the revenue of this state, the committee propose that the several subjects therein contained, shall be presented in different bills, in order that the sense of the legislature may be taken and expressed upon each distinctly and separately; they therefore, propose the following amendments:

1st. Strike out the title, and first section, and insert, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department.

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of Maryland, That the treasury shall be appointed by the governor and council, an officer to be known and distinguished as the comptroller of the treasury, who shall be deemed the head of the treasury department, and shall hold his office during four years from the date of his appointment, but may be removed upon the recommendation of the general assembly, two thirds of both branches concurring therein.

2. In section 14, line 2, strike out October, and insert November.

3. In the same section, line 57, strike out October and insert November.

4. At the end of section 17, strike out the words treasury department.

5. Strike out the whole of the 25th section, and insert the following—

Sec. 25. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the attorney acting for the state, in each of the several counties of this state under the directions of the comptroller, whenever, and as often as the said comptroller, in his discretion, shall deem it necessary, to visit the several offices of the clerks, sheriffs, collectors and others in their respective counties, having the charge of public money, and to inspect the accounts and vouchers of such officers, and report thereon to the comptroller.

6. Strike out the section 28.

And as amended, the committee recommended that the said bill be printed.

Monday, January 21.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, it was Ordered, that the levy lists returned by clerks of county courts, be referred to the committee on ways and means.

Mr. Lee proposed the following order, which was read:

Ordered that the committee of ways and means do furnish to each member of this house, a list of the gross amounts of the levy lists of the different counties, including those directed by the corporation of the city of Baltimore, specifying each item distinctly, & that the committee of claims provide for the printing thereof.

When on motion by Mr. Teackle, the same was amended by striking out the word, 'item,' and inserting in lieu thereof the words "general charge of expenditure."

On motion by Mr M Mahon, it was Ordered that the committee on internal improvement be instructed to inquire into and report upon the expediency and propriety of authorizing a subscription on the part of this state, of the stock of the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road Company reserved to the state by the second section of the act incorporating that company.

On motion by Mr. M'Mahon, it was Ordered, that the honorable John Buchanan and Beverly Johnson, who were appointed by the governor and council, under the 99th resolution of December session 1825, to collate, revise and digest the laws of this state, be requested, by letters severally addressed to them by the Speaker of this house, to report immediately to this house the progress which they have made in the carrying of that resolution into effect, and also the probable period of its accomplishment.

The bill reported by Mr. Donoho entitled, An act to alter and amend so much of the constitution and form of government as relates to the appointment of registers of wills in each of the counties in this state; and the bill reported by Mr. Mackey, entitled, An act relating to prosecutions for assaults and batteries in the several county courts of this state, being the orders of the day, were severally taken up for consideration, when they were ordered to lie on the table.

Tuesday, January 22.

Mr. Lee offered the following order for consideration; which was read:

Ordered, That the committee of ways and means ascertain from the president and directors of the several banks of this state in which the state holds stock, forthwith, the amount of losses sustained by their respective banks, from each state and stockholder director, from the period of the establishment of such banks for the year ending 31st December 1827, and the amount of loans now out to each state and stockholder director.

On motion by Mr. Steuart of Baltimore, it was Ordered, That the committee on grievances and courts of justice be instructed to take into consideration, and report to this house, the expediency of abolishing imprisonment for debt in this state.

Wednesday, January 23.

By Mr. Teackle, the petition of John Woolford, and others, justices of the levy court of Somerset county, praying the passage of an act to confirm certain proceedings of the said court; which was referred to Messrs. Teackle Dennis and Gibbons.

On motion by Mr. Ruth, it was Ordered, That the executive be requested to report to this house, as early as practicable, the number of arms and accoutrements of every description in the different armouries of this state, designating the number of each fit for use, and of those unfit.—Also the number repaired within the last year, with the amount of cost of the said repairs.

On motion by Mr. Turner, it was Ordered, That the committee of ways and means be and they are hereby instructed to inquire whether the fees of the clerks of the several counties of this state, for ordinaries, retailers and marriage licenses, are increased by the fee bill of last session, and if so, whether the increased amount demanded, and received for those licenses, in part of the state revenue, or the perquisites of the officers granting the same.

Mr. Teackle reported a bill entitled, an act to confirm the proceedings of the justices of the levy court of Somerset county, which was read the first and by a special order, the second time, passed without amendment, and sent to the senate for concurrence.

Thursday, January 24.

By Mr. Ely, the petition of several citizens of Baltimore county and city, praying for an act to incorporate a company to establish a military academy in said county, to be known by the name and style of The Trustees of the Flicksville Literary, Scientific and Military Academy.

On motion by Mr. Williams of Dorchester, the bill reported by Mr Douglas of Dorchester, entitled, A further supplement to the act supplementary to the act for amending and reducing into system the laws and regulations concerning last wills and testaments the duty of executors, administrators and guardians, and the rights of orphans, and other representatives of deceased persons, was made the order of the day for Monday next, the 28th instant.

Affirmative—Messrs. Boon, Kent, Comegys, Powell, Hooper, Thomas of Fred. Stewart of A. Arun. Linthicum, Parran, Somervell, Rogerson, King, Turner, Price, Shower, Millis, Ely, Douglas of Dor. Thomas of Cecil, Harlan, Mercer, Semmes, Beall, Lee, Gantt, Duvall, Stevens, Williams of Wor. Hitch, Hemp, Holtz, Shriver, Hope, Montgomery, Smithson, Sutton, Potter, Jones, Orrell, Douglas of Car. Fitzhugh, Walgamot, Rentch, Yates, Peter, Hughes of Mont. Lansdale, M'Neill, Hoffman, M'Culloh; 50.

Negative—Thomas of St. M. Gough, Hawkins, Blackistone, Ringgold, Sellman, Brown, Taney, Bourne, Lloyd, Martin, Banning, Teackle, Donoho, Gibbons, Dennis, Williams of Dorch. Goldsborough, Wells, Watkins, Tilghman, Ridgaway, Ruth, Steuart of B. M'Mahon—25.

So it was resolved in the affirmative, and the said bill being passed, was sent to the Senate for concurrence.

Friday, January 18.

By Mr. Donoho, the petition of Arthur Dashiell of Somerset county, praying for the passage of a law to authorize the erection of a tide mill on Windson's creek, at Nanticoke point in said county; which was referred to Messrs. Donoho, Gibbons and Dennis.

And the petition of sundry citizens of Somerset and Worcester counties, praying the repeal of so much of the act of November session 1791, chapter 60, as relates to vessels employed solely within the State of Maryland; which was referred to Messrs. Donoho, Dennis, Williams of Worcester, Hoopper and Teackle.

On motion by Mr. Teackle it was Ordered, That the committee on claims be instructed to grant a certificate to William M'Nier, for one hundred and fifty dollars, on contract for printing for the legislature.

Saturday, January 19.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, it was Ordered, That the bill reported by him, entitled, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department, and to improve and illustrate the public revenue of this state; be referred to the consideration of the committee on ways and means.

Mr. Teackle, from the committee on ways and means, delivered the following report, accompanied by the bill therein referred to, entitled, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department; which were severally read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

The committee on ways and means, to whom was referred the report of the committee appointed to inquire into the expediency of amending the laws relative to the treasury department, with a view to the improvement and more efficient collection and distribution of the revenues of this state, and the bill prepared, in conformity to the said report, have had the matters of these references under consideration, and beg leave to present their unqualified assent to, and approbation of, the principles.

With respect to the bill, entitled, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department, and to improve and distribute the revenue of this state, the committee propose that the several subjects therein contained, shall be presented in different bills, in order that the sense of the legislature may be taken and expressed upon each distinctly and separately; they therefore, propose the following amendments:

1st. Strike out the title, and first section, and insert, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department.

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of Maryland, That the Justices of the Levy Court in Somerset County, be, and they hereby are, authorized and empowered to contract, on the best obtainable terms, for the removal of all stines, sticks and other obstructions arising from any ancient wier, or wiers, in [illegible] and to levy the expenses thereof upon the assessable property of the said county.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of each and every person, or persons, who shall hereafter set, or be concerned in any wier or wiers, in the waters of the said county, to remove the same and every part thereof, immediately after the same shall be [illegible] such and every person [illegible]

3. And be it enacted, That if any person or persons shall violate the preceding section, the same shall be liable to a fine of one hundred dollars, to be recovered with costs, by indictment in the County Court, one half thereof, when received, to be for the benefit of the informer, and the other half to the public Treasury of the State, to be collected and paid as other fines are collected and paid.

We esteem this a good act, simply because the 2nd sec. affords a prevative to the recurrence of a similar evil, and those who may hereafter engage in setting wiers, in Somerset county, will do well to bear in mind that the penalty on neglecting to remove them, is not confined to Monokin alone, but to "the waters of said county."—Ed.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

SATIRE.

Mr. Editor,

Quid vetat ridentem dicere veritatem? Truth may be sometimes advanced by the aid of that weapon Satire, which none dread but those who cannot bear its application. Thus Dr. Witherspoon gained a mastery over the moderate party in the established Church of Scotland, as they called themselves. Thus Pascal broke up the society of the Jesuits, and thus some of the most unanswerable refutations of the systems of Pagan worshippers were given by Elijah, the prophet. Thus Horace, and Juvenal and Persius made sport with the follies, and with many of the vices of the Roman court; and Pope, and Cowper have set in a light sufficiently ridiculous many of the weak points, and silly vanities of modern society. The best refutation of the Romish doctrines is found in a satire written by Swift, and the handsomest assault on the follies of the gentry is made by the same writer in his Tale of Lilliput.—True, he sometimes grew critical and sour, and when writing dipped his pen in gall. Humor with things humorous, satire for things needing castigation, are not to be dispensed with, for they are not out of place. But yet none should wound for the sake of wounding, nor laugh merely to ridicule his neighbor. "Love thy neighbour as thyself," is the command of infinite Love and of Divine Authority, and no command should be made so to oppose what are the unavoidable infirmities of the human race. Who would unfeelingly set to work, by satire, to mortify a dwarf for his stature and deformity, a stammerer for his impediment in speech, or a man with one eye for his defect in vision? He may enjoy his savage mirth, but he shall be made sour the better in my estimation thereby. Fancy not fact is the ground of much that is humorous, and scandal instead of plain truth is the foundation of some satire; but that satire has lost all its pungency and has degenerated into downright ill-humor and spleen. But the trick of a mean rehauk, and the mantum of a brainless head furnish some few materials for inoseness, and quid vetat ridentem dicere veritatem." A labared Dunciad might well be dedicated to some of the learned, and a well-conceived Episode to it, be presented to the literary law givers of the day—but no harm would be done thereby. What a Young's "Universal Passion" but a burlesque on Pride, and his "Centaur not fabulous" but a mirror for human inconsistency, and monstrosity, (to give it a name?) What are the writings of Butler, and Cervantes, but a rub upon the endless jumble of incongruities, and the blunders of the would-be wise and great?

I wish the reformation of the vicious, and the consistency of the virtuous—That will they be above the reach of the satirist.

Yours affectionately, T. X.

What forbids a person of pleasing address from speaking the truth?

Editor.

The annexed is an official copy of the Law, (as reported in bill on the 5th inst. by Mr. Teackle,) entitled,

AN ACT to authorize the Levy Court of Somerset County, to contract for the removal of certain obstructions in the waters of said county, and to levy the expenses thereof upon the said County.

1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the Justices of the Levy Court in Somerset County be, and they hereby are, authorized and empowered to contract, on the best obtainable terms, for the removal of all stines, sticks and other obstructions arising from any ancient wier, or wiers, in [illegible] and to levy the expenses thereof upon the assessable property of the said county.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of each and every person, or persons, who shall hereafter set, or be concerned in any wier or wiers, in the waters of the said county, to remove the same and every part thereof, immediately after the same shall be [illegible] such and every person [illegible]

3. And be it enacted, That if any person or persons shall violate the preceding section, the same shall be liable to a fine of one hundred dollars, to be recovered with costs, by indictment in the County Court, one half thereof, when received, to be for the benefit of the informer, and the other half to the public Treasury of the State, to be collected and paid as other fines are collected and paid.

Leap Year.—The following is extracted from an old volume printed in 1600, entitled "Courtship, Love and Matrimony"—

"Albet, it is now become a parte of the Common Lawe in regard to the social relations of life, that as often as every bessezitle year doth return, the laydes have the sole privilege, during the time it continueth of making love unto the men, which they may doe by words or lookes, as unto them it seemeth proper: and moreover, no man will be entitled to the benefite of Clergy who doth refuse to accept the offer of a ladye, or who dothe in any wise treat her proposal withe slight or contumeay."

THE CIRCUS.

Mr. Editor,

By way of softening the piece on this subject, which appeared in your paper of week before last, B. D. wishes to give even the most conspicuous of the subjects of animadversion their due by recalling the Quere it contained, as being needless.

[COMMUNICATED.]

OBITUARY.

DIED, at his residence in the vicinity of Salisbury, on Wednesday the 23d inst. Doctor Jonas Heisroy, in the 60th year of his age.

Dr. Huston sustained, through life, the character of a skilful physician, a kind master, an honest man, and the poor man's friend. He has left a family, by whom his loss is most severely felt, as he was the most affectionate of husbands, and the kindest of fathers.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, Jan. 22nd, 1828.

§§§§§§§§ ON application of Clement §§§§§§§§ Gosler, Executor of Laudale §§§§§§§§ Gosler, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Laudale Gosler, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 24th day of January, 1828.

CLEMENT GOSLEE, Ex. of L. Gosler, dec'd.

Jan. 29. yr

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§ ON application of Jonathan §§§§§§§§ Huffington, Executor §§§§§§§§ of Gabriel Banks, late of Somerset county, dec'd. it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Gabriel Banks—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of January, 1828.

JONATHAN HUFFINGTON, Ex'tor of G. Banks, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. yr

WM. DONE,

ATTORNEY AT LAW,

Has removed his office to the room in the second story over the office of James Polk, Esq. Register of Wills, where he will be found from 9 to 12 o'clock every morning, and will diligently attend to any business placed in his hands. The office of Auditor in Chancery is kept in the same room.

Jan. 15. ay

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Thomas Robertson
v.
Nathaniel Dixon and Nancy his wife, and Amelia Jenkins.

IN this cause it appears to the Court that Amelia Jenkins doth not reside in the State of Maryland and within the reach of the process of this Court, and the Sheriff having returned to the subpœna issued in this cause "non est."

It is therefore on this 28th day of November, 1827, by this Court ordered that the complainant—by inserting a copy of this order in some newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne once a week for four successive weeks—give notice to the said absent defendant that she be and appear on the third Monday of May next, in this Court in person by a solicitor to show cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed for by the bill, and that in case the said defendant shall not appear within the term above limited—the said bill will as to the said defendant be taken pro confesso—and the first insertion of such copy shall be made at least four months before the said third Monday of May next, in the said paper.

The bill in this case states that Thomas Jenkins was in his life time indebted to the complainant for the purchase money of certain real estate sold by the complainant to the said Thomas—that the said Thomas hath departed this life without paying the said debt, and without leaving any personal estate to pay his debts that he left the defendant Nancy and Amelia his heirs at law—and the defendant Nancy hath intermarried with the defendant Nathaniel. The object of the bill is to obtain a sale of the said real estate for the payment of the said purchase money.

ARA SPENCE,
WILLIAM TINGLE,
Trs. copy.

GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 8, 1827. ff

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§ ON application of Henry §§§§§§§§ Lankford, Adm. of Wm. §§§§§§§§ H. Adams, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Wm. H. Adams, late of Somerset county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of January, 1828.

HENRY LANKFORD, Adm. of W. H. Adams, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

LAND FOR SALE,

IN POTATO NECK,

344 ACRES.

The westerly half of the farm late the property of Francis H. Waters, esq. (dec'd.)—About 100 acres are under improvement, a good part of which produces luxuriantly. The residue is heavily timbered with oak and pine, &c., and conveniently situated to market. The farm is washed on one side by the Annamessex river, and on the other it lies contiguous to the Monokin.

On the premises upon the Annamessex side is a delightful building spot, of high ground, in full view of the river, intercepted only by a small grove, of lofty pines, and near it a delightful well of water, said to be surpassed by none in the county. Further particulars are deemed unnecessary, as those wishing to purchase will doubtless view the premises for themselves. Half of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for five or more years—interest to be paid annually.

For further particulars enquire of Dr. Ballard, near the premises, or to Mr. Lazarus Maddux, Potato Neck, or to the Rev. Dr. Waters, Washington Academy, or a line addressed to the subscriber, Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. York, will meet with attention.

FREEBORN GARRETTSON.

December 18, 1827. ff

JOB PRINTING,

NEAT AND EXPEDITIOUS,

Handbills, Cards, Blanks, PAMPHLETS, &c.

Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,

At the Office of the Village Herald.

NOTICE.

BY virtue of a decree of Somerset County Court, sitting as a Court of Chancery, passed at November Term, 1827, will be offered at public sale to the highest and best bidder, part of a tract of land called 'Deer Park,' containing 562½ acres, more or less, the property of Arnold F. Waters, (minor.) This land is situated near Pocomoke river, in Somerset county; it is well timbered, and has on it excellent buildings.—The terms of sale will be, twelve months credit, the purchaser, or purchasers, giving bond or bonds, to the Trustee with security, to be approved by the Trustee.

Sale to take place at Mr. Long's Tavern, in the town of Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the 12th of February next, between the hours of one and two o'clock P. M.

JAMES WILSON, Trustee.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, Jan. 15, 1828.

§§§§§§§§ ON application of Nehemiah §§§§§§§§ Dixon, adm. c. t. a. of Thomas §§§§§§§§ Jenkins, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given.

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Thomas Jenkins—late of Somerset county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of January, 1828.

NATHANIEL DIXON, Adm'r. of T. Jenkins, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§ ON application of Levin §§§§§§§§ Tyler, Executor, of Samuel §§§§§§§§ Milbourne, late of Somerset county, dec'd. it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Samuel Milbourne, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of Jan. 1828.

LEVIN TYLER, Executor of S. Milbourne, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court and to me directed, at the suit of Thomas Jenkins use of Newell Turpin use of John P. Lankford, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:

1 pair pistols, 1 set surveying instruments, 1 hot pork, 1 hat feather, 1 chest and trunk, 2 chests with tools, 2 do. with sundries, 1 old round press box, 1 large stone jug, 1 cross cut saw, 1 old pit saw, 1 demijohn, 3 kegs, 1 bag with feathers, 2 pot racks, 1 lot dried fruit, 1 horse, 5 powder horns and gourds, 1 cloth brush and shoe brushes, 3 boxes and trumpery, 1 lot hooks, 1 pair old compasses and scales, 1 half bushel measure, 1 old collar, 2 old ploughs, 1 fye stand, 1 lot potatoes, 3 wheat scythes, 2 pair sackles and weights, 5 bags and hoes, and 1 lot wool and sheep skins, which I shall proceed to sell as the goods and chattels of Samuel Smith of Somerset. Monday the 4th day of February next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M. at the late dwelling of Samuel Smith, dec'd. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the aforesaid writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

Jan. 11—22, 1828. tf

Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county, Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr Levin Bloxsom, senior, known by the name of Moses & Caleb, situated on Monokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm. Jones and Dr. J. King.—This tract contains about 130 acres—and, besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises.

As no person will purchase without viewing the property a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to

L. W. BALLARD.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TO —— ——

You tell me oft in Pleasure's sphere,
When all around was sport & folly,
Upon my cheek you've seen the tear,
And heard the sigh of melancholy.

You ask when Heaven's best gifts are mine,
Why I should grief's resemblance borrow?
When love and friendship round me twine,
How I can feel the sting of sorrow?

Hast thou ne'er seen a favorite flower
Appear in rich luxuriance blooming,
Yet 'midst its rosy leaves embower
A canker worm that bloom consuming.

The emblem of your friend you see,
Tho' Friendship's wreath my brow hath braided,
Tho' Love has wove his chain for me
"One blighted hope" my life has shaded.
ALUMNUS.

Snowhill, Jan. 21.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr. Editor—

Agreeably to promise I give, below, from an excellent periodical, the anecdote referred to in my last communication. It is at your disposal.

Yours, ALUMNUS.

Snowhill, Jan. 19.

ANECDOTE OF GARRICK.

A sharp-set genius for dramatic fame introduced himself to the late Mr. Garrick for the purpose of displaying his imaginary talents.—Altho' he had scarcely in his life been off his shop-board, yet such was his opinion of his abilities as an actor, that he thought himself sufficiently competent to the arduous task of rehearsing a part before so judicious, severe, and discriminating a judge of acting as Mr. Garrick.

This Cockney by birth, and tailor by profession, thus addressed our Roscius:

"Sir I am your most in-de-fat-abi-gail humble servant—I shall be wastly happy and weary proud of the hopportunity of being made a hactor."

"Well," said Mr. Garrick, "and pray what part would you wish to have the hopportunity of hacting?"

"Romo, sir; Romo, sir;" replied the tailor—"I should wish to preform the part of Romo; for my wife says how I read Robin Crusoe so wastly vell; and as how I have so sweet a woice, that she's wastly sure and wery sartin, I should make a monstracious moving lover."

"Well, sir," asked Garrick, "and are you perfect in the part of Romo, as you call it?"

"O yes, sir," answered Snip—"I am main sartin, I can go through stitch with it from the beginning to the end on't."

"Pray, sir," Mr. Garrick asked—"Do you recollect a passage in that play where he describes a huge Colossus bestriding the lazy-pacing clouds, and sailing on the bosom of the air?"

"O yes, sir," replied Snip, "wastly vell."

"Then pray tell me, sir," continued Mr. Garrick, "when he was bestraddling those clouds, which way would you go, supposing his stride to have been about the extent of a moderate sized rainbow,—I say, sir, which way would you go to work to measure him a pair of breeches?"

"Lord have mercy upon us!" cried the tailor, "here's a pretty job of journeywork! Make a pair of breeches for a rainbow! Why I don't believe two tailors in London ever did such a thing in their lives. And I'm sure I could as soon make a pair for the man in the moon."

"Then pray, sir," asked Garrick, most indignantly, "how came you to think of undertaking my business, when you are not master of your own?"

"Lord, sir," replied the frightened tailor, "I only vonted—"

"You only vonted," repeated Mr. Garrick; "pray, sir, tell me—did'st thou ever behold Macbeth, with boisterous rage, bully the ghost of Banquo off the stage?"

"No, sir," says Snip.

"You shall behold it now then," said Mr. Garrick.

PARODY, imitating Mr. Garrick,

"Avaunt, and quit my sight! thy sheers are edgeless,
And thy goose is cold—thou hast no thread,
Nor needles in those paws that thou dost stitch withal;
What manager dare. I dare – approach thou like the Grim and greasy lamplighter, or armed chimney-sweeper,
With brush and soot-bag—take any form but that,
And my rich wardrobe shall yet escape cabbaging;
Or dare me to thy shop-board with thy sheers;
If trembling I inhabit, then protest me
The botch of a buttonhole —Hence, horrible tailor, hence!"

Avaunt was the word, and the tailor was off in a tangent, perfectly cured of his passion for the stage, which he resolved never to think of more, but to attend to his shop-board

From an English Paper.

THE FLITCH OF BACON.

Most of our readers have probably heard of the ancient custom maintained at Dunmow, in Essex, of awarding a flitch of bacon, to any wedded couple who would satisfactorily and properly testify, that after having lived together a year and a day in holy matrimony, they did not repent, nor had once repented themselves, of their union. This custom was instituted in in or about the year 1111, by Robert, son of Richard Fitz Gilbert Earle of Clare, and requires that if any married couple would take the prescribed oath, which follows, kneeling upon two bare stones within the church door, before the prior and brethren, they should have a gammon of bacon freely delivered to them, which is done with great ceremony.

THE OATH.

"You shall swear by the custom of our confession,
That you never made any nuptial transgression:
Since you were married man and wife.
By household brawls or contentious strife;
Or otherwise, in bed or at board,
Offended each other in deed or in word:
Or, since the parish clerk said Amen,
Wished yourselves unmarried again!
Or in a twelvemonth and a day,
Repented not in thought any way,
But continued true and in desire,
As when you joined hands in holy quire:
If to these conditions, without all fear,
Of your own accord you will freely swear,
A gammon of bacon you shall receive.
And bear it hence with love and good leave,
For this is the custom at Dunmow well known,
Though the sport be ours, the bacon's your own."

The happy pair are then taken upon men's shoulders in a chair, (kept for the purpose,) and carried round the scite of the priory, from the church to the house, with minstrels of every description, and the gammon of bacon borne high on a pole before them, attended by the steward, gentleman, and officers of the manor, and the several inferior tenants, carrying wands, &c. A jury of bachelors and maidens, (six of each sex,) following two and two, with an immense multitude of other people, young and old, from all the neighboring towns and villages there abouts, and several more, that came from very great distances, (to the amount of many thousands in the whole,) rending the air with their shouts and acclamations.

This custom is still kept up at Dunmow, which was formerly a priory.—The last couple that claimed the bacon was Thomas Shakeshaft, in the parish of Wentersfield, in the county of Essex, weaver, and Anna his wife, who went to demand, and actually did receive, a gammon of bacon; having first knelt down upon two bare stones, within the church door, and taken the oath pursuant to the ancient custom, in manner and form prescribed as aforesaid, the 20th of June, 1751: in commemoration of which a picture was painted, representing the procession and containing the portraits of the affectionate and happy couple.

Before the dissolution of monasteries it does not appear, by searching the most ancient records, to have been demanded above three times, and including this, just as often since; so rare are the instances of perfect conjugal felicity in the marriage state!

The chair in which the whorthy couple were wont to be seated on these occasions, is still preserved in the church, and from the narrow accommodation which it must needs afford to an ordinary sized couple, seems well fitted to try their forbearance on the very spot, if not very loving indeed: it is substantially made of oak, and time which antiquates every thing that is durable, had given it a very venerable appearance: but the late church wardens, in their renovating career have had its wormeaten sides thickly covered with a coating of paint to make it harmonize with their other beautifications inside the church.—A noble tree too, upon which from time immemorial the bacon was wont to be suspended, has, in a similar outrage upon "thrift! thrift!" that prompted this downfal, or an impression that the face was past bearing another crop of this quaint fruit of the olden we know not. It may be added, that of the few ancients who have witnessed the custom, we know there is still living one old lady, who remembers the giving of the last flitch, and who partook of the bacon: this was 76 years ago—has Dunmow forfeited its charter? or were Thomas and Anna Shakeshaft the last couple in the county of Essex, who have been able to substantiate the conditions of the claim?

INTEMPERANCE.

Among the mass of matter which we have seen published on this subject, we do not recollect having ever read a piece that we were more pleased with than the following—

From the Genius of Liberty.

It is at once curious and sad to contemplate the ravages of ardent spirits upon the human race. The wit which sparkles at the drinking board, the song which charms the roaring Bacchanalian, what are they but the torch which lights to the early grave, the dirge which is chanted over the funeral piles of the victim of drunkenness. In every direction we behold continual and revolting illustrations of this truth.—The private dwelling and the tavern; the cottage and the palace; the court of justice and the infirmary; the jail and the lunatic hospital, all, all, present terrific examples, awful proofs of it. Has a criminal judge, for a series of years, been compelled to perform the mournful duty of sentencing to the damps of the dungeon the ignominy of the gallows, his erring and crime stained fellow-mortals?——Ask him to trace to you, with the graphic pen of truth, the history of the devoted subjects of his punitive administration. He will answer you in too small words of dreadful import, "ardent spirits."——Ask the physician, who has visited the lofty and glittering mansion, whose inmates are the victims of disease and grief, to give you the secret story of those affluent families, where the mother and children bedew with unavailing tears their downy couches. He will point you to the goblet. Inquire of the Howards and Frys of the age, who have penetrated into the humblest recesses of misery, and gilded with a transient gleam of charity, the gloomy abodes of poverty and despair, what is the great prevailing cause why man is thus "made to mourn."—They will shew the bottle

Do you see yon fine youth, with manly form, and "heaven erected face," who promises to make his aged mother's heart leap with joy at the ripened hours of his manhood, to requite his father's toil and solicitude, to make his country proud. Do not deceive yourself—their garnered hopes shall perish. I have already seen that cheek, yet mantled with the blush of youthful vigour and innocence, reflect the fiery hectic hues of the wine cup. I too knew such a youth. He was comely to behold; genius flashed from his eye; dignity reposed on his brow.—I afterwards beheld him in the troubled sleep of a dungeon. I called him.—He started and exclaimed, "Great God! I dreamed I died drunk, and waked in hell!!!"—He is no more.—Light lie the ashes of the dead.—Peace to the manes of the poor deluded boy!

Look into the cell of that lunatic hospital. Mark that feeble emaciated frame; that noble Grecian face; that deep, but now lack-lustre and fatuitous black eye, as he turns upon his pallet of straw.—It is Mr. ——, in the last stage of mania. He is of illustrious ancestry; his talents were of the first order; his education profound and polished; his patrimony ample.—All the felicities and distinctions of life courted his fruition. But he drank! His character was changed—its fairest features defaced.—Phrenzy seized his shuddering soul.—He has clanked its melancholy chain, till waisted nature promises the only relief from his misery and humiliation, in the bosom of the grave.—His wife died broken-hearted.—His children in helpless infancy, are cast upon the cold world—His beautiful estate is withering in the hand of the formal functionaries of the law.

These are two of the myriads of instances in which, whatever was bright, and brave, and kind, and good in man, have been swallowed up in this consuming fire Such, oh! Intemperance, are thy trophies!—War, pleague, famine—all the evils which heaven, in its wrath, has heaped upon fallen man, added to all those which casualty inflicts, are baubles when compared with the woes, the tears the desolation produced by this subtile, yet powerful—this beguiling, but devouring monster.

And is it not incredible that men, multitudes of men, should be still so infatuated as to persevere in this work of degradation and ruin. Though one were to arise from the dead to warn them, they would be as deaf as adders. Do the young and incorrupt inquire, "What shall we do to be saved?" I answer, shun ardent spirits as you would pestilence and death.—Do not touch them.—You need them not.—Already you are too giddy and impetuous.—Already your young bosoms glow with passions which require to be allayed, rather than inflamed 'Take counsel of the wise man of old: "Look not upon the wine when it is red in the cup." So you shall be blithe and happy while young—prosperous and respectable when old.—You shall cast around you, in place of the deep and dismal shades of wo, the bright halo of peace and joy. You shall honor your parents; bequeath to your children the precious inheritance of your virtues; and taste in a better world, the ineffable delights reserved for the pure and the good.

POOR RICHARD

We invite the particular attention of our readers to the following remarks. Read them carefully; consider them well, and then decide whether you would rather remain altogether destitute of the advantages spoken of, than to undertake the task of reading.

WINTER EVENINGS.

The intelligence and often the success, of farmers, depend on the manner their winter evenings are spent.—The privilege of devoting them to the acquisition of useful information, is not enjoyed so uninterruptedly by any other class. The farmer's pursuits of the day invite him to draw near the evening fire—and if he has a taste for useful reading, particularly for that connected with rural pursuits, we scarcely can imagine one to spend his time more rationally and happily.—Knowing that all his live stock are well fed and taken care of, and harrassed with none of the anxieties of those whose business is connected with thousands, and liable to ten thousand reverses, he can give his mind wholly to the sentiments and reasonings of his author.

But many, who cannot command more than one, two, or three hours at a time, excuse themselves from reading altogether. The father acts on this principle, and the sons follow his example; and thus it is that there are not more extensively read and enterprising farmers. Let us now make some calculation of the time that could be employed in the acquisition of useful information, from the age of fourteen to fifty. Suppose that three hours of the twenty four for four days of each week during the six winter months, were spent in useful reading. This would amount, when he would arrive at 50 years of age, to 11,232 hours. If he read 20 pages per hour, it would be 224,640 pages. Allowing each volume to contain 224 pages, it would amount to one thousand volumes Now what would be the result of thus devoting this small portion of his time? It would give a right bent to his mind—tend to prevent him from spending his time and money at improper places—he would become acquainted with the state of agriculture in his own country, and in others—become more enterprising, and be enabled to use to better advantage the means within his reach, and thus become a more successful cultivator of the soil. In fine his taste for knowledge would increase—would become a more valuable citizen, a blessing to his friends and neighbors, and more likely to descend with gray hairs in repose to his grave.

Description of a young Creole Lady.

We may see a very fine young woman awkwardly dangling her arms with the air of a Negro servant, lolling almost the whole day upon beds and settees, her head muffled up with two or three handkerchiefs, her dress loose and without stays. At noon we find her gobbling pepper-pot, seated on the floor with her sable handmaids around her. In the afternoon she takes her siesta as usual, while two of these damsels refresh her face with the gentle breathing of the fan, and a third provokes the drowsy powers of Morpheus by delicious scratching on the sole of either foot. When she arouses from slumber her speech is whining, languid, and childish. When arrived at mature age, the conciousness of her ignorance makes her abscond from the sight or conversation of every rational creature. Her ideas are narrowed to the ordinary subjects that pass before her, the business of the plantation, the tittle-tattle of the parish—the tricks, superstitions, diversions, and profligate discourses of black servants, equally illiterate and unpolished.—Long's Jamaica.

TRANSPLANTING TREES.

The following directions for transplanting trees, are published in the Baltimore American Farmer:

As soon as trees are taken up, dip their roots in a puddle of cow dung and loam, which preserves their fibres from the influence of the air. When this practice is adopted in the winter season, the plants may be sent to any distance, or kept out of the ground for weeks, without the slightest injury.—You may transplant trees in the heat of summer by this precaution, and with perfect success.

☞The preceding remarks were selected and composed previous to our receiving the circular which follows; yet they will not appear wholly inapposite as prefatory thereto:

He must either be a stranger or an enemy to the genius of Christianity, as exhibited in the New Testament, and exemplified in the temper and life of its great Author, who does not readily acknowledge its powerful tendency to make societies and individuals happy. Where unanimity, sympathy, brotherly love, piety, generosity, candor and courtesy are cultivated, there happiness will reign. Wherever the genuine spirit of Christianity prevails, there will be the existence and prevalence of those amiable graces. Saint Paul had the advantage of a liberal education, possessed a benevolent heart and shewed himself master of a respectful and polite address.—Brotherly kindness and charity were the characteristics of the Apostle John. St. James, in his epistle recommends and inculcates a candid, benevolent disposition, and cautions against envy and bitterness of spirit. The rules for the conduct of human life, as laid down in the Gospel discover so much wisdom and excellence, as prove to be from a divine origin; and a man can exhibit no greater proof of wisdom than to submit his understanding to its evidence, and his heart and actions to its authority and influence. He who is under the guidance and impression of this religion, is pure in all his sentiments, peaceable in his behaviour, and gentle in his manners.

(CIRCULAR.)

Baltimore, January, 1828.

Sir, At the Annual Meeting of the Young Men's Bible Society of this City, held on the 26th of November last, it was unanimously resolved, that an effort should be made, to have every Family in the State of Maryland supplied with a Copy of the Holy Scriptures within one year. This resolution, deliberately adopted, in the fear of God and with a spirit of dependence on his blessing, cannot fail, if it be duly executed, to promote in a high degree, the moral and religious interests of our population.

The Bible contains the most effectual correctives and preventives of vice, the most powerful motives and encouragements to virtue; the only substantial comfort in affliction, the only sovereign remedy for man's spiritual maladies, the only unfailing antidote to death. The employment of arguments to show the immense benefits that would result from the universal dissemination of this sacred volume, would only be a waste of time, when addressing those who acknowledge its inspiration, and have been educated within the sphere of its salutary influence.

The Young Men's Bible Society, in adapting the above named resolution, of course had no expectation of carrying it into full effect by their own unassisted efforts.—They have already been encouraged by a vote of warm approbation, and the promise of liberal aid, from the representatives of the Christian community in this City.—And they confidently anticipate the cheerful assistance of the Bible Societies, Ministers of the Gospel, civil magistrates, men of wealth and influence, and the friends of religion, education and good morals generally throughout the State; and if this anticipation should prove unfounded, they cannot but dread a failure of this noble enterprise.

The plan for attaining the great object, which has been presented to the undersigned as being most feasible as follows—

1. Let each County Bible Society ascertain and supply the number of Bibles, wanted by the Families within the sphere of its operations.

2. Where there is no Bible Society now organized, let the friends of the cause form an association for the above specified purpose.

3. Let the County be divided into convenient districts, and two committees be appointed for each district—one to ascertain by personal inquiry the number of Families destitute of the Scriptures and willing to receive them, by purchase or as a gift; and the other to collect the funds which may be necessary to supply the demands.

4. Let the Ministers of the Gospel of all denominations recommend the object to their congregations, and render all the assistance in their power to the Societies, Associations, or Committees within their respective parishes, circuits, or districts.

We are instructed to solicit your speedy and energetic co-operation in this labor of love, according to the plan we have suggested, or any other which may be deemed by yourself and the friends of the cause in your county, more practicable and efficient. And we earnestly request that you will, at the earliest period possible, make a communication to our Corresponding Secretary, informing us, 1. What measures have been taken in your county to aid our design; 2. The number of Families in it destitute of the Scriptures and willing to receive them; and 3. The amount of funds collected or subscribed for the supply of the existing want.

Our fellow citizens in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and other Commonwealths to the North and East of us have taken the lead in this holy work, and all the families within their respective bounds are now, or soon will be supplied with copies of the Holy Book: and we trust, that the result of the present effort will show that Maryland is not less willing than her sister states to do her duty.

On behalf of the Young Men's Bible Society of Baltimore.

T. B. RUTTER. Pres.
W. L. GILL, Cor. Sec'ry.

Let usefulness and beneficence, not ostentation and vanity, direct the train of your pursuits.

L D Teackle

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1828. NO. 45.

Terms of Publication.

THE VILLAGE HERALD is published weekly at $2 50, per annum, or at $2 if sent by mail and subject to postage, in either case to be paid half-yearly in advance. No subscription taken for a shorter period than six months; none discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for each continuance: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias, issued by Jacob W. Bayly & by James L. Waller, Justices of the Peace, and to me directed, will be sold at the house of Levin G. Pollitt, on the 12th day of February next, at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M. the following property, to wit: one negro woman Peggy, seized and taken in execution as the property of said Pollitt, at the suits of Elijah C. Johnson and William B. Skinner and to be sold as aforesaid, to the highest and best bidder, for cash.

LEVIN D. COLLIER,
Jan. 19—22. Constable.

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of fieri facias issued by Theodore G. Dashiell, a justice of the peace, to wit: one, Elijah Broughton use of Seth Wilkins, 1 do. John W. King use of Seth Wilkins, 2 do. Thomas Robertson use Seth Wilkins, Isaac Beauchamp use Seth Wilkins, 1 do. Ann Beauchamp use Seth Wilkins against John Turpin of Jno., 1 do. issued by Wm. H. Curtis, a justice of the peace, Stephen Coulbourn, adm'r. of Wm. Coulbourn, use of William Wood against said John Turpin of John, and 2 do. issued by William Waters, a justice of the peace, Seth Wilkins against John Turpin of John, and to me directed, a Constable in and for Somerset county, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 1 pine do. 1 safe, 2 trunks, 1 bedstead, 6 windsor chairs, 5 flag do. 1 gun, 2 saws, 12 chickens, 4 turkeys, 5 geese, 5 ducks, 10 barrels, 6 weeding hoes, 1 spade, 1 shovel, 1 grubbing hoe, 3 axes, 2 ox chains, 3 ox yokes, 1 pair traces, 1 meat tub, 2 iron pots, 1 set cypress ware, 1 wooden bowl and tray, 2 ploughs, 2 harrows, 300 bushels of corn, more or less, 7 stacks fodder, 1 horse, 1 colt, 1 cow and calf, 1 saddle, 1 lot flax, 1 hand saw, 1 lot old iron, 1 large box, 2 half bushel measures, 1 woollen wheel, 1 looking glass, 3 cups and saucers, 1 lot old books, 1 lot earthen ware, 5 knives and forks, 1 lot bottles, 1 tin coffee pot, 1 salt sellar, 1 vinegar cruet, 1 lot phials, 1 pair andirons, 1 pair tongs and shovel, 1 arm chair, 1 loom, 2 table cloths, 1 towel, 1 canoe, and sail, 1 cart, 1 yoke oxen and 120 acres of land, more or less, or all the land whereon the said Turpin lives—all which said property I shall sell as the goods and chattels, lands and tenements, of said John Turpin, of John, at his house, on Wednesday the 13th day of February next, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M and 3 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above writs.

DANIEL BENSON,
Jan. 21—22. § Constable.

Somerset County Court,

In Chancery, November Term, 1827.

Eleanor Wailes, by George Hopkins her guardain,
vs.
Eleanor Mezick, widow, and Martha H. W. Mezick, and Elizabeth Mezick, infant children of William Mezick.

ORDERED by the Court that the audit made and reported by the Auditor in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn to the Court before the 2nd day of the next term of this Court—provided a copy of this order be set up at the Court-House door in the town of Princess-Anne, and inserted in a newspaper published in said town, at least for three successive weeks before said 2nd day of said term.

ARA SPENCE.
True copy. Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 xv

T. L. DISHAROON,

HATTER,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. §k¶

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

Certificate.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER,
Princess-Anne, Md.
Nov 20, 1827.

PHILADELPHIA ALBUM AND Ladies' Literary Gazette.

"ALBUMS," says an agreeable writer, "are things, in which are gathered many sweets from the flowers of genius and taste in the garden of literature. They also serve as pleasant mementos of those friends who are absent, and tend to instruct, as well as to please—to enlighten, as well as to amuse."

The Album, to which the publishers respectfully invite attention, has during the brief space of its publication, met with such flattering and universal esteem as to warrant the printing, each week, of near six thousand copies.

The work is enriched with original articles on a variety of interesting and valuable subjects. Fine Arts; Sciences; Botanical, Historical, Biographical and Moral Essays, Sketches, &c.; Reviews of new books; Fashionable and Literary Intelligence; Manners, Conversation, Dress, and Beauty; the cultivation of Plants and Flowers; Amusing and Moral Tales, together with choice articles in every department of polite and useful literature.

It is handsomely printed (8 pages every Wednesday) on fine white paper, royal size, quarto form, making an elegant annual volume of upwards of four hundred pages, embellished with appropriate engravings.

The publishers are determined to spare neither pains nor expense in their ambitious exertions to make their work an acquisition to literature. To sustain its character, they have made (at great expense) arrangements with some of the first writers in this country, and are at the same time enabled, from European Journals which they receive, to make the choicest selections from the richest sources of foreign literature.

To give the parents or brothers—the friends or guardians of their fair readers an assurance of that strict sense of purity, chasteness and general propriety which should eminently characterize a work of this kind, constituting a bouquet of the "flowers of literature," which must form to the cultivated and accomplished mind, a "token of esteem," the most valuable and pleasing—a "forget me not, of the most appropriate, endearing, and lasting nature, the publishers have associated with its former conductors in their editorial duties a lady of distinguished literary reputation and talent, whose watchful attention and acknowledged abilities they are confident will add materialty to the character of the work.

Price, $2 50 per annum, payable in advance. Address the Publishers of the Philadelphia Album, and Ladies' Literary Gazette, 45 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

CONSTABLE's SALE.

By virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued by James L. Waller, a Justice of the Peace, and to me directed, will be sold at the house of Henry I. Riggin, on Tuesday the 5th of February next, at the hour of 3 o'clock P. M. the following property, to wit:—1 negro man Jim, 1 do Dave, 1 woman Anne and child, 3 head of horses, 3 yoke of oxen, 5 head of cattle, 1 carriage and harness, and 1 cart, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of said Henry I. Riggin, at the suit of Ebin Fooks, and will sell, as aforesaid, to the highest and best bidder, for cash.

LEVIN D. COLLIER,
Jan. 9th—15 Constable.

Somerset County Court,

Chancery Side, November Term, 1827.

Elizabeth A. W. Waters
vs.
William E. Waters.

ORDERED by the Court that the sale of the lands of William E. Waters, as made and reported by Ephraim K. Wilson, trustee in this cause, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of next term; provided a copy of this order be inserted in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three weeks successively before said 2nd day of the next term of this court.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15. xv

JOB PRINTING,

SUCH AS

Handbills, Cards, Blanks, PAMPHLETS, &c.

Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,

At the Office of the Village Herald.

LAND FOR SALE,

IN POTATO NECK.

344 ACRES,

The westerly half of the farm late the property of Francis H. Waters, esq. (dec'd.)—About 100 acres are under improvement, a good part of which produces luxuriantly. The residue is heavily timbered with oak and pine, &c., and conveniently situated to market. The farm is washed on one side by the Annamessex river, and on the other it lies contiguous to the Menokin.

On the premises upon the Annamessex side is a delightful building-spot, of high ground, in full view of the river, intercepted only by a small grove of lofty pines, and near it a delightful well of water, said to be surpassed by none in the county. Further particulars are deemed unnecessary, as those wishing to purchase will doubtless view the premises for themselves. Half of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for five or more years—interest to be paid annually.

For further particulars enquire of Dr. Ballard, near the premises, or to Mr. Lazarus Maddux, Potato Neck, or to the Rev. Dr. Waters, Washington Academy, or a line addressed to the subscriber, Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. York, will meet with attention.

FREEBORN GARRETTSON.
December 18, 1827. ‖†‖

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Jan. 22nd, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Clement
§§ SEAL.§§ Goslee, Executor of Lau-
§§§§§§§§§§ day Goslee, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Lauday Goslee, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 22nd day of Jan., 1828.

CLEMENT GOSLEE, Ex. of L. Goslee, dec'd.
Jan. 29. xv

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Jona-
§§ SEAL.§§ than Huffington, Executor
§§§§§§§§§§ of Gabriel Banks, late of Somerset county, dec'd., it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Gabriel Banks—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of January, 1828.

JONATHAN HUFFINGTON,
Ex'tor of G. Banks, dec'd.
Jan. 22, 1828. k

WM DONE,

ATTORNEY AT LAW,

Has removed his office to the room in the second story over the office of James Polk, Esq. Register of Wills, where he will be found from 9 to 12 o'clock every morning, and will diligently attend to any business placed in his hands. The office of Auditor in Chancery is kept in the same room.

Jan. 15. xv

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Henry
§§ SEAL.§§ Lankford, Adm. of Wm.
§§§§§§§§§§ H. Adams, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Md. letters of administration on the personal estate of Wm. H. Adams, late of Somerset county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of January, 1828.

HENRY LANKFORD, Adm.
W. H. Adams, dec'd.
Jan. 22, 1828. k

Somerset County Court,

Chancery Side, November Term, 1827.

Isaac Harris
vs.
William Harris, Elizabeth Harris, Sally Harris, Martha Harris, Isaac Harris and Alice K Harris.

ORDERED by the Court that the sale of the real estate mentioned in the proceedings in this cause as made and reported by Ephraim K. Wilson, trustee be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of the next term of this Court; provided a copy of this order be inserted once a week for three weeks successively in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, before said second day of next term.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 xv

Somerset County Court,

In Chancery, November Term, 1827.

Smith Brereton's Petition for the sale of William Brereton's estate.

ORDERED by the Court that the Report of the Auditor made in this cause be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shewn to the Court before the 2nd day of the next term of this Court, provided a copy of this order be set up at the Court-House door, in the town of Princess-Anne, three weeks before said second day of next term, and inserted in a newspaper published in said town three successive weeks before said day.

ARA SPENCE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15 xv

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT, NOVEMBER TERM, 1827.

Isaac Harris
vs.
William Harris and Elizabeth Harris, Sally Harris, Martha Harris, Isaac Harris and Alice K. Harris.

THE Report of Ephraim K. Wilson, the trustee, having been made—Ordered by the Court that the sale of the lands called Ferry Quarter mentioned in the proceedings as made by the Trustee in this cause be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shewn by the 2nd day of next term; provided a copy of the order be inserted in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne, once a week for three weeks successively before said second day of the next term of this Court.

WILLIAM TINGLE.
Test,
GEO. HANDY, Clk.
Jan. 15. xv

NOTICE.

I hereby give notice to my creditors for them to appear at the County Court, to be held for Somerset County, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, (if any they have) why I shall not have the benefit of the insolvent laws of Maryland.

JOSHUA REECE.
Jan. 22, 1828 k

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, FEB. 5, 1828.

☞The Orphans Court of Somerset will sit on Tuesday next.

The death of Rev. Ambross Marechal, Catholic Archbishop of Baltimore, is announced in the Baltimore papers of Thursday last.

The Boston Daily Advertiser says, The whole property of the late Mr. Boylston is stated at $100,000; which is left principally to his wife, children and grand-children—and instead of a legacy of $400,000 to Mr. Adams, as reported, the only property falling to him is a farm worth about $4000.

STATE FINANCES.—It appears from the Treasurer's report of the receipts and expenditures of the past year, and the estimate for the ensuing year, that there is a deficiency of $90-000 dollars in the State's revenue, to be provided for by the present Legislature.

GREAT FIRE AT WILMINGTON, N. C.

A fire broke out in this town on the 19th ult. which destroyed property to the amount of $100,000;—$60,000 of this were insured. The fire originated in a poultry house near the centre of a square, and only ceased its ravages when the entire square was consumed.

CREEK INDIANS.—The controversy between Georgia and the Creek Indians, which has heretofore threatened such serious consequences, is at length amicably and finally terminated. The Macon (Geo.) Telegraph informs us that a full Council of the Creek nation of Indians assembled at their Council ground on Monday the 31st Dec. and continued for several days. At this council the Treaty made by Col. McKenny with the Chiefs, for the purchase of their remaining strip of land in the boundaries of Georgia, was laid before them by the agent, and received their full assent. The Government is to pay them $47,914, being $5000 more than mentioned by Col. McKenny in his letter to the Secretary of War.

ANOTHER WARNING.—We are informed, says the Worcester (Mass.) Spy, by a correspondent in Southboro' that on the 7th ult. Dr. B———, of that town, received a letter of which the following is a copy:

"Sir,—I consign my remains to be dissected at discretion, at the medical College.

Cause—Tedium Vitæ, or a certain cure for intemperance has induced me to effect it. No obsequies is asked: In the pine grove near Mr. E. Flagg's I shall be found. ———"

The signature we purposely omit. On examination, the body was indeed found in the place pointed out. It appeared in evidence, that he drank a quart and half a pint of rum at once, which produced insensibility and apoplexy, followed by death in 24 hours; thus adding another victim, sacrificed at the shrine of Intemperance, and affording another warning to those who are addicted to similar habits.

OHIO COTTON.—An Ohio paper says, we have recently seen a specimen of Cotton, raised by J. Smith, of Goshen township, Belmont county, which, as far as we are able to judge is of the first quality. There appears no doubt that in a few successive crops it will entirely adapt itself to our soil, and of course become a matter of great interest to our farmers. The citizens of Ohio, when they ascertain a thing is practicable, have a fashion of doing instead of talking about it.—And we give our Southern brethren fair warning, that our citizens will shortly show them the second Epistle to raising Tobacco! We have proved that Tobacco raised by that curse of our national escutcheon, Slave labor, cannot compete with the labor of Freemen. Neither can it in the raising of Cotton.

SILK.—The inhabitants of the town of Manchester, Tolland county, Con. held a meeting on the subject of growing and manufacturing silk. Sundry resolutions were passed, expressing their convictions that the prosperity of the county would be promoted were this branch of domestic industry encouraged by government. A committee consisting of 7 gentlemen, were appointed to prepare a Memorial to Congress on the subject, in behalf of the town of Mansfield. Another committee was appointed to call a meeting of the towns of Tolland and Windham counties, interested in the manufacture of silk, to appoint committees to co-operate with the citizens of Mansfield, and to appoint committees to meet at some suitable place for the above object.

UNITED STATES NAVY.

The documents accompanying the Report of the Secretary of the Navy, show the present state and condition of the vessels built and building, those in ordinary, and those that are undergoing repairs at the several navy yards. The letters A. in italic denote those vessels built and building under gradual increase, and B. those building under the law of 3d March, 1825, for building ten sloops of war, five of which have been completed, and are now in service at sea.

At Portsmouth N. H.
Alabama, A.	74
Santee, A.	44
Concord sloop, B.	00
At Boston.
Virginia, A.	74
Vermont, A.	74
Columbia, A.	74
Independence,	74
Cumberland, A.	44
Falmouth, sloop, B.	00
At New York.
Ohio, A.	74
Washington, A.	74
Franklin, A.	74
United States, A.	44
Liberator, A.	44
Savannah, A.	44
Fairfield, sloop B.	00
Sabine, A.	44
Fulton steam frigate,	00
Peacock, sloop,	00
Shark, schooner,	00
At Philadelphia.
Pennsylvania ship of the line A.	00
Rariton, A.	44
Vandalia, sloop B.	00
Cayne, corvette,	00
At Washington.
Potomac, A.	44
Columbia, A.	44
Congress, ready for sea,	36
St. Louis, sloop B.	00
At Norfolk.
Delaware, A.	74
St. Souvenir, A.	44
North Carolina, A.	74
New York, A.	74
Guerriere,	44
Constellation,	36
John Adams, corvette	00

The commissioners have contracted for the frame and timber, of live oak, for 5 ships of the line, 5 frigates, and 5 sloops of war, of the first class. A part of a frame of a sloop of war has also been purchased.

ROYAL NAVY OF G. BRITAIN.

A correct statement or abstract of the Navy of G. Britain; the number of packets and revenue vessels employed by government; also the number of flag and other officers, complete to the 1st Oct. 1827:

Ships building and fit for service from 102 to 120 guns 24

Ships of 80 guns,	2	Of 84 to 74,	80
66	1	58	1
56	1	52 to 50,	21
48	2	46	73
44	1	42	19
36	1	34	1
33 to 28,	22	27	5
20	12	18	58
16	2	14	1
12	15	10	72
8 to 6,	27	Bombs	10
Cutters	10	Yachts	9
Convict ships	21	Lazarettos	16
Receiving do.	15	Powder ships	2
Police do.	1	Sheer Hulks	6

Lent to East India Company	1
Lent to the Marine Society	1
Floating Chapels	3
Quarantine service	5
Lent to the W. India Dock comp'y.	1
Police depot	1
Harbor service	1
Hospital ship	1
Hulk in the East Indies	2
Lent to the Soc'y for destitute sea'n	1
Victuallying depots	3
Troop ships	2
Hospital & store ship at Jamaica	1
Schooners, Tenders, &c.	14
Falmouth Station.
Sloops of War fitted up as Packets	20
Hired vessels in the Packet service	19
Harwich Station.—Hired vessels	9
Revenue vessels.—England	30
Scotland 8 Ireland	7

Flag and other Officers.

Admirals 53, Vice Admirals 68, Rear Admiral 66, Superannuated and Retired Captains 20, Post Captains 809, Commanders 814, Lieutenants Superannuated with Rank of Commander 98, Lieutenants Poor Nights of Windsor 6, Lieutenants 3691, Masters 540, Surgeons 353, Pursers 668.

CARRIAGE BODIES.

Mr. Jessy Reeder, of Ohio, has patened a new mode of constructing carriage bodies, which is thus described: The rame or skeleton is composed of small strait grained slips or strips of tough white oak, shaved with the grain, about an inch wide, a quarter of an inch thick, steamed for bending into any desirable shape, and extended round the bottom and sides of the body, in every direction, like the frame of a common basket or ribs of a boat. The top of the carriage is made in the usual manner. The inside of the body is covered with carpeting, and the outside with canvas, or leather, which, with painting, make the most light, beautiful and permanent pannelling, not liable, like the common wooden pannels, to split and from which a little paint will remove the defacing of a bruise, the only injury to which they would seem exposed. No mortices of tenants are used in any part of the frame, which is so constructed as to brace every part, and to hold itself firmly together by the help of a few rivets or screws. The whole is so completely and stiffly interwoven, and present at every point so strong resistance, that it would rebound like a basket, from the most violent shock or concussion, unbroken, and it would appear impossible to break, rack or loosen it by upsetting, or any ordinary accident. The frame of a carriage body, calculated to hold six persons built in the above manner has been found to weigh only 25 pounds, less than one quarter of the weight of the common panneled body; and when finished, the difference between the weight of the old and new bodies is from three fourths to four fifths less, or the weight of from two to three persons, in favor to the latter.—Albany paper.

Legislature of Maryland.

From the Carrolltonian printed at Annapolis on Wednesday last.

PATAPSCO BRIDGE.

On Thursday last, upon the second reading of the bill granting permission to Messrs. Krebs and Cromwell to erect a Bridge near the lower Ferry, an animated discussion arose in the House of Delegates. Amongst the number who took a part in the debate were Messrs. Linthicum and Wells of Anne-Arundel, who spoke in opposition to the bill. Mr. Steuart of the same county advocated its passage with cogent arguments, delivered in clear and convincing terms. Mr. McMahon of Baltimore, followed on the same side, when Mr. Donoho, of Somerset county, rose and disclosed his views upon the matter; he depicted the glaring defects of the proposition as contained in the pending bill, and concluded by suggesting amendments which were readily accepted by Mr. McMahon, the chairman and reporter of the measure, after which the question was taken, and the bill passed by a large majority.

Annapolis, Feb. 2nd.

The committee on ways and means have made a lengthy report, by which it appears that the views of the committe correspond exactly with the report of the Treasurer of the Western Shore, as to the probable condition of the Treasury at the end of the ensuing fiscal year—showing a deficiency of $90,000 to be provided for. We hope the wisdom of the present Legislature will devise and adopt sufficient measures to obviate this evil and prevent its recurrence.

They further show, that an annual deficit of upwards of $60,000 would be the necessary consequence of remaining under the existing state of affairs.

To obviate this the committee propose some retrenchments in the expenses of the government and additional taxes.

Under the idea of retrenchments, they propose a reduction of per diem allowance to members of the Legislature—the abolishment of the Eastern Shore Treasury and Land Office, establishments, and the offices of State's Agents. In lieu of the latter, they propose a new officer to be placed at the head of the Treasury, as Comptroller thereof. The salary proposed for the Comptroller we have not ascertained.

In aid of the revenue, the committee propose to resort, 1st, to a tax on sales at auction—2nd, a further sum is proposed to be exacted for licenses of different kinds—such as those to ordinary keepers, retailers, &c. &c.—3d, a general assessment of all kinds of property, including funds, stocks, merchandize, &c. &c. with real property, and a tax to be levied upon the whole.

The bill for the election of State Senators by the people, which passed the H. of D, by a vote of two to one, has been negatived in the Senate—Ayes 2, nays 11.

Mr. Teackle, from the select committee has reported resolutions relative to the further prosecution of the State's claim for interest due on the advances made to the United States during the late war, which contemplates the appointment of an agent to attend and obtain the allowance from Congress.

Mr. Hooper has reported a bill to alter the time of meeting of the General Assembly and for other purposes. The bill provides that the time of the meeting of the general assembly, shall be on the first Monday of November, in each and every year, instead of the last Monday in December as is now prescribed. The second section enacts, that the governor shall be chosen on the second Monday of November in the same manner as now prescribed. The third section enacts, that all annual appointments of civil officers shall be made in the fourth week of November, as the constitution now directs.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Friday, January 25.

Mr. Dennis presented the petition of William A Schoolfield, of Somerset county, praying that a law may be passed requiring the judge of the land office for the eastern shore to direct the register thereof to supply an omission in an escheat warrant issued and executed in relation to certain land therein mentioned, and to issue a patent thereof to the petitioner; and the petition of Joseph Handy of said county, counter thereto; which were severally referred to Messrs. Dennis, Teackle and Donoho.

Saturday, January 26.

By Mr. Donoho, An act to repeal a part of the act of December session 1820, chapter 24, so far as the same relates to the waters of Nanticoke river. And,

An act to provide for the valuation and condemnation of water at the mouth of Windsor's creek, in Somerset county, for the erection and establishment of a tide mill. And,

By Mr. Hitch, An act to Authorize George Parker, senior, to remove a negro boy from the state of Deleware to this state.

Mr. Teackle reported a bill, entitled, An act to revive an act passed at November session 1811, chapter 153, and to repeal an act passed at December session 1826, chapter 114, concerning the town of Salisbury, in Somerset and Worcester counties; which was read the first, and, by a special order, the second time, considered and passed without amendment

Tuesday, January 29.

The speaker communicated to the house, a report from the collector of Somerset county, transmitted in obedience to the act of assembly, passed at the last session thereof, entitled, An act to assertain the number of deaf and dumb of this state, (chapter 255,) containing an account of the number ascertained in said county; which was referred to the committee on education.

The petition of the lumber dealers of the city of Baltimore, counter to the petition of sundry citizens of the state of New York, praying that no such alteration in the inspection of lumber, as was prayed for by the lumber merchants of the city of Baltimore at the last session, may be made, and remonstrating against the unfair and unlawful practices of the lumber inspectors of Baltimore, presented by Mr. Thomas of Cecil, on the 16th instant; referred to the committee to whom was referred the petition to which this is counter.

By Mr. Hitch, A supplement to an act, entitled, An act to amend and reduce into one the several acts of assembly relating to the public roads in Worcester county, passed at December session, eighteen hundred and twenty-one, chapter 110.

The bill reported by Mr Hitch, entitled, An act to authorize George Parker, senior, to remove a negro boy from the state of Deleware to this state;

The bill reported by Mr. Donoho, entitled, An act to provide for the valuation and condemnation of water at the mouth of Windsor's creek, in Somerset county, for the erection and establishment of a tide mill;

The bill reported by Mr. Donoho, entitled, An act to repeal a part of the act of December session 1820, chapter 24, so far as the same relates to the waters of Nanticoke river, was also taken up for consideration, read the second time, and will not pass.

Wednesday, January 30.

Mr. Donoho offered the following order for consideration, which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

Ordered, That it is the privilege, and bounden duty, of every member of this house, to propose and originate such measures as he may conceive to be conducive to the best interest of the good people of this state, and that orders tending to abridge the privilege, or restrict the exercise of that duty, are in their nature hostile to the general welfare, and ought not to be allowed—Ordered, That the order, adopted on the 19th day of the present month, requiring the printer of public bills to exhibit an account of the cost of printing, and the proper names of the reports of such bills, for publication in the journals, without inserting at the same time, the proper committee from whom the same had emanated, is calculated to abridge the privileges, and restrict the exercise of useful labor in legislation; that the said order is furthermore, a departure from ancient usage, imprecedented, unnecessary, and a wanton waste of public money, the same is therefore, hereby recinded and annulled.

Ordered, That the good people of this state are entitled to a full and fair exposition of the proceedings of their delegates in this house; that the views and reasons of all committees, upon public matters referred to them, should be set forth as heretofore, and that orders, calculated to suppress or withhold any information necessary to a correct understanding of measures under consideration, are inconsistent with the rights of members, and repugnant to free and untrammelled legislation—that the order adopted on the 21st day of the present month, prohibiting reports upon leaves granted, or petitions referred, from their accustomed entry upon the journals, is calculated to conceal or withhold, from all succeeding legislatures, a fair view of the reason and motives which actuated their predecessors—that, the effect of such concealment may operate to the great injury of the public interest. The further continuance of the said order is therefore, unwise and inexpedient, and the same is hereby rescinded and annulled.

On motion by Mr. M'Mahon, it was Ordered, That the committee on internal improvement be authorized and requested to invite the attendance before said committee, of the president of the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road Company, and of the chief engineers under whose direction the surveys of said company have been conducted, for the purpose of communicating to said committee such information as they may possess relative to the practicability, and probable location, cost and results of said road, and the comparative advantages of that mode of improvement, and such as the said committee may deem proper and pertinent to the subjects of enquiry referred to the consideration of said committee under an order of this house of 21st inst. relative to the subscription of the stock in said company reserved to the state.

Mr. Hitch reported a bill, to authorize Avra Melvin, of Worcester, to remove certain slaves from Virginia to this state, which was read the 1st time and ordered to lie on the table.

NOTICE.

BY virtue of a decree of Somerset County Court, sitting as a Court of Chancery, passed at November Term, 1827, will be offered at public sale to the highest and best bidder, part of a tract of land called 'Deer Park,' containing 562½ acres, more or less, the property of Arnold E. Waters, (minor.) This land is situated near Pocomoke river, in Somerset county; it is well timbered, and has excellent buildings.—The terms of sale will be, twelve months credit, the purchaser, or purchasers, giving bond or bonds to the Trustee with security, to be approved by the Trustee.

Sale to take place at Mr. Long's Tavern, in the town of Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the 12th of February next, between the hours of one and two o'clock P. M.

JAMES WILSON, Trustee.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

Jan. 15, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Nath'l §§SEAL.§§ Dixon, adm. [illegible]v. a. of Thos. §§§§§§§§§§ Jenkins, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Thomas Jenkins—late of Somerset county, deceased,—all persons having claims again t the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July, 1828.—they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of January, 1828.

NATHANIEL DIXON, Adm'r. of T. Jenkins, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

We had received the annexed interesting address for insertion in our last paper, but for want of room were obliged to defer its publication till to-day.

ADDRESS OF THE COLONISTS

To the Free People of Colour in the United States.

The following, will doubtless be perused with very deep and general interests, especially by those to whom it is addressed. The opinions of this class of persons are becoming very favourable to Colonization; the number already anxious to emigrate exceeds the means possessed by the Society for their removal; and statements like those now communicated by the Colonists themselves, cannot fail to increase this number tenfold.

At a numerous meeting of the citizens of Monrovia, held at the Court-House on the 27th day of August, 1827, for the purpose of considering the expediency of uniting in an address to the coloured people of the United States, John H. Folkins, Esq., in the chair—It was

Resolved, That a committee of four persons be appointed, to frame a circular address to be published in the United States, for the better information of the people of color in that country respecting the state of this Colony, and the condition of the settlers—and

That Captains James C. Barbour and L. Devany, W. L. Weaver, Esq., and the Rev. C. M. Waring and Geo. R. McGill, be the committee to prepare, and report the said address, on Tuesday the 4th day of September next.

Tuesday, Sept 4th, 1827.

The forenamed committee reported the following address, which was adopted and ordered to be transmitted to the United States, and there published for the information of that country.

(CIRCULAR.)

As much speculation and uncertainty continues to prevail among the people of color in the United States, respecting our situation and prospects in Africa; and many misrepresentations have been put in circulation there, of a nature slanderous to us, and in their effects injurious to them; we feel it our duty by a true statement of our circumstances, to endeavour to correct them.

The first consideration which caused our voluntary removal to this country, and the object which we still regard with the deepest concern, is liberty—liberty, in the sober, simple, but complete sense of the word—not a licentious liberty—nor a liberty without government—or which should place us without the restraint of salutary laws. But that liberty of speech, action, and conscience, which distinguishes the free enfranchised citizens of a free state. We did not enjoy that freedom in our native country: and, from causes, which as respects our selves, we shall soon forget forever; we were certain it was not there attainable for ourselves or our children. This, then, being the first object of our pursuit in coming to Africa, is probably the first subject on which you will ask for information. And we must truly declare to you, that our expectations and hopes in this respect, have been realized. Our Constitution secures to us, so far as our condition allows, "all the rights and privileges enjoyed by the citizens of the United States;" and these rights and these privileges are ours. We are proprieters of the soil we live on; and possess the rights of freeholders. Our suffrages, and, what is of more importance, our sentiments and our opinions have their due weight in the government we live under. Our laws are altogether our own: they grew out of our circumstances; are framed for our exclusive benefit, and administered either by officers of our own appointment, or such as possess our confidence. We have a judiciary, chosen from among ourselves; we serve as jurors in the trial of others; and are liable to be tried only by juries of our fellow-citizens, ourselves. We have all that is meant by liberty of conscience. The time and mode of worshipping God, as prescribed us in his word, and dictated by our conscience, we are not only free to follow, but are protected in following.

Forming a community of our own, in the land of our forefathers; having the commerce and soil and resources of the country at our disposal; we know nothing of that debasing inferiority with which our very color stamped us in America; there is nothing here to create the feeling on our part; nothing to cherish the feeling of superiority in the minds of foreigners who visit us. It is this moral emancipation; this liberation of the mind from worse than iron fetters, that repays us, ten thousand times over, for all it has cost us, and makes us grateful to God and our American patrons for the happy change which has taken place in our situation. We are not so self-complacent as to rest satisfied with our improvement, either as regards our minds or our circumstances. We do not intend to remain stationary. Far from it. But we certainly feel ourselves for the first time, in a state to improve either to any purpose. The burden is gone from our shoulders: we now breathe and move freely—and know not (in surveying your present state) for which to pity you most, the empty name of liberty, which you endeavour to content yourselves with in a country that is not yours; or the delusion which makes you hope for ampler privileges in that country hereafter. Tell us; which is the white man, who, with a prudent regard to his own character, can associate with one of you on terms of equality? Ask us, which is the white man who would decline such association with one of our number whose intellectual and moral qualities are not an objection? To both these questions we unhesitatingly make the same answer:—There is no such white man.

We solicit none of you to emigrate to this country; for we know not who among you prefers rational independence, and the honest respect of his fellow-men, to that mental sloth and careless poverty, which you already possess, and your children will inherit after you in America. But if your views and aspirations rise a degree higher—if your minds are not as servile as your present condition—we can decide the question at once; and with confidence say, that you will bless the day, and your children after you, when you determined to become citizens of Liberia.

But we do not hold this language on the blessing of liberty, for the purpose of consoling ourselves for the sacrifice of health, or the suffering of want, in consequence of our removal to Africa. We enjoy health after a few months' residence in the country, as uniformly, and in as perfect a degree, as we possessed that blessing in our native country. And a distressing scarcity of provisions or any of the comforts of life, has for the last two years been entirely unknown, even to the poorest persons in this community. On these points there are, and have been, much misconception, and some malicious misrepresentations in the United States.

We have nearly all suffered from sickness, and of the earliest emigrants, a large proportion fell in the arduous attempt to lay the foundation of the Colony. But are they the only persons whose lives have been lost in the cause of human liberty, or sacrificed to the welfare of their fellow men?—Several out of every ship's company, have within the last four years been carried off by sickness, caused by the change of climate. And death occasionally takes a victim from our number, without any regard at all to the time of his residence in this country. But we never hope by leaving America, to escape the common lot of mortals—the necessity of death, to which the just appointment of Heaven consigns us. But we do not expect to live as long, and pass this life with as little sickness as yourselves.

The true character of the African climate is not well understood in other countries. Its inhabitants are as robust, as healthy, as long lived, to say the least, as those of any other country. Nothing like an epidemic has ever appeared in this Colony; nor can we learn from the natives, that the calamity of a sweeping sickness ever yet visited this part of the continent. But the change from a temperate to a tropical country is a great one—too great not to affect the health more or less—and in the cases of old people and very young children, it often causes death. In the early years of the Colony, want of good houses, the great fatigues, and dangers of the settlers, their irregular mode of living, and their hardships and discouragements they met with, greatly helped the other cause of sickness, which prevailed to an alarming extent, and was attended with great mortality. But we look back to these times as to a season of trial long past, and nearly forgotten. Our houses and circumstances are now comfortable—and for the last two or three years, not one person in forty from the middle and the southern states, has died from the change of the climate. The disastrous fate of the company of settlers who came from Boston in the Brig Vine eighteen months ago, is an exception to the common lot of emigrants; and the causes of it ought to be explained.—Those people left a cold region in the coldest part of winter, and arrived here in the hottest season of our year. Many of them were too old to have survived long in any country. They most imprudently neglected the prescriptions of our very successful physician, the Rev: Lot Carey, who has great experience and great skill in the fevers of the country, and depended on medicines brought with them, which could not fail to prove injurious.—And in consequence of all these unfortunate circumstances, there sufferings were severe; and many died.—But we are not apprehensive that a similar calamity will befall any future emigrants, except under similar disadvantages.

People now arriving, have comfortable houses to receive them; will enjoy the regular attendance of a physician in the slight sickness that may await them; will be surrounded and attended by healthy and happy people, who have borne the effects of the climate, who will encourage and fortify them against that despondency, which alone, has carried off several in the first years of the Colony.

But you may say, that even health and freedom, as good as they are, are dearly paid for, when they cost you the common comforts of life, and expose your wives and children to famine and all the evils of want and poverty. We do not dispute the soundness of this conclusion neither—but we utterly deny that it has any application to the people of Liberia.

Away with all the false notions that are circulating about the barrenness of this country—they are the observations of such ignorant or designing men, as would injure both it and you. A more fertile soil, and productive country, so far as it is cultivated, there is not, we believe, on the face of the earth. Its hills and its plains, are covered with a verdure which never fades; the productions of nature keep on in their growth through all the seasons of the year. Even the natives of the country, almost without farming tools, without skill, and with very little labor, make more grain and vegetables than they can consume, and often more than they can sell.

Cattle, swine, fowls, ducks, goats and sheep, thrive without feeding, and require no other care, than to keep them from straying. Cotton, coffee, indigo and sugar-cane, are all the spontaneous growth of our forests, and may be cultivated, at pleasure, to any extent, by such as are disposed. The same may be said of rice, indian corn, guinea corn, millet, and too many species of fruits and vegetables to be enumerated. Add to all this, we have no dreary winter here, for one half of the year to consume the productions of the other half. Nature is constantly renewing herself—and constantly pouring her treasures all the year round, into the laps of the industrious. We could say on this subject more, but we are afraid of exciting too highly the hopes of the imprudent.—Such persons we think will do well to keep their rented cellars, and earn their twenty-five cents a day, at the wheel barrow, in the commercial towns of America; and stay where they are. It is only the industrious and virtuous that we can point to independence and plenty, and happiness in this country. Such people are nearly sure to attain in a very few years, to a style of comfortable living, which they may in vain hope for in the United States. And however short we may come of this character ourselves, it is only a due acknowledgement of the bounty of Divine Providence, to say, that we generally enjoy the good things of this life to our entire satisfaction.

Our trade and commerce is chiefly confined to the coast, to the interior parts of the continent, and to foreign vessels. It is already valuable and fast increasing. It is carried on in the productions of the country, consisting of rice, palm oil, ivory, tortoise shell, dye woods, gold, hides, wax, and a small amount of coffee; and it brings us in return, the products and manufactures of the four quarters of the world. Seldom, indeed, is our harbor clear of European and American shipping; and the bustle and thronging of our streets, show something, already, of the activity of the smaller seaports of the United States.

Mechanics of nearly every trade are carrying on their various occupations—their wages are high, and a large number would be sure of constant and profitable employment.

Not a child, or youth in the Colony, but is provided with an appropriate school. We have a numerous public Library and a Court-House, Meeting-House, School-House and fortifications sufficient, or nearly so, for the Colony in its present state.

Our houses are constructed of the same materials, and finished in the same style as in the towns of America. We have abundance of good building stone, shells for lime, and clay of an excellent quality for bricks. Timber is plentiful of various kinds, and fit for all the different purposes of building and fencing.

Truly we have a goodly heritage; and if there is any thing lacking in the character or condition of the people of this Colony, it never can be charged to the account of the country: it must be the fruit of our own mismanagement or slothfulness, or vices. But from these evils we confide in Him, to whom we are indebted for all our blessings, to preserve us. It is the topic of our weekly and daily thanksgiving to Almighty God, both in public and in private, and he knows with what sincerity,—that we were ever conducted by his providence to this shore. Such great favors in so short a time, and mixed with so few trials, are to be ascribed to nothing but his special blessings. This we acknowledge. We only want the gratitude which such signal favors call for. Nor are we willing to close this paper without adding a heart felt testimonial of the deep obligations we owe to our American patrons—and best earthly benefactors; whose wisdom pointed us to this home of our nation; and whose active and persevering benevolence enabled us to reach it.—Judge, then, of the feelings with which we hear the motives and the doings of the Colonization Society traduced—and that, too, by men too ignorant to know what that Society has accomplished; too weak to look through its plans and intentions; or too dishonest to acknowledge either. But, without pretending to any prophetic sagacity, we can certainly predict to that Society, the ultimate triumph of their hopes and labors; and disappointment and defeat to all who oppose them. Men may theorize, and speculate about their plans in America, but there can be no speculation here. The cheerful abodes of civilization and happiness which are scattered over this verdant mountain—the flourishing settlements which are spreading around it—the sound of Christian instructions and scenes of Christian worship, which are heard and seen in this land of brooding pagan darkness—a thousand contented freemen united in founding a new Christian Empire, happy themselves, and the instruments of happiness to others: every object, every individual, is an argument, is demonstration, of the wisdom and the goodness of the plan of Colonization.

Where is the argument that shall refute facts like these?—And where is the man hardy enough to deny them?

[COMMUNICATED.]

OBITUARY.

DIED, on the 18th ult. at the residence of her father-in-law, Mrs. JULIANA M. I. JONES, (wife of the Rev. Wm. G. H. Jones, of the Episcopal Church,) aged 22 years and 2 days. Death had early marked this amiable woman as his victim. But by the power of the religion of Jesus she talked of his approach with calmness, and looked upon him as the messenger of eternal peace. A few days before her departure she exclaimed—"Oh! that it was over. O that I was with my dear Saviour." It is a source of incalculable comfort to her bereaved husband, that he has the hope of meeting her, where there will be no more sorrows, nor painful separation. Here is the consolation of religion. Here is one of the blessings of the Gospel.

May the young female especially derive instruction from this melancholy lesson. The rose of health once bloomed on the cheek of this estimable young woman. But alas! it has faded! it is dead! How soon, my tender young friend, may this be thy lot? Prepare then for death, " for at such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

Mrs. Jones has left a husband and infant daughter to bear the miseries of an unfriendly world. Long, long, Juliana, will thy memory be enshrined in the affections of a bereaved husband and lamenting friends.

PUBLIC VENDUE.

BY virtue of an Order of the Orphans Court of Somerset County, will be sold at public sale, on Wednesday the 27th instant, at the late residence of Harry Wilson, deceased—all the PERSONAL ESTATE of said Wilson. Sale to commence at the hour of ten o'clock.

The terms of sale will be made known on the day aforesaid, by

GEORGE HOPKINS, Adm'r.

Feb. 5, 1828. z

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of WILLIAM REDISH are hereby notified to attend in Somerset County Court on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May term next, to shew cause, if any they have, why the benefits of the insolvent laws of Maryland, shall not be extended to said petitioner.

Feb. 5, 1828. k

Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county,

Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also, another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr. Levin Ballard, senior, known by the name of Moore & Canst, situated on Menokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm. Jones and Dr. J. King.

This tract contains about 140 acres—and, besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises.

As no person will purchase without viewing the property a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to

L. W. BALLARD.

Dec. 18, 1827. 8d

CALAMITOUS EVENT. A house situated upon the hill, in Ithaca, N.Y. occupied by Mr. John Welling, was burned down on the evening of the 9th ult. and three of his children perished in the flames, and a fourth was so badly burned that it expired the next morning. The parents were absent on a visit. On their return, their attention was attracted by the light of their own dwelling in flames—the father rushed forward, entered through a window, but was able to rescue but one of his children alive, to tell of the heart-rending cries of the remainder, and then expire.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Levin §§SEAL.§§ Tyler, Executor, of Samuel §§§§§§§§§§ Milbourne, late of Somerset county, dec'd. it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Samuel Milbourne, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 24th of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th of Jan., 1828.

LEVIN TYLER, Executor of S. Milbourne, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

BILL IN EQUITY

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT—Also Supplemental Bill, &c.

Henry Hyland, Levin L. Waters and Eliza his wife

vs.

Levin D. Jones, Hiram Jones, Eleanor Jones, John Jones, Henry Jones, Charles Jones, and Alfred Jones, children and heirs at law of Charles Jones, (dec'd.) and George Jones and Robert Jones, Executors of the said Charles, dec'd.

THE Bill in this cause states that the complainant, Henry Hyland, sold to the said Charles Jones, deceased, in his life time a part of a tract of land situated in said county called Peach Blossom, for a large sum of money, to wit: the sum of six hundred and two dollars and twenty-five cents, and that the said Charles, deceased, gave his bill obligatory for the same to the complainant Henry—that the said complainant, Henry, hath assigned the same to the complainant Eliza—and that no part of the purchase money hath been paid—the supplemental bill states that since the filing of the original bill the complainant hath intermarried with the complainant Levin L. Waters. The bills further state that the said Charles Jones, deceased, hath died having first made his will in due form and appointed the defendants George Jones and Robert Jones his executors of said will, who have taken upon themselves the execution of the same, and that he has left as his heirs and devisees all of the other defendants above named his children. The bill further states that his personal estate is insufficient to pay his debts, and that the same will be entirely absorbed by judgements rendered against the said Charles, deceased, in his life time, and claims of preference. The object therefore of the bill, is, to obtain a sale of the said tract of land called Peach Blossom—that is the interest which the said Charles, deceased, had in the same at the time of his death, and which was devised to his said children or which descended to them, and the proceeds of sale applied to the payment of the said debt—The bills also state that the said defendant Eleanor doth not reside in the state of Maryland or within the reach of the process of Somerset County Court. It is therefore this seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and twenty eight, Ordered, that the complainants give notice to the said Eleanor by publication of a copy of this order in a newspaper printed in the town of Princess-Anne—that she be and appear in Somerset county Court on the first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next, in person or by solicitor, to shew cause why a decree should not be passed as prayed by this bill—And it is further ordered that the first publication of said copy of this order in said paper shall be at least four months before the said first Wednesday after the third Monday of May next, and shall be continued once a week in said paper for at least three successive weeks.

WILLIAM TINGLE.

Test. GEO. HANDY, Clk.

Jan. 15, 1828 9z

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY unfolds into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Dear Sir,

The Gospel of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, may find, tho' the medium of your weekly sheet, access to some who rarely frequent churches, but who will never fail to read their newspaper. It is a gladly solemn sound—a message of the last importance to the guilty race of Adam. It proclaims peace, pardon and eternal life, to every sinner who repents and forsakes his sins and turns to God, for salvation. It is a plan of rich, free and unmerited grace. Grace devised—Grace exercised—to Grace shall the triumphant song be sung by the multitude of sinners who have washed their garments and made them white in the blood of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. This ever blessed Person of the adorable Trinity spilt his own blood to buy the pardon of our guilt—and He everlives to intercede for His people at His Father's right hand. Thence, at the appointed day, known only to Himself, "shall He come to judge the quick and the dead." The graves shall open to resign the dead of all generations, and the vast multitude shall be all judged to Heaven or to Hell by the voice of the Almighty—and Eternity be spent in bliss ineffable, or in woe intolerable.

"Think, O my soul, on that dread day,
When this incensed God—
Shall shake the earth and rend the sky
And fling His wrath abroad."

Yet multitudes who profess to believe the Gospel true—and that there is a Heaven and a Hell, live on, most thoughtlessly and wickedly, notwithstanding. They are living at war with their consciences and with their God, and what can they expect but a wretched death and an undone Eternity? Oh! that they were wise and would consider this—that they would repent! What can the profane—the drunken—the lewd and scandalous profligate expect, but the vengeance of the Lord, if he repents not and that speedily? What can the idle and the Sabbath breaking multitudes expect for their breach of the 4th commandment? What can the unbelieving, who reject the Word of God, and deny the Lord that bought them expect but exemplary punishment, for their inexcusable unbelief? In short, what can any promise themselves, if they will live in sin and folly—and will never come to the irksome and unpalatable task of penitent reflection for their sin against God? They must expect "everlasting banishment from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His Power." Oh! let them flee from the wrath to come! J. M.

SELECTED FOR THE PARTERRE.

FLORIAN AND ELLEN,

Or the Lily of the Manor.

FOUNDED ON FACT.

If ever beauty stole the heart away,
Enchantress, it would fly to meet thy smile;
Moments would seem by thee a summer day,
And all around thee an Elysian isle.

Ellen, the Lily of the Manor, was the only surviving descendant of the ancient and noble family of the Laird of Glencairn. Sixteen summers of uninterrupted felicity had passed by, and the wild and sportive child was transformed into the timid, retiring, yet graceful woman. That form of sylphlike delicacy had now more fully expanded, yet still retained its symmetrical elegance—those dark ringlets still flowed unconfined on her snowy bosom—her large and piercing eye, beaming in liquid brightness expressed every feeling of a lofty soul. Her cheek was fair as the spotless flower, whose name she bore; save when the glow of exertion or emotion tinged its pure surface with a blush soft and delicate as the leaf of the exotic rose.—Never had my eyes rested on a being more perfect, or more majestically beautiful than was Ellen of Glencairn, when habited in the dark plaid of her own native Caledonian Mountains.—Deep and passionate were the feelings of her enthusiastic mind, wild and unrestrained her youthful gaiety. The same eye that now pensively watched the decline of the sun, or followed, with admiring gaze, the silent and undeviating course of the silver orb of night, would, at the well known voice of friendship, glance bright and sparkling in the exuberance of joyous animation. From the lowly cottage of the peasant to the proud castle of the nobleman, the name of Ellen was alike revered and beloved. Though surrounded by a crowd of suitors, attracted by the united charms of wealth and beauty, the heart of the Lily of the Manor remained serene and calm in the exercise of friendship. They came and passed away as the fleeting shadows of a dream; and were as soon forgotten. The following summer, however, introduced a stranger to the house of Glencairn, and a lover of no common order to the beauteous Ellen. Fascinating in his appearance, and with manners pursuasively eloquent, Florian Estrado entwined his image round the heart of the youthful maiden. She loved him with a woman's love—true, deep, and devotedly. He too loved,

"But pure as the dew-drop that sits on the flower,
The affection that glowed in his breast,
As pure as the sunbeam just seen thro' the shower.
As pure as the waters of Jordan that hour,
Its stream by the Saviour was pressed."

They were united, and if there was on earth a being worthy of Scotland's sweetest flower, it was the virtuous Florian. Estrado was a native of the isle of St. Domingo, and though educated in the enervating ease of a tropical climate, was courageous, generous, and of a truly noble mind. But fortune has been said to war with merit to a life of freedom and honor, separate from him.—He succeeded in calming the turbulent grief of Florian, and restoring his mind to composure. It was early on a Sabbath evening they landed on our hospitable shore. The chiming of the bells for evening service soothed the lonely heart of Estrado. As he passed the church, the congregation dispersed and alarmed him, until at last, in the frenzy of despair and grief, he formed the resolution of leaving the wife of his bosom, together with her unconscious infant and flying to the relief of his distressed relatives. Short, yet painful was the struggle, but filial piety overcame even the tenderest emotions of his lovely Ellen. "I go," he said, "but he who rules yon heavens will preserve my love, and thy prayers, sweet Lily, will interpose as an invulnerable shield to the bosom of thy soldier." With these words he consigned her fainting form into the arms of the attendants, and departed from the home of peace and love, to join his countrymen on the field of battle. Too well has the pen of history recorded the tragic events of that unequal strife. Suffice it to observe, that when the din of arms had ceased, and the defeated and scattered remains of the vanquished had sought refuge in concealment, a proclamation was issued through out the isle, that revenge was satisfied, and offering mercy to the vanquished. Those who desired security and peace, were to assemble on a certain day in the principal square, there to receive pledges, (or tickets as they were termed,) of pardon. Accordingly at an early hour on the day appointed, hundreds assembled, and among the rest the father and sister of Estrado. It was long before the pride of the old man could stoop to supplicate, as it were, life and mercy at the hands of such beings. But when he turned his eyes on the pale and drooping being depending on him, the look of patient resignation he there met, caused him to yield to the persuasion of Florian, and, with the youthful Madeline, seek the place of pardon. After the delivery of tickets, it was concluded, they should both return with Florian to the blessed land of Scottish freedom. But alas! too sanguine man, trusting and noble thyself, thou dream'st not of treachery in another! How sweetly did fancy paint, and thy glowing tongue describe, the happiness attendant on thy home. The day of peace arrives, but instead of the expected mercy, assassination and death awaited them; instead of the security of life and peace, the spear and battle-implements were raised against their defenceless breasts. The youthful head of innocence, and the hoary one of age, shared the blow of death. Manly truth and female loveliness fell alike under the murderous hand of savage barbarity. Not one of all that crowded square escaped. Where late was heard the busy hum of expectation, was now the solemn silence of death. The loving and beloved ones were no more. The gay, the gallant, the beautiful, and the witty, were all thrown together in one mangled and lifeless heap. The golden ringlets and raven tresses of beauty were soiled with dust, covered, and disguised with the congealed blood of many a fellow sufferer. At last the carnage was staid, the victors paused from their work of devastation, and sounding the bugle departed to triumph and to defeat. In the intermediate time Florian was concealed in the hold of a vessel lying at the mouth of the harbor, anxiously awaiting their return. At length a footstep was heard, and a voice calling on Florian to ascend.—It was Miguel who, formerly a slave in the house of Estrado, was now an officer in the army of the victorious enemy. Fondness for Florian had induced him at the hazard of his life, to save the only being his soul loved.—He communicated to him in almost breathless haste, the direful tidings of the massacre. With a scream of agony Florian received the news, and in voiced vengeance on his foes. Suffering the first tumult of grief to subside, Miguel calmly pronounced the words "your wife!" They acted as a charm to the heart of Florian.—Starting in perturbation from his trance of grief, he cried wildly, "heaven shield Ellen, widowed Ellen!" and sunk prostrate on the ground. The arm of the sable warrior sustained his drooping head; the hand of the once despised slave administered restoration to the fainting white man. "Thou has treated me," he said "as a fellow being, not as a wild beast. Thou has comforted me in many a dark hour, and now Miguel repays his debt of gratitude.—Miguel shall stay with thee and console thee; and wherever thou goest, my master, thy slave shall follow thee." The vessel on whose deck they then were, was bound for New York, and intended to sail immediately. Already the anchor was weighed, the sails fluttered on the breeze, all hands were busy, and, at intervals was heard the coarse voice of the captain, crying to his men to "bear off." Already had they cleared the land, when the wretched Florian unveiled his eyes to a consciousness of his misery. Miguel still attended him; the faithful Miguel, who preferred comforting and soothing his mortals, and Paradise is not found on earth. Shortly after the union of Florian and the heiress of Glencairn, the rebellion commenced in the cherished home of his infancy, where still resided an aged father and a beloved sister. Exaggerated accounts every day met his bewildered eye.—Report with her thousand tongues on every side distracted and alarmed him, until at last, in the frenzy of despair and grief, he formed the resolution of leaving the wife of his bosom, together with her unconscious infant and flying to the relief of his distressed relatives. Short, yet painful was the struggle, but filial piety overcame even the tenderest emotions of his lovely Ellen. "I go," he said, "but he who rules yon heavens will preserve my love, and thy prayers, sweet Lily, will interpose as an invulnerable shield to the bosom of thy soldier." With these words he consigned her fainting form into the arms of the attendants, and departed from the home of peace and love, to join his countrymen on the field of battle. Too well has the pen of history recorded the tragic events of that unequal strife. Suffice it to observe, that when the din of arms had ceased, and the defeated and scattered remains of the vanquished had sought refuge in concealment, a proclamation was issued through out the isle, that revenge was satisfied, and offering mercy to the vanquished. Those who desired security and peace, were to assemble on a certain day in the principal square, there to receive pledges, (or tickets as they were termed,) of pardon. Accordingly at an early hour on the day appointed, hundreds assembled, and among the rest the father and sister of Estrado. It was long before the pride of the old man could stoop to supplicate, as it were, life and mercy at the hands of such beings. But when he turned his eyes on the pale and drooping being depending on him, the look of patient resignation he there met, caused him to yield to the persuasion of Florian, and, with the youthful Madeline, seek the place of pardon. After the delivery of tickets, it was concluded, they should both return with Florian to the blessed land of Scottish freedom. But alas! too sanguine man, trusting and noble thyself, thou dream'st not of treachery in another! How sweetly did fancy paint, and thy glowing tongue describe, the happiness attendant on thy home. The day of peace arrives, but instead of the expected mercy, assassination and death awaited them; instead of the security of life and peace, the spear and battle-implements were raised against their defenceless breasts. The youthful head of innocence, and the hoary one of age, shared the blow of death. Manly truth and female loveliness fell alike under the murderous hand of savage barbarity. Not one of all that crowded square escaped. Where late was heard the busy hum of expectation, was now the solemn silence of death. The loving and beloved ones were no more. The gay, the gallant, the beautiful, and the witty, were all thrown together in one mangled and lifeless heap. The golden ringlets and raven tresses of beauty were soiled with dust, covered, and disguised with the congealed blood of many a fellow sufferer. At last the carnage was staid, the victors paused from their work of devastation, and sounding the bugle departed to triumph and to defeat. In the intermediate time Florian was concealed in the hold of a vessel lying at the mouth of the harbor, anxiously awaiting their return. At length a footstep was heard, and a voice calling on Florian to ascend.—It was Miguel who, formerly a slave in the house of Estrado, was now an officer in the army of the victorious enemy. Fondness for Florian had induced him at the hazard of his life, to save the only being his soul loved.—He communicated to him in almost breathless haste, the direful tidings of the massacre. With a scream of agony Florian received the news, and invoked vengeance on his foes. Suffering the first tumult of grief to subside, Miguel calmly pronounced the words "your wife!" They acted as a charm to the heart of Florian.—Starting in wild frenzy

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, FEB. 12, 1828.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

It will be seen from the following extract from the Liverpool Chronicle of the 8th of December, that Snelson, the late Teller of the Petersburg bank, has been arrested at Liverpool:

Successful Pursuit.—[illegible] the Discount Office of the Bank of Virginia, having absconded, on the 21st October, with about 40,000 dollars, chiefly in Virginia bank notes, of $100 each, and bills upon some houses in Liverpool, was traced through the United States to Quebec, where he took his passage on board the Mary Cumming, bound to this port, which sailed on the 2nd Nov. 12 hours before his pursuer reached that place. Notices of these circumstances with copies of a handbill describing his person and offering a reward of $500 for his apprehension and safe delivery to the jailor of the town of Petersburg, from which he had absconded, were forwarded hither by a vessel which sailed from Quebec on the 3d November, and arrived here on Saturday, as also from New York, by the packet ship Leeds, which arrived here on Sunday, and Canada, which arrived on Tuesday; in the latter of which one of the Directors of the Bank came as a passenger. Boughey and Roberts the police officers, were accordingly directed to look out for the arrival of the Mary Cumming, which they boarded as she was entering the King's Dock Basin, on Wednesday last; and acquainted the delinquent with their errand, received from him about $30-000 in notes and bills, being the whole of the stolen property which remained. He also quietly surrendered himself, and expressed his willingness to return to America with the gentleman who had followed him hither.

There is very little political intelligence by the arrival at N. York on the 6th inst. Not a word from Constantinople, or from "the Isles of Greece," more than was published a few weeks since. A few straggling articles, of the old dates, strengthen the impression that the Turks were making warlike preparations.

To a commercial friend, says the New York American, we are indebted for the following highly important letter of December 4, from Paris, written by an intelligent man, and entitled to the greatest consideration.

PARIS, 4th Dec. 1827.—I wrote you by the Queen Mab, which sailed yesterday. I take the chance of this reaching Liverpool in time for the packet to communicate to you the important news which has since been received here. The Grand Sultan has absolutely refused all terms proposed by the three allied powers, and even gone so far as to make the most extravagant demands of them. The consequence is like to be an immediate war. The bombardment of Constantinople by the combined fleets of the three powers, and the passing of the Pruth by the Russian army may soon be expected.

FROM SMYRNA.—By the brig Phœbe Ann, arrived at New York, which left Smyrna on the 12th November, advices are received from that place to the 10th November. Capt Cooper informs, that considerable alarm existed among the Europeans at that place, who were yet entirely ignorant of the measures the Turkish government would adopt towards them. Eleven sail of British and French men-of-war were in the port, a force sufficient for the protection of their countrymen, many of whom were embarking their property, expecting to be obliged to flee the place. The governor at first prohibited them from removing their effects, but afterwards permitted it to be done. There had been no stipulation on the part of the governor, with the commander of the Aldents as was stated in the last London papers.

The U. S. frigate Constitution was in port, and would remain until the result of the negotiations at Constantipole was known. Several Americans had taken passage in the ship Harriet, which was to sail for this port with the next convoy.

The Phœbe Ann, was captured by a Greek privateer on her outward passage, and carried into Napoli de Malvosie, where the privateer belonged. The owner seeing that the Phœbe Ann was American property, expressed his regret at her capture, and insisted upon giving her up. This the officers of the privateer refused, and after having had a quarrel with the owner carried their prize to another port, took out the cargo, and released the vessel.

Letters from Smyrna say: When the news of the battle of Navarino reached Smyrna, on the 28th of October, a great deal of anxiety was manifested, and the vessels of war in the harbor moved as close as practicable to the shore, and every preparation was made for embarking the European inhabitants in case of any excesses being attempted by the Turks.—The next day the English and French merchants moved most of their property on board, and all made ready to escape. The police, and general good order of the city, was not however disturbed; for an Indian Courier had been immediately despatched to the capital, within a few days by express. We learn that the most admirable good order prevailed there, and that the Divan had assembled to take into consideration what was to be done. Negotiations have been entered into with the Ambassador, and it is confidently hoped that peace will be concluded. Perfect confidence has not, however, been quite restored. The vessels in the harbor are still loaded with goods of the French and English. Piracies are an every day thing, and we are led to believe that the European squadrons may take some steps to put it down, particularly as their treaty turns on that, and for motives of humanity which has caused already the shedding of a great deal of blood which, however, being Turkish, they believed is nothing but meritorious.

From the Morea we are without news for some time past; Ibrahim Pacha, from the last accounts, was laying waste the country; he will be obliged now to evacuate it; the cause of the Greeks is now, probably, gained, and it may be presumed they will be furnished from Europe, with every material for forming some good kind of government, which is most devoutly to be wished.

Extract of a Letter from an officer on board the United States ship Lexington, to one of the Editors of the New York Statesman, dated.

Smyrna, Nov. 8, 1827.

Among other places, I have visited the Plains of Troy, and hope in a few days to explore the Grotto of Antiparos. We shall spend most of the winter here, and as the late Proclamation of the Allied Fleet will probably put an entire stop to the piracies which are now so frequent in this sea, we hope next year to visit the coasts of France and Italy. If one can be entirely contented when away from his country and home, nothing is just now wanting to complete my happiness except a package of letters from my relations & friends. I have now no time to enter into a detail of my adventures; let it suffice that among other acquirements I have become quite an antiquary. Antiquities are all the rage here. You would laugh to see a dozen Midshipmen, who after spending a whole afternoon in hauling what they suppose to be an ancient temple or town, and bringing off a boat load of their precious remains, find themselves, much to their chagrin, in possession of a goodly assortment of the underpinning stones of a wind-mill, or something of equal value. Every old stone is a Hercules.

The news of the great naval battle at Navarino arrived here on the 28th. The Christians in the country immediately fled to the city, and those in the city removed with their effects to the wharves, where the English and French men-of-war were drawn up, ready to fire upon the town in case a massacre should take place. For several days great consternation prevailed among the Christians. Great preparations were made by the Turks; the baazars were closed, all business was suspended, and great quantities of military stores collected. As yet, nothing has been attempted, and the alarm has in some measure subsided; fear alone has probably restrained them so long. Despatches have been received by the bashaw from Constantinople, the contents of which are kept secret, and great fears are entertained that as soon as the Grand Seignor shall have completed his preparations, a general massacre of all the Christians will take place. All are now looking anxiously for arrivals from Constantinople Cochrane landed about 3,000 Greeks on the island of Scio. All the Turks except about 400 who shut themselves up in their fortresses, were murdered. The forts still held out.—These are the facts.

Deaths from burning Charcoal. Two coloured persons, man and wife, by the name of Williams, were found dead in their bed, at the house of a Mr. Heath in East-Hartford, on Thursday morning last. Previous to their retiring to rest, they placed a kettle of burning charcoal in the room in which there was no fire-place, which was undoubtedly the cause of their death.

The Philadelphia Aurora says, the American Dictionary of the English language, by Noah Webster, LL. D. which is much looked for, is in press, and will be published as soon as a careful reading of the proof sheets will admit. It is supposed that the work will be completed about the close of the present year.

Baltimore, Feb. 4.

FATAL DUEL.—On Saturday morning last, Mr. Bond Martin, and Mr. —— Carr, students of Medicine, left the city for "the field of honor," near Bladensburg, to settle a dispute of a trifling nature in its origin—they met at eight paces, when Mr. Martin received, on the first fire, the ball of his antagonist in his forehead, he fell and expired on the ground. His body was brought to Baltimore on Saturday evening, and has since been conveyed to the Eastern Shore of Md. the residence of his father, Chief Justice Martin. Mr. Carr is from Virginia.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Friday, February 1.

The several bills, passed by this house yesterday, of the following titles, were sent to the senate for concurrence, viz.

A supplement to an act, entitled, An act to amend and reduce into one the several acts of assembly relating to the public roads in Worcester county, passed at December sesion 1821, chapter 110.

An act to alter the present mode of appointing the justices of the levy court of Dorchester county, so that each election district may have one member.

On motion by Mr. Goldsborough, it was Ordered, That the clerk of the council be requested to inform this house, what volumes of the laws of Maryland, also of the Maryland Reports, and also of the acts of congress, have been distributed to the several counties, and individuals entitled to receive the same.

Mr. Turner, reported a bill entitled, An act to restrain the evil practices of persons of color in this state, on the sabbath day. Which said bill was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table.

The reports of the committee on pensions and revolutionary claims, to whom were referred the respective petitions of Thomas White, of Baltimore county, and Thomas Wimber, of Worcester county, made on 29th ultimo, were taken up for consideration, and severally read the second time. The said reports were severally concurred in, and the resolutions therein contained assented to, and sent to the senate for concurrence.

The house proceeded to consider the order submitted by Mr. Donoho on the 30th ult, proposing to rescind the order adopted by the house on the 19th, requiring an exhibition of the expense of printing bills and reports, and of the members who reported the same; and also the order adopted on the 23d respecting bills or resolutions reported, when accompanied by preambles, arguments or reasonings; when, on motion by Mr. Thomas of Cecil, the house was called, and the absent members sent for. Before the door keeper returned, the speaker announced that the hour had arrived for taking up the orders of the day, which having precedence to other business, the further consideration of said order was therefore deferred.

According to the order of the day, the house proceeded to consider the bill reported by Mr. Sellman, entitled, An act to alter and abolish so much of the constitution as relates to the election of governor and council, by ballot and to introduce in. lieu thereof, the viva voce system; and the same having been read the second time,

On motion by Mr. Mackey, the question was put, That the further consideration of said bill be referred to the fourth day of July next? And the yeas and nays, being required by seven members, were taken and appear as follow:

Affirmative—Messrs. Gough, Taney, Bourne, Somervell, Rogerson, King, Hughes of Car. Turner, Price, Shower, Ely, Banning, Teackle, Gibbons, Dennis, Williams of Dorch. Goldsborough, Mackey, Harlan, Mercer, Semmes, Beall, Gantt, Duvall, Watkins, Stevens, Powell, Kemp, Holtz, Shriver, Potter, Jones, Orrell, Douglas of Car. Walgamot, Reatch, Millis, Yates, M'Neill, Hoffman, 39.

Negative—Messrs. Speaker, Boon, Thomas of St. M. Hawkins, Comegys, Kent, Stewart of A. Arun. Sellman, Linthicum, Parran, Lloyd, Martin, Donoho, Thomas of Cecil, Wells, Tilghman, Ruth, Hitch, Hooper, Thomas, of Fred. Hope, Montgomery, Smithson, Sutton, Steuart of B. M'Mahon, Fitzhugh, Lee, Peter, Hughes of Mont. Lansdale, M'Culloh, 3[illegible]

So it was resolved in the affirmative.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, the further consideration of the bill reported by him from the committee on ways and means, entitled, An act to regulate sales by public auction, which had been made one of the orders of this day, was postponed, committed to a committee of the whole house, made the order of the day for Monday next, the fourth instant, and ordered to be printed.

Saturday, February 2.

The Speaker communicated to the house a letter from the honourable Samuel Smith, one of the senators of this state in the senate of the United States, which was read, and is as follows:

Washington, 31st Jan., 1828.

Sir,

I have sent by the present mail the report of the committee on military affairs, and on the claims of South Carolina, and the bill predicated thereon. It amply sustains the claim for interest unpaid and for rejecting items for principal. I have thought it possible that it may be useful to Maryland, and have therefore done myself the honour to forward it.

With the highest respect,
I have the honour to be,
Your most obedient serv't
S. SMITH.

Hon'ble, the Speaker H. of Delegates.

By Mr. Hooper, the petition of Charles Farrow, keeper of the public gaol in Worcester county, praying for a law providing compensation for his trouble, and reimbursment of his expenditures, in taking care of, and victualling, cert in negroes confined therein, who had petitioned for freedom; which was referred to the committee on grievances and courts of justice.

By Mr. Ely, the memorial of sundry citizens of Baltimore county, praying for an amendment of the laws of this state, in respect to licenses granted to keepers of ordinaries, retailers of spiritous liquors, dry goods and merchandise; which was referred to the committee on ways and means.

The house resumed the consideration of the unfinished business of yesterday, in referrence to the order offered by Mr. Donoho on the 30th ultimo, proposing to rescind certain orders of the house adopted on the 19th and 23d respecting the expense of printing bills and reports, and the members by whom they may be reported, and also concerning such bills or resolutions as may be reported and accompanied by preambles, arguments or reasonings; when, on motion by Mr. M'Mahon, the said order was laid on the table.

Monday, February 4.

Petitions, of the following, titles, were this day severally presented:

By Mr. Williams of Worcester, the petition of sundry citizens of Worcester and Somerset counties, praying for a law authorizing the building of a draw bridge across the Pocomoke river, at a place commonly called and known by the name of Stephen's Ferry.

And the petition of sundry other citizens of Worcester county, praying for a law establishing a public ferry across the Pocomoke river, near the village of New-Town, at a place called and known by the name of Stephen's Ferry, where it has been heretofore kept.

Ordered, That the said petitions be severally referred to a select committee of five, consisting of Messrs. Williams of Worcester, Hitch, Hooper, Teackle and Gibbons.

By Mr. Teackle, chairman of the committee on education, An act supplemental to an act entitled, An act to provide for the public instruction of youth in primary schools, throughout this state.

On motion by Mr. Semmis, the order of the day in regard to the bill reported by Mr. Teackle from the committee on ways and means, entitled, An act to regulate sales by public auction, which had been committed to a committee of the whole house, was postponed, & the bill laid on the table.

Tuesday, February 5.

On motion by Mr. Donoho, the bill reported by him, entitled, An act to repeal part of an act of assembly therein mentioned, was recommitted to the committee from which it was reported, for the purpose of amendment.

On motion by Mr. Fitzhugh, it was Ordered, That the committee on the militia inquire into the expediency of providing by law, that all persons liable to perform militia duty, may obtain an exemption therefrom, during peace, on paying a sum of money annually for the benefit of the common schools of this state; and that said committee report on the expediency of encouraging the formation of volunteer uniform companies, by exempting from liability to perform militia duty, except in time of war, all persons who shall have been a member of a regular uniform company, and performed duty therein for a period not less than — years from the passage of the law.

By Mr. Steuart of Baltimore, from the committee on ways and means, An act to ascertain and fix the allowance of members of the senate, members of the house of delegates, and their respective officers, and the salaries of certain officers of the state, therein mentioned. This bill on motion by Mr. M'Mahon, was made the order of the day for Tuesday next the twelfth instant.

On motion by Mr Semmes the house, proceeded to consider the report of the select committee who were authorized and directed, by an order of the house, to inquire into the situation of the states claim on the government of the United States, for interests on monies expended in the late war, and to report to this house the measures which may seem proper and necessary for the recovery of the said claim delivered by Mr. Teackle on the 31st ultimo.

The house proceeded to consider the bill reported by Mr. Turner, entitled, An act to restrain the evil practices of persons of color in this state, on the Sabbath day.

After some debate, on motion by Mr. Thomas of Frederick, the question was taken, That the further consideration of said bill, with the amendments, be referred to the next general assembly? And it was resolved in the affirmative.

Wednesday, February 6.

By Mr. Hitch, the petition of Elizabeth Bishop, of Worcester county, praying for a law to authorize the levy court of said county, to levy a sum annually upon the assessable property thereof, which may be sufficient in amount to enable her to supply herself and four small children with the necessary means of life.

By Mr. Steuart of Baltimore; the memorial of sundry merchants of Baltimore, and dealers in spirituous liquors, praying for the rejection of the bill introduced into this house, entitled, An act to regulate the guaging of casks and the inspection of domestic distilled liquors in this state; which was referred to the committee who prepared and reported said bill.

By Mr. Dennis, the petition of sundry citizens of Somerset county, praying that the several counties of this state may be relieved from the burthen of supporting indigent, superannuated, and infirm, manumitted negroes; which was referred to a select committee of five, consisting of Messrs. Dennis, Hawkins, Goldsborough, Fitzhugh and Mercer.

Mr Teackle having asked and obtained leave to introduce a bill to be entitled, An act to provide for the cession of territorial jurisdiction of Little Watts' Island and at Clay Island, in Somerset county, for the erection of light houses thereon, or at such other point or points in the said county, as may be selected by the proper officers of the government of the United States for the erection of the said light houses. It was, on his motion, Ordered, That a select committee of three members, consisting of Messrs. Teackle, Dennis and Donoho, be appointed to prepare and report the same.

On motion by Mr. Lee, it was Ordered, That the committee on ways and means be instructed to inquire into the present situation of the Washington Monument, the number, nature and amount of contracts entered into for its completion; and if in their judgement it be consistent with the faith of the state so to do, to report a bill providing for the suspension of that work for five years, and the application of the fund now used for its execution to the general purpose of the state, by placing the same under the direction of the treasurer of the Western Shore for the period of five years.

By Mr. Teackle, as chairman of the committee on education, An additional supplement to an act, entitled, An act to povide for the public instruction of youth in primary schools throughout this state. And,

An act to assign and appropriate certain revenues for the support of public instruction in primary schools, of all the youth throughout this state.

By Mr. Donoho, An act to amend and reduce into system the several acts concerning elections.

Mr. Donoho, chairman of the committee to whom was yesterday recommitted for the purpose of amendment, the bill that had been reported by him, entitled, An act to repeal part of an act of assembly therein mentioned, reported verbally, that the said committee, having considered and amended said bill, were of opinion, the same ought to pass with the amendment in grafted therein by the committee.

Thursday, February 7.

By Mr. Semmes, chairman of the committee on ways and means, An act for the general valuation and assessment of property in this state.

By Mr. Teackle, from the committee on ways and means. An act to establish the FISCAL BANK of the state of Maryland.

The hour havivg arrived for taking up the orders of the day, On motion be Mr. Semmis, the house proceeded to consider the order of the day postponed last Monday, in regard to the bill, reported from the committee on ways and means, to whom it had been recommited, entitled, An act to regulate sales by public auction, and which was, on the first instant, committed to a committee of the whole house.—Whereupon, the house accordingly resolved itself into a committee of the whole house, on said bill; and, after some time spent therein, the speaker resumed the chair, when, Mr. Lee, the chairman, reported, that the committee have, according to order, had the said bill under consideration, and that he was directed to report the same to the house with sundry amendments proposed thereto, and adopted by the committee.

From the American Farmer.

Mode of Raising Blooded Horses.

Mr. Skinner,

Sir,—I have to request you to publish the following mode of raising blooded horses; as pursued by Mr. William E. Brodnaxe, of Brunswick county, Va., the most successful breeder in that state, according to the extent of his stud. This mode of raising colts needs no better sanction than to mention the fact that Mr. Broadnaxe, by pursuing it, has made an extensive fortune in the period of thirty odd years, during which time the sales of his colts and horses, (as he informed me,) have averaged him from four to five hundred dollars. A single brood mare of his has, in the course of ten years, from the produce of her colts sired by Sir Archie, yielded him, in amount, about eight thousand dollars.

These facts go to shew the value of the blood horse, and to convince landed proprietors of the importance of turning their attention to the rearing of this noble animal; for while every kind of property, particularly the produce of our farms, has greatly fallen in value, yet the price of fine saddle, harness and turf horses remain unimpaired, and will continue to be so.

The success of this mode of raising blooded colts is not more to be admired than its great simplicity; it should, however, be mentioned that Mr. B. has been greatly aided in this mode of rearing blooded horses by using no other farm stock for work except mules. The value of these animals as work stock, from an experience of thirty years or more, he speaks of in the highest terms, and they have enabled him to devote all the finer produce of his farm, such as hay, oats, fodder, &c., to the rearing of his blood horses, while the coarser produce, such as rye, corn, straw and shucks, &c., have sufficed to keep his mules, from their hardy nature, in good plight.

If Mr. B. has been scrupulous in any one thing, it was his particular care to breed from only thorough bred stallions of the finest form, so that those who wish to meet with his success must imitate his example.

Author of 'Annals of the Turf.' Pierson county, N. C. Jan. 10, 1828.

"In the first place, be particular in selecting a good stock to breed from. When the mare is near foaling, let her be to herself, and if early in the season, let her and her colt be turned in a lot, (of wheat I prefer) Wean the colt the first of October in a stable, until it is done snikering after its dam; then turn it in a lot; if you have more than one, they will do best together.

"Stable them at night and turn them out in the day, except in very [illegible] weather; force them all you can the first winter—to do this, their principal food should be cut oats moistened and a due proportion of corn meal sprinkled over and mixed with them. Most foals are apt to be too delicate; forcing them and keeping them warm at night will increase the size of their limbs in proportion to the weight of their bodies.—After they are one year old, they should not be kept so fat, nor yet permitted to get poor. A stud colt, which is intended to be kept as such, should be separated from other horses at a year old, and stabled of nights; his rack and manger should be so high as to strain him a little to get food; the windows of the stable should also be high, as he will not look out at them: by these means his shoulders will be thrown back and his withers raised.—If it be wished to increase his quarters, enlarge his muscles and other material parts, keep him in the stable frequently for several days together, which will animate him; then turn him out in a lot, and encourage him to run and exert himself all you can, as his parts will require size and strength in proportion to the use made of them.

"I would recommend a mare of good form and thorough blood, though she cost the most, because her colts would cost no more to raise them than those from an ordinary mare, and would probably sell for more than three or four times as much. The reason I would wean in a stable is, that in the usual way of weaning in corn fields, &c., the colts run themselves poor before they are weaned. I prefer wheat lots for mares and colts, because they like it better than any thing else, and I think it agrees better with them. I find oats made use of as above stated, not only the most healthy and best, but also the cheapest food for mares and colts. In pursuing the course which has been laid down, I obtained the following results:

"I selected a mare which I knew to be of good stock, but from improper raising was only four feet six inches high, and very delicate: The first removal from her was four feet ten inches; the second removal five feet; the third was five feet two inches; the fourth was five feet six inches.

W. E. BRODNAXE."

ECONOMY.—A celebrated French writer on political economy, M. Say, tells this story: "Being in the country, I had an example of one of those small losses which a family is exposed to through negligence. From the want of small value the wicket of a barnyard, looking to the fields, was often left open; every one who went through drew the door to, but having no means to fasten it, it remained flapping; the poultry escaped and were lost. One day a fine pig got out and run into the woods. Immediately all the world was after it; the gardener, the cook, the dairy-maid, all ran to recover the swine. The gardener got sight of him first, and jumping over a ditch to stop him, he sprained his ancle, and was confined a fortnight to the house. The cook, on her return, found all the linen, she had left to dry by the fire burned; and the dairy-maid having run off before she tied up the cows, one of them broke the leg of a colt in the stable. The gardener's lost time was worth 20 crowns, valuing his pain at nothing; the linen burned, and the cloth spoiled, were worth as much more. Here is a loss of forty crowns, and much pain, trouble, and vexation, and inconvenience, for the want of a latch, which would not cost three-pence, and this loss, through careless neglect, falls on a family little able to support it.

PROGRESS OF FLORIDA.

Under this head, we find in the last St. Augustine Herald a topographical description of four new towns, which have sprung up in rapid succession, under the genial influence of our republican institutions. We give the description in the editor's own words:

Aspalaga.—A new town laid off recently, and located on the east side of the Appalachicola river, 75 miles from the Bay, and 8 miles below the confluence of the Flint and Chattahouchie rivers. It is represented to possess superior advantages for situation; and has a water communication to the Gulf of Mexico, for vessels drawing 9 feet water. A town here, will undoubtedly enjoy superior advantages, as it must command much of the trade of the upper region of country, and of that which lies contiguous to the streams which contribute to swell the Flint and Chattahouchie rivers. This location is about 70 miles from Tallahassee.

Magnolia, is a new town laid out on the St. Marks river, about 8 miles above Fort St. Marks, and 15 miles from Tallahassee, in a southern direction. Vessels drawing eight feet water can navigate this river, up to the town.—The town is located on a high and healthy situation, and possesses the advantage of Sulphur Springs in its immediate vicinity.

Rockhaven, is situated on a small branch emptying into the St. Marks, 6 or 7 miles above the confluence of the Wakully with that river, and is about 13 miles south of Tallahassee.—The stream upon which this town is located, is navigable by boats drawing not over three feet water.

Monticello, the seat of justice of Jefferson county, is situated 2 1-2 miles from Mickasury lake; 29 miles N. E. of Tallahassee; 24 from St. Marks; 26 from Magnolia; and 8 miles from the Georgian line. It is located at the extreme N. W. corner of the county, and the surrounding country is stated to be well adapted to the cultivation of the CANE.

PUNCHES.—A short time since a fellow, named Punches, who resided near Seneca Falls, after passing away a forged note of hand for a considerable sum, suddenly decamped.—The person who had cashed the note, immediately on learning it to be a forgery, mounted his horse, a valuable and spirited animal and followed on the track of the fugitive near two hundred miles. At last he arrived, in the night, at a house where he learned the rogue had made a halt; but it being late, and he much fatigued, he retired to rest thinking to be up by times on the ensuing morning, and prepare himself with a proper warrant for the light handed Mr. Punches. Mr. Punches, however, did not feel equally inclined to court 'the sable goddess;' but learning, by some means or other, that he was followed, he stole secretly out of the house, mounted his pursuer's horse, and made good his retreat! The discomfitted and disconsolate note changer, cursing in heart the honest Mr. Punches, who had thus trumped his trick, returned to his home on an animal which he was obliged to purchase for the occasion. Soon after hearing of a person taken up in Erie, Pennsylvania, for burglary, he was induced, from the description, to believe him no other than the dexterous Mr. Punches, and despatched a person, who knew his horse to recover the property. On the arrival of this messenger, he found likewise three other claimants, our honest Mr Punches having, in the course of the day when he was arrested, sold him to no less than three persons, and received payment from each. He had also broken into several stores before he was arrested.—N. Y. Tel.

SUGAR.—the history of sugar appears to be enveloped in a cloud of considerable obscurity. It was doubtless a production of the East and introduced into Europe from Asia at an early period, though the precise time is not accurately ascertained.—In our journal of the 5th inst. we gave the opinions of some of the early writers on the article into Great Britain, where it was decried by them and represented as the cause of the scurvy, consumption, &c. Modern experience is so much in contradiction to those opinions, and the use of sugar is so great and extensive at the present day, that it may not be uninteresting to give a more particular account of it.

The English word sugar, as well as most of the modern European names, appears to be derived from the Arabic sukker, or shucker. The Persians and Turks also call it sheker. Hence, we have the names of the same article, in Italian, Zucchero, in Spanish Azucar, in French Sucre, in German Zucker, in Dutch, Suycker, in English Sugar.

The Greeks and Romans knew but little about sugar, or the sugar cane from which it is derived. The most ancient author among the Greeks who mentions the sugar cane is Theophratus who lived 321 years before the christian era. He called sugar meli kalaminon, the honey of the reed. Diocorides who wrote Anno Domini, 64, is the first writer who mentions the word sakcharon or sugar in his chapter peri sakcharon melitos, concerning the honey of the reed. From him Pliny derives his name Saccaron, and the Latins afterwards adopted the term Saccharum for sugar, the juice of the cane. The Latin in his Pharsalt (book 3d, verse 236) says, when speaking of the Indians near the Ganges,

"Quique bibunt tenera dulces ab arundine succos."

"They drink sweet juices from the tender reed."

Pliny in the 12th book of his natural history (chap. 8) says that "Sugar is brought from Arabia, but the best sort from India. It is honey collected from canes, like a gum, white, and brittle between the teeth; the largest is of the size of an hazel nut: it is used in medicine only."

Paulus Ægenta who wrote as late as A. D. 670, calls sugar als o Indikos. "Indian Salt, in color and form like common salt, but in taste and sweetness like honey."

Several of the Greek and Roman officers mention that sugar came from Arabia as well as India; but it is certain the sugar described by them to be white like salt, &c. was brought from India into Arabia. That it was not the produce of Arabia we learn from Avicenna, who recommends, "when the tongue is dry and parched in fevers, to cleanse it with oil of almonds and white sugar; and that the sick should have in his mouth a lump of the salt brought from India; which in color is like salt, and in sweetness like honey."

This can be no other preparation than what we now call white sugar candy, which may be considered (says Mosely) as the real meli kalaminon; als Indikos, and sakcharon, of the ancients.

China boasts, and not without reason, of the antiquity of her arts and policy over the rest of the east, as well as over the rest of the world. The sugar cane is indigenous to China. The climate and soil in many parts of Bengal and other districts of the East Indies are also suitable to the growth and cultivation of the cane; and sugar is, and we have reason to suppose ever has been produced there. Nevertheless. China is the only country in the East even now where sugar candy is made in perfection. The bright transparent sugar candy, so beautiful in appearance, and so grateful to the taste, is a peculiar manufacture, and was originally invented in China.

But the art of refining sugar and making what is called loaf-sugar, is a modern European invention, the discovery of a Venetian about the end of the 15th or beginning of the 16th century; and not practiced in India until very lately. (Moseley's treaties on sugar.)

Having thus given some account of sugar among the ancients, we shall reserve its more modern history for another time.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Vera Cruz to his friend in New Orleans, dated Dec. 21, 1827.

You are aware of the law that was forced from the Legislature of the State of Vera Cruz, by the vox populi, in the beginning of this month, expelling the European Spaniards; and that we anticipated a law from the National Congress on the same subject. We this day learn, it passed the Lower House, but was rejected in the Senate, much to the disappointment of all in this section of the Republic.

'Tis said that an attempt to awe the Senate into obedience to the will of the sovereign people is on foot; several large bodies of men had assembled at Facubago, and other villages adjacent to Mexico, for that object, and they report 800 ready to march from Onebla, for the same laudable purpose.

At Onelda, the lepro's lave committed a shameful outrage, robbed the old Spaniards to the amount of $100,000 in money and effects. The authorities were intimidated from calling in the military force by the immense rise of the populace; recourse was had to the bishop, who in his canonicals, with the insignia of his office, made his appearance, and addressed the mob; and, strange to appear, those villians paid no attention to his authority, or his remonstrances, but continued their work of plunder till day-light. In their contests for booty, some few were killed, and several wounded.

Oascaca is still in the hands of the chieftain Garcia, and of course under military rule.

Many robberies have been committed lately, on the road between this and Mexico; at present, we are tranquil here, but business of all kinds is completely paralyzed.

By the direction of the Secretary of War, Thomas L. McKenny, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, addressed a circular to the Agents of the United States in the Indian country, directing them to ascertain the remedy used by the Indians to counteract the effects of bites from mad dogs and snakes. The Superintendent himself, while travelling among the Indians, endeavored to ascertain the remedies for these dreadful maladies, (which he believed the Indians to possess,) but could never learn any thing satisfactory. He is of the opinion, however, that bandaging and suction are their great resorts, together with some application which they were too superstitious to make known to him. In answer to his circular, he has received a letter from Jasper Parish, at Canandaigua, enclosing another from Horatio Jones, the Interpreter at Gennesee, and a quantity of seed of the plant referred to in the following extract from Jones's letter. No satisfactory information had been obtained in relation to the Indian-cure for the bite of snakes.

"The cure for hydrophobia is a plant resembling the tobacco plant, which is made use of by the Indians as a substitute for tobacco, which is planted and cultivated in the same manner, and when ripe, the leaves are tied in bunches and put under cover to dry. When a dog is afflicted, it is moistened and tied round his neck, and the dry tobacco put in a pipe and smoked by a person into his nostrils; and in case a person is bitten, he is to be treated in the same manner, excepting binding moisted tobacco on the wound.

They never knew persons to be mad, though they have been frequently bitten by mad dogs, because they apply the remedy immediately, which (they say,) stops the effect of the poison. There are old and experienced doctors among the Indians, Tail Chief being about fifty-eight, and doctor Monture about fifty five.

I took this description from the Indians mouths last night. The offer of pay was an inducement to them to disclose the secret, and they wish to come on next spring, as an opportunity of proving the medicine (they say,) may not occur for many years. It certainly will effect a cure—a mad-dog was never known to die when they applied the above remedy."

The seed has been sent to J. S. Skinner, Editor of the Baltimore American Farmer, for distribution.

MARRIED, on Wednesday last, by the Rev. Quinn, Mr. Asa Price to Miss Martha Jenkins, all of this county.

On the 21st ult. Mr. Williams, aged 97 years, to Miss Polly Candle, aged 14 years, both of Green River Hollow, Mass.

Whate'er is odd on Hymen's page,
The wags in rhyme will twist it;
Whether in courtship, name, or age,
The married ones have miss'd it.

But e'en tho' witlings make a route,
And whims severely handle;
When life's poor lamp is going out,
'Tis wise to get a CANDLE.

Baltimore Prices Current.

From the papers by yesterday's mail.

FLOUR, best family.	$5 06¼
Susquehanna.	4 75
WHEAT, best white, p. bu.	90a105
red do	90
CORN.	40a42
RYE.	45
OATS,	24a27
WHITE BEANS.	80a100
PEAS.	[illegible] 50
CLOVER SEED.	4 50a5
FLAXSEED,	75a80
FEATHERS, do	27
PORK, Baltimore mess	13a14
prime	9 50
Northern mess	13 00
prime	9 00
Susquehanna mess	12 00
prime	9 00
BACON, middlings, &c.	7 00
Country assorted	7 50

ALL PERSONS

Indebted to the Subscriber,

For Officers' Fees and County Levy, for 1825, 1826 and 1827, are requested to make payment immediately, as no further indulgence can possibly be given, to any person, after the first day of March next. Large sums are due to persons, who have claims against the county, and must be paid. I have been threatened to be sued, and shall certainly be, if I do not pay them off. I shall direct my deputies after the first day of March, to execute every person who neglects this notice, however painful to me. I am now paying interest upon large sums, and shall be obliged to tax interest upon all sums that may be due me on the first of March. I feel myself under, many obligations to the people of Somerset—but I know them too well, to think for one moment, they would wish me to injure myself by indulging too long.

The public's ob't. serv't.
ROBERT STEWART,
late Shff. & Collector.

Feb. 12, 1828. k4

SALE FOR CASH.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Venditioni Exponas, issued by the Clerk of Somerset county court, and directed to me, Elijah Parsons against Joshua Morris and George Jones, Elizabeth McBryde and Elijah Parsons against William Hopkins, will be sold at the Court-House door, in the town of Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the 11th day of March next, between the hours of one and two o'clock, P. M. the following property, to wit: two head of horses, one gig, and two yoke of oxen, the property of Joshua Morris,—Also, two head of horses, two yoke of oxen, the property of George Jones—Also, part of a tract of land called Kentucky, containing 250 acres, more or less, the property of Wm. Hopkins

ROBERT STEWART,
late Shff. of S. C.

Feb. 12, 1828. k4

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis (5's and upwards)	par
Easton (5's and upwards)	par
Frederick (5's and upwards)	par
Frederick County Bank (5's and upwards)	par
Bank Westminster (5's and upwards)	par
Hager's Town (5's and upwards)	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co (5's and upwards)	par
Elkton	1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics' Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers' Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	½
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	½
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	3
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

Magistrates' Blanks

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Dear Sir,

The charms of Poetry are often rendered subservient to the great interests of the Everlasting Gospel, and the pens that can occupy your "Parterre" with these, are not to be released from their obligations. But in their absence, the humbler notes of prose may be acceptable.

The press never surely can bless society so richly as when it pours from its columns the radiance of Divine Truth, and exhibits, from the face of its mirror, the beauties of holiness.—Let it then be baptized, not by the effusion of consecrated water, but by interspersing, with its other items, an occasional, or a stated offering, to the God of light and mercy. I wish you a much abler pen to present these offerings—till that be employed refuse not the very hasty productions of one, that espouses the best of causes, tho' with very inadequate ability. The day in which we live is a day of too much action in proportion to the amount of reflection found among men—save in the cause of, true religion, in which there is a lamentable deficiency both of reflection and of action. For every other pursuit is found time—for religion many persons find none. Yet there surely is time for this, if there be "a time for all things." That there is, the wisest of men affirms. If time be allotted to books, to sleep—to refreshment at the table—to trade—to labor at the oar or with the wain—or if it be given to the sick—why not devote a share to religion? This surely would be reason. Yet men refuse to be creatures of reason. Much more, if the two be distinct, they refuse to be the disciples of religion. Glorious discipleship, which raises us to the level of exalted spirits in the third Heavens! Without it, we sink beneath that level to the depth of the Apostacy, and must hereafter sink lower still to the pit of misery. Then let us ask religion's light—religion's power—religion's sweetness, from that good and most gracious Being who gives to all that ask it—with an earnest heart and with repentance for the past.

Ye rich men who roll in affluence, with seldom a thankful tribute to the Giver of every good and perfect gift—with no bending of the knee at Jehovah's Throne, in the name of Jesus, in your solitary chamber, or round your family fireside give, O give your thoughts leave now and then to dwell upon the sublime realities of Faith & Hope. Avaunt, music, cards—the chase—and grosser pleasures—give place to the claims of the immortal soul—a soul dying, though immortal. Come, unbeliever, whose tho'ts stagger at the amazing plan of Redemption, dismiss your doubts—Behold the Sun! The Lord of Glory has appeared in human form—nay, more, in human nature. Divinity, absolute Divinity, has dwelt in a body, miraculously prepared of God—born of a virgin. Incarnate Love is now waiting to be gracious to thee, while filled with doubt—nay rather, filled with strange dislike—and mad rebellion against Him. Come, ye fair, ye gentler, of a finer mould—grace your other graces. Let lovely religion smile upon your lips and shed its calm—its lively glories round your brow—let it drop its penitential tear upon your cheek—its law of love be deeply impressed upon your heart—your tongue—your mien.

Come, ye men of giant intellect, who make a mountain of a molehill—this earth engrossing all your tho'ts, Eternity forgotten—here give full scope to all your noblest powers. Consecrate your intellect, your stores of wealth, of knowledge, and of influence to the cause which Gabriel most gladly would advance, if permitted to share the honor mortals have—of advocating the holy, thrice-holy Records of Inspiration.

Forsake the beaten, the still rough road, to honor and Fame's, towering, giddy, fatal, steep. Here let action and reflection combine their powers of thought and performance. Here's work for head and hands; for a long—the longest life.

Who are Rulers, that we speak their praises, but never laud Immanuel.—Who are civilians that we lavish all our pains upon, to make them seem all perfect? Who are warriors that we make society a tempest in supporting them? Why pass by real perfection, and forget the valor and the might of Immanuel, who has conquered death and Hell, and established "a kingdom of righteousness, and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost?" "Render" indeed "unto Cæsar the things that be Cæsar's"—but not "the things that be the Lord's." J. M.

Love Inconcealable.

Who can hide fire? If 't be uncover'd, light,
If cover'd, smoke, betrays it to the sight:
Love is that fire, which still some sign affords,
If hid, they are sighs—if open, they are words.

MOURNING DRESS.

The following judicious and well written communication, on the subject of Mourning Dresses, is taken from an eastern publication, & we recommend it to the attentive and candid perusal of our readers.—N. Y. Post.

Permit me to ask the attention of your readers to a subject in which all are interested. The custom of mourning, like many other customs, is followed without reflection as to its intrinsic propriety. It has prevailed in one form or another in all ages, and among all nations. The savage imprints the emblems of his grief on his naked skin. Hideous gashes and grotesque paintings are his mourning weeds. Polished pagan nations have demonstrated their grief by flowing mourning robes, as well as by the pompous ceremonial of their funerals. The custom then is not peculiar to Christians, nor derived from their religion. On the contrary, is not the spiritual teacher or Founder of our religion opposed to all outward show?

The fact that custom regulates the degress of mourning according to the degree of relationship, is a proof that it affords no rule by which to graduate the degree of sorrow—for it will not be believed that a faithless prodigal child who has impatiently awaited the death of his parent, and counted every day that delays the inheritance on which he expects to revel, feels as much as he who labors by care and tenderness to prolong his parent's life and mourns his death as an irreparable loss.—Nevertheless the symbol is the same—black garments and flowing weeds. The mourning dress then is no true indication of the feelings, and is often an hypocritical expression of what has no existence.

A second serious objection to mourning dresses, is the bustle and hurry which its preparation occasions immediately after the event of death. This is eminently the season to commune with the heart and be still. In this hour of solemn visitation, the feelings, even of the obdurate, are softened and impressible, the unthinking are then thoughtful, and then should leisure and retirements be afforded to commune with God—to listen to the voice of his providence, to give free course to the tears of repentance (which, alas! must too often flow when our friends can no longer be wounded by our unkindness, or made happier by our exertions) and to form holy resoltions for the future. These are some of the obvious uses of affliction, and may form a part of the benevolent purpose of God in the discipline he allots to his children.

But how is all this counteracted by the bustle of preparation for the funeral. The neighbors collect together to render their assistance—the house is a scene of bustle—caps, handkerchiefs, ruffles, are to be made—bonnet patterns to be selected, and dresses trimmed with crape. The minds of the young naturally volatile and repugnant to sorrow, are at once turned to the frivolities of dress—a false and immense importance is given to what is perfectly insignificant.

Many cases might be cited to show the scrupulousness of weak minds on this subject. Such as a circle of ladies earnestly debating whether it would be most suitable that a lady's crape trimming should be a quarter or a half a yard in depth—and a mother deferring the burial of her child because the ruffles of her cap were plaited instead of being quilled.

Such instances, though of rare occurrence, have a tendency to throw an air of ridicule over this custom. A custom held in general respect and by some deemed so essential that the slightest departure from its arbitrary rule is censured with more severity than the omissions of a serious duty to the living. We have heard the harmony of a whole family desturbed by a collateral relative wearing Canton crape instead of bombazin!

But the most serious objection is yet untouched—the expense imposed by this custom, alike on the poor and on the rich. This is a heavy tax on a large family, and augmented by the imagined necessity of preparing the dress for a funeral, or certainly for the first appearance at meeting. In the first hours of affliction almost every one is regardless of expense, and frequently an account is run up at the store that is afterwards paid with difficulty—if paid at all.

But mourning must be worn—mourning as good, or at least as deep as our neighbors. "Mrs ——'s daughters wore bombazin and crape"—an example is thus quoted without much, if any consideration, of the relative ability of the parties to pay for bombazin and crape. Those therefore who afford to change their dress at pleasure, must set the example of reform—and it must begin with those whose sorrow no one doubts. It would be injudicious to mock innocent prejudicies and therefore best to retain a moderate degree of mourning. But it is not the intention of this article to prescribe any line of conduct, but rather call the good sense of your readers to the subject—and should they think the custom has more evil than good tendencies, they may deem it their duty to express their opinions by their example and thus contribute to its gradual abolition.

DEATH IN THE BOTTLE.

"Drink boys, drink, and drown all sorrow,
For we may not live boys, to drink again to-morrow."—College Song.

One would think that these words of the old college song were written in anticipation of a book, lately published in London, on the adulteration of spirituous liquors.—The London Magazine has christened its review of 'Death in the Bottle,' and it is enough to make one's heart turn white with horror, to follow the author through his details. It is not many years since Dr. Accum did the eating world a similar service, by showing that which we fondly considered to be nutrious food, was absolutely poison. Bread ceased to be the staff of life; cheese sent a man to his ancestors, and vegetables and animals were sure to play the deuce with the human stomach. What is a poor fellow to do between Death in the Kitchen and Death in the Bottle? Scylla lies in wait for him in the shape of a baker's loaf, and Charybdis foams in the sparkling champaigne; starve to death and thirst to death, or eat, drink and be poisoned. The alternative is awful.

When a man enters a hotel and calls for a drink of brandy and water, he little dreams what he is complacently sipping—rectified spirits, vinegar, orace root, vitriol, extract of almond cake, cherry-laurel water, and extract of capsicum! What an infernal mixture—it is enough to corrode a stomach of sheet iron. So much for brandy. Next comes gin, infinitely more mischievous it seems, than his brother brandy. The lurking demons in a bottle of gin, are oil of vitriol sulphuric æther, oil of Turpentine, orace root, oils of juniper, of cassia, of carroways, of almonds, Angelica root, and capsicum! all essential poisons—no wonder people die of drinking! So let the reader bid "farewell, a long farewell," to gin and all its Tartarean attributes, and see if he can console himself with a good glass of wine. If the following mixture does not make him throw the bottle out of the window, he is more or less than man:—the deluded wretch is smacking his lips over a dose of capsicum, sal tartar gum dragon, (what an appaling word,) lees almond cake! If things were called by their right names, instead of saying to a friend, "Will you take a glass of wine," one would say "Will you take a glass of gum-dragon and sal tartar?"

Of late years, Sherry had been quite a fashionable drink, on account of its being less acid than Madeira, and consequently more wholesome. It contains, however, a tolerably reasonable share of the horrific, laurel water, benezoin, lambs-blood, chalk and oyster sheels! The idea of drinking oyster shells is something new we doubt whether they are as digestible as their phlegmatic tenant, even when coupled with chalk. It were as well to turn a man's interior into a lime kiln at once.

One great question arises in the consideration of this subject; what, in the name of decanters and glasses, is a man to moisten his clay with? We take it for granted that every one of our readers will forthwith stave in his beer-barrels, and decapitate all the bottles in his cellar; but what is he to drink with his dinner? Pure water is the best diluent—but that is about as hard to come at as pure wine. The Manhattan is miserable stuff, and the Water Works Company stagnated long ago. The last resort of thirsty man is cider, the generous extract of the juicy apple. Bottle it, and it has the foaming life of champaigne, without its pernicious qualities—drink it in moderation, and death will not be found in the bottle.

TO THE EDITOR V. HERALD.

Mr. Zieber—Thinking the enclosed piece worthy a place in the columns of the Herald and that it will be acceptable to the readers thereof, I transmit you the same for publication, should it meet your approval. X.

THE WORM.

"Outvenoms all the worms of Nile."

Who has not heard of the Rattle-snake or Copper-head? An unexpected sight of either of these reptiles will make even the lords of creation recoil; but there is a species of worm found in various parts of this state, which conveys a poison of a nature so deadly, that compared with it, even the venom of the rattle-snake is harmless.

To guard our readers against this foe of human kind, is the object of this communication.

This worm varies much in size. It is frequently an inch through, but as it is rarely seen, except when coiled, its length can hardly be conjectured. It is of a dull lead colour, and generally lives near a spring or small stream of water, and bites the unfortunate people who are in the habit of going there to drink. The brute creation it never molests. They avoid it with the same instinct that teaches the animals of Peru to shun the deadly Coya.

Several of the reptiles have long infested our settlements, to the misery and destruction of many of our fellow citizens.—I have, therefore, had frequent opportunities of being the melancholy spectator of the effects produced by the subtle poison which this worm infuses.

The symptoms of its bite are terrible. The eyes of the patient become red and fiery, his tongue swells to an immoderate size and obstructs his utterance, and delirium of the most horrid character quickly follows. Sometimes in his madness, he attempts the destruction of his nearest friends. If the sufferer has a family, his weeping wife and helpless infants are not unfrequently the objects of his frantic fury—in a word, he exhibits to the eye all the detestable passions that rankle in the bosom of a savage, and such is the spell in which his senses are locked, that no sooner has the unhappy patient recovered from the paroxysm of insanity, occasioned by the bite, than he seeks out the destroyer for the sole purpose of being bitten again.

I have seen a good old father, his locks as white as snow, his steps slow and trembling, beg in vain of his only son to quit the lurking place of the worm. My heart bled when he turned away, for I knew the fond hope that his son would be the "staff of his declining years," had supported him through many a sorrow.

Youths of Maryland would you know the name of this reptile? It is called the WORM OF THE STILL.

BEGINNING THE WORLD.

There is nothing that distracts the slumber of young men so much as setting up business. Beginning the world brings with it many serious thoughts. The hopes of success, the fears of disaster, the ligaments, of tenderness, the feeling of rivalry, all work deep upon the youthful mind, and render its nights restless and uneasy. There are some tempers however, that are eternally delighted with what may be called beginning the world. I knew a man who began life half a dozen times in the course of a few years, and each time with a different set of rules. He had been every thing for a time but nothing long. In consequence he was a poor devil and will very likely die a poor devil.

There is much truth, and some point in the above little sketch. Beginning the world, choosing a profession, and choosing a wife, are three things connected with life, of much difficulty, and of more importance.—Young men seldom give either of them that deliberation which is their due. The happiness of this world, and the hopes of futurity are connected with their decisions, whilst property and reputation or adversity and infamy are their attendant consequences. As far as regards a profession a man should never be too hasty in his determination. Almost every individual of the human family has by nature a particular talent, which when brought in requisition and applied to some exclusive object, cannot fail to be attended with a commensurate success. But the man who vainly conceives that he can succeed in every thing, seldom becomes eminent in any. It is absurd policy to commence a dozen projects together, even to begin a second before the first has been rendered permanently successful. Franklin particularly endeavored to convince young persons of the necessity of forethot, integrity and frugality in the early career of business. I was never discouraged, says he, by the seeming magnitude of my undertakings, as I have always thought, that one man of tolerable abilities may work great changes, and accomplish great affairs among mankind, if he first forms a good plan; and cutting off all amusements and employments that would divert his attention, makes the execution of that plan his sole study and business. To be sure it requires some little philosophy for a young man with a taste for pleasure, to forego all the amusement of youth and health for the sake of his business or profession, yet if he aspires to become eminent, such a course is actually necessary.

MATRIMONY.—One of the Philadelphia editors has been at the trouble and expense of embellishing the hymeneal department of his paper with the cut of a mouse trap; and lest the reader should be at a loss to "smell his device," he has surmounted it with the adage, that "marriage is like a mouse trap, easy to get in, but hard to escape." The trap is represented to be full of prisoners, dissatisfied with their locus in quo; and, like Yorick's starling, they are trying to "get out," "but can't."

We have often heard clever things said about matrimony, but we never before met with such a practical jest as the above. One of our city papers conjectures that it has been done up by some old hunks of a bachelor, who, despairing of ever reaching that Garden of the Hesperides, has chosen this method of venting his dissatisfaction. If such be the case we shall see Major Noah at him without loss of time. But we doubt this supposition, and for an obvious reason. It is the bachelors who are the unsophisticated and unwary race for whom this trap is set. If there be any delusion on the subject of matrimony, it exists among them. It is they that are restless until they get into fetters, and that rush headlong into the toil of which the above is an image. It is not until they become Benedicts (i. e. married men) that the scales fall from their eyes.—Of course the contriver of this admonitory picture must be (or have been) in the class of prisoners. But, added to these deductions, we have good authority in support of the position. The Margravine of Anspach, a lively biographical dowager, says: "Marriage is like masonry—it is only those who are in that know the secret." The conclusion is irresistible, that those who are out could not have originated this piece of Philadelphia pleasantry.

But, to speak gravely on the subject whose importance hardly admits of the levities that are often broken upon it—are not unquiet marriages rather owing to ill assorted and disproportionate unions, that to any irksom quality in the thing itself? Or, if there really be burdens and privations in that state, are they not more than compensated by augmented comfort? by conjugal tenderness in sickness, by smiles in health, by confidence and counsel at all times, by the endearments of the fire side, and by all the peculiar enchantments of home? The truth is, that in every state of life there is matter enough for ripening to such lugubrious people as love to be unhappy; and touching relative merits of the single and married states, we take it for granted that the changes are about equal.—N. Y. Statesman.

THINGS WORTH REMEMBERING.

Controversy.—A man who is fond of disputing, will, in time, have no friends to dispute with.

Adversity, a good teacher.—Those bear disappointments the best, who have been the most used to them.

Example.—When a misfortune happens to a friend, look forward and endeavour to prevent the same thing from happening to yourself.

Standard of value.—The worth of every thing is determined by the demand for it. In the desert of Arabia, a pitcher of cold water is of more value than a mountain of gold.

Luck and labor.—A guinea found in the street will not do a poor man so much good as half a guinea earned by industry.

Be honest.—If you only endeavour to be honest you are struggling with yourself.

A definition.—Truth is the conformity of expression to thought.

Take care. — Equivocation is a mean expedient to avoid the declaration of truth without verbally telling a lie.

Keep an account.—Our debts and our sins are always greater than we think of.

There's no such thing as ill luck.—It is true that some misfortunes are inevitable; but, in general, they proceed from our own want of judgement and foresight.

Our enjoyments are conditional.—If we had it in our power to gratify every wish, we should soon feel the effects of a surfeit.

Our real wants are few.—The stomach tires of every thing but bread and water.

Moderate your desires.—Take away your expensive follies, and you will have little occasion to complain of hard times.

Perhaps some fair one who reads the following, may learn to practice the lesson it seems to teach—that flattery is not love; and that she who would not be fatally beguiled of her heart, must shun its dangerous power.

By Mrs. Charles Gore.

He said my brow was fair, 'tis true:—
He said mine eye had stol'n its blue
From yon etherial vault above!
Yet still—he never spake of love.

He said my step was light, I own:—
He said my voice had won its tone
From some wild linnet of the grove!
Yet still—he never spake of love.

He said my cheek looked pale with thought;
He said my gentle looks had caught
Their modest softness from the dove!
Yet still—he never spake of love.

He said, that bright with hopes divine
The heart should be to blend with mine;
Fixed where no stormy passions move!
Yet still—he never spake of love.

He said—but wherefore should I tell
Those whisper'd words I loved so well?
Could I reject—could I reprove—
While still he never spake of love.

A quick apprehension and a lively imagination are seldom combined with a strong memory and solid judgement; but rather like razors, which are managed more by slight than by strength, and are better adopted to nice than great occasions.

Very nice scruples are sometimes the effect of a great mind, but oftener a little one.

L. D. Teackle

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1828. NO. 47.

A NEW VARIETY OF OATS.

Our agricultural friends will be gratified in learning that a new species of oats, possessing rare and estimable qualities, has been introduced this season into the province. A few bushels of them, we understand, were imported by his excellency the lieutenant governor—sown during the last spring, in a field upon the peninsula, and have been found to mature and ripen nearly a month sooner than any oats which has yet been naturalized in our climate. They are productive, rise with a strong vigorous stalk, and are large and plump in the grain.—The produce of the field, to which we have alluded above will be preserved as seed for the ensuing season. It will be sown during the next in the different quarters of the province; and should it preserve its present qualities, and continue to ripen as early in future years as in this, it must be regarded as a benefaction of the most important character. Such an oat, in fact, has long been a desideratum in our agriculture. The species, which is now common in the country, lingers so long before it reaches maturity, that it delays the harvest beyond the most convenient periods, and crowds the farmer's labor upon his hands. An oat which will ripen, as this does, before or along with the early sown wheat, will cause a more regular distribution of the toils of the harvest, bring the sheaf to the stack or barn in finer condition; and multiply at once the amount of food both for the family and for the stock. Notwithstanding Doctor Johnson's cynicle definition of the oat, we are satisfied that the emancipation of Nova Scotia depends upon it, and that the universal introduction of a finer variety of that grain would tend to hasten the happy and prosperous event.—Halifax Nova Scotian.

From the American Farmer.

Receipt for Curing and Cooking Pickled Fish.

The use of pickled fish, such as Mackerel, Salmond, Shad, &c. is becoming more general than formerly, and would be still more extensive if the proper mode of preparing them for the table was better understood. These fish constitute not only a salutary diet, but in many cases, make a very beneficial change in our food.

Whoever will give the following directions a fair trial will become sensible of their value.

First.—The fish should be kept covered by the pickle, by means of a flat stone or slate laid on them. The oil or animal fat which floats on the top of the cask, should not be removed as it prevents the fish from rusting but in taking the fish from the barrel or keg, this oil ought to be put aside, care being taken not to let the fish touch it.

Secondly—the fish should be washed clean, then put to soak in a large quantity of water, for eight or ten hours, with the flesh side down. The time of soaking may be varied to suit the palate. It must be washed clean, put to soak six or eight hours in milk, (if you have it,) then dry it by the fire.

Thirdly—When dry, lay it on the gridiron, with the fish side downward, over pretty lively coals, for five minutes or till it is moderately browned, then turn it with a plate or some flat instrument that will not break the skin, and let it remain over the coals ten or fifteen minutes, or till it is cooked sufficiently. Slide it off the gridiron into the dish, and strip off the back bone with a broad knife; pat the fish to cause the thick part of the fish to absorb the fat from the belly part; use no butter—then you will enjoy all the flavor and juices of the fish.

If a mackerel or shad so prepared does not relish, it must be more the fault of the palate, than of the food. How many articles, capable of being made into excellent dishes, are lost or spoiled from want of care and skill in dressing them.

IMPORTANT LAW CASE.

This was a suit brought before Justice Meigs for the recovery of ten dollars, being an error made in the addition of a bill of pencils sold the defendant at auction; on the 28th November, 1827, by the plaintiff, who is an auctioneer of the city. It was proved on the part of the plaintiff, that the goods were delivered to the defendant, and that there was an error in the adding of the said bill of ten dollars; that the amount ought to have been ten dollars more than was received. The original bill was in court, and manifestly established the fact, that there was an error in the addition of ten dollars. The defendant admitted the mistake, but claimed a set-off for deficiency in the articles sold; but offered no testimony to establish the fact. On the part of the plaintiff it was shown, that the defendant had never signified his dissatisfaction in the quantity or quality of the goods, until he was called on to correct the error in the account, which was proved not to be till two or three weeks after the sale.

His honor the Judge, ruled the law to be, that auctioneers were public agents, and that from their situation they were necessarily bound to do business in great haste, and that they were not bound to correct errors, consequently were not entitled to damages if they made a mistake against themselves. The court here likened them to the officers in our public banks, and held it as the law of the land that they were not bound to correct their mistakes.—N. Y. Enb.

The merry part of the world are very amiable, while they diffuse a cheerfulness throughout conversations at proper seasons and on proper occasions; but on the contrary a sore grievance to society, when they infect every discourse with insipid mirth and turn into ridicule such objects as are not suited to it.—For though laughter is looked upon by the philosophers as the property of reason, the excess of it has been always considered as the mark of folly. Addison.

PUBLIC VENDUE.

BY virtue of an Order of the Orphans Court of Somerset County, will be sold at public sale, on Wednesday the 27th instant, at the late residence of Harry Wilson, deceased—all the PERSONAL ESTATE of said Wilson. Sale to commence at the hour of ten o'clock.

The terms of sale will be made known on the day aforesaid, by

GEORGE HOPKINS, Adm'r.

Feb. 5, 1828. z

Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county,

Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also, another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr. Levin Ballard, senior, known by the name of Moore & Casset, situated on Menokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm.

Jones and Dr. J. King.—This tract contains about 130 acres—and, besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises.

As no person will purchase without viewing the property a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to

L. W. BALLARD.

Dec. 18, 1827. 5d

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Levin
§§SEAL.§§ Tyler, Executor, of Samuel
§§§§§§§§§§ Milbourne, late of Somerset county, dec'd. it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test.

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Samuel Milbourne, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 24th of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th of Jan., 1828.

LEVIN TYLER, Executor of S. Milbourne, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

JOB PRINTING,

SUCH AS

Handbills, Cards, Blanks,

PAMPHLETS, &c.

Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms.

At the Office of the Village Herald.

LAND FOR SALE,

IN POTATO NECK.

344 ACRES.

The westerly half of the farm late the property of Francis H. Waters, esq. (dec'd.)—About 100 acres are under improvement, a good part of which produces luxuriantly. The residue is heavily timbered with oak and pine, &c., and conveniently situated to market. The farm is washed on one side by the Annamessex river, and on the other it lies contiguous to the Menokin.

On the premises upon the Annamessex side is a delightful building-spot, of high ground, in full view of the river, intercepted only by a small grove of lofty pines, and near it a delightful well of water, said to be surpassed by none in the county. Further particulars are deemed unnecessary, as those wishing to purchase will doubtless view the premises for themselves. Half of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for five or more years—interest to be paid annually.

For further particulars enquire of Dr. Ballard, near the premises, or to Mr. Lazarus Maddux, Potato Neck, or to the Rev. Dr. Waters, Washington Academy, or a line addressed to the subscriber, Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. York, will meet with attention.

FREEBORN GARRETTSON.

December 18, 1827. 5d

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court.
Jan. 22nd, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Clement
§§SEAL.§§ Goslee, Executor of Lau-
§§§§§§§§§§ day Goslee, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three sucessive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Launday Goslee, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 22nd day of Jan., 1828.

CLEMENT GOSLEE, Ex. of L. Goslee, dec'd.

Jan. 29. vv

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Jona-
§§SEAL.§§ than Huffington, Executor
§§§§§§§§§§ of Gabriel Banks, late of Somerset county, dec'd., it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess Anne.

True copy, Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given.

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Gabriel Banks—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of January, 1828.

JONATHAN HUFFINGTON, Ex'tor of G. Banks, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

NOTICE.

I hereby give notice to my creditors for them to appear at the County Court, to be held in Somerset County, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, (if any they have) why I shall not have the benefit of the insolvent laws of Maryland.

JOSHUA REECE.

Jan 22, 1828 k

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC.

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

Certificate.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

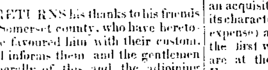
The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondriacal, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER, Princess Anne, Md.

Nov. 20, 1827.

T. L. DISHAROON,



SNOW HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. 7s

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of WILLIAM REDDISH are hereby notified to attend in Somerset County Court on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May term next, to shew cause, if any they have, why the benefits of the insolvent laws of Maryland, shall not be extended to said petitioner.

Feb. 5, 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Jan. 15th, 1828.

§§§§§§§§§§ ON application of Henry
§§SEAL.§§ Lankford, Adm. of Wm.
§§§§§§§§§§ H. Adams, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess Anne.

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given.

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Md. letters of administration on the personal estate of Wm. H. Adams, late of Somerset county, deceased.—All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of July next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of January, 1828.

HENRY LANKFORD, Adm. of W. H. Adams, dec'd.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

PHILADELPHIA ALBUM

AND

Ladies' Literary Gazette.

"ALBUMS," says an agreeable writer, "are things, in which are gathered many sweets from the flowers of genius and taste in the garden of literature. They also serve as pleasant mementos of those friends who are absent, and tend to instruct, as well as to please—to enlighten, as well as to amuse."

The Album, to which the publishers respectfully invite attention, has during the brief space of its publication, met with such flattering and universal esteem as to warrant the printing, each week, of near six thousand copies.

The work is enriched with original articles on a variety of interesting and valuable subjects. Fine Arts; Sciences; Botanical, Historical, Biographical and Moral Essays, Sketches, &c.; Reviews of new books; Fashionable and Literary Intelligence; Manners, Conversation, Dress, and Beauty; the cultivation of Plants and Flowers; Amusing and Moral Tales, together with choice articles in every department of polite and useful literature.

It is handsomely printed (8 pages every Wednesday) on fine white paper, royal size, quarto form, making an elegant annual volume of upwards of four hundred pages, embellished with appropriate engravings.

The publishers are determined to spare neither pains nor expense in their ambitious exertions to make their work an acquisition to literature. To sustain its character, they have made at great expense) arrangements with some of the first writers in this country, and are at the same time enabled, from European Journals which they receive, to make the choicest selections from the richest sources of foreign literature.

To give the parents or brothers—the friends or guardians of their fair readers an assurance of that strict sense of purity, chasteness and general propriety which should eminently characterize a work of this kind, constituting a bouquet of the "flowers of literature," which must form to the cultivated and accomplished mind, a "token of esteem," the most valuable and pleasing—a "forget me not," of the most appropriate, endearing, and lasting nature, the publishers have associated with its former conductors in their editorial duties a lady of distinguished literary reputation and talent, whose watchful attention and acknowledged abilities they are confident will add materially to the character of the work.

Price $2 50 per annum, payable in advance. Address the Publishers of the Philadelphia Album and Ladies' Literary Gazette, 45 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

BLANK BILLS OF SALE.

Printed on fine Paper.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, FEB. 19, 1828.

Extract of letter to the Editor, dated House of Delegates,
Annapolis, Feb. 15.

Dear Sir,

The bill to regulate sales by auction has passed this house by an overwhelming majority after full discussion—55 to 14. The general valuation bill, with a view to the mass of property which has hitherto escaped taxation, will be taken up next, and in succession other measures of great interest to the interior of the state, upon all of which success is anticipated in this branch of the legislature; but we fear that the influence of Baltimore will defeat and render vain our labours in the Senate. It is understood that the members present in that branch stood, upon these measures, exactly balanced, say 7 to 7. Unfortunately, one of our Senators is absent, and fears are entertained that he will not return to his post—and consequently the public interest may suffer to an extent which cannot be estimated."

Extract of a letter to the Editors of the N. Y. Morning Courier, dated Paris, Nov. 17, 1827.

"You will see by the papers the horrid massacres that have been committed in the streets of Paris; upwards of 120 citizens have been killed and wounded; on the side of the military 10 officers and 102 privates were wounded. All this is very alarming, and God knows knows how far it will go."

A ripe Pear, brought to maturity in the open air, without any peculiar cultivation, was produced at Charleston on the 4th of the present month. It is worthy of notice as a remarkable evidence of the warmth of the present winter.

OUTRAGEOUS PIRACY.

Capt. J. L. Roberts and Mr. S. Kellogg, supercargo of the schooner Ben Alam, arrived at N. York on Saturday before last, after having made their escape from Panama, at the imminent risk of their lives. Their account is, "that they arrived off the harbour of Chagres, in October last, where they disposed of a part of their cargo, paid the duties, and port charges, and after clearing the schooner, and being ready to proceed on their voyage with the exception of a small quantity of ballast, which they had contracted to have delivered on board, they were boarded by an officer and twenty-five men. The officers and crew of the schooner were confined below and ill treated, the schooner taken into port, where they were detained as prisoners 26 days in the most unhealthy climate in the world, and where a part of the crew died. The vessel and cargo were condemned, and the captain and supercargo condemned to six years labour in the public works, and all without their being brought before any tribunal of justice, or allowed a hearing; and they are at this moment entirely in the dark, not knowing what they were accused of, and are utterly ignorant of having done any thing contrary to the laws of Columbia.'

The following paragraph is from the Wilmington, N. C. Recorder of February 6.

There is no U. States Consul in Panama, nor is there any U. S. ship of war near the coast. The consequence is, our flag is not respected, while that of G. Britain floats proudly in the wind, and beckons protection to all her subjects.

Another Warning.—A man was frozen to death last week near to Centre Furnace, in this county. He had been seen not many hours before near to the place where his lifeless body was afterwards found, in a state of intoxication. A solemn warning this, to others of similar habits to beware!—Bellefont Patriot.

WAR.—The N. Y. Morning Courier of the 7th inst. contains the following paragraph.

A letter received yesterday evening by a mercantile house in this city, per brig Jane, dated Gibraltar, Dec. 22, 1827, which states, "Our news of this day gives information that the Grand Sultan has declared war agaist the Allied Powers."

The above letter is from a mercantile house of the utmost respectability in Gibraltar.

The editors of the N. Y. Mercantile Advertiser doubt its correctness

A postscript to a letter from a mercantile house in New York to another in Baltimore, says, "The John Jay brings an account of the opening of the French ports for one month, for the importation of Grain."

FREAK OF FORTUNE.

The Macon, Georgia, Telegraph of the 28th ult. mentions that the drawing of the Monticello Academy Lottery in that state, was completed on the 10th ult. On that day, the highest prize ($3000,) came out, against a ticket held by an old negro fellow, the property of C. Cargile, and was owned jointly by himself, and two sons-in-law, who had appropriated a dollar a piece in the purchase of the ticket.

THE BIBLE.

The total population already reported, concerning which it has been resolved by the different Bible societies, that every family shall be speedily supplied with the sacred volume, is 4,250,159

To which add Wayne co.,
O., population in 1820,		11,933
Stark county,	do.	12,406
Washington city,		13,247
Total		4,267,755

The Washington city society have also resolved to aid the exertions of the Young Men's Society of Baltimore, by engaging to supply within, one year, every destitute family in the four adjoining counties of Maryland, namely, St. Mary's, Charles, Prince George's and Montgomery.

MURDER.—Mr. Godfrey Bowyer, a highly respectable citizen, while sitting in his house, at Valle's Mines, Jefferson County, Missouri, after dark, on the evening of the 14th ultimo, in conversation with some of his friends, was killed by some person on the outside of the house, shooting through the window. He was shot in the head and instantly died. Mr. Bowyer had been to St. Louis, to obtain process against several persons who had been committing depredations upon the mines of Messrs J. B. and Francois Valle, (of which Mr. B. was the manager, or some way interested therein,) and had returned but a few minutes before he was shot, bringing with him the sheriff to serve the process. By whom this murder was committed, is not certainly known; suspicion, however, has fallen on one of the leaders of the party against whom the process had been issued,

A CURIOUS MOUSE TRAP.

A gentleman in Portsmouth having purchased some oysters in the shell on Wednesday evening, deposited them in a pantry until the next day, when, as the servant was taking them out to be opened, one of them exhibited the novel spectacle of two mice suspended from its mouth, having their heads fast gripped within the shell. It would seem that the oyster, being somewhat distressed by the warmth of the weather, had opened its jaws to inhale a little fresh air, when the witless mice, tempted by the luring bait within the testaceous portal, thrust in their heads, and were caught fast by the sudden collapsing of the shells, thus subjecting the intruding vermin to a new sort of Ostracism.

CONGRESS.—Monday, Jan. 14. The Speaker laid before the House a communication from the Post-Master General transmitting the following statement of the nett amount of postage in each State and Territory for one year, ending March 31, 1827, viz.

New York	$229,784 72
Pennsylvania,	127,821 51
Massachusetts,	93,630 41
Virginia,	71,536 76
Maryland,	39,335, 38
South Carolina,	46,402 00
Georgia,	42,524 24
Ohio,	32,309 15
Connecticut,	30,160 13
Louesiana,	28,763 02
North Carolina.	27,571 81
Maine,	25,143 01
Kentucky,	25,572 26
Alabama,	20,161 68
Tennessee,	17,990 78
New Jersey,	16,227 41
Vermont,	15,557 93
Rhode Island,	13,367 22
New Hampshire,	13,250 51
District of Columbia,	10,586 55
Mississippi,	10,414 87
Missouri,	6,352 35
Indiana	5,670 46
Florida Ter.	2,698 67
Michigan	2,284 41
Arkansas	1,046 49
Total	$989,676 10

Abstract of the general annual returns of the Militia of the United States, by States and Territories, according to the act of March 2d, 1803, taken from the latest returns received at the Department of War.

Maine,	40,209
New Hampshire,	30,159
Massachusetts,	54,935
Vermont,	25,581
Rhode Island,	9,460
Connecticut,	25,731
New York,	150,027
New Jersey,	42,283
Pennsylvania.	167,775
Delaware,	7,451
Maryland,	40,091
Virginia,	100,662
North Carolina	60,660
South Carolina	36,429
Georgia	39,056
Alabama	25,000
Louisiana	12,274
Mississippi	5,291
Tennessee	42,685
Kentucky	60,266
Ohio	110,364
Indiana	37,787
Illinois	8,310
Missouri	3,824
Michigan Territory	1,603
Arkansas do	2,028
Florida do	0
District of Columbia	2,317
	1,150,158

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Friday, February 8.

Petitions, of the following titles, were this day severally presented:

By Mr. Hitch, the petition of Benjamin H. Gordy, of Somerset county, praying that he may be remunerated for the loss of the service of an indented apprentice, who was convicted of felony and sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary of this state; which was referred to the committee on grievances and courts of justice.

By Mr. Williams of Worcester, the petition of sundry citizens of Worcester county, counter to the petition of sundry citizens of Worcester and Somerset counties, praying for a law authorizing the building of a draw bridge across the Pocomoke river, at a place commonly called and known by the name of Stephen's Ferry, presented, by Mr. Williams of Worcester, on the fourth instant; which was referred to the committee to whom was referred the said petition to which this is counter.

By Mr. Donoho, the petition of sundry citizens of Somerset county, praying the passage of an act to authorize the levy court of said county, to contract for the removal of certain obstructions in Barren creek, Quantico, Rewastico and Wetipquin creeks, in the said county; which was referred to a select committee of three members, consisting of Messrs. Donoho, Teackle and Dennis.

On motion by Mr. Semmes, it was Ordered, That the committee of grievances and courts of justice, be, and they are hereby directed, to report a bill, regulating the sessions of the court of appeals, so as to prevent the sessions of the said court, occurring at the same time as the sesions of the county courts.

Bills of the following titles, were this day severally reported:

By Mr. Hughes of Montgomery, chairman of the committee on lotteries, An act regulating lotteries in this state.

By Mr. Linthicum, An act relative to divorces.

By Mr. Montgomery, An act for founding a college in Belle-Air, Harford county, by the name of the Maryland college.

By Mr Ely, A further supplement to the act, entitled, An act for the direction of sheriffs and coroners in the return of jurors, and for the better regulation of juries, passed at November sessions 1797, chapter 87.

By Mr. Stevens, A supplement to the act, entitled, An act to prevent gaming, passed at December session 1826.

By Mr. Blackistone, An act concerning crimes and punishments.

Which said bills were severally read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table.

The clerk of the senate returned the bills and resolutions sent to that body for concurrence, of the following titles.

An act to regulate the manner of marketing by slaves and free negroes in Ann-Arundel county, and the city of Annapolis.

A resolution in favor of Thomas Wimber of Worcester county.

Severally endorsed, "assented to."

Mr Sellman, submitted the following resolution for consideration; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

Resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the governor and council be and they are hereby requested to furnish information to this legislature, as early as practicable, whether the chancery papers which by resolution of December session 1825, were directed to be recorded, have been so recorded, and by whom, and what quantity, if any, still remain to be recorded; how much money has been paid to each individual engaged in such service, specifying the particular services performed by each, and in what manner the amount payable to each was ascertained, and the whole aggregate amount that has been paid to said persons: whether the transcripts made up under said resolutions, are copies of proceedings remaining in the chancery offices; and where?—Whether the records which have been made up have been carefully compared with the original papers, so as to be made comportable thereto, and by whom? And whether the records so made up have been placed in the chancery office, as directed by the original resolution, and if not, where are they?

The hour of twelve o'clock having arrived; on motion of Mr. Sellman, the house resumed the consideration of the unfinished business of yesterday, in relation to the bill, entitled, An act to regulate sales by pulic auction.

When the debate therefore was continued.

Saturday, February 9.

Mr. Donoho, reported a bill, entitled, An act to authorize the levy court of Somerset county, to contract for the removal of certain obstructions in Barren, Rewastico, Quantico, and Wetipquin creeks, and their several branches, and to levy the expenses thereof upon the said county.

Which said bill was read the first time, and ordered to lie upon the table.

Monday, February 11.

By Mr. Hitch, the petition of sundry inhabitants of Worcester county, praying an alteration in the mode of appointing the overseer of the poor of said county; which was referred to a select committee of five members, consisting of Messrs. Hitch, Hooper, Powell, Williams of Worcester, and Dennis.

The hour having arrived for taking up the orders of the day; on motion by Mr. Teackle, the unfinished business, in referrence to the bill, entitled, An act to regulate sales by public auction, was postponed till to-morrow. And,

On motion by Mr. M'Mahon, the order of the day, in referrence to the bill from the senate, entitled, A supplement to the act, entitled, An act against excessive usury, was postponed until Thursday next, the 14th inst.

The bill reported by Mr. Wells, entitled, A further supplement to the act for the recovery of small debts out of court, and to repeal the acts of assembly therein mentioned, was then taken up for consideration, read the second time, passed without amendment, and sent to the senate for concurrence.

Tuesday, February 12

By Mr. Williams of Worcester, the petition of sundry inhabitants of Worcester county, counter to the petition of sundry other citizens of Worcester and Somerset counties, praying for a law authorizing the building of a drawbridge across the Pocomoke river, from Newtown to Stephen's Ferry, presented by Mr. Williams of Worcester, on the 4th instant; which was referred to the committee to whom was referred the said petition to which this is counter.

By Mr. Dennis, the petition of the Vestrymen and Wardens of Somerset Parish in Somerset county, praying the passage of a law, authorizing the elections and meetings of the Vestry of said Parish to be held in the Church at Princess Anne; which was referred to a select committee of three members, consisting of Messrs. Dennis, Gibbons, and Goldsborough.

Mr. Teackle, chairman of the committee on education, delivered the following reports; which were severally read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

The committee on education to whom was referred the memorial of the Rev. Samuel Knox, lately Principal of Frederick-Town Academy; and the memorial of the Rev. Henry Lyon Davis, late Principal of St. John's College, beg leave to report—

The first memorialist complaints of the treatment he received from a board of trustees, with referrence to the termination of his engagement as Principal of the academy in Fredericktown.

The second details his election, by the Visiters & Governors of St. John's College, as Vice Principal, and his subsequent elevation to the principality of that institution—After which the memorialist complains, that he was deprived of his chair, and all connexion with the college, without the assignment of any reason—that with a view to restoration, he appealed to the county court of Anne-Arundel, and that he failed of redress, in consequence of what he believed to be the illegal conduct of the Judge who sat alone at the appeal in question.

These are matters which the committee conceive, do not come within the limits of their proper duties. They seem to belong to another appointment of this house.

The committee request to be discharged from the further consideration of these memorials.

All which is respectfully submitted

By order. J. H. Milbourne, C. Clk.

The committee on education to whom was referred the memorial of sundry citizens of Frederick county, praying for an abstraction of a portion of the annual donation to the incorporated academy in that county, in aid to a "Free or Non-Payment School;" and soliciting the appoinment of a disinterested visiter to make a just and fair report of the state and condition of the said academy—And also the memorial of the Visiters of Frederick County Schools, and sundry inhabitants of the same county, counter to the memorial first referred to, have had the matters of these referrences under consideration, and beg leave to present the following report.

From a review of the legislation upon this subject, it appears manifestly to have been the settled policy of the state to encourage the establishment of an incorporated institution in the several counties, for the higher attainments of classical learning, and a departure from this course the committee would esteem to be unjust with regard to the expenditures incurred in the erection of edifices for that object by many liberal, and enlightened citizens; and unwise in relation to the great interests of the state.

In illustration of this opinion, the committee might urge the reason assigned in a former report, upon a similar proposition: Experience has proved that such institutions cannot exist without the aid of public patronage, and the withdrawing of that aid would operate to their destruction, and, in effect give to the rich a monopoly of higher branches of education, as men of wealth can afford to support their sons at distant and expensive seminaries, whilst the middling and lower orders of society, would be deprived of the means of acquiring even the rudiments of classical knowledge: and in the deficiency of the necessary qualifications, consequent upon that deprivation, they would be excluded from the fair prospects of competition, and the equal pretensions they would otherwise enjoy for public employment, or professional elevation.

Wednesday, January 13.

By Mr. Hughes of Montgomery, the memorial of sundry citizens of Montgomery county, constables, and others, complaining of the inequality of the fees allowed to sheriffs and constables, for the performance of the same or similar services, and praying redress of said grievances.

Mr. Donoho asked and obtained leave to introduce a bill, to be entitled, An act to establish district courts for the trial of assaults and batteries, and for other purposes.

On motion By Mr. Teackle, the house was then called and the door keeper sent for the absent members, in the city.

Whereupon on motion by Mr. Semmes, the house agreed to proceed in the consideration of the ordinary business of the session, during the absence of the door keeper.

Mr. Teackle then submitted the following order for consideration, which was twice read viz.

Ordered. That any fifteen members, (including the Speaker if there be one) shall be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members.

Mr. Goldsborough moved to amend said order, by striking out the words, "compel the attendance of absent members," and inserting in lieu thereof, the words, "require the attendance of members absent, but within the city of Annapolis." And the question thereon being taken, "Will the house agree to the proposed amendment?" It was determined in the negative.

The question was then propounded, "Will the house adopt the said order? And the yeas and nays, being required by seven members, were taken and it was negatived. Teackle and Donoho for it, and Gibbons and Dennis against it.

Thursday, January, 14.

Mr. Teackle, presented a report of the trustees of the University of Maryland, with a statement of the finances of the institution; which was referred to the committee on ways and means.

Mr. Wells, having first, asked and obtained leave for the purpose, reported a bill, entitled, An act for the better regulation of chancery proceedings, in certain cases; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table.

Contents of the last No. of the American Farmer, dated Balt. Feb. 15.

On Crasses, letters addressed to G. W. Jeffreys, esq. from T. Gold and R. Peters-- Proceedings at a Quar. Meeting, and officers of the Pennsyl'a Agricultural Society---Plan of a Fellenberg School, in a letter addressed to Jon. Roberts, President of the Pa. Ag. Sos. from Anthony Morris, Esq.--- Devon and Short Horn Cattle, Inquiry---Culture of Silk in Ohio---Catalogue of the best Grapes cultivated in France---Poetry, Music---Fox Hunting, Baltimore Pack, and Potomac Hunt---Rules to choose a race horse by his external appearance---On the Liverwort--Answers to queries---Partner wanted in a Cotton Manufactory---The Weather--inquiries---Recipes --Editorial. Meade's Measurer---Prices

UNITED STATES MINT.

From the report of the directors of this institution it appears that the coinage effected during the year 1827, amount to $3,024,342 32, consisting of 9,097,845 pieces of coin, viz:

Of gold	27,713 pieces	=	$131,565
Silver	6,712 400		2,869,200
Copper	2,357,732		23,577
	9,097,845		$3,024,342

Of the gold bullion deposited at the Mint within the last year, the proportion received from Mexico, South America, and the West Indies, may be stated at 76.000 dollars; that from North Carolina at 21,000 dollars, and that from Africa at 15,000 dollars, leaving about 20,000 dollars derived from sources not ascertained. The whole amount received from North Carolina, to the present period, is nearly 110,000. This gold has generally been found to exceed in fineness the standard of our gold coins.

The supply of silver under various forms of unwrought bullion, and in foreign coins, has been unusually abundant, especially during the three first quarters of the year. The heavier deposites have been received generally through the bank of the United States. Of the amount of silver coined within the last year, more than 2,000,000 consisted of deposites received from that institution.

The amount of copper coins distributed within the last year, is 21,910 dollars. They are forwarded, as heretofore, at the expense and risk of the government, to all parts of the United States, accessable by regular means of transportation, on receiving the value thereof here, or a certificate of deposite, to the credit of the treasurer of the United States, for the requisite amount, in any of the banks authorized to receive deposites of public money.

A general view of the operations of the mint, from their first commencement, will not it is believed, be found destitute of interest, and is therefore respectfully presented.

The whole coinage executed since the establishment of the mint, amounts to $30,465,444 14 1-2; consisting of 103,081,178 pieces of coin:—

Of gold	1,538,161 p's	=	$8,255,667 50
Sil.	47,389,086	do.	21,695,899 90
Cop.	54,153,931	do.	513,876 74
	103,081,178		$30,465,444 14

Within the first 15 years of the operations of this establishment, beginning with the year 1793, and ending with 1807, the amount coined was $6,482,613 68 1 2; in the succeeding ten years, ending with 1817, the amount coined was $7,715,979 85, and in the last ten years it has been $16,266,850 61.

The average annual coinage of the first period above designated, it will be found was $432,171 21, that of the second $771,597 98, and that of the last period $1,626,685 06. The coinage of the last year, exceeds by nearly a million of dollars, that of any year preceding, and is nearly two fold the average amount of the period to which it belongs.

From Virginia. We learn, that the Convention Bill, which has for several years been agitated in Virginia, and which some weeks ago passed the House of Delegates of that state, passed the Senate on Thursday lest, by 14 votes to 10.

Spunk.—It is stated in Poulson's American that a woman in Delaware, having put her hand through an open worked fence to drive off a hawk which had seized a chicken, was turned upon by the hawk. He fixed his talons deeply in her hand and would not quit his hold until she cut off his head with an axe brought to her by a child. The bird measured four feet from the tip of one wing to that of the other.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

The Albany Argus of Friday, contains a settlement of the proceedings of the District Court at its late session in that city, in the case of John L. Tillinghast, Esq. one of the attornies of that Court.

It appears that soon after the previous sessions of the Court, Mr. Tillinghast called upon R. C. Lansing, Esq: Clerk of the Court, on some business connected with the office, and spoke of the Court in terms of great disrespect. On being cautioned by Mr. Lansing, he became more violent, repeated his declarations and charged the Court with "gross partiality," and with acting officially "from corrupt motives." At the opening of the late session Mr. Lansing placed on file an affidavit of this conversation, and a rule was served upon Mr. Tillingast, requiring him to show cause why his name should not be struck from the rolls of Court. Mr Tillinghast appeared, and after hearing what he had to say, the Court ordered his name to be erased from the roll of attornies. This they said they should do on two grounds. First, that a person who is doing all in his power to bring a Court into discredit and contempt, is an improper person to act in it: and secondly, that such language as Mr. Tillinghast has used, although not uttered while the Court was in session, was a contempt of Court, and this was the proper punishment for it.—The Court, however, offered to withhold the sentence on condition that Mr. Tillinghast would apologise and engage not to repeat the offence, which he declining, the order was made absolute.

Laborers.—A gentleman in the town of Randolph, Mass. about making a piece of road of some magnitude, stipulated as a preliminary to the engagement of laborers, that no spirituous liquors should be allowed during the progression of the work. The first day but four or five applications for employment on this condition were made; the next, however, upwards of a dozen more individuals consented to the restriction, and the desired number was immediately completed. Soon after the commencement of the road, a man who was notoriously addicted to intemperance, and whose family was suffering the consequent horrors of neglect, applied for work, but was told, that if employmed, he must refrain from useing any strong drink not only while at work, but at home. As an inducement, an extra dollar was offered him in addition to his wages, though his capability to labor was necessarily inferior to that of his companions. This was a startling alternative for a drunkard, but starvation was worse. He consented. For a few days he endured the torments of an enraged appetite, but he resolutely resisted its inclination; and at the end of three months he was a reformed man—and his family had been comfortably fed and clothed, and happiness once more reigned in the abode of misery.

This is an affecting story, and furnishes a bright example to those who employ laborers. Let it be imitated, widely and fearlessly, in every branch of industry, and many a poor wretch will have reason to bless the restriction which rescued him from destruction.

Reward of Folly.—In a frolic a few days since, at a country store, a few miles from Boston, two of the party challenged two others to drink as many glasses of brandy as they would guzzle down gills. The pledge was accepted, and the challengers succeeded in disposing of five gills, and their companions five glasses each.—The first two became so intoxicated that they could not leave the store, and were permitted to remain until morning: when one was found to have breathed his last! The two others set out for their homes at rather a late hour, and were so inebriated and heedless, that they spent the whole night in a fruitless search for their dwellings; at some distance from which day light exposed them, pale, exhausted and spiritless—Traveller.

A colored woman named Tamor died in Annapolis city on Saturday last, whose age as well as can be ascertained, must have been between 105 and 110 years.

A good law.—A law has been past in South Carolina, that from and after the first day of May next, the books of account of tavern keepers, shop keepers, or retailers of spiritous liquors shall not be admitted, allowed, or received, as evidence in any court having a right to try the same, or any debt contracted, or monies due for spiritous liquors, sold in less quantity than a quart.

[Communicated.]

MARRIED, on Wednesday evening last, by the Rev. D. Dailey, Mr. WILLIAM WOOD to Miss SARAH MADDUX, both of this county.

In ancient times old Ovid said,
A laurel of a lass was made;
In modern times be 't understood,
Our maidens likewise turn to Wood.

FROM ZION'S HERALD.

In Middlebury, Vt. Jan. 8th, by the Rev. John Clark, Rev. Green Grove Moore of the Methodist E. Church, Shapleigh, Maine, to Miss Violetta Woodward, of the former place.

Are there no Violets in the Maine—
Is that whole land a a lonely Moore?
An eastern Grove though deck'd with Green
Bears from Vermont its favorite flow'r.

Baltimore Prices Current.

BALTIMORE, FEB. 15.

FLOUR, best family,		$6 06½
Susquehanna,		4 75
WHEAT, best white, p. bu		95a100
red	do	95
CORN,		35a36
RYE,		45
OATS,		21a23
WHITE BEANS,		80a100
PEAS,		40a50
CLOVER SEED,		4 50a5
FLAXSEED,		75a80
FEATHERS,	do	27
PORK, Baltimore mess		15a14
prime		9 50
Northern mess		13 00
prime		9 00
Susquehanna mess		12 00
prime		9 00
BACON, middlings, &c.		7 00
Country assorted		7 50

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

WE think it necessary to remind our patrons, that the 52nd No. of this paper, (which will be issued on the 25th of next March,) will complete one year since the establishment of a printing office at Princess-Anne. After that period THE VILLAGE HERALD shall be considerably enlarged, and improved, by lengthening the columns and adding one to each page. This, we conceive, will be the most substantial token of gratitude we can offer those who, by their kind patronage, have enabled us to promise, with certainty, the contemplated alteration.

It may not be needless here to mention, we still remain decidedly of the opinion that the better way to conduct our paper, is, to keep without the arena of political controversy—exclusively devoting our columns to the chronicling of foreign and domestic intelligence, and the furtherance of instruction by giving a miscellany of usefully interesting and amusing matter.

The importance of agricultural information is obvious to every one—though such knowledge, in this section of our country, is not duly appreciated. Where papers—devoted entirely to the farming interest—have been extensively circulated,—there those who till the soil have been incalculably benefited by placing a proper estimate on intelligence relative to their vocation. May not we then hope that the appropriating of a portion of our paper to the invaluable science of agriculture, will be acceptable to, and command the attention of, those who engage in its pursuit? Surely we may; And we shall therefore put in requisition every means within our reach to render this department of our paper worthy the notice of every practical farmer.

The advantages of economy—its absolute necessity in the present condition of our country—and its being more praise-worthy than prodigality, are simple facts, which need no support, because they are the dictates of common sense and receive the assent of the mind as soon as proposed;—And it would be contrary to the known principles which direct and influence men to good and beneficial actions, to suppose we should feel indifferent to that which concerns our individual interest—which tends to increase or diminish our property—to add to or take from our happiness:—Hence, considering the interests of our patrons, and our own convenience and profit, we shall on the enlargement of our paper, (which will be on the 1st of next April) adopt the following

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance; or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion.) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

Note.—In order to obviate all misapprehensions, we would most distinctly state, that all our original subscribers will come under the above conditions immediately on the commencement of the next volume; And every one who subscribed since the commencement of the present volume, will come under the new terms on the expiration of the time for which his name was entered.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for each continuance: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

, A gradually increasing circulation of the Herald enhances the advantages offered by it as an advertising medium, which, we trust, will be readily appreciated.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

CAUTION.

ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing, or taking any assignment, or transfer whatever, on a Note of Hand, which James Smith, of Somerset county, holds against me, dated 17th day of September, 1824, amounting to twelve hundred dollars, as the payment of said note will be disputed by the subscriber.

DAVID LANKFORD.

Feb 11th—19. km

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of THOMAS JONES, (of Thomas,) are hereby notified that he has applied to Somerset County Court, for the benefit of the insolvent laws of the state of Maryland, and that the first Saturday of May Term next of said court, is the day appointed for his appearance before the judges of said court to answer such allegations and interrogatories as may be propounded relative to his application; at which time and place the creditors of the said Thomas are notified to attend and shew cause (if any they have) why he should not receive the benefit of the ivsolvent laws as prayed for.

Feb. 19, 1828. k

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by James Denson, a justice of the peace, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Hyland against Lucretia Dickerson and Zaccheus Street, I have taken in execution the following property, viz: one hundred acres of land, more or less, known by the name of Evans Second Chance, as the property of said Street, which will be sold on Saturday the 8th of March, at White-Haven, to satisfy the aforesaid writ and cost. Sale to commence at the hour of three o'clock P. M.

THOS. JONES, Constable.

Feb. 19. jkq

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Feb. 12. 1828.

ON application of Geo. L. Ayres, adm. c. w. a. of Wm. Ballard, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of William Ballard—late of Somerset county, deceased.—all persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of August, 1828,—they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of February, 1828.

GEO. L. AYRES, Adm'r. of W. Ballard, dec'd.

Feb. 19. 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Feb. 12th, 1828.

ON application of Geo. M. Willing, adm'tor. of Obadiah Stanford, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order.

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Obadiah Stanford, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 19th day of August next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of Feb. 1828.

GEO. M. WILLING, Adm'r. of O. Stanford, dec'd.

Feb. 12 k

NOTICE.

THE Levy Court will meet at Princess-Anne on Tuesday the 8th day of April next, on which day between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, will be offerred to the lowest bidder, the removal of all the stakes remaining from the setting of wiers in Monokin river and each of its branches, in accordance with the late act of Assembly, making it the duty of said Court to have the same removed.—The work is to be accomplished on or before the 20th of June next.

JOHN WOOLFORD, Sen.
President L. C.

Feb. 19, 1828. ktw

ALL PERSONS

Indebted to the Subscriber,

For Officers' Fees and County Levy, for 1825, 1826 and 1827, are requested to make payment immediately, as no further indulgence can possibly be given, to any person, after the first day of March next. Large sums are due to persons, who have claims against the county, and must be paid. I have been threatened to be sued, and shall certainly be, if I do not pay them off. I shall direct my deputies after the first day of March, to execute every person who neglects this notice, however painful to me. I am now paying interest upon large sums, and shall be obliged to tax interest upon all sums that may be due me on the first of March. I feel myself under, many obligations to the people of Somerset—but I know them too well, to think for one moment, they would wish me to injure myself by indulging too long.

The public's ob't. serv't.
ROBERT STEWART.
late Shff. & Collector.

Feb. 12, 1828. k1

SALE FOR CASH.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Venditioni Exponas, issued by the Clerk of Somerset county court, and directed to me, Elijah Parsons against Joshua Morris and George Jones, Elizabeth McBryde and Elijah Parsons against William Hopkins, will be sold at the Court House door, in the town of Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the 11th day of March next, between the hours of one and two o'clock, P. M. the following property, to wit: two head of horses, one gig, and two yoke of oxen, the property of Joshua Morris,—Also, two head of horses, two yoke of oxen, the property of George Jones—Also, part of a tract of land called Kentucky, containing 250 acres, more or less, the property of Wm. Hopkins

ROBERT STEWART,
late Shff. of S. C.

Feb. 12, 1828. k4

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis ($5 and upwards)	par
Easton ($5 and upwards)	par
Frederick ($5 and upwards)	par
Frederick County Bank ($5 and upwards)	par
Bank Westminster ($5 and upwards)	par
Hager's Town ($5 and upwards)	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co ($5 and upwards)	par
Elkton	1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	½
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	1
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	3
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

Magistrates' Blanks

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

L D Teackle

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1828. NO. 48.

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FROM THE N. Y. MIRROR.

THE BROKEN PROMISE.

I knew men kept no promises—or none
At least with women—and yet, knowing this,
With credulous folly, still I trusted one
Whose words seemed so like truth, that I forgot
The lesson that I had learned full oft before—
And I believed because he said he'd come,
That he would come—and then, night after night,
I watched the clouds, and saw them pass away
From the bright moon—and leave the clear, blue sky,
As spotless, and serene, and beautiful,
As if no promise were broken e'er
Beneath it. Man forgets, in busy hours,
What in his idle moments he has said,
Nor thinks how often woman's happiness
Hangs on his lightest words. It is not things
Of great importance which affect the heart
Most deeply—trifles often weave the net
Of misery or bliss in human life.
There's many a deep and hidden grief that comes
From sources which admit of no complaint—
From things which we cannot, dare not speak—
And yet they seem but trifles, till a chain,
Link after link, is fastened on each thought,
And wound around the heart—they do their work
In secrecy & silence—but their power
Is far more fatal than the open shafts
Of sorrow and misfortune; for they prey
Upon the health and spirits, till the bloom
Of hope is changed to fever's hectic flush:—
They break the charm of youth's first, brightest dreams,
And thus wear out the pleasure of the world—
And sap at length, the very springs of life:
But this is woman's fate. It is not thus
With proud, aspiring man—his mind is filled
With high and lofty thoughts—and love, and hope,
And all the warmest feelings of his heart,
Are sacrificed at cold ambition's shrine;
He feels that the whole world was made for him;
And if some painful disappointments cross
His path of life, he does but change his course;
Nor broken promise, nor hopes destroyed,
Are e'er allowed a place on memory's page.
'Tis only woman, in her loneliness,
And in her silent melancholy hours,
Who treasures in her heart the idle words
That had no meaning—and who lives on hope
Till it has stolen the color from her cheeks—
The brightness from her eyes; who trusts her peace
On the vast ocean of uncertainty—
And, if 'tis wreck'd she learns her lot to bear,
Or she may learn to die—but not forget:
It is for her to hoard her secret tho'ts,
To brood o'er broken promises, and sigh
O'er disappointed hopes—till she believes
There's less of wretchedness in the wide world,
Than in her single heart! ESTELLY.

FROM THE FRIEND.

THE CONVERTED JEW.

The following affecting narrative has appeared in some of the periodical Journals both in this country and in England, and has excited so much interest and sympathy with the individual who forms the principal subject of it, as to induce considerable inquiry as to its correctness.

One of our friends has been at some pains to trace out the story, and we are assured that the result of his researches has been entirely satisfactory. After receiving various accounts, all of which tended to confirm the truth of the narrative, a clue was at length obtained, which led him to the person through whose means it was first published. The character of this gentleman is highly respectable, and he has politely furnished such data as place the reality of the facts, and the accuracy of the statement, beyond doubt.

"Travelling lately through the western part of Virginia, I was much interested in hearing an aged and highly respectable clergyman give the following account of a Jew, with whom he had become recently acquainted.

"He was preaching to a large and interesting audience, when his attention was arrested by seeing a man enter the house, the lineaments of whose countenance had every appearance of a Jew. The stranger was well dressed—his countenance was noble, tho' its expression seemed to indicate that his heart had lately been the habitation of deep sorrow. He took his seat, and was absorbed in attention to the sermon, while tears often stole unconsciously down his cheek. After the service was over, the clergyman was too much interested in the stranger to refrain from speaking to him. Fixing his eye steadily upon him, "Sir, am I not correct in supposing that I am addressing one of the children of Abraham?" "You are," was the reply.—"But how is it that I meet a Jew in a Christian assembly?" The substance of his narrative was as follows:—He was a very respectable man, of superior education, and handsome fortune; who with his books, his riches, and an only child, a daughter, in her seventeenth year, had found a beautiful retreat on the fertile banks of the Ohio. He had buried the companion of his bosom before he left Europe, and he now knew little pleasure except in the society of his beloved child. She was indeed worthy of a parent's love Her person was beautiful; but her cultivated mind, and amiable disposition, threw around her a charm superior to any of the tinselled decorations of the body. No pains had been spared in her education. She could read and speak with fluency, several different languages; and her proficiency in other departments of literature was proportionate, while the ease and gracefulness of her manners captivated all who beheld her. No wonder then, that a tender father, whose head was now sprinkled with gray hairs, should place his whole affections on this only child of his love; especially as he knew of no source of happiness beyond this world. Being himself a strict Jew, he educated her in the strictest principles of his religion, and he thought he had presented that religion with an ornament.

"It was but a little while ago that this beloved daughter was taken ill:—the rose faded from her cheek; her eye lost its fire—her strength decayed; and, it soon became apparent, that an incurable and fatal disease was preying upon her constitution. The father hung over the bed of his child with a heart fraught with the keenest anguish. He often attempted to converse with her, but could seldom speak, except by the language of tears. He spared no trouble nor expense in procuring medical assistance; but no human skill could aver or arrest the arrow of death.

"He had retired in a small grove not far from his house, where he was pensively walking, wetting his steps with tears, when he was sent for by his dying daughter. He immediately obeyed the summons, and with a heavy heart, entered the door of her chamber; soon, alas! he feared, to be the chamber of death. The parting hour was at hand, when he was to take a last farewell of his endeared child; and his religious views gave him but a feeble hope of meeting her hereafter. She clasped the hand of her parent in her own, now cold with the approach of death, and summoning all the energy which her expiring strength would admit of, she thus addressed him:—"My father do you love me?" "My child, you know that I love you—that you are now more dear to me than all the world beside!" "But father do you love me?"—"Oh, why, my child, will you give me pain so exquisite? Have I then never given you any proofs of my love?" "But, my dearest father, do you love me?"—The afflicted father was unable to make any reply, and the daughter continued. "I know, my dear father you have ever loved me—you have been the kindest of parents, and I tenderly love you—will you grant me one request? Oh, my father, it is the dying request of your daughter! will you grant it?" "My dearest child, ask what you will—though it take every cent of my property; whatever it may be, it shall be granted—I will grant it."—"My dear father, I beg you never again to speak against Jesus of Nazareth." The father was dumb with astonishment. "I know," continued the dying girl, "I know but little about this Jesus, for I was never taught; but I know that he is a Saviour for he has manifested himself to me since I have been sick, even for the salvation of my soul. I believe that he will save me, although I never before loved him. I feel that I am going to him—that I shall ever be with him. And now, my father, do not deny me;—I beg that you will never again speak against this Jesus of Nazareth! I entreat you to obtain a testament which tells of him; and I pray that you may know him; and when I am no more, that you may bestow on him the love that was formerly mine.' "

The exertion overcame the weakness of her enfeebled frame. She stopped and her father's heart was too full even for tears. He left the room in great horror of mind, and before he could compose himself, the spirit of his accomplished daughter had taken its flight; I trust into the bosom of that blessed Saviour, whom though she scarcely knew, yet she loved and honored.

The first thing the parent did, after committing to the earth his last earthly joy, was to procure a new testament. This he read diligently and devoutly:—and taught by the Holy Spirit from above, he is now numbered among the meek and humble followers of the once despised Jesus.

A SAILOR S STORY.

The wind, which was but light when we weighed anchor, just lasted long enough to take us clear of the bay, and then abandoned our vessel to the strong current which runs constantly into the Mediterranean, and which bore us gently past the rock towards the East, the direction in which we were bound. As the evening approached, our captain showed me the way down into his little cabin, where the steward, a mulatto man, had prepared a supper of tea and biscuit with fried ham and eggs, and where he now stood with a greasy handkerchief upon his head, ready to wait upon us.—I have often remarked that the stations on board of an American merchantman seemed to be filled with a sort of referrence to color; thus, the captain is always a white, the steward a mulatto, and as for the cook, the blacker the better. Having finished our homely meal, we went on deck; the captain produced some good cigars which he had brought from Havana, and the steward handed us a coal of fire stuck upon the end of a fork.—Meanwhile, night had set in, and the moon, which was nearly full, threw its sober light against the sails, among the ropes, and upon the deck of the vessel. We had been drifted by the current past the Rock, and it, with Ape's Hill upon the African coast, was in full view to the west of us.—These two rugged mountains, which frown upon each other from the extremities of Europe and Asia, are the Calpe and Abbyle of the ancients, the fabled pillars, of Hercules, and the ne plus ultra of the unlearned geographers of the old time. It may very well be supposed, however, that this was not the subject of conversation between the captain and myself, as we reclined upon the hen coops, on either side of the companion-way. We were discoursing the common topic among seafaring men, the sights we had seen and the dangers we had passed, in many a maritime pilgrimage. He was an older sailor than I, and assuming a veteran s privilege, took the lead in the conversation. He had sailed chiefly in small craft, and had been so unfortunate as to have been four times overset at sea. On one occasion, said he, the vessel was laded with sugar, which dissolved at once and thus saved her from sinking. The crew contrived to crawl to that part of the bottom which remained above the sea.—In this situation, exposed to the dashing of the waves and the constant violence of wind, they continued four long days and nights, without any thing to drink, and with no other food but the salted biscuit, which floated about the wreck. Many sharks surrounded them, diving into the hold of the vessel, in quest of the beef and pork, and not refusing such of the unhappy sufferers as slipped from the wreck and sunk powerless and exhausted into the sea. Our captain was mate of the distressed vessel, and in that trying situation had to feel, not only for himself, but likewise for a younger brother, who was making a first voyage under his care. He had, however, contrived to secure the unhappy youth by means of ropes, lest he should fall off into the sea; and in this way preserved him from a fate which befel more than one of his comrades.—At length, on the fourth day of their disaster, they descried a sail standing towards them. The wind was fair, and the stranger approached them rapidly, so that they could soon discover that the vessel had been disabled in the late gale.—As she came up, the sufferers began to dread lest they might not be observed; for their once stately brig now scarcely formed a perceptible object above the ocean. This terrible apprehension, though soon removed, was succeeded by another scarcely inferior.

As the stranger approached, the whole ship's company came to the side to gaze at them; and with feelings more heart sickening, that they felt unable to relieve them; for no boat was to be seen putting off to their succour; in fact, the long boat had been washed from the deck of the vessel, and at every roll, fragments of the jolly boat could be seen, dangling from the stern. If the sensations of those who clung to the wreck were agonizing, those of that stranger's crew were not the most enviable. They seemed brought by Providence in presence of these unfortunate men but to pity them, and bear to their anxious friends the story of their disaster. Man, however, is not to be so easily cheated of his life. After gazing anxiously at the vessel, and convincing themselves that safety was only to be found in their own exertions, the shipwrecked sailors began to strip off the tattered clothing which the pelting of the sea had left them, and prepare to swim for their lives. The others soon understood and seconded their endeavors. They came as close to leeward of the wreck as their own safety would permit, and then stopped their progress, by balancing the efforts of their sails. Unmindful of the sharks which were playing between the vessels, the whole party of survivers now plunged off and soon overcame the distance which separated them; the others, holding over ropes, assisted them to gain the channels, and received them with joy on their hospitable deck. One must witness such a scene to appreciate it justly; for their is between seafaring men when they meet on the ocean a bond of unity and a strong feeling of sympathy, which ever prompts them to stretch forth a helping hand to a distressed brother. It arises from the common reflection that they are separated from the land and from the dwelling place of man by a vast expanse of dangers, and is assisted by the possibility of their one day needing the same service from others. At all events, whatever may be its source this feeling certainly exists, and gives a turn of sensibility to the rough and vicious character of the sailor. In this little tale of the sea, there was one incident more striking than all the rest; it gives an idea of what one is capable when placed in a situation of desperate necessity. Our captain had been among the first to leave the wreck, and was already ascending the side of the vessel which had come so providentially to their relief; when the dreadful recollection crossed his mind, that his little brother had never swam in his life. He shuddered at his neglect and determined to return with a rope to his assistance. Conceive his astonishment, as he turned in haste to affect his purpose, at seeing the little fellow swimming like a fish, towards him. There was a shark so near him, that in striking out his arms they came in contact with the harsh side of the animal; but it turned away harmlessly, for it was no doubt glutted with food from the wreck. Thus he reached the deck of the vessel in safety, and there the joyous embraces and hurried questions of his brother reminded him that he had never swam before. This idea, added to the fatigue he had undergone, for a moment overpowered him, and he fainted in his brother's arms. The vessel which received them, arrived at its place of destination a few days after, and the little fellow who gained strength meanwhile, attempted to swim in the river, but he sunk like a stone; indeed he never swam again; for his sufferings on the wreck and excessive indulgence, when taken off had broke him down and he was soon after gathered to his fathers. This story with two others of more fatal consequences though less interesting in their details, caused me to look upon our captain in the light of a Jonas; but nothing happened to disturb the tranquility of our passage, which was completed in an almost constant calm, at the end of 36 hours.—N. Y. Amer.

FROM THE BOSTON BULLETIN.

Remarkable Instance of Tenderness.

An instance of female tenderness was related to me but the day before yesterday, which, (though it occurred some years ago) as it exhibits the distinguished tenderness of soul of one of our country women, should not pass unnoticed. My informant was residing upon the spot where the occurrence took place, and his relation may be implicitly relied on. It was the first time that I had ever heard the story, and it may be as new to many of your readers as it was to me.

"On eagle's wings immortal scandals fly.
While virtuous actions are but born to die."

Envy and the thousand baleful passions that disgrace humanity, are continually active to obscure perfections which their possessors cannot emulate. Thus the public is surfeited with scandal and defamation; while virtue is left to pine in obscurity, unnoticed and unknown.

On Fourth of July, 1821, the army and naval officers of the United States, residing at Whitehall at the head of Lake Champlain, commemorating the birth day of our National Independence, fired the customary salutes of artillery. It was now near the close of day, and the loud cannon sent its reverberating thunders over hill and dale. At the moment when the match was presented to one of the pieces, a young man, in the dizzy excitement of the moment, rushed forward to thrust a club into the mouth of the cannon—at the same instant the charge went off, taking with it both his arms to the shoulders, and putting out both his eyes. Thus in an instant were all the flattering visions of youth annihilated. He who a moment previous looked forward to the world before him with calm and manly confidence in his own energy and resources, now lay helpless on the ground, writhing with physical pain, and tortured with mental anguish. O quantum mutatus ab illo! Cut off from all the solaces of life, and yet still doomed to live: the warm grasp of friendship, the smile of affection, the tear of sympathy, shall never again revisit him in his long night of sorrow.

At sight of a spectacle too painfully affecting, every bosom swelled with compassionate sorrow—for the heart of a brave man is the throne of sensibility. They raised him from the ground, and bore him bleeding in their arms to his residence, which was not far distant. A female came out to receive him It was his sister. When she saw her brother, covered with blood, mutilated, sightless and nearly exanimate—The concourse of friends who followed with bleeding hearts and surrounded the suffering youth, stood unnoticed before her—her eyes were rivetted only upon one object dear to her heart: her soul filled and agitated only with one emotion, nature oppressed with the dreadful tumult of feeling—coul I endure no more: she yielded herself up to womanly sorrow, and in the touching accents of sympathising tenderness and grief, she exclaimed,—"God gracious! if that an't the new shirt I made for him last week!" JOE MEADOWS.

Rockbury, Jan. 23, 1828.

TURKISH JUSTICE.

In the "establishment of the Turks in Europe, an Historical Discourse," lately published by Murry, the celerity of the Turkish mode of administering justice, is thus described:—

"The chief of the police, at Constantinople and other great towns, goes round in the day time and at night, and immediately executes the sentences he gives. If a baker is found selling his bread by a light weight, he is hanged before his door; if any one is apprehended on a spot where a disturbance takes place, he is instantly despatched. No matter if the apprentice, who knew nothing of the fraud, is hanged instead of the baker; no matter if a spectator loses his life, instead of the actual rioter; the purpose is to create terror to the guilty, even by shedding the blood of the innocent, and the crime is punished when the criminal escaped. Inferior punishments are ordered and regulated by the same arbitrary caprice. If the officer does not think the offence worthy of death, he orders the bastinado to be applied, and sits smoking his pipe till it appears to him the culprit has been tortured sufficiently, and he is pleased to pronounce the merciful word 'enough.'

"It not unfrequently happens that the celerity of Turkish justice is purposely displayed to awe the minds of foreigners. A Russian minister had complained to the vizier of an outrage that had been committed upon a person entitled to his protection. The vizier made a horizontal motion with his hand to some of his attendants, and before the concurrence was over, seven heads were rolled on the floor before the face of the Russian.—An English embassador, on another occasion, was also a witness of this fatal motion of the hand, in a conference he had with the vizier; when he rose up to go away, he saw several heads newly put up at the gates of the palace.

"The way in which the robbers are apprehended and executed, and occasionally innocent persons in their stead, is worthy of particular notice.

"Upon hearing a report of robbers, a pacha sends out a number of horsemen, and orders them to bring the heads of the offenders, for each of which he is to receive a reward.

"Whether they find the robbers or not, these horsemen are sure to return with heads. And person in a village, and not owned by the usual authorities, any stray traveller, or wandering beggar, if he fall in with these savage cavalry, is sure to lose his life; and thus a number of innocent men are put to death, whilst it often happens that not one of the guilty suffers. A traveller relates that he saw the return of one of these parties with the heads dandling by the horses' sides, and the riders bearing in their looks of savage joy, rather the appearance of successful banditti than of ministers of justice. Torture is allowed by the Turkish jurisprudence, or at least practised in order to extort confession of guilt or of wealth. It must be said, however, to the honour of the Turks, that they do not practise the cruel modes of execution authorized in more polished monarchies. When the sentence of death is given, the criminal is quickly strangled; sometimes he is told that an order has come for his deliberation, and his irons are knocked off; the bow-string is put round his neck, and he dies in a moment."

LIFE.—The certainty that life cannot be long and the probability that it will be much shorter, than nature allows, ought to awaken every man to the active prosecution of whatever he is desirous to perform. It is true that no diligence can ascertain success death may intercept the swiftest career; but he who is cut off in the execution of an honest undertaking has at least the honor of falling in his rank, and has fought the battle though he missed the victory. Rambler.

From the London Saturday Times.

THE LATE EVENTS IN PARIS.

The massacre near Manchester, a few years since, was much talked of in England; but when compared with the cold blooded assassinations at Paris, it sinks to nothing. At an early hour in the evening of Monday, 26th Nov. small groups, composed of boys, paraded down the rue St. Martin, the rue St. Denis, and the rue St. Honore and where the houses were not illuminated, bawled out for lamps. It is not denied that they threw stones; but, so far from damage being incurred there were not half-a-dozen windows broken in the rue St. Denis. All accounts agree that these provocators might have been easily arrested, which was so far from the case, that detachments of gendarmerie, whom they met, let them pass quietly, and only seemed to wreak their vengeance on the unarmed spectators, the greater part of whom were drawn to the rue St. Denis by curiosity. This fact strengthens the supposition that these miscreants were employed by the police to create a disturbance. About ten on the first night, reports of all sorts were spread about of the events which had taken place in the rue St. Denis, and an immense crowd flocked thither.—Their attitude was not at all menacing; but when it became known that the soldiery were coming, they took away the scaffolding from a house under repair, to form a barrier for their protection. The rue St. Denis, at this part is very narrow, and from the numbers collected, it was impossible to escape; when a sudden order was given for the troops to attack them on all sides, not the least resistance was offered; and the defenceless men and women collected, were exposed to the fire of the infantry. The gendarmes called to the people at the windows to retire, and where they were not obeyed, fired at them without hesitation. The Moniteur asserts that the people were summoned to retire; but where the massacre took place on Monday, it is ascertained that not one tenth of the assemblage were aware of it, the fact is, that the soldiery, in many instances, cut down people endeavoring to escape, and were inattentive to the cries of mercy on every side.

Eight persons were killed on the first night; and the number of wounded was very considerable. One would have thought the lamentable example of Monday night would have kept people away from the danger; but when the succeeding disturbance occurred the mob was much more considerable, and the carnage really dreadful. The troops kept up a regular fire on the people, who as in the first instance offered no resistance: their curiosity was so strongly excited that they could not keep away; and when the mob became dense and the military arrived, it was impossible to escape. One gendarme was killed, and it is asserted that 60 soldiers were wounded. At least 50 of the people were killed, including Monday and Wednesday; and the number of wounded must have been frightful.

During the whole of Thursday, the Morgue (receptacle for dead bodies) was besieged, bodies were brought thither by sixes, and, after remaining only about half an hour, were carried away to make room for others. Many of them were cut and slashed in a dreadful manner, and counting the numbers I saw there at different times, and the five found in the Passage du Grand Cerf, in the rue, St. Denis, 50 cannot be an exaggerated calculation On Thursday night all was tranquil; but the Boulevards, and many parts of the town, were lined with troops.—Paris had the appearance of a besieged city during the whole week, and cannon were planted on some of the bridges. It is needless to say that much exasperation exists against the authors of these lamentable events. To show that the authorities anticipated that disturbances were likely to arise, the fact may be mentioned, that the swords of the soldiery had been sharpened previous to Monday.

The strongest evidences of the public feelings were exhibited at the Morgue; and as the bodies were taken out and in cries of "Shame!" "Down with the butchers of Ministers," &c. &c. resounded from the immense crowds, assembled in the vicinity.—Friday, gendarmes were seen riding in various directions, and the troops are still on the alert. Every body who happened to be passing on the first night in the Place Vendome (where one of the Ministers resides) was suddenly arrested by the gendarmerie, who came in at both ends; but no disturbance took place, and they were allowed to depart after giving their names. Among the sufferers in the rue St. Denis are many respectable people; and not one of them mixed in the slight disturbance which arose—One young girl, a milliner, who was taking home some work, was shot in the thigh and is since dead at the hospital. During all the week, every shop has been closed at an early hour, and places of amusement are deserted.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis	par
Easton	par
Frederick	par
Frederick County Bank	par
Bank Westminster	par
Hager's Town	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co ($5 and upwards)	par
Elkton	1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	½
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	½
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	3
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

Feb 12, 1828.

[SEAL.] ON application of Geo. L. Ayres, adm. c. w. a. of Wm. Ballard, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of William Ballard—late of Somerset county, deceased,—all persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of August, 1828,—they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of February, 1828.

GEO. L. AYRES, Adm'r. of W. Ballard, dec'd.

Feb. 19. 1828. k

ALL PERSONS

Indebted to the Subscriber,

For Officers' Fees and County Levy, for 1825, 1826 and 1827, are requested to make payment immediately, as no further indulgence can possibly be given, to any person, after the first day of March next Large sums are due to persons, who have claims against the county, and must be paid I have been threatened to be sued, and shall certainly be, if I do not pay them off. I shall direct my deputies after the first day of March, to execute every person who neglects this notice, however painful to me. I am now paying interest upon large sums, and shall be obliged to tax interest upon all sums that may be due me on the first of March. I feel myself under, many obligations to the people of Somerset—but I know them too well, to think for one moment, they would wish me to injure myself by indulging too long.

The public's ob't. serv't.
ROBERT STEWART,
late Shff. & Collector.

Feb. 12, 1828. k4

PUBLIC VENDUE.

BY virtue of an Order of the Orphans Court of Somerset County, will be sold at public sale, on Wednesday the 27th instant, at the late residence of Harry Wilson, deceased—all the PERSONAL ESTATE of said Wilson. Sale to commence at the hour of ten o'clock.

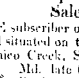
The terms of sale will be made known on the day aforesaid, by

GEORGE HOPKINS, Adm'r.

Feb. 5, 1828. z

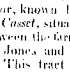
Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county,



Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also, another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr Levin Ballard, senior, known by the name of Moore & Cassel, situated on Menokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm.



Jones and Dr. J. King.—This tract contains about 150 acres—and, besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises.

As no person will purchase without viewing the property a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to

L. W. BALLARD.

Dec. 18, 1827. 'd

LAND FOR SALE,

IN POTATO NECK.

344 ACRES.

The westerly half of the farm late the property of Francis H. Waters, esq. (dec'd.)—About 100 acres are under improvement, a good part of which produces luxuriantly. The residue is heavily timbered with oak and pine, &c., and conveniently situated to market. The farm is washed on one side by the Annamessex river, and on the other it lies contiguous to the Menokin.

On the premises upon the Annamessex side is a delightful building spot, of high ground, in full view of the river, intercepted only by a small grove of lofty pines, and near it a delightful well of water, said to be surpassed by none in the county. Further particulars are deemed unnecessary, as those wishing to purchase will doubtless view the premises for them selves. Half of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for five or more years—interest to be paid annually.

For further particulars enquire of Dr. Ballard, near the premises, or to Mr. Lazarus Maddux, Potato Neck, or to the Rev. Dr. Waters, Washington Academy, or a line addressed to the subscriber, Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, N. York, will meet with attention.

FREEBORN GARRETTSON

December 18, 1827.

JOB PRINTING,

SUCH AS

Handbills, Cards, Blanks,

PAMPHLETS, &c.

Thankfully received and neatly printed. on moderate terms,

At the Office of the Village Herald.

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

Certificate.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondriacal, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER,
Princess Anne, Md.

Nov. 20, 1827.

T. L. DISHAROON,

HATTER,

SNOW HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25 1827 kt.5

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

Feb. 12th, 1828.

[SEAL.] ON application of Geo. M. Willing, adm'tor. of Obadiah Stanford, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Obadiah Stanford, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 19th day of August next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of Feb. 1828.

GEO. M. WILLING, Adm'r. of O. Stanford, dec'd.

Feb. 12 k

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of WILLIAM REDDISH are hereby notified to attend in Somerset County Court on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May term next, to shew cause, if any they have, why the benefits of the insolvent laws of Maryland, shall not be extended to said petitioner.

Feb. 5, 1828. k

PHILADELPHIA ALBUM AND Ladies' Literary Gazette.

"ALBUMS," says an agreeable writer, "are things, in which are gathered many sweets from the flowers of genius and taste in the garden of literature.' They also serve as pleasant mementos of those friends who are absent, and tend to instruct, as well as to please—to enlighten, as well as to amuse."

The Album, to which the publishers respectfully invite attention, has during the brief space of its publication. met with such flattering and universal esteem as to warrant the printing, each week, of near six thousand copies.

The work is enriched with original articles on a variety of interesting and valuable subjects. Fine Arts; Sciences; Botanical, Historical, Biographical and Moral Essays, Sketches, &c.; Reviews of new books; Fashionable and Literary Intelligence; Manners, Conversation, Dress and Beauty; the cultivation of Plants and Flowers; Amusing and Moral Tales, together with choice articles in every department of polite and useful literature.

It is handsomely printed (8 pages every Wednesday) on fine white paper, royal size, quarto form, making an elegant annual volume of upwards of four hundred pages, embellished with appropriate engravings.

The publishers are determined to spare neither pains nor expense in their ambitious exertions to make their work an acquisition to literature. To sustain its character, they have made (at great expense) arrangements with some of the first writers in this country, and are at the same time enabled, from European Journals which they receive, to make the choicest selections from the richest sources of foreign literature.

To give the parents or brothers—the friends or guardians of their fair readers an assurance of that strict sense of purity, chasteness and general propriety which should eminently characterize a work of this kind, constituting a bouquet of the "flowers of literature," which must form to the cultivated and accomplished mind, a "token of esteem," the most valuable and pleasing—a "forget me not," of the most appropriate, endearing, and lasting nature, the publishers have associated with its former conductors in their editorial duties a lady of distinguished literary reputation and talent, whose watchful attention and acknowledged abilities they are confident will add materially to the character of the work.

Price, $2 50 per annum, payable in advance. Address the Publishers of the Philadelphia Album, and Ladies' Literary Gazette, 45 Chestnut street. Philadelphia.

PRO PATRIÂ LIBERTATE

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, FEB. 26, 1828.

From the N. Y. Commercial.

DEATH OF DE WITT CLINTON.

[Yesterday's mail] brought intelligence of this melancholy event, which occurred at Albany on the evening of Monday the 11th inst. and with great suddenness. He had discharged his official duties during the day, and written several letters in the course of the afternoon. About 7 o'clock in the evening he was sitting in his study, conversing with two of his sons, when his head suddenly fell backwards, and he died almost instantly. The interval between the attack, and the arrival of Dr. Bay, the physician, at which time life was extinct, was not more than ten minutes. It is supposed that he died from a sudden rupture of one of the large blood vessels. The news immediately spread through the city of Albany, and an intense and painful sensation was excited, while the inhabitants remained in suspense as to the result of the calamity. An immense croud occupied the house and its precincts during the evening. Means of resuscitation were ineffectually employed to a late hour. A deep gloom pervaded the city on the following morning. The Senate and House of Assembly adjourned, after making arrangements for the order of the funeral, which was to take place at two o'clock on Thursday.

The State of New York has thus lost its highest ornament; our country one of its noblest benefactors, and the cause of science and improvement a faithful and indefatigable patron. The name of Clinton belongs to late posterity, not from his political career, though his star so long influenced the tides of party. His popularity will be immortal, because the effects of his labours will endure while our nation has an existence; and will come home to the business and bosoms of men, in the facilities of education, commerce and internal communication, achieved by his genius and perseverance. Our country has not such another man to mourn for.

Lieutenant Governor Pitcher, on whom the administration of the Government now devolves, is confined with serious indisposition.

The Albany Argus says:

Great interest was manifested by the public to see the body, ere it was forever withdrawn from human observation.

The side-walks of every street through which the procession moved, and the windows of the houses, and the roofs of several of them, were thronged by spectators of both sexes, and of every age. Many of them wore badges, bearing a minature likeness of Clinton. More than one of the groups thus decorated, were composed of children whose parents had adopted this mode of manifesting their own sympathy with the general feeling.

Upon the whole every thing was done that duty or sympathy required; and so done as to confer honor upon the legislature and the state. The solemnities, without being ostentatious, were appropriate and imposing; they were calculated to call out the finer feelings of the heart—to remind those who witnessed them, of the solemn rites consecrated, in ancient days, to the memory of heroes and mighty men; and to furnish at the same time, a noble incentive and a bright reward to public virtue.

De Witt Clinton was born in 1769, in Orange county, N. York; was educated at the first seminaries in that vicinity, and commenced the study of the law in 1786. He was elected in 1797 a member of the Assembly from N. York; afterwards senator for four years, & in 1800 member of the council of appointment. In 1802, Mr. Clinton was appointed a senator of the United States, in place of General Armstrong resigned—from which station he retired in 1803, having been chosen mayor of the city of New York.—He continued, with few intermissions, to exercise the functions of that office for several years—in which period he projected an extensive plan for the defence of the city, which was adopted and carried into effect. In 1810, he was appointed one of the commissioners on the subject of internal navigation, in conformity with whose report, laws were passed by the legislature. He was again elected to the mayoralty of New York in 1811; and was annually re-chosen until 1815. In 1816, while Lieutenant Governor, he was recommended by a portion of the New York Delegation in Congress, as a candidate for the Presidency. In the following year he was almost unanimously elected Governor of N. York. In 1823, through the management of those who had all along opposed his measures, he was removed from the office of canal commissioner—a post merely honorary, though excessively laborious. But a re-action ensued, and De Witt Clinton was called from retirement in 1824, by an immense majority of his fellow citizens, to the Chief Magistracy of New York—a station which he still occupied at his death.

LATE FROM LONDON.

By the packet ship Canada, from Liverpool, the New York Commercial of Friday week, has files of London papers to the 1st January, and Liverpool of the 2d both inclusive.

AFFAIRS IN THE EAST.

Reported Destruction of the Greek Fleet.—The intelligence by this arrival is important, though not decisive. On the 16th ult. we published a letter from the three Admirals commanding the allied fleet, in which they forbade the meditated descent upon Scio. In this letter was the following paragraph:—

"There remains no longer any pretext for them [the piracies, &c. of the Greeks corsairs.] The maritime armistice is, in fact, observed on the side of the Turks, since the fleet no longer exists. Take care of yours, for we will destroy it also, if the case requires it, to put an end to a system of maritime pillage, which will end in putting you out of the protection of the law of nations."

Nevertheless, we have already been partially informed, that the Greeks persisted in their design of attacking Scio, and the Austrian Observer confirms the fact of the invasion of that island by the troops under Col. Fabvier, on the 28th Oct. This town has been pillaged, and the Turks on the 14th Nov. continued in the castle, which was besieged by the Greeks, notwithstanding a request made to Col. Fabvier, by Admiral de Rigny, some days before to withdraw. The houses of the European consuls are said to have been pillaged by the invaders. It appears now that the combined admirals have made good their declaration above quoted, with a vengeance. An express arrived in London from Paris, on the 29th December, bringing the Gazette de France of the preceding day. It contains the very important intelligence, on the authority of letters from Trieste, which received the fullest credit at Vienna, that the French Admiral de Rigny had destroyed the Greek fleet off Scio, for having refused to obey the injunction of the 24th October to desist from hostilities against the Turks and after having summoned Colonel Fabvier to suspend further operations. The truth of this intelligence was doubted by some of the papers, and among them, by the Morning Herald of January 1, which considers the silence of the Smyrna advices to the 18th Nov. upon this point as a fact of at least sufficient importance to render the statement questionable.

Situation of the Allied Ministers.—The next prominent question involving in these intricate affairs in the East, is the situation of the Allied Ministers at Constantinople. By our former advices, reaching us by different arrivals, the public were lead to expect that the great question of Peace or War between the Turks and the Allies, would be positively determined, on the 11th of November. The British Traveller of the 2d Jan. (evening) announces an express from Vienna of the preceding day, which states, that when the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople communicated to his French and English colleagues, his determination to leave for Odessa, they strongly remonstrated with him, and used every exertion in their power to detain him there, as they wished to remain until the very last hope of an accommodation with the Porte should have vanished, when they might all leave the Turkish capital together. It was reported at Vienna that he would not listen to their pressing solicitations, and accordingly embarked." But it is not determined even yet, and it was announced in Paris on the 29th of Dec., and in London on the 1st ult. that so late as the 4th of Dec. the Ministers were still in Constantinople; but it is added for the fortieth time, "that they were on the point of departure."

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

The Colonization Society.

Mr. Zieber,

The cause of the free people of color is one of vast interest, I conceive, to the moral, political and religious welfare of our Southern country. A memorial to Congress, petitioning aid for said society has been pretty widely circulated, by being addressed to clergymen, and others probably—with a request, that, after obtaining "the signatures of those who may regard the society as one of national interest," they would "transmit it to the Speaker of the House of Representatives." A faint effort was made to obtain signatures, but, alas! I fear, it was unsuccessful. So withers and dies all good in our hapless community!—Are we willing, Mr. Editor, to put up with the evil instead of encountering it, manfully, and in the strength of God, removing it? Here are multitudes of free people of color, hard by us—living—and that is all—on what charity may give them, or a very precarious occupation may be able to provide. And some, it is to be feared, live by stealth, from year's end to year's end. Now, the operations of the above named society afford a prospect, at no very distant day, of removing the evil, and that, greatly to their advantage, in every point of view. Shall we take Issachar's plan, and lie quietly down under our growing calamities, "because rest is good"? This is to be stupidly blind and insensible to danger. Shall we then form a society auxiliary to the Parent, at the head of which on earth stands the great Bushrod Washington—of which we do believe, the God of Heaven is the friend and patron. The address from the Colonists in Liberia, lately printed in your columns, is a convincing proof of the astonishing proficiency of things there—and the accession which will be annually made to the population, by successive transportation, will soon render it a desirable mart for American commerce. We are not dreaming, sir, here is no Utopia in romance, but Utopia on terra firma, & we challenge Carthage the most powerful rival of Rome—and Plymouth, the landing place of the Pilgrims, and any other colony, known in the history of the Old or New World, to shew improvement like that of Liberia. The scheme is practicable. It only wants money, and that not an incalculable amount; and men, such as are easily to be found; and benevolence, such as we all like to think ourselves possessed of—in order to transport, to their native land, in a shorter time than this generation will outlive, the finest colonists in the world—as trial proves them to be. Let us, sir, be up and doing—and let none manifest a sensitiveness, as if the property of their fathers were about to be taken from them, though it can be easily shewn that every slave in the land ought to be immediately set free.

I am, dear sir, yours, B. D. H.

An Escheated Estate.—A letter was read in the Senate of Mass. on Thursday, from the Solicitor General, stating that an estate in Charlestown, had escheated to the Commonwealth. It belonged to a foreigner, now deceased by the name of John Nicolas Redberg, and is said to be worth five or six thousand dollars.—Had Redberg been naturalized, this property would have descended to his heirs.—Boston Traveller.

From the return of the Superintendents of sweeps to the corporate authority, it appears that the whole number of houses in the city of Baltimore, at the termination of the year 1827, was 11,274.—of the following sizes, viz. one story 1487, two story 7772, three story 1897, four story 113, five story 1, seven story 1.

Clerical dues, or one of the many blessings of an established Church.—During the late session of the Imperial Parliament, says the Kingston, Upper Canada Herald of the 15th ult. a petition of a most extraordinary character, was presented by Mr. Hume. "It was from an individual named Peter Watson, who had been confined seventy-two days in Durham gaol in consequence of a suit instituted by the vicar of Chesterle street, for the non payment of Easter offerings, amounting to the sum of ten pence half penny, the law expenses on the proceedings having exceeded the sum of one thousand pounds. The petitioner dwelt on the various vexations to which he had been subjected by the proceedings in the ecclesiastical court, and prayed the house to take the earliest opportunity of making an alteration in the laws relating to those offerings."

Comment on the above is unnecessary.

SEGARS.—Our friends (says the Philadelphia U.S. Gazette,) have for a few days past, been regaling themselves upon segars, made from tobacco, grown on the farm of Mr. Rohrer, of Lancaster county Pa. Mr. Rohrer procured the seed from Cuba, and gave strict attention to the cultivation of the plant. He has caused a few hundred boxes of segars, to be maufactured from the leaf, with a view of testing the market.—Those who are judges, pronounced them good—requiring age to equal the "real Havana."

Mrs. Simpson paid a new year's visit to her husband in the jail of Davies county, Indiana, and the jailor, good naturedly permitted her to remain in the jail overnight: early the next morning she bid him an affectionate farewell, and departed in tears; some hours after, however, the jailor discovered that he had departed, leaving her in his place, she having put on the breeches. She was shortly afterwards discharged, and he has not since been heard from. Few husbands would object to their wives assuming the breeches on such occasions.

Mechanical or Artificial Leeches.—The instrument has been invented by Mr. Salancher and acts as an equivalent to leeches. Its advantages consist in extracting the precise quantity of blood that is wanted to be taken from the patient; in withdrawing the fluid with every agreeable degree of despatch and gentleness; in not causing that repugnance, which naturally attends the application of disgusting insects or worms; in not causing any injury; and finally in being practicable in every station, climate, situation and country. This instrument is manufactured at Paris by the Engineer Damontiez.—Medical Repository.

Census of Alabama.—The whole number of inhabitants of this state is 244,041: of this number 94,303 are slaves. This state in 1820 contained 127,901 inhabitants, shewing an increase in seven years of 116,140—The increase of slaves in the same time is 49,429.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Friday, February 15.

Mr. Gibbons, asked and obtained leave to introduce a bill to be entitled, An act for the relief of Richard Waller, and the administrators of Josiah Broughton and Samuel Heath, deceased, securities of William S. Handy, late sheriff of Somerset county.

Saturday, February 16.

On motion by Mr. Hitch, the amendment proposed by the senate to the bill, entitled, A supplement to the act, entitled, An act to amend and reduce into one the several acts of assembly relating to the public roads in Worcester county, passed at December session eighteen hundred and twenty one, chapter 110, was read the second time, assented to, and the bill ordered to be engrossed.

The house proceeded to the consideration of the bill reported by Mr. Teackle, chairman of the committee on education, entitled, An act supplemental to the act, entitled, An act to provide for the public instruction of youth in primary schools, throughout this state; and in the progress of the second reading thereof.

On motion by Mr. Lee it was made the order of the day for Monday next.

Mr. Teackle asked for leave to withdraw the papers and documents accompanying the petition of Mary Anne Girand for a divorce, and also the papers and documents accompanying the counter petition thereto, of Augustus J. T. Gigrant the leave asked for? It was resolved in the affirmative.

The bill reported by Mr Dennis, entitled, An act to change the place of holding elections for vestrymen and church wardens, and the regular meetings of the vestry of Somerset parish, in Somerset county; passed and sent to the senate for concurrence.

Monday, February 18.

The bill reported by Mr. Thomas of Frederick, entitled, An act to provide for holding on the same day, throughout the state, the elections for choosing delegates to the general assembly, sheriffs of the respective counties, representatives of congress, electors of the senate and electors of president and vice-president of the United States, was taken up for consideration, and after some amendments were offered,

On motion of Mr. Dennis, the question was proposed, Shall the further consideration of said bill be referred to the next assembly? it was determined in the negative—Gibbons and Dennis for, and Teackle against it.

The question then recurred, and was put, Shall the said bill pass? which was resolved in the affirmative—40 to 18—Teackle for, and Gibbons and Dennis against it. Donoho absent.—The bill was then sent to the Senate.

Tuesday, February 19.

By Mr. Donoho, the petition of sundry citizens of Somerset county, praying that the Levy court may be elected by the people; which was referred to Messrs. Donoho, Gibbons and Teackle.

By Mr. Teackle, An act to provide for the cession of territorial jurisdiction at James Island and at Clay Island, Somerset county, for the erection of light houses, or at such other point or points in the said county, as may be selected by the proper officers of the government of the United States for the erection of the said light houses.

Wednesday, February 20.

Mr. Dennis presented the petition of Levin Tyler, of Somerset county, guardian to Samuel C. Broughton, Patty Ann Broughton and Rebecca Broughton, the infant children of Anne Broughton, deceased, residing in said county, praying the passage of an act for their relief, as respects the payment of the debts of the deceased; which was referred to a select committee consisting of Messrs. Dennis, Gibbons and Teackle.

In consequence of receiving a whole week's legislative proceedings by yesterday's mail, we are obliged to omit the most important articles, because of their length, for our next paper.

MARRIED, on Wednesday last, the 20th inst. Mr. Thomas I. Aires to Miss Mary A. Lowes.

On the same day, Mr. Adam Hitch to Miss Eveline Malone.

On the 16th inst. Mr. Isaac Parks to Miss Esther Lankford.

On the 20th inst. by the Rev. Mr. Henry, Mr. Salathiel Griffith to Miss Hetty Harris.

On the 21st inst. Mr. Andrew Adams to Miss Amelia Moore, all of this county.

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Lankford, administrator of Pierce Riggin, against Henry I. Riggin, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—One negro man Jim, 1 woman Ann, 1 do. Nelly, 1 do. Easter, 1 boy Dave, 1 girl Margaret, 1 do. Case, 1 do. Jane, 1 do. Eliza, 3 head of horses, 2 yoke of oxen, 4 head of cattle, 20 head of hogs, 25 head of sheep, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 3 pine do. 1 stand, 1 lot of earthen ware, 1 dozen chairs, 1 sofa, 2 trunks, 1 lot knives and forks, 1 grind stone, 1 hand mill, 1 cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat fan, 1 lot of casks, 1 cider mill, 1 cross-cut saw, 1 hand saw, 3 ploughs, 3 harrows, 3 axes, 1 lot of iron, 500 bushels of corn, 11 stacks of fodder, 1 lot of flax in the straw, 2 pair of andirons, 3 ox chains, 3 ox yokes, 6 hives with bees, 1 lot of tin ware, 1 lot of cooper's ware, 1 looking glass, 2 guns, 1 tract of land called and known by the name of Gray's Purchase, containing 100 acres more or less; Dudley, 50 acres; Rowley-Hill, 50 acres; part of a tract called Unity Enlarge, 42 acres; Pivilege, 30 acres; part of Privilege, 20 acres;—part of Philip's Conclusion, 200 acres; part of Friends Assistance, 90 acres; and part of Pasturage, 20 acres, which I shall proceed to sell at said Riggin's house, on Thursday the 20th of day of March next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

Feb. 26, 1828

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Thomas Goddard against Elijah Culver, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—A part of a tract of land called Morris's Lot, containing 120 acres, more or less, and I hereby give notice that on Tuesday the 18th March next, at the Court House door, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock P. M. I shall proceed to sell the life estate of said Culver, in and to the above mentioned land, to the highest and best bidder for ready cash.

ROBERT STEWART,
Feb. 26 late Shff. S. C.

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias to me directed, will be sold at public sale, on Thursday the 20th day of March next, at 10 o'clock A. M. on the premises, the following property, viz: One negro man Jim, 12 head of hogs, 1 clock, 1 side board, 1 corner cupboard, 2 beds and furniture, 15 stacks of fodder, more or less, 100 bushels of corn, more or less, 6 chairs, 8 hives with bees, & 1 wheat fan, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of Henry I. Riggin; to satisfy the claims of Henry Lankford, Cottingham and Dickerson, Parker Dickerson, Isaac Pewsey, James Bloyd and William White, and will be struck off to the highest and best bidder for cash.

JOSEPH RICHARDS,
Feb. 26 Constable.

To one of our Delegates at Annapolis we are indebted for a copy of the following bill, which has passed both houses of our State Legislature without amendment:

A BILL, entitled, A further additional Supplement to the Act, entitled, An Act for the relief of sundry insolvent Debtors.

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That from and after the passage of this act, it shall be the duty of any county court, or of any judge of any county court, or of any justice of the orphans court, to whom application may be made for the benefit of the insolvent laws of this state, by any person or persons whatsoever, immediately thereupon to appoint a trustee for the benefit of the creditors of the said applicant or applicants; and the county court, judge or justice, as the case may be, shall not grant a personal discharge to the said applicant or applicants, until the trustee, so appointed as aforesaid, shall give bond, (with security to be approved,) to the state of Maryland, in such penalty as the said court, judge or justice, may prescribe, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his trust; and until the said applicant or applicants shall execute to the said trustee a good and sufficient deed of conveyance for all his estate, real, personal and mixed, (the necessary wearing apparel and bedding of himself or themselves, and his, or their families excepted,) for the benefit of the creditors of the said applicant or applicants; and until the trustee, so appointed, shall certify, in writing, to the said county court, judge or justice, as the case may be, that he is in possession of all the estate of the applicant or applicants, mentioned in his or their schedule.

Sec. 2. And be it enacted, That the said trustee, so appointed as aforesaid, shall have power and authority, in his own name, or in the name or names of such applicant or applicants, to sue for and collect, all debts and demands, due and owing to the said applicant or applicants, and to give and execute receipts, acquittances or releases of the same.

Sec. 3. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said trustee, upon such notice and terms as may be prescribed by the said county court, judge or justice, granting a personal discharge to the said applicant or applicants, to sell and dispose of, at public auction, all the said estate; real, personal and mixed, of the said applicant or applicants, to so conveyed to him as aforesaid, and the proceeds of said sale to distribute amongst the creditors of said applicant or applicants, agreeably to the provisions of the seventh section of the act, to which this is a further additional supplement, after deducting therefrom the commissions to be allowed him, as likewise prescribed in the tenth section of the said original act.

Sec. 4. And be it enacted, That said trustee shall have authority to convey and assure to any purchaser or purchasers, and to his, her, or their heirs, any estate, real, personal or mixed, which he may sell to him, her or them, agreeably to the provisions of this act.

Sec. 5. And be it enacted, That if at the time of the final hearing of his or their application in the county court, to which his or their petition may be returnable, no interrogatories or allegations shall be filed, or if filed, shall have been satisfactorily answered, or decided in favor of such applicant or applicants, that then it shall be the duty of the said court to extend to the said applicant or applicants, final discharge, without the assent of his or their creditors.

Sec. 6. And be it enacted, That the voluntary confession of any judgement, in favor of any creditor or creditors, security or securities, made by any person or persons, with a view, or under an expectation, of being or becoming an insolvent debtor, shall be, and the same is hereby declared to be, an undue and improper preference to such creditor or creditors, security or securities, within the true intent and meaning of the 9th section of the act to which this is a further additional supplement.

Sec. 7. And be it enacted That all such acts and parts of acts of assembly, as may be inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be and the same are hereby repealed: Provided, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to extend to the city and county of Baltimore.

SUGAR CANE.—A letter from St. Augustine, to the editor of the Pensacola Gazette, mentions that the culture of Sugar Cane is becoming very general. Gen. Hernandez, who has a plantation thirty miles south of this place, calculates to plant nearly 300 acres the ensuing season. From 300 acres of cane, a clear profit of at least $30,000 may be made. This is far better than raising the finest Sea Isl and Cotton.

Business is rather lively there; the market was full of Yankee notions.—The season is delightful; they have had frost but two mornings and then very light.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

GAMBLING.

Mr. Editor,

The games of hazard or of skill which are so much the pastime, at public houses, are serious evils which should by all means not pass unnoticed. Let the "truth" be told "without reserve." It is known that cards were invented to amuse a hypochondriac—one of the kings of France. As for dice, they are daring violations of the 3d Commandment—and "the Lord will not hold him guiltless who taketh his name in vain." Chess and games of skill, as they are called, can never be rendered free from the charge of waste of time, and from the charge of vulgarity, even if they had had a Franklin for their advocate. He was far, however, from recommending them, but he sometimes would examine their nature and describe the mode of playing them.

Billiards, Bagatelle, &c. &c. &c. are combined of skill and hazard, and exhibit nothing to instruct or amuse a mind trained to thought, and furnished with stores of information. They are very ruinous to young men in particular, who having nothing stately to do, engage alas! in doing what is worse than nothing.

The associates at a billiard table are corrupting—the language often must be highly so—the hours kept very late and unseasonable—the interludes filled up with drinking, & the amusement closes with quarrels, or at least, with mortification for loss of bets, and with temptation, from this fact, to renew the game! The amount lost may be inconsiderable—but to play at all, for no money or for a small sum, is degrading. "Facilis descensus Averni." The finished gamester is a thorough-paced villian. He will not stop short of picking your pocket—of cutting your throat.

He will rob you of your last cent—and make you no returns for what he gains by fraudulent play. He is one of the worst pests of society and should be indicted and imprisoned wherever found. I have known of instances in which suicide has followed immediately upon the losses of one evening—and doubtless many an untimely death may be traced to the desperation produced by the adventures of a card table, and a billiard room.

This is a country, Mr. Editor, of free enquiry, and we may not be overstepping the bounds of decorum, if we ask what right a Legislature has to license a gambling table, or a public house that keeps one? Why not, as well, license the thief who picks my pocket, and raise a revenue from foot pads, provided they steal "secundum artem." Why should not gambling houses and their keepers be served in Maryland as they are in Virginia? They are there, I believe, compelled to leave the state, or quit their employment. What virtuous Legislators have we truly, who can not only refuse to abolish the practice, but who even sanction it, by considering gambling tables and gambling hotels lawful property, subject to such taxation, as other goods are. Awake, O arm of the Lord—tis time for Thee to work, for men make void Thy law.

I am, sir, yours truly, G. D. H.

Baltimore Prices Current.

BALTIMORE, FEB. 22.

FLOUR, best family,		$6 25
	Susquehanna,	4 75
WHEAT, best white, p. bu.		95a110
	red do	95
CORN,		35a36
RYE,		45
OATS,		21a23
WHITE BEANS,		80a100
PEAS,		40a50
CLOVER SEED,		4 50a5
FLAXSEED,		75a80
FEATHERS,	do	27
PORK, Baltimore mess		13a14
	prime	9 50
	Northern mess	13 00
	prime	9 00
	Susquehanna mess	12 00
	prime	9 00
BACON, middlings, &c.		7 00
	Country assorted	7 50

A Candidate.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the citizens of Somerset county, that he is a Candidate to represent them in the next House of Delegates.

BRITTINHAM HULL.

Feb. 26, 1828. tk

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of JOSIAH HEATH, late of Somerset County, deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit their claims with the vouchers thereof properly authenticated, with the Clerk of said County Court, on or before the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next.

BURTON CANNON,
Feb. 26. gk Trustee.

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of Samuel Darby are hereby notified to attend in Somerset County Court, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, if any they have, why the benefits of the insolvent laws of Maryland shall not be extended to him.

Feb. 26. ekp

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

WE think it necessary to remind our patrons, that the 52nd No. of this paper, (which will be issued on the 25th of next March,) will complete one year since the establishment of a printing office at Princess-Anne. After that period THE VILLAGE HERALD shall be considerably enlarged, and improved, by lengthening the columns and adding one to each page. This, we conceive, will be the most substantial token of gratitude we can offer those who, by their kind patronage, have enabled us to promise, with certainty, the contemplated alteration.

It may not be needless here to mention, we still remain decidedly of the opinion that the better way to conduct our paper, is, to keep without the arena of political controversy—exclusively devoting our columns to the chronicling of foreign and domestic intelligence, and the furtherance of instruction by giving a miscellany of usefully interesting and amusing matter.

The importance of agricultural information is obvious to every one—though such knowledge, in this section of our country, is not duly appreciated. Where papers—devoted entirely to the farming interest—have been extensively circulated,—there those who till the soil have been incalculably benefited by placing a proper estimate on intelligence relative to their vocation. May not we then hope that the appropriating of a portion of our paper to the invaluable science of agriculture, will be acceptable to, and command the attention of, those who engage in its pursuit? Surely we may; and we shall therefore put in requisition every means within our reach to render this department of our paper worthy the notice of every practical farmer.

The advantages of economy—its absolute necessity in the present condition of our country—and its being more praise worthy than prodigality, are simple facts, which need no support, because they are the dictates of common sense and receive the assent of the mind as soon as proposed;—And it would be contrary to the known principles which direct and influence men to good and beneficial actions, to suppose we should feel indifferent to that which concerns our individual interest—which tends to increase or diminish our property—to add to or take from our happiness:—Hence, considering the interests of our patrons, and our own convenience and profit, we shall on the enlargement of our paper, (which will be on the 1st of next April) adopt the following

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance; or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued until at the editor's discretion, until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

Note.—In order to obviate all misapprehensions, we would most distinctly state, that all our original subscribers will come under the above conditions immediately on the commencement of the next volume; And every one who subscribed since the commencement of the present volume, will come under the new terms on the expiration of the time for which his name was entered.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

, A gradually increasing circulation of the Herald enhances the advantages offered by it as an advertising medium, which, we trust, will be readily appreciated.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

CAUTION.

ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing, or taking any assignment, or transfer whatever, on a Note of Hand, which James Smith, of Somerset county, holds against me, dated 17th day of September, 1821, amounting to twelve hundred dollars, as the payment of said note will be disputed by the subscriber.

DAVID LANKFORD.

Feb 11th—19. km

THE
AMERICAN FARMER,

Is published in weekly numbers of eight quarto pages,

By J. S. SKINNER,

Postmaster of the City Baltimore,

AT $5 PER ANNUM, TO BE PAID INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

Fifty-two numbers make a volume of convenient form, and the last one is accompanied with a title page and minute index. The following brief tables of the contents of the four numbers of the current volume, all of which may yet be had, will show that the American Farmer is devoted to Scientific and Practical Agriculture; Rural and Domestic Economy; Gardening; Internal Improvements; and Readings adapted to Females, and especially to the stations and duties of Mothers and Mistresses of Families. The American Farmer contains also a great number of useful recipes and an exact account of the prices going at the time of publication, not only of the chief staple articles of the country, but also of the various articles and productions which are sold in the common market. Not one word of politicks is ever permitted to appear in it.

Tho' many papers have a greater number of subscribers, few circulate over a wider space of our country.

When an original number fails of being received by the mail, another will be sent.

A few sets of the previous volumes are on hand. A single number will be sent to any one who may desire to see a specimen of the publication.

Persons wishing to subscribe may inclose a $5 note, directed to the Editor, and at his risk, by the mail.

Contents of No. 1.—March 23.—The Agriculture of Modern Italy, describing their implements, the care and kinds of Cattle, and the management of Dairies: description of Farm Houses, Laborers, &c. &c.—Agriculture, as influenced by geographical circumstances.—Treatise on the culture of Barley, by Judge Buel—Sheep: remarks on the management of them, and comparison between South Down and Dishley, by Joseph Kersey—On Grasses and other Plants No. 1, by G. Sinclair—Notices of pernicious and unprofitable Plants, how to extract them—View of the Cotton Trade—Hints of Mothers on the management of Children—Influence of Women on the happiness of Society—Ladies in Town and Country compared—A Female model in real life—Hyacinths, Carnations, Double Daisies, when to plant and how to manage—Sporting Olio—Distemper in Dogs, how to cure with laudanum—Trotting Match—Notice of Henry, competitor of Eclipse—Recipes. For scouring Carpets, Hearth Rugs, &c. &c.—To Dye Cotton a Buff color—To cure the Tooth Ache—For Indigestion or Sour Stomach, given to the Editor by an eminent Physician—Advertisements connected with Farming and Gardening—The Price Current, minute and particular.

No. 2.—March 30th—Science of Agriculture—Origin and principles of Culture, as derived from the study of Vegetables—Queries on various subject connected with Agriculture and Horticulture—Remarks on the distribution of Vegetables—Varieties of Fruit Trees, esculent herbaceous plants, florists' flowers, hardy timber trees, shrubs, &c.—On Grasses and other Plants, No. 2 by G. Sinclair,—Notices of pernicious and unprofitable Plants, continued—On the selection of Seed Corn, by Joseph Cooper—Cultivation of the Potatoe in New York, with a notice of its origin—On the select. of Milch Cows, by T. Pickering—Rapid growth of the Plane Tree—Maple Sugar, manufacture of, in the state of New York—Proper directions for Felling Trees—Cockroaches, how to destroy them—Bad effects of Vanity and Affectation—Remarks on Delicacy—Height of celebrated English Race Horses—Duck Shooting—Game Shooting—Authentic pedigree of Clockfast—Wild Pigeons—Advent of the Martins—Animal Longevity—Recipes. To make an excellent Family Wine—Current Wine—Elder Wine—To stain Wood a fine Black—To make Nankin Dye—Description of "Mark Anthony" and Rinaldo—Large Carrot.

No 11.—June 1.—Observations on the value of Orchard Grass—Remarks on the past and present culture of Maryland lands, No. 1—On the quality of the Nankin Cotton, cultivated in North Carolina—On Grasses and other plants, from G. Sinclair's Hortus Gramineus, with notes, &c. Festuca pratensis Meadow fescue, Holcus lanatus, Wolly soft-grass, Salem grass, or white timothy. No. 10, continued—Charles E. Rowan on Smith's Plough—Early Mowing—Prospect of Crops in Virginia—On the Corinthian grape, or Zante Currant—Mr. Prince's desirable White Rocket and Corinthian Grape—On the structure of Ice-houses, by Mr Boardley, of Maryland—Medical Essays, No. 2, on the food and management of Infants—Sale of the late Duke of York's Stud—Recipes from Mason's Gentleman's Farrier, Mash, Sit fasts, and Saddle galls—Game Shooting in England—Manufacture of Flannels in New England, with remarks by Mr. Niles—Chinese Agricultural Fete—Recipes, an Indian cure for the bite of a Snake, To cure Gravel Walks—On the inspection and exportation of Tobacco—Editorial. Prices current at Baltimore, with statements of actual sales.

No. 12.—June 8.—Observations on the different classes of Farmers, and on the injurious error of occupying more land than can be cultivated properly, by Lorain—On Grasses and other Plants, from G. Sinclair's Hortus Gramineus, with notes, &c. (Poa Nervata, nerved meadow grass; Phleum pratense, meadow cat's tail, or timothy grass; Lolium perenne, rye grass)—On Maryland lands, addressed to farmers, emigrants and other settlers—On the culture and management of Sheep and Wool—Hemp raised in New York—Pinching off Potatoe Blossoms—Melocoto de Olor, or small sweet scented melon of Colombia—Extraordinary Pear Tree—Large Celery—Essay on preparing Animal Food, boiling, roasting, frying, broiling, baking, &c.—Whiskey Vinegar for pickles—The Rail Road at Mauch Chunk—Steam Engine for raising water on the Union Canal—Maternal Love—Remarkable Equestrian Expeditions—Spiders' Thread—Dissection of the Old and New Testament—Meteorology of May at Baltimore—Frost at Campbell's Station, Tennessee—Extraordinary Pine Tree—Races at Canton, near Baltimore—Pedigree of Sir Solomon—Editorial—Prices current at Baltimore, from actual sales.

NOTICE.

I hereby give notice to my creditors for them to appear at the County Court, to be held for Somerset County, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, (if any they have) why I shall not have the benefit of the insolvent laws of Maryland.

JOSHUA REECE.

Jan. 22, 1828. k

SALE FOR CASH.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Venditioni Exponas, issued by the Clerk of Somerset county court, and directed to me, Elijah Parsons against Josiah Morris and George Jones, Elizabeth M'Bryde and Elijah Parsons against William Hopkins, will be sold at the Court House door, in the town of Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the 11th day of March next, between the hours of one and two o'clock, P. M. the following property, to wit: two head of horses, one gig, and two yoke of oxen, the property of Joshua Morris.—Also, two head of horses, two yoke of oxen, the property of George Jones—Also, part of a tract of land called Kentucky, containing 250 acres, more or less, the property of Wm. Hopkins.

ROBERT STEWART,
Late Shff. of S. C.

Feb. 12, 1828. k4

NOTICE.

THE Levy Court will meet at Princess Anne on Tuesday the 8th day of April next, on which day between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock, will be offered to the lowest bidder, the removal of all the stakes remaining from the setting of wears in Monokin river and each of its branches, in accordance with the late act of Assembly, making it the duty of said Court to have the same removed.—The work is to be accomplished on or before the 20th of June next.

JOHN WOOLFORD, Sen.
President L. C.

Feb. 19, 1828. ktw

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of THOMAS JONES, (of Thomas,) are hereby notified that he has applied to Somerset County Court, for the benefit of the insolvent laws of the state of Maryland, and that the first Saturday of May Term next of said court, is the day appointed for his appearance before the judges of said court to answer such allegations and interrogatories as may be propounded relative to his application; at which time and place the creditors of the said Thomas are notified to attend and shew cause, if any they have, why he should not receive the benefit of the insolvent laws as prayed for.

Feb. 19, 1828. k

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by James Dennis, a justice of the peace, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Hyland against Lucretia Dickerson and Zaccheus Street, I have taken in execution the following property, viz: one hundred acres of land, more or less, known by the name of Evans Second Chance, as the property of said Street, which will be sold on Saturday the 8th of March, at White-Haven, to satisfy the aforesaid writ and cost. Sale to commence at the hour of three o'clock P. M.

THOS. JONES, Constable.

Feb. 19. jkq

BLANK BILLS OF SALE,

Printed on fine Paper.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

STANZAS.

'Tis sweet to think, that when I die,
There's one will hold my languid head,
And let me on her bosom lie,
Till every breath of life is fled.

And when these beaming eyes shall close,
And lose, at last, their fading ray,
For ever fix'd in deep repose,
She'll watch beside my lifeless clay.

'Tis sweet to think, that, when I'm dead,
Her eye will pour its softest tear,
Her hand upon my green turf shed
The sweetest flowrets of the year

'Tis sweet to think, we both shall lie,
Ere long, within one common tomb,
Till, from death's bonds released, we fly
To those bless'd realms beyond its gloom.

THIS IS LOVE.

To sigh for hours at beauty's feet,
To start when rival steps draw near,
With ardent warmth her glance to meet,
And pour soft flatteries in her ear;
To kneel, till won by fairer forms
And brighter eyes, and then forsake,
And while new hope, new fancy warms,
To leave her trusting heart to break:
This passion haunts our earthly span—
This is the wavering love of MAN!

To seek one form in early youth,
To court no gaze, no vow beside,
To hold through life an holy truth,
Which firmest proves when deepest tried.
And like the diamond's sparkling light
Can halls and palaces illume,
Yet shines more cheering and more bright
In scenes of darkness and of gloom:
This faith descends from realms above,—
This, this is WOMAN's changeless love.

SERENADE.

Awake, love, awake!
No rude breeze is breaking
The wave on the lake,
Or the aspen leaf shaking;
The stars in high heaven
Are whispering their love;
The lesson that 's given,
Oh! come, then, improve.

Love's spirit is roving
Abroad o'er the earth;
And young hearts are proving
Joys to which he gives birth;
The soft dews are kissing
The lips of each flower;
Love's self is impressing
His seal on the hour.

Awake, then, awake!
I have tales for thy ear,
And fond vows to make
Which none others should hear,
I would breathe to thy bosom
My affection and truth,
And bright hopes that but blossom
In the springtide of youth.

ZELIA.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

The birth, life, miracles and death of the Lord, Jesus Christ, are a theme of sufficient breadth to fill the most expanded capacity, and with admiration and astonishment to entrance it. The long expectation of the advent of the Messiah—the general belief of such an event to be realized in the history of this world, and the important consequences anticipated as its result, are strongly marked in the records of inspiration. The Jewish Seer beheld them—the Divine Prophet foretold them. They accordingly came to pass and angels sang their fulfilment, over the plains of Bethlehem. Glory to God, in the highest—Peace on earth and good will to man. What joy must they have felt—what joy should we feel. For us, He was born—for us He bled—and for us He ever liveth to intercede. Angels needed not, in innocence a Saviour—Angels had none provided, when they fell. For their seduction of our first Parents, they forever remain, at war with Immanuel—and He shall bruise the head of the Old Serpent. Here we behold the sovereignty of the Most High, in His election of man, to the passing by of Angels.

'Twas Mercy filled the throne,
And Wrath stood silent by,
When Christ was sent with pardons down,
For rebels doomed to die.

What shall we say in return for this wonderful love? What caused the Almighty thus to condescend? His sovereign will and pleasure! Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight. Let none suppose this to be an arbitrary choice—it is founded in the highest reason—the Divine Justice & Wisdom. Man may, now, make his salvation incompatible with the perfections of God, as the fallen Angels appear to have done, by wilful transgression; against which the most pointed denunciations, in all the Word of God, are aimed. The blood of the Lord Jesus may be trampled upon, and sore vengeance will be the consequence. The only way to avoid this dreadful doom is to seek refuge from the Divine displeasure in that blood, and daily apply it by faith for renewed pardon, and peace with God. Now, what is the duty of your readers, Mr. Editor, in regard to this stupendous salvation which is to be had thro' the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ? It is to embrace it, without money and without price—freely offered, let it be freely and fully received, and the consequence shall be most happy. Let this overture, now made in the name of the Most High, through His only-begotten and well-beloved, Son, not be carelessly read, nor let it be rejected. It is of the most weighty moment and consideration to all of us—Let none exempt himself from the duty of embracing the Divine Deliverer from impending wo. Let none say, I pray thee, have me excused.

There is no excuse for such.

J. M.

WARNINGS TO QUIT.

"Inaudible, the chilly foot of age Steals on our joys, and drives us from the Stage." Juvenal.

The inconsistencies of men are endless; we are most alarmed at what we most wish for, and most certain of what we treat, as if they were matters of doubt, viz: old age and death. In sincerity, there is no person who does not wish to live to a good old age; yet we deceive ourselves, and act as if age, instead of being honorable, were a disgrace to those who possess it: we deny our age, disguise the traces of time; but the reason for all this is, that we wish to put off thinking on the last scene of life; so that, come when it will, it is sure to steal upon us like the foot of the assassin, unheard and unobserved. To say that such conduct is absurd and unwise, would be merely pointing a self-evident fact, which every one knows; but we will prove that men are ridiculous as well as criminal, in cherishing these delusions, which impose upon none but themselves, and that those who are taken by surprise in the decline of life (we except, of course, those whom accident, war or any other premature mortal blow, mingles with the dead) have many "warnings to quit," which they cannot help perceiving, but to which they are wilfully deaf, and blind, and insensible. When, in the cold evening of the autumn of life (its close) which borders on the winter, the once luxuriant crop of hair droops and decays, and might make a polished forehead venerable, the declining beau affects to be astonished; cannot think what makes his tresses fall off; buys a scalp; flies to M'Alpin, or Ross, or Beaumont, or reads the papers in quest of a nostrum to bring back returning summer to a winter's front; chuckles when he sees the artificial quite outdo what once was natural; thinks that he looks vastly well, and neglects this useful lesson, which is a "warning to quit." When the thinned locks become iron gray, and, if let alone, would exhibit the reverend patriarchal silver, the affrighted coxcomb swears that too much thought, care, fear, climate or any cause but the real one, has changed the color of his hair before its time, and straight he applies to some one to teach him to die, not as he ought, but to dye his piebald crinosities, whiskers and all. When, like an actor who dont die naturally, the black is rusty, or the brown is overdone; the roots occasionally betray the counterfeit, but his humbugging mirror persuades him that all is well; and acquaintances, either to flatter or turn him into ridicule, are surprised how improved he is in his looks: and thus he bestows not a tho't on this "warning to quit." Summer and autumn are gone by, and the untaught Sexagenarian wonders that his voice is not so strong as it was; he cannot perform vocally, as heretofore; it must be a bad cold; yes, but it lasts a whole year, with no improvement: he will take pectoral lozenges. Then, again, he cannot ride so boldly as formerly, nor walk so great a distance, nor drink so much wine, the want of practice, a town life, a d——d nervous hand, making a little too free, having got too indolent, a bad house, or a touch of the rheumatism, these must be the causes; and he will take to regular exercise, change the air, keep better hours, and be sure to rally: he tries all these, but they fail; he has forgotten these "warnings to quit."

My lord is sixty-three; it is, as he allows, a ticklish epoch—a climacteric, as would-be-wise heads call it: but he looks quite charmingly, and if he gets over this said climacteric, he thinks that he may go on to a hundred years old; he has a fine stomach, a commanding voice, tolerable spirits, and spells well; but, it is true, he cannot see so clearly nor hear so distinctly, and he has given over dancing and hunting, and forgotten all that he had learned, and memory deserts him when most wanted; it is of little consequence to him; he heeds it not, but is as haughty and overbearing, as tho'tless and improvident as ever: yes, memory has indeed deserted him, for he remembers not these "warnings to quit."

Lady Flora loses a tooth; it must be an accident, yet her ladyship has long since passed the half century: a false one will do as well; true, but it is not the same; we lose a friend, and can a new acquaintance replace him? The leaf falls and we heed it not; another succeeds it in time, but man has no second spring; poor Lady Flora! thou can'st not take a new lease of thy life; thou art but a tenant at will, and this was a "warning to quit."

Sir Owen Overreach is only forty-five, he rolls in riches; aye, and he is rolling down the hill, yet he takes no count of time, he has only time to count his cash; his constitution however, gives way, appetite fails, and he is an epicure; sensuality grows blunt, and it is his idol: strength leaves him, yet his inclinations are vicious and imperious; beauty smiles on him, yet he follows her, and groans in the struggle betwixt fondness and avarice; his heir looks as if he wished to eject him; self-love yet misguides him, and to the climate of India, the want of novelty, the monotony home, and the presumption of his apparent successor, he attributes all this: he will use tonics, visit the continent, take a fresh favorite, and keep the young rascal out of his estate as long as he can; his moveables he will leave to whom he likes; 'tis all in vain: the clay is mortgaged, death will soon foreclose, his lease is nearly expired, yet he attends not to these many "warnings to quit."

Flirtetta enjoys the finest possible health, her appearance is wonderfully youthful for her age, and that she conceals from all her acquaintances; but her temper and spirits are much altered, she is petulent and complaintive, dissatisfied with every body and every thing; the very seasons (she assures us) are changed; the young men of the age are metamorphosed from gallant courtiers into horse-jockies and coachmen; they are more attentive (she protests) to the equine and canine race than they are to the soft captivating sex, whose absence made even Paradise a lonely gloom. Formerly, when she went to court or to the opera, to Ranelagh and to the Festine rooms, to the Pantheon masquerade and to Kensington gardens, she had a legion of admirers in her train; her very look was imperative: now she is forced to pass to the optative mood, with "dear me, colonel, I wished I could find some one to call my carriage:" she paints in the prettiest style imaginable, yet cannot find an amateur to admire her art; she bears the richest and most attractive perfumes about her still tall and elegant person, yet is she (poor dear Flirtetta) sadly

"———doom'd to blush unseen,
"And waste her sweetness on the desert air."

This is insupportable to her; and every "At Home," or Soiree which she attends, adds to her mortifications, in consequence of the neglect, which she experiences, and makes her look dejected the following day: her milliner can no longer satisfy her, and she is changed weekly; her dress-maker still bolsters up her credit as to shape and make, but no colour now looks perfectly becoming, and she cannot think why she is so thin in the face, whilst she preserves an agreeable em bon point in her person. Alas! alas! the magnetical day is gone by; auburn tresses, floated on a block ere they were fitted to Flirtetta's forehead, have nothing provoking in them like those of Belinda;—Ranelagh, the Pantheon, and the pedestrian display of the gardens, passed away together: some are huddled with the dust; other frequenters of the carriage-ride have eclipsed the setting or set stars of her time; the lengthened visage, spare cheek, and fireless eye, together with those lines of demarkation, rudely yclept wrincles, point out the march of time, from which the withering spintress is flying whilst overtaken, a direction post cannot more distinctly indicate the road before her; these, all these, are so many "warnings to quit."

Unnatural parents (made such by vanity) behold with surprise and envy there progeny rise in beauty, in vigor, and in talent; other young people thus gifted by nature, would claim our attention and applause, but memory forces on them a thirty or forty years' finished picture of themselves thus bloomingly breaking into life, and the copy of what they were seems to be wresting the palm of admiration from them; they overlook the higher interests which alone should attract them: the mother wishes to keep back the daughter whilst the father only beholds in his representative and heir of entail "a warning to quit."—If we possess a mansion, the foundation of which was shaken, whose columns were rent, whose pedestals were giving way, the surface of which seemed time-struck, and the roof of which was bent and gently inclined towards the earth, we should consider this as a warning sufficient, and should seek out for another and a more lasting habitation; in our woods and parks we should look steadfastly at the superannuated tree, whose trunk was hollowed out by the consuming hand of time, whose verdure was blighted, and whose sapless body merely encumbered the land, and showed the necessity of making place for the young sapling-successor; regret would take possession of a reflective mind on such an occasion;—but it would be its portion: even so is the house of clay, the tree of vitality; the hour glass is constantly warning us that the scythe follows it. Even whilst tracing these brief and perishable lines, the hand of the clock has twice glided round the circle of my dial; it is, worthy friends and indulgent readers, to you and to me, "a warning to quit."

JACQUES.

Refinement.—Should any one doubt the fact, that the people of the United States are the most learned, enlightened and classical people under heaven, let him peruse the effusions that are daily emanating from our political presses, Appollo and his handmaids, that were wont in olden time to caper about on the summit of the Phocian mount treading on flowers, breathing fragrance, and conversing with gods, have now become mere scullions and scavengers in the service of Adams and Jackson: ex gratia—an "Adams man" says,

Had General Jackson New Orleans lost.
The Presidential path he'd never crossed!

To which a Jackson man responds,

If Henry Clay had died at Ghent,
Would Adams have been Presi dent?

Most sublime couplets! equal to the magnificent maxim of Monsieur Jean Lenoir, the celebrated reformer—who declares, that

First to make men think at all,
Is, of all things, the prin-ci-pal.

Or, the rhyme of the Kentucky songster,

Come all ye bold Kentuckians, I'd have you for to know,
That for to fight the enemy, we're going for to go.

"Honor is the subject of my story."

We have to record another instance of engregious folly, emanating from false and puerile ideas of insulted honor. Two young men, clerks, we believe, attached to a dry good store in Maiden Lane, quarrelled lately about two females, following the interesting occupation of pea-nut sellers, at or near the Exchange. The cause of this deadly broil we cannot ascertain, but suppose it is set to the tune of "C'est l'amour, l'amour."—The fair damsels were, at all events, engaged in a traffic, "whose very mention will crudle the life blood' of Good Society; for, as a poetical correspondent of the Morning Courier says,

"Our theatres are pea-nut shops"—

we, therefore with due deference to the parties implicated, will suppose them simple huckster girls, honorable and reputable subjects for a quarrel between professed gentlemen. However,

"Great streams from little fountains flow,"
Great things from little pea-nuts grow.

a challenge was sent, and the 8th January appointed for the fatal rencountre. Seconds were of course appointed, who, were fortunately men of sense, and capable of discriminating between a due sense of propriety and conduct for which the principals should have been well breeched, and sent to their usual avocations.—The ferriages paid over Hoboken ferry, from whence, for economy's sake, they footed it to the "immortal field of honor.' The ground was taken, and blank cartridges secretly substituted by the judicious seconds; and, as the "fatal spring of all their woes," a pea-nut was introduced into each barrel in lieu of balls. The pistols were chosen, stations selected, and the signal given. Honor, immortal honor called them on; when lo! one of the combatant's pea nuts took effect, and winged by fate and gunpowder, struck his opponent on the very fount of feeling—the seat of honor. Smarting with the wound, which, by some instinct of the weapon, struck the very spot where children are wont to receive castigation, a reconciliation was effected and the parties returned home, free from all anguish fits of shaking, and as good friends as ever. Oh! trumpery! oh! Moses! As Rees would say, "this is too much."—[Noah.]

Qualifications for Congress.—"Why do you not present yourself as a candidate for Congress?" said a lady the other day to her husband, who was confined to his chair by the gout. "Why should I my dear?" replied he, "I am not qualified for the situation." "Nay but I think you are," returned the wife, "your language and actions are parliamentary.—When bills are presented, for instance, you either order them to be laid on the table, or make a motion to rise; though often out of order, you are still supported by the chair, and you often poke your nose into measures which are calculated to destroy the constitution."

When any body's behaviour disturbs you dismiss the image of the injury; and bethink yourself whether you have not been guilty of the same fault. Such reflections are the most certain way of becoming truly wise and pious

THE GENEROUS MASK.

A beautiful woman, of Broadnaxe, mourned for her husband, who had embarked in a vessel that was said to be shipwrecked. Many lovers, attracted by her youth and beauty, waited on her, to make her the offer of their hands, as soon as the news was confirmed that her husband had perished. The lady observed a great deal of circumspection in her conduct; however, wishing to give an answer to the offer of her lovers, she invited them to an entertainment at her house on one of the last days of the carnival. They were at play when an unknown mask disguised as a genius presented himself and sat down to play with the lady. He lost; and he insisted upon playing more, and he lost again—fortune went against him ten or twelve times in succession, for he seemed to shake the dice so that they might turn up against him. Others of the players tried their fortunes with him but they did not find their account in it. The lady sat down again, and gained an immense sum of money, which the mask seemed to lose with an air of gaiety and apparent pleasure, that astonished the spectators. Some said loud enough to be heard, that he gave away with prodigality and did not play. The mask raising his voice said —that he was the—was the—was the genius of riches; that he cared not for them, unless he could share them with the lady;—and that he professed nothing that he was not willing to fulfil. As he spoke, he pulled out several purses, some filled with gold and others with diamonds, which he placed before the lady, proposing to stake them against the most trifling sum she would choose to hazard. The lady, embarrassed by this declaration, refused to play.—They did not know what to think of this adventure—when an old lady of the company whispered to her neighbor that the mask was the devil,—and that his riches, his dress, discourse, and his abilities at play made it evident enough. The generous player heard it, and profited by it. He assumed the manner and voice of a magician—he spoke of several things that were known but to the lady herself:—he spoke several unknown languages,—performed many slight of hand tricks, and concluded by saying that he had come to demand one of the company that had been given to him; protested that she belonged to him, and that he was going to take possession of her, never more to quit her. Each one regarded the lady, who was at a loss what to think of the affair. The women trembled, the men smiled, and the genius continued to amuse himself. However the scene continued long enough to give them time to send for persons who began to interrogate the spirit, and were ready to exorcise; when the mask turned the whole into ridicule, with so much spirit, that the laugh was entirely on his side. At last he threw off the mask, and the scene was concluded by a cry of joy from the lady of the house. It was none else but her husband, who having gone to Spain, from thence to Peru,—where he became enrichened, and returned to Broadnaxe, loaded with an immense treasure. He had learned, on his arrival, that his wife intended giving an entertainment, at which he determined to be present without being known. He had assumed for that purpose the most fantastic appearance he could be present with.—The assembly composed of his relations and friends, congratulated his happy return, and left him with his happy and loving wife.

THE BUTTERFLY.

To be born with the spring, and to die with the rose,
To sip the fresh sweets of young flowers, ere they close;
To float on the wings of the zephyr at even,
And bathe in the rich flood of glory from heaven;
To shake from the wing the light spangles of gold,
And its course to the deep vaults of azure to hold;
Passing off from the bosom of earth like a sigh,
Is the magical life of a young butterfly.

It resembles Desire, which in search of new sweets,
Alights on each object of beauty it meets.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr. Zieber,

I read a piece in your paper not long ago, under the head of "Hands Off," since which I seldom, if ever, go into a printing office, but it involuntarily occurs to my mind. Being in an office several days ago, I heard something drop on the floor, when instantly flashed thro' my mind—"Hands off!" I write this merely to acquaint you that the piece had its desired effect with me, and trust I am not alone in this respect. I. P.

A counsellor being questioned by a judge, to know "for whom he was concerned," replied as follows: "I am concerned for the plaintiff, but I am employed by the defendant.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, MARCH 4, 1828. NO. 49.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis ($5 and upwards)	par
Easton ($5 and upwards)	par
Frederick ($5 and upwards)	par
Frederick County Bank ($5 and upwards)	par
Bank Westminster ($5 and upwards)	par
Hagers Town ($5 and upwards)	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co ($5 and upwards)	par
Elkton	[illegible]
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	[illegible]
Lynchburg Branches	[illegible]
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	[illegible]
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	[illegible]
Farmers' Bank	[illegible]
Wilmington & Brandywine	[illegible]
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	[illegible]
Branch Bank of Milford	[illegible]
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	[illegible]
Harrisburg Bank	[illegible]
Chester County Bank	[illegible]
Germantown Bank	[illegible]
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	[illegible]
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	20
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	5
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Feb. 12, 1828.

[SEAL] ON application of Geo. L. Ayres, adm. c. w. a. of Wm. Ballard, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of William Ballard—late of Somerset county, deceased,—all persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of August, 1828,—they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of February, 1828.

GEO. L. AYRES, Adm'r. of W. Ballard, dec'd.

Feb. 19, 1828. k

JOB PRINTING,

SUCH AS

Handbills, Cards, Blanks, PAMPHLETS, &c.

Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,

At the Office of the Village Herald.

THE AMERICAN FARMER,

Is published in weekly numbers of eight quarto pages,

By J. S. SKINNER,

Postmaster of the City Baltimore,

AT $5 PER ANNUM, TO BE PAID INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE

Fifty-two numbers make a volume of convenient form, and the last one is accompanied with a title page and minute index. The following brief tables of the contents of the four numbers of the current volume, all of which may yet be had, will show that the American Farmer is devoted to Scientific and Practical Agriculture; Rural and Domestic Economy; Gardening; Internal Improvements; and Readings adapted to Females, and especially to the stations and duties of Mothers and Mistresses of Families. The American Farmer contains also a great number of useful recipes and an exact account of the prices going at the time of publication, not only of the chief staple articles of the country, but also of the various articles and productions which are sold in the common market. Not one word of politicks is ever permitted to appear in it.

'Tho' many papers have a greater number of subscribers, few circulate over a wider space of our country.

When an original number fails of being received by the mail, another will be sent.

A few sets of the previous volumes are on hand. A single number will be sent to any one who may desire to see a specimen of the publication.

Persons wishing to subscribe may inclose a $5 note, directed to the Editor, and at his risk, by the mail.

Contents of No. 1.—March 23.—The Agriculture of Modern Italy, describing their implements, the care and kinds of Cattle, and the management of Dairies; description of Farm Houses, Laborers, &c. &c.—Agriculture, as influenced by geographical circumstances.—Treatise on the culture of Barley, by Judge Buel—Sheep; remarks on the management of them, and comparison between South Down and Dishley, by Joseph Kersey—On Grasses and other Plants No. 1, by G. Sinclair—Notices of pernicious and unprofitable Plants, how to extract them—View of the Cotton Trade—Hints of Mothers on the management of Children—Influence of Women on the happiness of Society—Ladies in Town and Country compared—A Female model in real life—Hyacinths, Carnations, Double Daisies, when to plant and how to manage—Sporting Olio—Distemper in Dogs, how to cure with laudanum—Trotting Match—Notice of Henry, competitor of Eclipse—Recipes: For scouring Carpets, Hearth Rugs, &c. &c.—To Dye Cotton a Buff color—To cure the Tooth Ache—For Indigestion or Sour Stomach, given to the Editor by an eminent Physician—Advertisements connected with Farming and Gardening—The Price Current, minute and particular.

No. 2.—March 30th.—Science of Agriculture—Origin and principles of Culture, as derived from the study of Vegetables—Queries on various subject connected with Agriculture and Horticulture—Remarks on the distribution of Vegetables—Varieties of Fruit Trees, esculent herbaceous plants, florists' flowers, hardy timber trees, shrubs, &c.—On Grasses and other Plants, No 2, by G. Sinclair,—Notices of pernicious and unprofitable Plants, continued—On the selection of Seed Corn, by Joseph Cooper—Cultivation of the Potatoe in New York, with a notice of its origin—On the select. of Milch Cows, by T. Pickering—Rapid growth of the Plane Tree—Maple Sugar, manufacture of, in the state of New York—Proper directions for Felling Trees—Cockroaches, how to destroy them—Bad effects of Vanity and Affectation—Remarks on Delicacy—Height of celebrated English Race Horses—Duck Shooting—Game Shooting—Authentic pedigree of Clockfast—Wild Pigeons—Advent of the Martins—Animal Longevity—Recipes: To make an excellent Family Wine—Current Wine—Elder Wine—To stain Wood a fine Black—To make Nankin Dye—Description of "Mark Anthony" and Rinaldo—Large Carrot.

No 11.—June 1.—Observations on the value of Orchard Grass—Remarks on the past and present culture of Maryland lands, No. 1—On the quality of the Nankin Cotton, cultivated in North Carolina—On Grasses and other plants, from G. Sinclair's Hortus Gramineus, with notes, &c. (Festuca pratensis Meadow fescue, Holcus lanatus, Wolly soft-grass, Salem grass, or white timothy,) No. 10, continued—Charles E. Rowan on Smith's Plough—Early Mowing—Prospect of Crops in Virginia—On the Corinthian grape, or Zante Currant—Mr. Prince's double White Rocket and Corinthian Grape—On the structure of Ice-houses, by Mr. Boardley, of Maryland—Medical Essays, No. 2, on the food and management of Infants—Sale of the late Duke of York's Stud—Recipes from Mason's Gentleman's Farrier, Mash, Sit-fasts, and Saddle-galls—Game Shooting in England—Manufacture of Flannels in New England, with remarks by Mr. Niles—Chinese Agricultural Fete—Recipes, an Indian cure for the bite of a Snake, To cure Gravel Walks—On the inspection and exportation of Tobacco—Editorial. Prices current of Baltimore, with statements of actual sales.

No. 12.—June 8.—Observations on the different classes of Farmers, and on the injurious error of occupying more land than can be cultivated properly, by Lorain—On Grasses and other Plants, from G. Sinclair's Hortus Gramineus, with notes, &c. (Poa Nervata, nerved meadow grass; Phleum pratense, meadow cat's-tail, or timothy grass; Lolium perenne, rye grass) —On Maryland lands, addressed to farmers, emigrants and other settlers —On the culture and management of Sheep and Wool—Hemp raised in New York—Pinching off Potatoe Blossoms—Meloeto de Oler, or small sweet seeded melon of Colombia—Extraordinary Pear Tree—Large Celery —Essay on preparing Animal Food, boiling, roasting frying, broiling, baking, &c.—Whiskey-Vinegar for pickles—The Rail-Road at Mauch Chunk —Steam Engine for raising water on the Union Canal—Maternal Love—Remarkable Equestrian Expeditions —Spiders' Thread—Dissection of the Old and New Testaments—Meteorology of May at Baltimore—Frost at Campbell's Station, Tennessee—Extraordinary Pine Tree—Races at Canton, near Baltimore—Pedigree of Sir Solomon—Editorial—Prices current at Baltimore, from actual sales.

SALE FOR CASH.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Venditioni Exponas, issued by the Clerk of Somerset county court, and directed to me, Elijah Parsons against Joshua Morris and George Jones, Elzabeth McBryde and Elijah Parsons against William Hopkins, will be sold at the Court House door, in the town of Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the 11th day of March next, between the hours of one and two o'clock, P. M. the following property, to wit: two head of horses, one gig, and two yoke of oxen, the property of Joshua Morris,—Also, two head of horses, two yoke of oxen, the property of George Jones—Also, part of a tract of land called Kentucky, containing 250 acres, more or less, the property of Wm. Hopkins

ROBERT STEWART, late Shff. of S. C.

Feb. 12, 1828. k4

NOTICE.

THE Levy Court will meet at Princess-Anne on Tuesday the 8th day of April next, on which day between the hours of 2 and 3 o clock, will be offerred to the lowest bidder, the removal of all the stakes remaining from the setting of wiers in Monokin river and each of its branches, in accordance with the late act of Assembly, making it the duty of said Court to have the same removed.—The work is to be accomplished on or before the 20th of June next.

JOHN WOOLFORD, Sen. President L. C.

Feb 19, 1828. k3w

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of THOMAS JONES, (of Thomas,) are hereby notified that he has applied to Somerset County Court, for the benefit of the insolvent laws of the state of Maryland, and that the first Saturday of May Term next of said court, is the day appointed for his appearance before the judges of said court to answer such allegations and interrogatories as may be propounded relative to his application; at which time and place the creditors of the said Thomas are notified to attend and shew cause (if any they have) why he should not receive the benefit of the insolvent laws as prayed for.

Feb. 19, 1828. k

NOTICE.

I hereby give notice to my creditors for them to appear at the County Court, to be held for Somerset County, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, (if any they have) why I shall not have the benefit of the insolvent laws of Maryland.

JOSHUA REECE.

Jan 22, 1828 k

Valuable Property at Private Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated on the north side of Wicomico Creek, Somerset county, Md. late the residence of Benjamin Dashiell, deceased, and known by the name of Dashiell's Lot. Vessels of the largest size can come up to this farm. Also, another tract of land lying on said creek. The whole comprising about 725 Acres. He has sown 90 bushels of wheat on the above lands which will be sold with the property.

He also wishes to sell a tract of land now the residence of Mr Levin Ballard, senior, known by the name of Moore & Cassel, situated on Menokin river, between the farms of Col. Wm. Jones and Dr. J. King.—This tract contains about 130 acres—and besides other improvements, there is an excellent brick house erected on the premises

As no person will purchase without viewing the property a further description is deemed unnecessary—and for other particulars please apply to

L. W. BALLARD.

Dec. 18, 1827. 4d

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Feb. 12th, 1828.

[SEAL] ON application of Geo. M. Willing, adm'tor. of Obadiah Stanford, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order.

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Obadiah Stanford, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 19th day of August next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of Feb. 1828.

GEO. M. WILLING, Adm'r. of O. Stanford, dec'd.

Feb. 12 k

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of WILLIAM REDDISH are hereby notified to attend in Somerset County Court on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May term next, to shew cause, if any they have, why the benefits of the insolvent laws of Maryland, shall not be extended to said petitioner.

Feb. 5, 1828. k

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Thomas Goddard against Elijah Culver, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—A part of a tract of land called Morriss's Lot, containing 120 acres, more or less, and I hereby give notice that on Tuesday the 18th March next, at the Court House door, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock P. M. I shall proceed to sell the life estate of said Culver, in and to the above mentioned land, to the highest and best bidder for ready cash.

ROBERT STEWART, late Shff. S. C.

Feb. 26

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias to me directed, will be sold at public sale, on Thursday the 20th day of March next, at 10 o'clock A. M. on the premises, the following property, viz: One negro man Jim, 12 head of hogs, 1 clock, 1 side board, 1 corner cupboard, 2 beds and furniture, 15 stacks of fodder, more or less, 100 bushels of corn, more or less, 6 chairs, 8 hives with bees, & 1 wheat fan, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of Henry I. Riggin, to satisfy the claims of Henry Lankford, Cottingham and Dickerson, Parker Dickerson, Isaac Pussey, James Bloyd and William Whaley and will be struck off to the highest and best bidder for cash.

JOSEPH RICHARDS, Constable.

Feb. 26.

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely affected with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondriacal, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER, Princess-Anne, Md

Nov. 20, 1827.

T. L. DISHAROON,

HATTER,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. k3

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, MARCH 4, 1828.

☞The Orphans Court of Somerset will sit on Tuesday next.

Extract of letter to the Editor, dated "House of Delegates,
Annapolis, March 1.

Dear Sir,

I send you a copy of the License Law, (as contained in the printed bill, with the amendments, &c.) which has been agreed upon in Conference, and may be *considered as passed both houses.

We have also agreed upon the auction bill, and general valuation of property, so as to include the commercial and floating, and funded capital, which hitherto has escaped tax—This with the bill for the better regulation of the Treasury may also be considered as passed. We have appropriated an addition of $20,000, annually, for the support of free schools."

* We shall publish this bill next week.—Ed.

In the House of Delegates, on the 20th ult. Mr. Teackle delivered several reports—one of which, from the committee on education, was accompanied by a resolution, "That the commissioners, trustees, and other authorities of the several literary institutions, receiving pecuniary aid from this state, shall each respectively, and the same are severally hereby required, to return, annually, on or before the first Monday of December, to the superintendent of public instruction, the amount of funds, or other aid received by them, detailing the mode of its application," &c.

Subjoined to this resolution, we find in the journal, an abstract of the returns of the trustees, commissioners, &c. of the several colleges, academies and schools, receiving funds or donations from the state—by which it appears that the free school fund of this county receive a donation of $648 40;—applied among different English schools, and for books—Tuition $9.

The trustees of Union Academy, Worcester county, a donation of $300, to pay teachers; tuition $9 to 25; 4 free students, 10 classical, 51 English and Mathematics.

The trustees of Salisbury Academy, Worcester c'ty., a donation of $200—2 teachers; tuition $12 to 24; 2 free students, 35 classical, and 41 English.

The trustees of Cambridge Academy, Dorchester, a donation of $500 to pay teachers; tuition $16 to 30; 5 free students, 32 classical, 28 English and Mathematics.

We also find the committee on education have offered the following resolution "That it shall be the duty of the sheriff in each and every county of this state, under the penalty of one hundred dollars, to make diligent inquiry, and to ascertain and report to the superintendent of public instruction, on or before the first day of December next, the number of white persons, residents of their respective counties, who are deaf & dumb," &c.

Accompanying the report made by Mr. Teackle, on the 19th ult. there is a statement exhibiting the aggregate of valuation, rate of tax per $100, amount of levy, and each charge of general expenditure, &c. which among other charges of minor import has the following valuation, &c. affixed to Somerset county, viz.

Aggregate of valuation	$1,647,315 00
Rate of tax per $100	80
Amount of levy	13,177 72
Commissioners of the tax and clerk	260 00
Alms-House	1,500 00
Roads and bridges	990 00
Ferries	971 00
Collectors' commission	1,270 00

Worcester County.

Aggregate of valuation	$1,343,809 00
Rate of tax per $100	74
Amount of levy	9,944 00
Alms-House	2,300 00
Collectors' commission	553 00

Dorchester County.

Amount of levy	12,597 82
Alms-House	4,000 00

Nothing else is exhibited in the statement, relative to this county.

The French Language.—We perceive by the last Philadelphia Album, received at this office, the editor of that literary periodical has come to the determination to publish, every fortnight, an essay in the French language. The language has become so extensively known, and so fashionably admired, that he thinks this course will prove acceptable to his readers.

NAVAL ACTION.—We abstract, necessarily in the most concise manner, from the Charleston Courier, the following particulars respecting the Mexican Brig of War Guerrero, and her commander, Capt. David H. Porter. If true, they furnish proofs of galantry almost unheard of in naval chronicles—they are as follows:

On the 9th inst. the Guerrero captured two Spanish Guinea-men—on the 10th she engaged the Spanish brigs, the Marte and Maria Amelia, one of 18 guns and 180 men, and the other 10 guns and 130 men. The brigs were beaten, but made their escape into Mariel. The Guerrero mounted 22 guns, and was manned by 136 men.

On the same day (apparently) she engaged the Frigate Lealtad, of 54 guns and 500 men, to which she stuck, after an engagement of two hours and twenty minutes duration. Captain Porter (the nephew of Com. Porter) was killed by a grape-shot at the end of the action. The Guerrero lost, it is said, 49 men killed—the number of wounded not known—The Spanish Frigate lost nearly 200 men.—Balt. Paper.

AFFAIRS OF THE EAST.

Departure of the Allied Ministers.—The question as to the departure of the Allied Ministers from Constantinople, is settled. On the evening of the 2d January, despatches were received by the Government, announcing the departure of the Ministers from the Turkish Capital. The Courier states, "after an extraordinary Council had been held, the Porte renewed its refusal to accept of the intervention of the Allied Powers. The Ambassadors, in consequence, demanded, it is said, their passports, which were again refused, upon which they prepared to quit the Turkish capital. It would appear, that with respect to the subject of England, France and Russia, there was no disposition on the part of the Turks to molest them in any way. The Government is stated to have been engaged in making every preparation for war, but nothing inconsistent with the usage of the most civilized States, had been attempted or appeared to be meditated on their part."

The Courier speaks of the Ambassadors, as a "crisis," but adds—"We are not yet in possession of data upon which to reason as to the immediate or remote results of this position of affairs. An anxious eye will be turned now to the movements on the Pruth."

It seemed to be anticipated at St. Petersburg that the peace with Persia would have some effect upon the Turks. A Petersburg Journal of Dec. the 14th, speaks of the termination of hostilities with Persia thus:—"This affair may very well hasten that which is now pending at Constantinople; for the Sultan must fear to be attacked by the Russians on a point where their operations would lead to still more serious consequences than on the European side."

Preparations for War.—All the accounts from Turkey which had reached Paris and London, concur in stating that every disposition for the commencement of the actual hostilities, was indicated by the Ottoman government; and it was the generally received opinion at Paris, that the Russian army will immediately cross the Pruth. An interesting letter from Warsaw, of Dec. 20, states, that the Grand Polish army of 40,000 men, had been put in motion to join Count Wittgenstein. But on this we are somewhat doubtful, as the regular advices from the Polish capital to the 17th Dec. do not prepare us for any immediate movement of the kind. The London Globe, moreover, says—"These flying rumors deserve but little attention. We believe the entrance of the Russian troops is quite unnecessary to the settlement of Greece: and therefore, it will not take place."

DIED, on Sunday night last, Mrs. ANN JONES, consort of Thomas Jones, (of Thos.) of this county.

The painful duty devolves upon us of announcing the decease of Major General JACOB BROWN, Commander in Chief of the Army of the United States. He expired at his residence in Washington, on the 24th ult., after a brief illness of three or four days, preceded by a general indisposition of longer duration.—Nat. Intel.

Continental Paper.—According to a report recently laid before Congress, in reply to a call for information on the subject, it appears that between the years 1775 and 1780, the money issued for the purpose of prosecuting the war of the Revolution, amounted to the incredible sum of $241,552,780.

From the Montreal Herald Feb. 6.

On Saturday last a most melancholy circumstance took place about sixty miles from this city. The day as many of our readers will recollect, was very cold, and at three o'clock in the afternoon, a heavy shower of snow began to fall. One hour before this a man named Bethune, and his wife and her brother, whose name is M'Geoch, and a girl 7 years of age also related, left the township of Godmanchester to cross over lake St. Francis on the ice, to Lancaster. The lake at this place is seven miles wide. They had gone about half way before the snow came on. This part of the journey they performed without much difficulty, the opposite shore affording them direction with regard to the course to pursue. When the snow was falling, however, they had no longer this advantage, and they consequently had to travel at random. The courses they took cannot be known, but it is certain that they continued their exertions for a long time after it was dark. At length the little girl sunk from fatigue and cold. Bethune lifted her up, and stripping himself of his coat wrapped it round her, but in vain; she expired in the midst of his exertions to preserve her life. The state of his wife next attracted his attention. The drowsy weakness which betokens the approach of the cold to the vital parts, was now obvious upon her, and he had the melancholy task of endeavouring to preserve her life. In spite of all his endeavours she also perished. M'Geoch was last seen by Bethune endeavouring to pursue his journey; but so much weakened as to be only able to travel on his hands and feet. The latter reached a friend's house on the north shore about midnight, and informed them of the melancholy events which we have just narrated. The night, however was too stormy for any one to go in the direction in which he had come, even if their so doing could have availed any thing.

Next morning several people set out in search of the bodies, and soon discovered those of Mrs. Bethune, and the girl. It was not, however, until Tuesday that the body of M'Geoch was found. He had crawled in the manner we have described about a mile and a half from the place where Bethune last saw him—but in the very opposite direction, from that which he ought to have followed. What renders this the more distressing is the fact that the same exertion, if properly directed would have brought him fairly over. The only survivor of this unfortunate party, in addition to the melancholy fate of his wife and relatives, has suffered severely from the cold, having been frost bitten in several parts of his body.

One circumstance in this melancholy tragedy deserves to be mentioned, and adds one of the many instances of canine fidelity. The party when set out had with them a dog.—The faithful animal remained all night with the corpses of the females and it was with difficulty that those who discovered them in the morning were permitted to approach.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Abstract of proceedings from Friday the 15th to Thursday the 28th ult. inclusive.

Bills, of the following titles, were severally reported:

By Mr. Donoho, An act to establish magistrates courts in the several counties of this state for the trial of assaults and batteries.

By Mr. Gibbons, An act for the relief of Richard Waller and the administrators of Josiah Broughton and Samuel Heath, deceased, securities of William S. Handy, late sheriff of Somerset county.

Mr. Linthicum, having asked and obtained leave to introduce a bill to be entitled, An act for the protection of sheep, in Anne-Arundel county, and for other purposes, it was, on his motion, Ordered, That a select committee of three members be appointed to prepare and report the same. Whereupon Messrs. Linthicum, Wells and Sellman, were appointed the said committee

On motion by Mr. Fitzhugh, it was Ordered, That the bill entitled, An act to establish a bank in William's-Port, in Washington county, be made the order of the day for to-morrow the 19 inst.

The Speaker announced a message, received yesterday from the senate by their clerk, returning the bill, entitled

An act to change the place of holding elections for vestrymen and church wardens, and the regular meetings of Somerset Parish, in Somerset county, severally endorsed "will pass."

Whereupon it was Ordered, That the said bill be engrossed.

By Mr. Hope, the petition of sundry inhabitants of Harford county, relative to the abolition of slavery in this state; which was referred to Hope, Ely, Mackey, Beall, Lansdale Harlan, Mills, Hitch and Lee.

By Mr. Steuart of Baltimore, the petition of Palmer Canfield, praying the state to refund to him the sum of two thousand dollars, and interest thereon, being the amount placed to the credit of the state by the petitioner, in the Union bank of Maryland, and afterwards paid into the state treasury, in compliance with certain laws of this state; the consideration for which said payment has failed, in consequence of the lottery commissioners not having superintended the drawing of certain lotteries, as required of them by the said laws; which was referred to the committee on claims.

Mr. Teackle from the committee on ways and means delivered the following report; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

The committee on ways and means, to which was referred an order to furnish to each member of this house, a list of the gross amounts of the levy lists of the different counties, including those directed by the corporation of the city of Baltimore, specifying each general charge of expenditure distinctly, and that the committee of claims provided for the printing thereof, have had the subject under consideration, and after an examination of the documents committed to them in relation to this referrence, have found the same insufficient to supply the requiring information. The committee, however, produced in the construction of a statement, so far as the limited, data would enable them, which is appended to this report, and may suffice as a common form for future returns to the legislature.—And considering the necessity of a clear and distinct statistical exhibition, such as that which is contemplated by the order in question, with a view to the amendment of any inequalities, or the correction of irregularities or abuses, which may be found to exist, and for the establishment of a general and equitable system of public charges throughout the state, and various purposes of legislation, the committee beg leave to present the subjoined resolution:

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of each and every of the clerks of the levy courts or commissioners of counties, as the case may be, and of the register of the city of Baltimore, in this state, under the penalty of one hundred dollars, on or before the first day of January in each and every year hereafter, to prepare and transmit to the treasurer of the Western Shore, a detailed statement of the aggregate of valuation, rate of tax per hundred dollars, amount of levy, and each general charge of expenditure, as full and complete as may be, in the several counties of this state, and in the city of Baltimore, in the form which accompanies this resolution, or as near there to as may consist with the said general charges, excepting so far as relates to the city of Baltimore, with respect to which the form shall be adapted to the charges of the said city, and the statement shall also exhibit an account of the money received in the treasury of the said county; and it shall be the duty of the said treasurer to report to the legislature in the second week of every session a general view of the said statements.

By Mr. Mercer, An act to prevent the evil practice of horse racing on public roads in Cecil county.

By Mr. Linthicum, An act for the protection of sheep in Anne-Arundel county, and for other purposes.

According to the order of the day, the house proceeded to the consideration of the bill reported by Mr. Fitzhugh, entitled, An act to establish a bank, and incorporate a company, under the name of The Washington County Bank, in Washington county; and in the progress of the second reading thereof, on motion, several amendments were made, when the question was propounded, Shall the said bill pass as amended? It was resolved in the affirmative, and the bill was sent to the senate for concurrence.

Mr. Harlan presented a petition from sundry inhabitants of Cecil county, praying that a law may pass empowering magistrates to issue attachments in all cases under fifty dollars, and for other purposes; which was referred to a select committee consisting of Messrs. Harlan, Thomas of Cecil, and Mackey.

On motion by Mr. Goldsborough, the bill reported by him, entitled, An act to reduce into one act the several acts of assembly relating to the civil jurisdiction of justices of the peace, and to repeal the acts of assembly therein mentioned, was made the order of the day for Monday next, the 25th inst.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, the bill reported by Mr. Donoho, entitled, An act to amend and reduce into system the several acts concerning elections, was committed to a committee of the whole house.

Whereupon the house resolved itself into a committee of the whole on the said bill; and after some time spent therein, the Speaker resumed the chair, when Mr. Hawkins, the chairman, reported, that the committee had, according to order, had the said bill under consideration, and made some progress therein, and that he was directed to ask leave for the said committee to sit again on said bill.

Ordered, That the committee of the whole house have leave to sit again on said bill.

By Mr. Dennis, An act for the relief of Levin Tyler, guardian to Samuel C. Broughton, Patty Ann Broughton and Rebecca Broughton, the infant children of a certain Ann Broughton, late of Somerset county deceased.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, the several orders of the day were postponed; and the house resumed the consideration of the unfinished business of Monday last, in referrence to the bill, entitled, An act to provide for the better regulation of the treasury department, with the amendments proposed and reported by the committee of the whole house. When,

On motion by Mr. Thomas of Cecil, the question was taken, That the further consideration of said bill and amendments, be referred to the first day of June next? And the yeas and nays being required by seven members, were taken and appeared as follow: Affirmative 32—negative 37—Teackle, Donoho, Gibbons and Dennis were of the latter.

Mr. Potter presented the petition of sundry citizens of Caroline county, praying that a tax may be imposed upon jugglers and actors; which was referred to a select committee, consisting of Messrs. Potter, Orrel, Jones, Douglas of Caroline and Dennis.

Mr. Ely presented the memorial of sundry citizens of Baltimore county, praying the people may be authorized by law, to elect, by ballot, justices of the peace and constables for the several militia company districts within said county; which was read, and ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. Thomas of Cecil, submitted the following order for consideration:

Ordered, That the committee on ways and means be instructed to inquire into the expediency of allowing pensions to such military officers and privates, as enlisted in Maryland, and were wounded in battle during the late war with Great Britain, and report thereon to this house.

Mr. Turner having asked and obtained leave to introduce a bill to be entitled, An act to take the sense of the people at the next general election, in the several counties of this state, on the expediency of electing one member of the senate in each county, and one from the city of Baltimore it was on his motion, Ordered, That a select committee of five members be appointed to prepare and report the same. Messrs. Turner Stevens, Boon, Watkins and M'Neil, were appointed the said committee.

Mr. Donoho, chairman of the select committee therein mentioned, delivered the following report; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

The committee to which was referred the petition of sundry citizens of Somerset county, praying that the justices of the levy court may be elected by the people, have had the matter under consideration, and devoted to it that serious and deep deliberation, which its intimate connection with, and immediate bearing upon the rights and interests of individuals, and the general welfare of the community obviously demand.

From an examination into the powers and prerogatives of this important tribunal, it appears, in effect, that it is a local legislature of paramount influence as respects not only the whole property, but the personal liberties of every inhabitant of the county, inasmuch as it possesses the privilege of taxation to any unlimited extent, the appointment and control of constables, at will and pleasure; with other high and commanding functions, and is virtually irresponsible for any breach or flagrant instance of mal administration, as from the practical force of eminent powers, and extensive patronage, this court ascends above the reach of remonstrance or complaint, so far, that very few are disposed to volunteer or prefer charges of impeachments; and if convicted of misconduct, they may levy the fine, be it ever so great, and all the costs, upon the county; and instead of submitting to the just judgement of the law, they thus insult the dignity of the state, and put its justice at defiance, as has been stated, and is of record in the proper office of Somerset county.

The committee have understood that the justices of the levy court have been continued from year to year, or displaced at the suggestion or recommendation of the delegation of the county, but being a practice not recognised by the constitution, and involving an invidious task, this is rarely resorted to except in cases of palpable incompetency, or for glaring acts of misdemeanor or malfeasance—and was it sanctioned by the constitution, the question then would arise, are the delegates in such cases as likely to exercise an independent suffrage as the common people of the whole county, who are subject to the taxation and legislation of this imposing and powerful body? The committee conceive that every member of this assembly will answer No, and in conformity to this conclusion will proceed to prepare a bill, which they believe will constitute a more efficient and useful board, whilst it will embrace the essential qualities of economy and equal justice in administration, and at the same time subserve the genius of our form of government, in applying the principle that taxation and representation shall be reciprocal and co-existent.

All which is submitted.

Alexander Donoho Chairman.

By order,

Jas. H. Milbourne, Com. Clk.

Mr. Hope, chairman of the select committee therein mentioned, delivered the following report; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

The committee to whom was referred the memorial of sundry citizens of Hartford county, relative to negro slavery, beg leave to report—

That the important subjects of the memorial have commanded their most serious and anxious attention. While your committee are compelled to acknowledge the inexpediency of submitting to the house, at the present moment, any system of legislation which might have for its object the abolition of negro slavery in this state, they cannot refrain from expressing their entire confidence, that the time is fast approaching when we shall be relieved from this grievous national calamity.—Your committee allude to the great and successful exertions of the American Colonization Society, in aid of which our state has not been backward in contributing.

While your committee are again compelled to deplore the impossibility of providing by law for the sudden removal of this great evil, they think their fellow-citizens are encouraged to press on in the encouragement of those means which have already been resorted to, and to strengthen the hope of final success.

We cannot now for obvious reasons, follow the examples which have been set us by our sister states to the north and east of us.

With them the evil to be subdued was a pigmy, with us it is a monster; with them a superfluous and decaying limb was to be removed; with us the destroying worm is to be sought for in the root. There, the system, full of health and vigour, submitted cheerfully to the simple cure; here the disease, exhibiting itself in its greatest strength and worst form must receive a different treatment, and be gradually subdued by persevering, but not abrupt remedies.

Such is the view your committee take of this subject. They beg leave to add, that at the last session of the legislature a donation of one thousand dollars was made to the Colonization Society, to be applied for the removal of free persons of color from this state to Liberia.

This appropriation is a permanent one, and the above sum is to be paid annually to the officers of the society as a contribution on our part to the great objects of their association.

Since the passage of this law, several of our sister states have followed our example to the extent of passing resolutions expressive of their confidence in, and respect for, this society, and from the growing importance and popularity of the institution, there is every reason to hope that in a short period of time, a large proportion, if not all the state governments, will be found contributing pecuniary aid to objects of so much benevolence, and such general concern.

In the opinion of your committee, the American Colonization Society is the great and last hope of the slave holding states. The plan of this society for removing gradually, and with their own consent, the whole black population of the country, to colonize on the western coast of Africa, is no longer a speculative one. The colonies have been established, and are flourishing to a great extent; hundreds of colored persons have already been transported thither at the expense of the company, and their population is constantly swelling with fresh arrivals from the United States. These colonists are widely extending themselves along the shores of that fertile and productive country; Civilization, letters, laws, religion and happiness, prevail among them, and the blessings of a free government are already theirs. Under such aspects, and with such advantages, both they and we have the surest hope that in a few years, free and enlightened nations will take place of our infant settlements. Your committee say our infant settlements, for since our appropriation for their support, we surely may claim some little merit in the work, and succeed, at least, (as all other states under the same circumstances must do,) to a co-protectorship of these colonies, with the society.

Your committee have no fear that Maryland will ever lose sight of her great stake in this enterprise, nor but what she will again and always, shew herself ready to act when suitable occasions present themselves. With our aid five hundred negroes were removed to Africa the last year, and when the society may find itself in sufficient strength to increase the annual number of emigrants from five hundred to five or ten thousand, your committee believe our government will not be found backward in making a proportional contribution.

Thomas Hope, Chairman.

By order,

D. Ridgely Com. Clerk.

The resolution proposing a subscription on the part of the state, of twenty thousand dollars, towards the completion of the turnpike road from the city of Washington to Cumberland, submitted by Mr. Lee, on the 6th inst. was read the second time, and, on motion by Mr. Lee, referred to the consideration of the committe on internal improvement.

The following bill passed the lower house on the 28th, and was sent to the senate for concurrence:

An Act to authorize the levy court of Somerset county, to contract for the removal of certain obstructions in Barren, Rewastico, Quantico and Wetipquin creeks, and their several branches, and to levy the expenses thereof upon the said county.

Contents of the last No. of the American Farmer, dated 22nd Feb.

Report of the Committee on Manufactures, in the House of Representatives in Congress, to which have been referred the numerous petitions and memorials on the subject of further protecting Duties on imports—Arthur Young's Agricultural Experiments, continued, on Oats and Buckwheat, with observations by J. Buel—On the Comparative Profit of the cultivation of Cotton and Sugar—Conquests and Improvements; or, Sword versus Plough—Extract of a letter from B. B. Cooper, Esq. on the Culture of Fruit Trees and Manufacture of Cider—The culture of the Vine and Manufacture of Wine in Virginia, by Josiah Lockhart—Letters to the Editor on the Baltimore and Ohio Rail road, by Wm. H. Denny, Esq., of Pittsburg—Poetry, Family Worship in a Cottage—Leap Year and Courtship—Pedigree and Performances of the blooded horses Pacolet and Monsieur Tonson; Stand of Monsieur Tonson for the ensuing season—Trotting Match at Montreal—Inquiries on Tapia and Plastering—Nett Produce of Post Office Department; Invention for making Plasterers' Laths, by Mr. Lewis Wernwag—Death of a Stranger in Gettysburg, Pa,—Immense number of Hogs driven to the South—Recipes, Cure for Deafness; To make Poultry lay eggs; Horse Chestnut dye; To Clean Mouldings of Carriages—Editorial, Distributions lately received; Alfalfa Seed from Com. Jacob Jones—Advertisements—Prices Current.

An Advertisement.

The cause of the free people of colour is constantly growing in importance, and in the interest it excites in the land, generally. Maryland has been among the First of the States, in extending to the cause of their Colonization, Legislative patronage.

This is as it ought to be, for Maryland has a vast proportion of free people of colour, living in her bounds.—The Society established for the purpose of Colonizing that unhappy race is becoming, every day, a more and more important object of National Patronage, and if Congress, when memoralized on their behalf, refuse the grant of funds from the U. S. Treasury, still the Nation can very effectively assist it, by the formation of State Societies and of County Societies, auxiliary to the African Colonization Society in Washington.

Will not the friends of the free people of color form an auxiliary in Somerset county?

MARRIED, on Thursday last, the 28th ult by the Rev. Daniel Davis, Mr. PURNELL B. CAREY, of Salisbury, to Mrs. PRISCILLA GARRETTSON, of this county.

On the same day by the Rev. James Denson, Mr. JAMES MEZICK to Miss CAROLINE ELZEY, of this county.

Baltimore Prices Current.

BALTIMORE, FRIDAY, FEB. 29.

FLOUR, best family,		$6 00
Susquehanna,		4 62
WHEAT, best white, p. bu.		95a110
red	do	96
CORN,		36a38
RYE,		47
OATS,		21a23
WHITE BEANS,		80a100
PEAS,		45a50
CLOVER SEED,		4 50a5
FLAXSEED,		75a80
FEATHERS,	do	28
PORK, Baltimore mess		13a14
prime		9 50
Northern mess		13 00
prime		9 00
Susquehanna mess		12 00
prime		9 00
BACON, middlings, &c.		7 00
Country assorted		7 50

District of Maryland, to wit:

[L. S.] Be It Remembered, That on the 17th day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the United States of America, LITTLETON AIRES, of the said district, hath deposited in this office the title of a Book, the right whereof he claims as author in the words following, to wit:

"TABLES
OF
DISCOUNT OR INTEREST,
ON EVERY CENT,
From 1 to 100, from 1 month to 10 years;
AND
ON EVERY DOLLAR,
From One to One Thousand, and
ON
Every Hundred from 1 to 6 Thousand,
INCLUSIVE
From 1 Day to 10 Years.
The whole computed at Six per Cent.

Together with examples shewing in what manner, by means of the tables, to ascertain the interest at Five, Seven and Eight per Cent."

In conformity to the act of the Congress of the United States, entitled "An Act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such works during the times therein mentioned." And also to the act, entitled 'An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned,' and extending the benefits to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints.

PHILIP MOORE.
Clerk of the District of Maryland

☞The above work is for sale at the stores of Mr. G. M. Willing, Mr. Wm. Done, and Messrs. Johnston & Suller, Princess-Anne. Also at the Village Herald office.

March 4 Price $1.

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Joshua Reace, in part, use of Edward Ballard, use of Jane Cottman, and in part use of William F. Gibbons against Hetty Ballard administratrix of William Ballard, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro woman Leah, one do. Betty, and one negro girl Silvy—Also one other writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to directed, at the suit of Henry White, against Hetty Ballard, adm'x. of James Ballard, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro girl Charlotte, and one woman Milly, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, on Tuesday the 25th instant, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writs.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

March 4. ck

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber has taken out letters of administration on the estate of Elizabeth Bayly, deceased, and being a resident of the Western Shore of Maryland, is anxious to close it before he returns home. All persons having claims against the said deceased are therefore desired to exhibit them for payment by the 15th instant, as on that day, or as soon after as possible, he will leave the county.

M. B. CARROLL.

March 4. km

NOTICE.

WILL be sold at Public Sale, on Thursday the 20th inst. at 10 o'clock, A. M. on the premises, the following property, viz—3 head of horses, two yoke of oxen, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 2 desks, 1 walnut table, 1 cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat-fan, 150 bushels of corn, more or less; 14 stacks of fodder, more or less, and 8 hives with bees, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of Henry I. Riggin, to satisfy county levy and officers' fees for 1825, 1826, and 1827, and will be struck off to the highest and best bidder for cash.

ROBT. STEWART, late Shff. & Col.

March 3—tk

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by Jacob W. Bayly, a Justice of the Peace for Somerset county, and to me directed at the suit of Joshua Hitch against Thomas Roberts, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit—Part of a tract of Land called Nelzy, containing fifteen acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises, on Wednesday the 26th instant, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

March 4. ck

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of Samuel Darby are hereby notified to attend in Somerset County Court, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, if any they have, why the benefits of the insolvent laws of Maryland shall not be extended to him.

Feb. 26 vkp

TRUSTEE's SALE.

BY virtue of a decree of the honorable the Chancellor of Maryland, the subscriber as Trustee will sell on Saturday the fifth day of April next, on the premises, all that house and lot of ground in the village of White-Haven, which belonged to William Waters late of Somerset county, deceased.

The terms of sale are, that the purchaser shall pay to the Trustee, on the day of sale, one tenth part of the purchase money, and the balance at the end of twelve months from said day, giving bond with approved security for the same—and upon the payment of the whole of the purchase money, the trustee will in virtue of said decree execute to the purchaser, or his or her heirs or assigns, a good and sufficient deed in fee simple, free and clear of all incumbrances from any person or persons claiming under or through the deceased. The sale to be held between the hours of one and five o'clock in the afternoon.

THE CREDITORS OF WILLIAM WATERS are hereby notified to file their claims against the said estate, within six months from the day of sale aforesaid, in the proper office.

MARCELLUS JONES.

Feb. 29—M 4 ts Trustee.

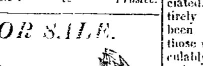
FOR SALE.



THE subscriber offers at private sale two handsomely built SCHOONERS, the materials of which will be warranted to be of the best quality. The one called Remedy, of 50 tons burden, is now completely rigged, and the other, of the same burden, will be ready, for sailing, about the middle of April.

FRANCIS D. NELSON.

Quantico, March 4. tf

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Lankford, administrator of Pierce Riggin, against Henry I. Riggin, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—One negro man Jim, 1 woman Ann, 1 do. Nelly, 1 do. Easter, 1 boy Dave, 1 girl Margaret, 1 do. Case, 1 do. Jane, 1 do. Eliza, 3 head of horses, 2 yoke of oxen, 4 head of cattle, 20 head of hogs, 25 head of sheep, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 3 pine do. 1 stand, 1 lot of earthen ware, 1 dozen chairs, 1 safe, 2 trunks, 1 lot knives and forks, 1 grind stone, 1 hand mill, 1 cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat fan, 1 lot of casks, 1 cider mill, 1 cross-cut saw, 1 hand saw, 3 ploughs, 3 harrows, 3 axes, 1 lot of iron, 150 bushels of corn, 11 stacks of fodder, 1 lot of flax in the straw, 2 pair of andirons, 3 ox chains, 3 ox yokes, 6 hives with bees, 1 lot of tin ware, 1 lot of cooper's ware, 1 looking glass, 2 guns, 1 tract of land called and known by the name of Gray's Purchase, containing 100 acres more or less; Dudley, 50 acres; Rowley Hill, 50 acres; part of a tract called Unity Enlarge, 42 acres; Privilege, 30 acres; part of Privilege, 20 acres;—part of Philip's Conclusion, 200 acres; part of Friends Assistance, 90 acres; and part of Pasturage, 20 acres, which I shall proceed to sell at said Riggin's house, on Thursday the 20th of day of March next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 1 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.

Feb. 26, 1828.

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by James Denson, a justice of the peace, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Hyland against Lucretia Dickerson and Zaccheus Street, I have taken in execution the following property, viz: one hundred acres of land, more or less, known by the name of Evans Second Chance, as the property of said Street, which will be sold on Saturday the 8th of March, at White-Haven, to satisfy the aforesaid writ and cost. Sale to commence at the hour of three o'clock P. M.

THOS. JONES, Constable.

Feb. 19. jkq

A Candidate.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the citizens of Somerset county, that he is a Candidate to represent them in the next House of Delegates.

BRITTINHAM HULL.

Feb. 26, 1828 tk

NOTICE.

The Creditors of [illegible] W. Heath, late of Somerset County, deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit their claims with the vouchers thereof properly authenticated, with the Clerk of said County Court, on or before the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next.

BURTON CANNON,

Feb. 26 gk Trustee

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

WE think it necessary to remind our patrons, that the 52nd No. of this paper, (which will be issued on the 25th of next March,) will complete one year since the establishment of a printing office at Princess-Anne. After that period THE VILLAGE HERALD shall be considerably enlarged, and improved, by lengthening the columns and adding one to each page. This, we conceive, will be the most substantial token of gratitude we can offer those who, by their kind patronage, have enabled us to promise, with certainty, the contemplated alteration.

It may not be needless here to mention, we still remain decidedly of the opinion that the better way to conduct our paper, is, to keep without the arena of political controversy—exclusively devoting our columns to the chronicling of foreign and domestic intelligence, and the furtherance of instruction by giving a miscellany of usefully interesting and amusing matter.

The importance of agricultural information is obvious to every one—though such knowledge, in this section of our country, is not duly appreciated. Where papers—devoted entirely to the farming interest—have been extensively circulated,—there those who till the soil have been incalculably benefited by placing a proper estimate on intelligence relative to their vocation. May not we then hope that the appropriating of a portion of our paper to the invaluable science of agriculture, will be acceptable to, and command the attention of, those who engage in its pursuit? Surely we may; And we shall therefore put in requisition every means within our reach to render this department of our paper worthy the notice of every practical farmer.

The advantages of economy—its absolute necessity in the present condition of our country—and its being more praise-worthy than prodigality, are simple facts, which need no support, because they are the dictates of common sense and receive the assent of the mind as soon as proposed;—And it would be contrary to the known principles which direct and influence men to good and beneficial actions, to suppose we should feel indifferent to that which concerns our individual interest—which tends to increase or diminish our property—to add to or take from our happiness:—Hence, considering the interests of our patrons, and our own convenience and profit, we shall on the enlargement of our paper, (which will be on the 1st of next April) adopt the following

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance; or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

Note.—In order to obviate all misapprehensions, we would most distinctly state, that all our original subscribers will come under the above conditions immediately on the commencement of the next volume; And every one who subscribed since the commencement of the present volume, will come under the new terms on the expiration of the time for which his name was entered.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

, A gradually increasing circulation of the Herald enhances the advantages offered by it as an advertising medium, which, we trust, will be readily appreciated.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

CAUTION

ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing, or taking any assignment, or transfer whatever, on a Note of Hand, which James Smith, of Somerset county, holds against me, dated 17th day of September, 1824, amounting to twelve hundred dollars, as the payment of said note will be disputed by the subscriber.

DAVID LANKFORD.

Feb. 11th—10. km

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Seneca's Lines which some have regarded as prophetic of the Discovery of our Continent.

Translated from the Latin.

Time yet shall be,
(Though distant now)—
Our eyes shall see
The sailor plough
The Ocean deep,
Far from the bound
Our tribes now keep,
New worlds to found.

There limits large
Shall girt the race,
And Earth surcharge
With populace,
And Thulè utmost,
Now so far,
Shall, nigh her, boast
Another star.*

* A star is a symbol of empire.

From the Philadelphia Monthly Mag.

A DREAM.

It was a dream—& thoughts like these
Dreams often bring to me.
In the moon's wan light I journey'd on,
My spirit was set free:
I saw—as I pass'd in my upward flight
Thro' the brakes of the marbled sky—
My native town far, far below,
And its rivers flowing by.

And thro' that sea of clouds I pass'd
To the blue immensity
That stretch'd beyond—a solitude
Without ear, voice, or eye.
And there was none save me alone
In that boundless realm of air;
And I thought how dreary it would be
If God did not dwell there.

The moon, me tho't, grew less & less,
And the stars blazed larger and full,
Like suns they seem'd as I pass'd them by.
All bright and beautiful.
Swift as an arrow from the bow
I pierced the dark thin air,
And a blessed gale of Heaven came
And fann'd my cheek and hair—

Oh let me see thy face, my God!
Thus pray'd I fervently—
And a living blaze of light burst forth,
And a stream of harmony;
And a thousand harps of gold were strung.
And a thousand lustres shone,
And I saw and heard the seraphim
That harp'd before the throne.

And God himself my father's God,
Sat in the midst—and all
Veil'd their bright faces with their wings,
And bow'd both great and small:
And I saw my own dear babes, whom God
On earth to me had given;
And I fain had press'd them to my heart,
But I woke—for I felt 'twas heaven.

From the Christian Watchman.

HYMN

Sung at the close of a Sabbath S. Term.

When shall we thus meet again?
When shall we thus meet again?
When the dreary winter's past,
When is hush'd the northern blast,
When new verdure clothes the plain,
Then may we thus meet again.

But what changes first may come,
Of our happy number, some
Round a much loved parent's bier
May let fall the parting tear;
And in orphan grief complain,
Ere we thus shall meet again.

Of your little blooming band
Some may feel death's icy hand,
From each friend on earth you love,
Early make a long remove,
And among this favorite train,
Never—never meet again.

Or perhaps the fatal dart,
May some faithful teacher's heart,
Pierce with death dissolving throes,
And those lips in silence close,
Which have made your duty plain,
Ere we thus shall meet again.

May you then with care improve
Lessons taught in Christian love:
May the truth their lips impart,
Dwell in every grateful heart;
That they labor not in vain,
And at last may meet again.

When our summers all are fled,
When the task of life is said;
When our wasting years shall be
Lost in vast eternity;
Where the saints immortal reign,
There may we all meet again.

He who thinks not of what is past, nor looks to the future, enjoys not the present. Want of thought is want of mind, and without mind there is no real enjoyment.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

THEBAN PIETY.

Mr. Editor,

It is a remarkable fact that women, in all ages and in different countries, perhaps in all, are more religiously disposed than the men. Account for this, as we may, the fact can hardly be doubted.

The estimate which king Solomon makes of the comparative real piety of the sexes is unfavorable to woman; nor should we confine it to the day or the peculiar state of public morals in which he lived.

The show of piety may be unreal, but certainly, at the present day, and under the influence of Christianity, woman surpasses man in the ardour, and consistency, and purity of his religious principles, judging from appearances. Could we see farther, with the sagacious eye of an inspired Solomon we might fail to find one of a thousand still who has the root of the matter—a genuine change of heart and nature, and disposition, fitting her for the kingdom of God.

In reading a very difficult piece of Greek which relates to the siege of Thebes, and the consternation it excited in the breasts of all who lived, or who had taken refuge from the foe, in that splendid capital, I was struck with the contrast exhibited in it of male and female piety. The martial Eteokles, commander in chief of the military forces, rallies his soldiers and calls to arms. He mans his piequets, posts sentinels at the gates, and makes some reference to the friendly deities to whom the city looked up for protection—but his chief reliance seems to be the soldiery—the vigilance of his sentinels, and the strength of the walls & of the turrets, which girt and defended the city. The women of the city fly to the altars—seek the favor of the gods, and place little reliance on the soldiery. The gods and goddesses are all and severally addressed—Mars, Neptune, Juno, Diana—Their patronage is besought, and their glories are acknowledged.

The Theban General mocks their devotion and discovers far less of that impression, so common in danger, that help can only come from God, than they did. Yet they defend their conduct, as reasonable and safe, and argue the wisdom and necessity of placing their trust in the Powers that rule all human destiny.

However defective and positively sinful was the idolatry of ancient times, whatever of trust and prayer and sacrifice it enjoined, was it appears more assiduously attended to by the women than by the men.

J. M.

FLATTERY.

Not long since in a great party where several of the young ladies were displaying their musical talents, by the performance of various duetts, rhondos, marches, &c. on the piano, I was requested to play. Just then I was engaged in an agreeable conversation with a friend, whom I had not seen for a long time, and I did not feel at all in a musical mood; besides, the tune I was desired to play, was by no means a favorite; in short, every thing concurred to make me play most miserable. It would have fretted Mozart or Handel into a frenzy to have heard me. It is unnecessary to say I was extremely mortified, but my surprise much exceeded my mortification upon hearing the extravagant encomiums bestowed by the gentleman at whose desire I played. He was almost a stranger to me, but I immediately drew the conclusion, that he was either a fool or thought me one, and as I had no reason from the former part of his behaviour to suppose him void of sense, I was not at all pleased with his affected admiration of my performance, and therefore said in not a very pleasant tone, "you certainly cannot think as you say;" he still persisted in his commendations, apparently with so much sincerity, that though he could not flatter me into the belief that I played the tune accurately, I was so credulous as to believe that he thought so. However I was not long deceived, for a few moments after, as I was standing behind him so as not to be visible to him, I heard him say to a gentleman near, "How she murmured that tune! it really made my ears ache." "What made you praise it so much then?" inquired a very interesting little boy who was sitting on his knee. "You must always flatter ladies, you know," was his reply, "No, I don't know any such thing, and I will ask papa about it," said he, and away he was going to ask his father. It was not without great difficulty that he was prevented by the gentleman, who appeared to be much terrified to think that his practice of always flattering ladies was going to be exposed. I was so wicked as to enjoy his confusion, which was much increased upon hearing a laugh that I was no longer able to restrain. He looked as if he wished himself in the crater of Mount Vesuvius, or any other place where he might never again be seen.—

Now in the name of common sense I desire to know what is the reason that gentlemen think, whenever they are in the company of ladies, they must talk nothing but flattery and nonsense? Do they suppose it will render the society more pleasing or is it because such trifling is agreeable to themselves? I suspect the latter is more frequently the cause than is generally conceived.—But enough of flattery for the present, for it is in no way very gratifying to ANN.

FROM ZION'S HERALD.

ON FASHION IN DRESS.

"How proud we are and fond to shew
Our clothes, and call them rich and new!
When the poor sheep and silkworm wore,
The very clothing long before."

"And is it wrong to be in the fashion provided we preserve humility?" How often is this question agitated, even by those who effect to be called characters of sober thinking.—To this question, I would answer, show me a man of fashion without pride, and I will produce a fire without heat. An inseparable connexion is obvious in both cases. "Madam," said a minister to a lady who wished to know whether she might not pay some attention to dress and the fashions without being proud, "when you see the tail of the fox out of the hole, you may be sure the fox is there." We should moreover know that while reason and religion say, "One thing is needful," fashion is invariably careful about many. It must be admitted, however, that the fashions in dress have their different stages of action; which is owing, in some instances perhaps, to the influence of that principle which teacheth in all the duty of self denial, but in general, to a paucity of the genuine dei gratiae.

If, however, one degree, taken in such vain indulgences, can be considered more blameworthy than another, the accounts given us in former days prove the height and extravagance of folly. So prodigious was the extravagance of the Roman ladies, in particular, that their equipage, it is said, has sometimes amounted to more than 300,000*l.* sterling; and I would ask what nation has sufficient innocency to rise up and brand the Romans alone with an imperative "Anathema maranatha." None, it is presumed, can boast an entire exemption from the evil. After all, it must be acknowledged that there is a medium sought out between the regions of luxury and singularity. To be respected by all, is the paramount motive of pride, leaving the manner, in which this is done entirely at the option of each individual subject. When once she has gained her throne, conscious of the universal deformity of her own appearance, she never fails to conceal herself beneath the garments either of decency or health. "This," says the beau, "is decent" and "this," says the sloven is modest." Then,

To counterpoise this hero of the mode,
Some for renown are singular and odd;
What other men dislike is sure to please.
Of all mankind, these dear antipodes:
Through pride, not malice they run counter still,
And birth days are their days of dressing ill. YOUNG.

To conclude, what principle is more powerful than this? It not only infects the individual in whose whim it first originates, but, with the celerity of a magic wand subverts whole nations, and on the wings of every wind goes flying all abroad, "instantaneously altering our opinion of the nature and quality of things, without demanding any painful exertions of the understanding," or requiring the slow process of investigation. An Alexander with his wry neck, being obliged to carry his head on one side, is very soon imitated by his courtiers, that they might appear to be in the king's fashion. After an expiration of more than twenty centuries, we smile at such instances of imbecility; but the present state of things would show who should "cast the first stone."

It has been said, "love an enemy and kill him." But not so the fashions, the more they are fostered, the greater their power, until every lover becomes a servant,—a slave. For while she proudly whispers "imitation" to the vain dependent, she seldom fails to excite the indignant opulent, to something "rich and new."

The [indigent] thus through imitation err;
As oft the [rich] by being singular:
So much they scorn the crowd, that if the throng,
By chance go right they purposely go wrong. POPE.

Here then is that "ideal influenza" which has moved on in every age, with greater or less velocity, and given to our little world an impulse which has been felt, in every hemisphere, by the sage of the city, and the swain of the more rustic village. Say, gentle reader, art thou the dupe of this hydra headed goddess? She is the mother of pride; and "pride goeth before destruction," O how long shall vain tho'ts lodge with thee! The end of things is at hand; turn, O turn and be a sober man! NANTASKET.

The following paragraph is attached to some remarks by Mr. Latrobe, as published in the last number of the African Repository, from which we copy it:

The annual increase of the colored population of the United States, slave and free, is estimated by Mr. Clay at 52,000 (see his address at the 10th annual meeting of the American Colonization Society) from which, substracting those who never attain the age of puberty, and those over fifty, as not adding to the increase, 30,000 may be said to be the number necessary to be removed annually, to diminish the colored population. The annual increase of the free black is only 6,000 and the removal of this number annually may be soon accomplished. But experience has shown that the number of emancipated slaves will bear a large proportion to the free persons who are removed; and this fact leads us to look forward to the time, when the gradual emancipation of the slaves will make them as much the object of the Society's labors as are the free people at present; and regarding the Society, therefore as the instrument for removing, with the consent of all parties, ultimately, the whole colored population of the United States, the increase of the whole, and not of a part, has been assumed.

PUNCTUALITY.

Punctuality, among mechanics, is a great desideratum. Show us a mechanic, who will get our work done by the time specified, and we will cherish him as the apple of our eye. But to the mechanic, who makes us call twice, (fire and sickness excepted,) we bid farewell—"a long farewell"—he is not the man for our money. The mechanic gains nothing by false promises, except a bad name.—In order to grasp all the work in the neighborhood, many a mechanic will promise, when he knows it is not in his power to perform. What is such a man but a liar? To say nothing of the vice of lying, than which there is nothing more low and contemptible, the mechanic in the end, gets far less work by false promises, than he would by a strict adherence to truth. Punctuality in a mechanic is the soul of business, the foundation of prosperity, and the security of good reputation.

Remarks by Thomas a Kempis.

The more a man is devoted to internal exercise, and advance in singleness and simplicity of heart, the more sublime and diffusive will be his knowledge; which he does not acquire by the labor of the study, but receives from divine illumination. A spirit pure, simple, and constant, is not like "Martha, distracted and troubled with the multiplicity of its employments," however great; because, being inwardly at rest, it seeketh not its own glory in that which it does, but "doth all to the glory of God:" for there is no other cause of perplexity and disquiet, but an unsubdued will, and unmortified affections. A holy and spiritual man, by reducing them to the rule and standard of his own mind, becomes the master of all his outward acts; he does not suffer himself to be led by them to the indulgence of any inordinate affections that terminate in self, but subjects them to the unalterable judgement of an illuminated and sanctified spirit.

SELF-EXAMINATION.

Our self love makes us blind to ourselves, and diminishes all our faults. They are to us like our perfumes, of which we are not sensible, but they are very perceptible to others. To see our defects without partiality we must see them in other people. Scrutinize your own defects as rigorously as you do those of your own acquaintance. Scrupulously adhere to this rule; it will accustom you to be just. Examine your own nature, and make the best of your constitutional defects; they are all innocent and allied to virtue. It is not the intention of morality to suppress nature, but to render it amiable. Are you inclined to be proud? employ that propensity to raise yourself above the weakness of your sex, and to avoid the faults that debase it. To every unruly passion there is pain and shame attached, which urge their relinquishment.—Are you timorous? turn that weakness into prudence, and let it prevent you from doing wrong. Are you profuse? do you love to give? prodigality may be easily converted into generosity and beneficence.—Give, however, with discrimination and judgement; but neglect not those who are evidently miserable. Lend, when it seems more advisable; but give to such as have no means of repaying. Every foible of the disposition may be converted to some worthy habit.

Valuable Recipe.—The Rev. James B. Ayres has communicated to the public through the Christian Advocate and Journal, a recipe for curing the discharge of blood from the lungs. It is as follows:—Take sixty grains of the sugar of lead, ten grains of white vitriol, half an ounce of gum Arabic, half an ounce laudanum, and five ounces of water. Put them into a bottle and shake it. One or two tea-spoonfuls every two hours, or oftener may be taken, according to the bleeding. The preparation is rather pleasant to the taste. Mr. Ayres states that it had proved an effectual remedy in several cases of bleeding at the lungs, within his knowledge.

The human heart is like that tree, which yields not its balsam to heal the wounds of others until itself is wounded.—Chateaubriand.

"Wealth, like charity, covers a multitude of sins." Old and trite as this observation is, it is not less true.—Honest poverty may pine in neglect, while guilded villiany will receive patronage and promotion in the world.

The heart that is conscious of its own integrity and constancy is never suspicious.

COBBETT'S

Opinion on the Affairs of Turkey.

In the last Register, Mr. Cobbett says, what I think likely is this: that Russia will with, very little ceremony, march into the Turkish provinces, urged to do it secretly by France, and besought by England upon her knees not to do it. England has no power to prevent the invasion other than thro' the aid of Austria, and when Austria finds, that she can get no money from England, she will negotiate with Russia, and come in for a share of the Turkish dominion. France will I dare say, join cordially with Russia in sweeping away the old ally of England; and if we really get into a war with France and Russia or with either of them, the Americans will, within six months after the war begins, put to the test our courage and our power to maintain our ancient rights on the seas. The thing may not go to this extent: the funding system may crumble to pieces, or it may be in such a shattered state, as to induce the nation quietly to submit to any thing that France and Russia may like to do; but if the funding system could stand; if by any tricks of borrowing money or shuffling of paper; if we could thus hobble along in a war for a few months, such, in all human probability would be the parties engaged in the war. I would have my readers reflect a little on the great difference between the effects of war to be carried on now, and the effects of the late wars when that war began, the taxes amounted to only sixteen millions a year, and bank notes of all descriptions had always been regarded as equally valuable with gold.—When that war began, the poor rates amounted to little more than two millions a year. When that war began, so small a note as five pounds had never been seen; and there was the coast clear for the minister to spread forth his notes, and to borrow from the whole nation in all sorts of ways. No doubt had ever existed as to the durability and solidity of the funds; and besides these the nation was alarmed, from one end to the other, at the cry of danger to property and to religion. All those circumstances would now be wanting; indeed, instead of sixteen there are sixty millions of annual taxes, and the farmers, tradesmen, manufacturers and merchants, are stripped of the means of lending money to the Government, or rendering personal service.—Our ministers could not call upon us to fight against Atheists in the persons of the subjects of those well-beloved Bourbons whom we restored, and of the Christian magnanimous emperor of Russia, with both of whom, let it be observed, we are now in war like alliance. There would be no zeal in fighting against these most Christian kings and emperors; and even were we to have a war only with the Turk, Anna Brodie could never make us believe, that we are in danger of his coming and make us all "musselmen."—But, that feature (not fundamental feature, as Castlereagh used to say) which would most strongly distinguish this war from the last, is this, that that was a war of endless and uninterrupted sea-triumphs, and particularly a war of prize money, which cheered the nation on to borrowing and spending and spending and borrowing, till it got saddled with a debt, which must finally break its back. These victories, this prize money, would not mark another war. Not that I have any doubt of the courage of Englishmen; that is a vulgar topic, and suited only for the mere rabble, such as those thoughtless creatures who stuck laurel leaves in the caps of the soldiers of the guards when they were marching off just after the Æolian speech of Mr. Canning. Perhaps the naval officers too, might act very well, notwithstanding Mr. Hume's just observations on the promotions in the Navy; but it must be a war of hard knocking; much cry and little wool; not a word of orders in Council; nor a war in which men would get rich by taking vessels of the enemy and giving them up for payment, with a total disregard of the law both civil and naval. A war of hard knocks it must be, and especially if the Americans join in it, who be it observed, sigh for an opportunity of making us give up that right of search, which is worth to us forty times as much as all our colonies put together

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, MARCH 11, 1828. NO. 50.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

WE think it necessary to remind our patrons, that the 52nd No. of this paper, (which will be issued on the 25th of next March,) will complete one year since the establishment of a printing office at Princess-Anne. After that period THE VILLAGE HERALD shall be considerably enlarged, and improved, by lengthening the columns and adding one to each page. This, we conceive, will be the most substantial token of gratitude we can offer those who, by their kind patronage, have enabled us to promise, with certainty, the contemplated alteration.

It may not be needless here to mention, we still remain decidedly of the opinion that the better way to conduct our paper, is, to keep without the arena of political controversy—exclusively devoting our columns to the chronicling of foreign and domestic intelligence, and the furtherance of instruction by giving a miscellany of usefully interesting and amusing matter.

The importance of agricultural information is obvious to every one—though such knowledge, in this section of our country, is not duly appreciated. Where papers—devoted entirely to the farming interest—have been extensively circulated,—there those who till the soil have been incalculably benefited by placing a proper estimate on intelligence relative to their vocation. May not we then hope that the appropriating of a portion of our paper to the invaluable science of agriculture, will be acceptable to, and command the attention of, those who engage in its pursuit? Surely we may; And we shall therefore put in requisition every means within our reach to render this department of our paper worthy the notice of every practical farmer.

The advantages of economy—its absolute necessity in the present condition of our country—and its being more praise-worthy than prodigality, are simple facts, which need no support, because they are the dictates of common sense and receive the assent of the mind as soon as proposed;—And it would be contrary to the known principles which direct and influence men to good and beneficial actions, to suppose we should feel indifferent to that which concerns our individual interest—which tends to increase or diminish our property—to add to or take from our happiness:—Hence, considering the interests of our patrons, and our own convenience and profit, we shall on the enlargement of our paper, (which will be on the 1st of next April) adopt the following

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance: or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion.) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

Note.—In order to obviate all misapprehensions, we would most distinctly state, that all our original subscribers will come under the above conditions immediately on the commencement of the next volume; And every one who subscribed since the commencement of the present volume, will come under the new terms on the expiration of the time for which his name was entered.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

 A gradually increasing circulation of the Herald enhances the advantages offered by it as an advertising medium, which, we trust, will be readily appreciated.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

Magistrates' Blanks
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis	par
Easton	par
Frederick	par
Frederick County Bank	par
Bank Westminster	par
Hager's Town	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co ($5 and upwards)	par
Elkton	1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	½
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	½
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape-Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	50
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	3
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
Feb. 12, 1828.

§§SEAL§§ ON application of Geo. L. Ayres, adm. c. w. a. of Wm. Ballard, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court, that he give the notice required by law, for the creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week, for three weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of William Ballard—late of Somerset county, deceased,—all persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of August, 1828,—they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of February, 1828.

GEO. L. AYRES, Adm'r. of W. Ballard, dec'd.

Feb. 19, 1828. k

JOB PRINTING,

SUCH AS

Handbills, Cards, Blanks, PAMPHLETS, &c.

Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,

At the Office of the Village Herald.

SALE FOR CASH.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Venditioni Exponas, issued by the Clerk of Somerset county court, and directed to me, Elijah Parsons against Joshua Morris and George Jones, Elizabeth McBryde and Elijah Parsons against William Hopkins, will be sold at the Court-House door in the town of Princess-Anne, on Tuesday the 11th day of March next, between the hours of one and two o'clock, P. M. the following property, to wit: two head of horses, one gig, and two yoke of oxen, the property of Joshua Morris.—Also, two head of horses, two yoke of oxen, the property of George Jones—Also, part of a tract of land called Kentucky, containing 250 acres, more or less, the property of Wm. Hopkins.

ROBERT STEWART, late Shff. of S. C.

Feb. 12, 1828. k4

NOTICE.

THE Levy Court will meet at Princess-Anne on Tuesday the 8th day of April next, on which day between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, will be offerred to the lowest bidder, the removal of all the stakes remaining from the setting of wiers in Monokin river and each of its branches, in accordance with the late act of Assembly, making it the duty of said Court to have the same removed.—The work is to be accomplished on or before the 20th of June next.

JOHN WOOLFORD, Sen. President L. C.

Feb. 19, 1828. ktw

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of THOMAS JONES, (of Thomas,) are hereby notified that he has applied to Somerset County Court, for the benefit of the insolvent laws of the state of Maryland, and that the first Saturday of May Term next of said court, is the day appointed for his appearance before the judges of said court to answer such allegations and interrogatories as may be propounded relative to his application; at which time and place the creditors of the said Thomas are notified to attend and shew cause (if any they have) why he should not receive the benefit of the insolvent laws as prayed for.

Feb. 19, 1828. k

NOTICE.

The Creditors of JOSIAH W. HEATH, late of Somerset County, deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit their claims with the vouchers thereof properly authenticated, with the Clerk of said County Court, on or before the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next.

BURTON CANNON, Trustee

Feb. 26. gk

THE

AMERICAN FARMER,

Is published in weekly numbers of eight quarto pages,

By J. S. SKINNER,
Postmaster of the City Baltimore,

AT $5 PER ANNUM, TO BE PAID INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

Fifty-two numbers make a volume of convenient form, and the last one is accompanied with a title page and minute index. The following brief tables of the contents of the four numbers of the current volume, all of which may yet be had, will show that the American Farmer is devoted to Scientific and Practical Agriculture; Rural and Domestic Economy; Gardening; Internal Improvements; and Readings adapted to Females, and especially to the stations and duties of Mothers and Mistresses of Families. The American Farmer contains also a great number of useful recipes, and an exact account of the prices going at the time of publication, not only of the chief staple articles of the country, but also of the various articles and productions which are sold in the common market. Not one word of politicks is ever permitted to appear in it.

Tho' many papers have a greater number of subscribers, few circulate over a wider space of our country.

When an original number fails of being received by the mail, another will be sent.

A few sets of the previous volumes are on hand. A single number will be sent to any one who may desire to see a specimen of the publication.

Persons wishing to subscribe may inclose a $5 note, directed to the Editor, and at his risk, by the mail.

Contents of No. 1.—March 23.—The Agriculture of Modern Italy, describing their implements, the care and kinds of Cattle, and the management of Dairies; description of Farm Houses, Laborers, &c. &c.—Agriculture, as influenced by geographical circumstances.—Treatise on the culture of Barley, by Judge Buel—Sheep; remarks on the management of them, and comparison between South Down and Dishley, by Joseph Kersey—On Grasses and other Plants No. 1, by G. Sinclair—Notices of pernicious and unprofitable Plants, how to extract them—View of the Cotton Trade—Hints of Mothers on the management of Children—Influence of Women on the happiness of Society—Ladies in Town and Country compared—A Female model in real life—Hyacinths, Carnations, Double Daisies, when to plant and how to manage—Sporting Olio—Distemper in Dogs, how to cure with laudanum—Trotting Match—Notice of Henry, competitior of Eclipse—Recipes: For scouring Carpets, Hearth Rugs, &c. &c.—To Dye Cotton a Buff color—To cure the Tooth Ache—For Indigestion or Sour Stomach, given to the Editor by an eminent Physician—Advertisements connected with Farming and Gardening—The Price Current, minute and particular.

No. 2.—March 30th.—Science of Agriculture—Origin and principles of Culture, as derived from the study of Vegetables—Queries on various subject connected with Agriculture and Horticulture—Remarks on the distribution of Vegetables—Varieties of Fruit Trees, esculent herbaceous plants, florists' flowers, hardy timber trees, shrubs, &c.—On Grasses and other Plants, No 2, by G. Sinclair,—Notices of pernicious and unprofitable Plants, continued—On the selection of Seed Corn, by Joseph Cooper—Cultivation of the Potatoe in New York, with a notice of its origin—On the select. of Milch Cows, by T. Pickering—Rapid growth of the Plane Tree—Maple Sugar, manufacture of, in the state of New York—Proper directions for Felling Trees—Cockroaches, how to destroy them—Bad effects of Vanity and Affectation—Remarks on Delicacy—Height of celebrated English Race Horses—Duck Shooting—Game Shooting—Authentic pedigree of Clockfast—Wild Pigeons—Advent of the Martins—Animal Longevity—Recipes: To make an excellent Family Wine—Current Wine—Elder Wine—To stain Wood a fine Black—To make Nankin Dye—Description of "Mark Anthony" and Rinaldo—Large Carrot.

No. 11.—June 1.—Observations on the value of Orchard Grass—Remarks on the past and present culture of Maryland lands, No. 1.—On the quality of the Nankin Cotton, cultivated in North Carolina—On Grasses and other plants, from G. Sinclair's Hortus Gramineus, with notes, &c. (Festuca pratensis Meadow fescue, Holcus lanatus, Wolly soft-grass, Salem grass, or white timothy,) No. 10, continued—Charles E. Rowan on Smith's Plough—Early Mowing—Prospect of Crops in Virginia—On the Corinthian grape, or Zante Currant—Mr. Prince's double White Rocket and Corinthian Grape—On the structure of Ice-houses, by Mr. Boardley, of Maryland—Medical Essays, No. 2, on the food and management of Infants—Sale of the late Duke of York's Stud—Recipes from Mason's Gentleman's Farrier, Mash, Sit-fasts, and Saddle-galls—Game Shooting in England—Manufacture of Flannels in New England, with remarks by Mr. Niles—Chinese Agricultural Fete—Recipes, an Indian cure for the bite of a Snake, To cure Gravel Walks—On the inspection and exportation of Tobacco—Editorial. Prices current at Baltimore, with statements of actual sales.

No. 12.—June 8.—Observations on the different classes of Farmers, and on the injurious error of occupying more land than can be cultivated properly, by Lorain—On Grasses and other Plants, from G. Sinclair's Hortus Gramineus, with notes, &c. (Poa Nervata, nerved meadow grass; Phleum pratense, meadow cat's-tail, or timothy grass; Lolium perenne, rye grass)—On Maryland lands, addressed to farmers, emigrants and other settlers—On the culture and management of Sheep and Wool—Hemp raised in New York—Pinching off Potatoe Blossoms—Melocito de Olor, or small sweet scented melon of Colombia—Extraordinary Pear Tree—Large Celery—Essay on preparing Animal Food, boiling, roasting, frying, broiling, baking, &c.—Whiskey-Vinegar for pickles—The Rail-Road at Mauch Chunk—Steam Engine for raising water on the Union Canal—Maternal Love—Remarkable Equestrian Expeditions—Spiders' Thread—Dissection of the Old and New Testaments—Meteorology of May at Baltimore—Frost at Campbell's Station, Tennessee—Extraordinary Pine Tree—Races at Canton, near Baltimore—Pedigree of Sir Soloman—Editorial—Prices current at Baltimore, from actual sales.

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC;

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience; and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER, Princess-Anne, Md.

Nov. 20, 1827.

T. L. DISHAROON,

HATTER,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. tf

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, MARCH 11, 1828.

We are informed, by a letter from Annapolis, that the Legislature will rise in the course of this week.

CHANGE IN THE ENGLISH MINISTRY!

It appears that the late rumours on an intended change in the British cabinet, were by no means without foundation. Lord Goderich had resigned the Premiership, and a new Ministry had actually been named, or would be within a day or two The London Morning Herald, of January 10th, published the following list of the new Ministers:—

First lord of the Treasury, Earl Grey; Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Peel; Secretary of State for the Home Department, Mr. Franklin Davis; Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Sir Charles Stewart, or the Marquis of Wellesley; Secretary for the Colonies lord Bathurst, Master of the Ordinance, Duke of Wellington; President of the Council, Earl of Shaftesbury; Privy Seal, Marquis of Londonderry; Treasurer of the Navy, Mr Dawson; Chancellor, lord Lyndhurst; Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, lord Bexley; Master of the Mint, Mr. William Horton.

If such is the change to be made, we argue the worst consequences. The liberal system of Mr. Canning is to be abandoned; and the ultra tories are to be brought into power under the immediate auspices of the Duke of Wellington; for the London papers expressly declare that the Duke was specially sent for by the king, and that the new Ministry is to be formed agreeably to the Duke's views. The Paris papers are filled with extracts from the London papers upon this sudden revolution of parties in the British Cabinet. We cannot however, yet believe that such a man as the Marquis of Londonderry—a fiery, indiscreet, intemperate ultra—is to be brought into the Cabinet.

The Standard says, there is little doubt that Mr. Peel will succeed lord Goderich, as the head of the Ministry.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Friday, February 29.

Mr. Sellman, offered the following order for consideration; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

Ordered, That the committee on agriculture be instructed to report to this house what kind of wheat they consider best adapted to the soil of Maryland, and most likely to resist the ravages of the Hessian Fly; also to inquire into the nature and origin of said insect; that the committee be further instructed to report upon the propriety of reducing the price of the inspection of tobacco.

On motion by Mr. Donoho, the bill reported by him, entitled, An act to establish magistrates' courts in the several counties of this state, for the trial of assaults and batteries, was made the order of the day for Wednesday next.

On motion by Mr. Wells, the house proceeded to consider the bill reported by him, entitled, An act supplemental to the act, entitled, An act for the better regulation of chancery proceedings in certain cases; and being read the second time, it was passed, without amendment, and sent to the senate for concurrence.

On motion by Mr. Semmes, the house proceeded to the consideration of the engrossed bill, entitled, An act for the general valuation and assessment of property in this state.

When in the progress of the second reading thereof, on motion by Mr. Dennis, the question was propounded, will the house agree that the following section be stricken out?

"And be it enacted, That out of the funds to be raised by this act, the sum of twenty thousand dollars after the first year, be and the same is hereby annually appropriated for ever to the support and maintenance of free schools in the several counties in this state."

And the yeas and nays being required by seven members, were taken and appeared as follow: Affirmative 30, Negative 37—Donoho, Gibbons and Dennis, were of the former, and Teackle of the latter.

After several amendments were made the said bill passed, 46 to 25—Teackle, Donoho, Gibbons, and Dennis were of the former.

Mr. Dennis then moved to modify and amend said section, by striking out after the words, "And be it enacted, That," the words, "out of the funds;" and insert in lieu thereof, the following; "after defraying the current expenses of government, in connection with the ordinary revenue of this state, twenty thousand dollars of the surplus funds, (if any,") and by striking out the words, "the sum of twenty thousand dollars," in the second line, and also the word, "forever," in the third line of said section.

And, on the question, Will the house agree to the modification and amendment proposed as above? It was resolved in the affirmative.

The clerk returned the bill of the of the following title:

An Act to authorize the levy court of Somerset county, to contract for the removal of certain obstructions in Barren, Rewastico, Quantico and Wetipquin creeks, and their several branches, and to levy the expenses thereof upon the said county; endorsed, "will pass."

Saturday, March 1.

Mr Donoho submitted the following resolution for consideration.

Resolved, by the general assembly of Maryland, That it shall be the duty of the city of Baltimore, to collect wharfage on the state's wharves in the said city, and to pay over the same to the order of the treasurer of the western shore, under the like restrictions, obligations and regulations as are required by the existing ordinances of the city of Baltimore.

Which was read and referred to the committee on ways and means.

On motion by Mr. Thomas of Cecil, it was further ordered, That the said committee be instructed to ascertain, if possible, whether any person has been collecting said wharfages, his name, by what authority he has collected, and what he has done with the amounts of wharfages collected, and to report thereon to this house.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, it was Ordered, That the committee on ways and means, be instructed to inquire into the expediency of authorizing the collection of wariage, upon all commodities landed, or stored, upon, or shipped from, wharves belonging to individuals, the city, and state, in the city of Baltimore, for the use and benefit of the several proprietors of the said wharves respectively.

On motion by Mr. Teackle it was Ordered, That the bill to provide for the cession of territorial jurisdiction, at certain points in Somerset county, for the erection of light houses thereon, be placed among the local bills.

On motion by Mr. Ely, the following message, offered by him, was twice read, agreed to, and. with the bill to which it relates, sent to the senate viz By the H. of D. March 1.

Gentlemen of the Senate,

We herewith return to your honorable body a bill, entitled, An act to incorporate a company for the establishment of a literary, scientific, and military academy, in Baltimore county, with the accompanying documents, and respectfully ask that you will consider your vote of rejection, and pass said bill.

Mr. Dennis, submitted the following resolution for consideration; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table. viz,

Resolved, That all proceedings on the judgments obtained by the state of Maryland against Charles Jones, late sheriff of Somerset county, and his securities, be and the same are hereby suspended until the first day of January eighteen hundred and thirty, provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to release the right of the state to any property, real or personal, which has already been taken in execution of the said Charles Jones, or any of his securities.

On motion by Mr. Dennis, the said resolution was made the order of the day for Monday next, the third instant.

Bills of the following titles, were this day severally reported.

By Mr. Fitzhugh, from the committee on the militia, A further supplement to the act, entitled, An act to regulate and discipline the militia of this state.

By Mr. Potter. from the committee on ways and means, An act to abolish all that part of the constitution and form of government, which requires the appointment of a treasurer on the eastern shore. And

An act to abolish all that part of the constitution and form of government, which requires the appointment of a register of the land office on the eastern shore,

By Mr. Potter, from a select committee, An act to tax all travelling show-men, players, slight-of-hand-men, ventriloquists, and jugglers, in this state.

Monday, March 3.

Mr. Dennis, reported a bill, entitled, An act supplementary to the act entitled, An act to prohibit the emigration of free negroes into this state; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table and on motion by Mr. Dennis, made the order of the day for Wednesday next, the fifth inst.

On motion by Mr. Teackle, the bill. reported by him, entitled, An act to provide for the cession of territorial jurisdiction at James' Island, and Clay Island, in Somerset county, for the erection of light-houses, or at such other point or points in the said county, as may be selected by the proper officers of the government of the United States, for the erection of the said light-houses, was taken up for consideration, and after several amendments were made, passed and was sent to the senate for concurrence.

Thursday, March 4.

Mr. Gibbons offered the following resolution for consideration; which was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table, viz.

By the H. of D. March 4, 1828.

Resolved that all proceedings on the judgements obtained by the state of Maryland against Richard Waller, Josiah Broughton, and Samuel Heath, deceased, securities of William S. Handy, late sheriff and collector of Somerset county, be and the same are hereby suspended until the first day of January eighteen hundred and thirty; Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to release the right of the state to any property, real or personal, which has already been taken in execution of the said William S. Handy, or any of his said securities.

Wednesday March 5.

On motion by Mr Dennis, the house proceeded to consider the resolution, submited by him on the first inst., for a suspension of proceedings on certain judgements obtained by the state against Charles Jones, late sheriff of Somerset county, and his securities, which had been made the order of the day for Monday last; and on the second reading of the same,

On motion by Mr. Dennis, it was amended by inserting the words, "and collector," after the words 'late sheriff.'

TURKEY. It is stated in the "Spectateur Orientel" of Smyrna, of the 8th December, that the Sultan was about to issue orders for an assembly of the eminent men of the empire at Constantinople, with the least possible delay. The persons to compose it were to be chosen from among the Aryandes, that is to say from among the richest land proprietors. In the cities, the minimum amount of property necessary to render a person eligible was fixed at 100,000 dollars, in the country towns at 500.000. In Smyrna a Deputy had been named, who was to represent the Barbary Powers. He is a man possessing a great fortune and held in general esteem.

It is said the question, of the North Eastern Boundary of the United States, is referred to the umpirage of the Emperor of Russia, that an Agent is to be appointed from Maine to manage the cause, and that Judge Preble is a candidate.—Boston Patriot.

Christianity gaining ground in India. A letter from Mr. W. H. Pearce, dated Calcutta, March 12, 1827, says, "I rejoice to state that appearances here indicate a great and extensive change in the religious state of the country. Near Chunar and Burdwan, stations long occupied by the Church Missionary Society, the spirit of serious inquiry is spreading wonderfully from village to village, and many villages are applying en masse, for schools and missionaries. At Kidderpore, also, where our dear Independent friends have long labored, village after village assembles its whole population to hear repeatedly the word of life."

London Baptist Mag for Dec.

On the 15th of December last, a young man of respectable connexion was tried at Grenoble France, for shooting a lady of whom he was jealous, in the church, during the service of the mass, and at the moment the communion was about to take place.—He discharged two bullets into her side, and two into his own head with a second pistol; neither was mortally wounded. He plead, on his trial, raged love and jealousy; was convicted, and sentenced to death.

Foolish Adventure.—Major General Wm. Collamer, Barre, Vt. on the 14th inst. shot an apple from the bare head of Mr. Henry Ingram at the distance of 27 yards, with a rifle. Mr. Collamer then took his turn, and Ingram, at the same distance shot an apple from his head. It was done in the presence of a number of respectable gentlemen who, after fruitless attempts to stop the parties, had the satisfaction to see them come off in safety. The apples were so handsomely cut by the balls that the juice and pomace remained in considerable quantities on the hair of their heads.

On the 26th November last, at Rouen in France, a married couple celebrated the completion of the fiftieth year of their union, by a new wedding, as is customary there in such instances of conjugal longevity. The same priest that read the marriage ceremony on the first occasion, officiated at the second, being ninety one years of age; and what is more remarkable, six other friends and several domestics, who were present at the original wedding, shared in the festivities of the second; and the principal fiddler for the dance was the same on both occasions. The Journal de Rouen, of the 3d Dec., gives the names of the parties just stated Indigenious Productions of the United States.—The treasures of our country, vegetable and mineral, are but half discovered, or but half applied to their proper uses. Among other results of that spirit for internal communications which certain ultra-economists are so busy to thwart, will be the discovery of many articles of use, and the interchange of them by commerce. The location of the line of the New York canals has added, in this way, to the other advantages of this noble enterprise. Among the vegetable productions of our country, either little known or whose uses are but little understood, we may mention in the Western Review, a work whose lively descriptions of the West and its peculiarities, we have once before adverted to with pleasure.

The Wild Rice of the Northern Lakes, whose very existence is hardly known, except to the savages, the Canadians, and the coureurs du bois, who traverse these regions, is however, next to maize, the most prolific perhaps of all the cerealia. It is found in the greatest abundance on the marshy margins of the lakes, and in the plashy swamps on the upper courses of the Mississippi, where it covers a vast extent of country. It is there that the Canadian hunters and traders find their annual supplies of grain, and that the millions of migrating water fowls fatten, before they take their autumnal migration to the south. It very accurately resembles the cane grass of the swamps and savanas on the Gulf of Mexico. It springs from all depths of water, from seven feet to one, where the bottom is soft and muddy, and rises from five to eight feet above water. At the time of gathering it, canoes are rowed among it, a blanket is spread on the canoes, and the grain is beaten down into the blankets. It grows in perfection as far south as Natchitoches, south of 32 deg., and might probably be cultivated in any of the drowned lands or ponds and marshes of the Atlantic country. Well prepared, it is as white as common rice, and puddings made of it taste like those of sago.

The Cane which every one has seen in the shape of angling rods, grows on the lowest courses of the Mississippi, Arkansas, Red River, and their waters, and rises in height from fifteen to thirty feet. The leaves are abundant, and of a beautiful green, and it grows so thick that the stems seem contiguous, while above there is an impervious roof of verdure.—The smallest sparrow could hardly fly in these cane brakes, and a man could not make a progress of three miles a day. The burning of a cane brake when cut down and dried, is a singular spectacle enough. The rapid flame, with the myriads of detonations from the rarified air in the hollow compartments of the cane, nearly as loud as the report of a musket, give the idea of an army in the fury and flame of battle. At the end of five years, it produces an abundant crop of farinaceous seeds, of the taste of wheat, and used, like it, for bread by the Indians and first settlers. No spot affords so rich and perennial a range for cattle as the cane brake.—The butter from it is of the finest quality and flavor. The stem rises six feet before it loses its succulency and tenderness, and no vegetable or grass affords so rich and abundant a fodder, of so rapid a growth. It might, says the writer, be worth the experiment of sowing annually in regions where it will not survive the winter.

He mentions other plants which we cannot now notice particularly; the Dogwood, for its restorative power in cases of ague, which are not unknown to our administers of simples: The China Tree, for its narcotic properties, and whose bark is a powerful vermifuge,—no contemptible property in a country as rank of animal as vegetable life: the Pawpaw, whose pulp is an odd mixture of the tastes of eggs, cream, sugar and spice, and is, indeed a sort of natural custard: The Laurel Almond, whose dilicious flowers might be made into essence surpassing those of the East; and the small deep blue Persimmon, which, when ripened by the frost, is sweeter than the fig, and is almost a pulp of concrete sugar. It is, says the writer, when throughly ripe, a pleasanter fruit than dates, and had we to obtain it from beyond seas, the kinds would be discriminated, and the best of them cultivated.

NOVEL UNDERTAKING.

Mr. P Barnes, a gentleman of fortune, residing near Hackney, England, recently undertook, for a wager of 500 guineas, to walk one mile forward, one mile backward, run one mile, bowl a hoop one mile, and wheel a barrow one mile, all of which he undertook to do in fifty minutes. The remaining part of his task was to trot one mile, gallop one mile and drive one mile in harnass. This was to be done in ten minutes, for two hundred guineas more; two minutes allowed for harnessing. He then made a bet of three hundred guineas more, that the whole should be done in an hour; making the total undertaking for 1000 guineas.—This match had been anxiously looked for by the sporting world, and betting ran thus: five to four against the first undertaking being done in fifty minutes; seven to four and two to one against the second part being done in ten minutes; and six and seven to four against the completion of the whole in one hour. Owing to the unpropitious state of the weather, the ground was but thinly attended. The match took place upon a one mile piece of ground on the Bristol road, and was done as follows:

First Part.	m.	s.
Walking a mile,	11	24
Walking backwards	10	2
Running a mile,	5	10
Bowling a hoop,	6	20
Drawing a gig,	7	59
Wheeling a barrow	8	52
	49	44
Second Part.
Trotting a mile,	3	6
Galloping a mile.	3	10
Harness,	3	40
	9	56
Total, first part,	46	44
Grand total,	56	40

Thus finally winning the match by only twenty seconds. The cognoscenti, on this occasion, were forced to confess that the thing was well done.

Manufactures in Virginia.—The legislature in Virginia, at its present session, has incorporated five companies for manufacturing purposes, with an aggregate capital of 645,000 dollars. Four out of the five companies will prosecute the manufacture of cotton.

A desperate Drunkard.—It is stated in the Portsmouth (Ohio) Times, that a man came to that town, whose thirst for liquor was so insatiable, that he suffered a dentist to pull a sound tooth, and sold it to him for 60 cents, with which he bought rum and got drunk! Such a slave to his appetite would cut his throat for a gallon of whiskey, provided he could get it on twelve months credit.

EXTRAORDINARY.—The Schenectaday Cabinet says:—On Monday the 4th ult. Mr. George Sanders, a respectable, industrious mechanic, residing in the vicinity of this city, ejected a snake from his stomach nine inches long, and about in the proportion of the common adder, but not resembling in color any snake heretofore seen in this country. The back a light brown, the belly red and green, extending in two stripes lengthwise, and the eyes white Whether its color is owing to its confinement in the stomach or not, naturalists must decide.

Mr. Sanders has been troubled for more than a year past with unusual pain in his stomach, which gradually increased. For a month past it has been constant and frequently severe, accompanied by a motion like the crawling of some living animal. He often told his wife, that he had a snake in his inside. She ridiculed the idea, thinking him hypochondrical—but he persisted. On the Saturday previous, he felt unusual pain in his stomach which extended to his neck and head—he took a dose of medicine, but got no relief; On Sunday he took a larger dose, but still relief was not obtained. Monday morning, at breakfast, after swallowing a piece of meat, he felt such a nauseous sickness that he left the house and commenced a severe vomiting, in the course of which he brought up a living reptile. It expired immediately and is now preserved for the inspection of the curious.

Mr. S. is now enjoying good health, and may emphatically be said to be "a new creature."

The New Orleans Argus, of 7th inst. says—"Notwithstanding the vigilance of the police, the most daring attempts are daily made to fire the city. Two men were arrested yesterday, who we understand were detected in setting fire, in broad day light, to some houses in the fauxburg. Some strong suspicions are entertained, that the fire of Friday night last was the work of an incendiary."

Brazilian Tea.—At the meeting of the London Medico-Botanical Society, held in December last, a specimen of Tea cultivated in Rio de Janeiro, was presented by the Brazilian Ambassador, and attracted much notice from its novelty. It was stated to be the produce of the Emperor's gardens; and on being tasted by some of the members, was pronounced to be equal to the finest hyson tea.

The gaol in St. John, N. B. was discovered by the keeper, at 11 o'clock on the night of the 3d Feb. to be on fire. The smoke was found to come from the cell of Patrick Burgan, a prisoner under sentence of death. With a good deal of difficulty, the door of the cell was opened, the prisoner extricated nearly in a state of suffocation, and the fire extinguished. The prisoner had been supplied with fuel to keep himself comfortable through the night. This he removed from the hearth, and kindled with a fire against the door with the intention, as he said, of making his escape, when the door should be burnt through.

A BILL, entitled, An Act to regulate the issuing of Licenses, to Traders, Keepers of Ordinaries and others.

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That from and after the first day of May next, it shall not be lawful for any person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, within this State, other than the grower, maker or manufacturer of the specific articles which shall be therein exposed for sale or barter, to open, set up, keep or use, any booth, stall, shop office, store, warehouse or other building, yard, inclosure, vessel or any other place or part of house, building or other place, for the purpose of selling by wholesale or retail, or bartering any dry goods, groceries, spirituous or fermented liquor, imported dried fruit, glass, crockery, hardware, drugs or medicines, paints, printed books, stationary, saddlery, gold, silver or plated ware, jewels, toys, wearing apparel, salted provisions, grain, meal, flour, timber, tobacco, cotton, leather, hides, lime, wrought or cast iron, copper or tin, or any other kind of goods, wares or merchandize foreign or domestic, without first obtaining a license in the manner prescribed by this act; Provided nevertheless, that it shall be lawful for any person or persons, who on the day before mentioned, shall have a license under the present existing laws to sell or barter, in virtue thereof, until the expiration of the term for which the said license was granted, as freely as he, she or they might have done if this act had not have passed. Provided that any license to vend said articles may be granted by said clerks to extend to the second day of May next; for which the person received the same, shall pay for the use of the state a sum proportionate to that charge for a license under the existing laws, for a whole year, regarding the time for which it shall issue.—And provided also, that persons carrying on shad and herring fisheries in this State, may sell and dispose of so much salt as is necessary to cure the fish purchased of them, during the months of April and May, and no longer without license.

Sec. 2 And be it enacted, That a license to sell at barter any of the goods. wares or merchandize hereinbefore mentioned, shall be granted by the clerk of each county court to any person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, residing in his county, and by the clerk of Baltimore city court to any person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, residing in said city, who shall apply therefor, and pay to such clerk the sum of twelve dollars. for the use of the State, which license shall authorize the person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, to whom the same shall be therein particularly described, from the day of its date until the first day of May next thereafter, but such license shall not authorize the person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, to whom the same shall be granted, residing in the several counties of this State, to sell or barter any spirituous or fermented liquor in quantities less than a pint at any one time, nor shall such license authorize any person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic to sell or barter spirituous liquor by retail or in quantities less than ten gallons, and not less than a pint within the city of Baltimore unless the person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, obtaining such license, shall pay to the clerk of Baltimore city court, in addition to the twelve dollars aforesaid, the further sum of four dollars for every such license, the said further sum to be applied to the payment of the expense of the gaol of the said city and county of Baltimore as heretofore provided by law, and the licenses so to be issued as last aforementioned, shall expressly state that the person to whom the same shall be granted, is or are authorized to retail spirituous and fermented liquor by retail, in quantities not less than a pint at any one time within the city of Baltimore, at a place which shall be particularly described in such license, as is herein before required in other cases, provided, that any storekeeper or other retailer, except the keepers of ordinaries, removing his, her or their store, from one part of a county or city, to another part of the same county or city, with a view to a permanent settlement, may continue to sell under the license obtained for the first establishment, provided he, she or they shall go to the county or city, and have the name or description of their new place of residence endorsed on the back of the license already obtained for which service they shall pay to the clerk the sum of twelve and an half cents. Provided, that no distiller of spirituous liquors, shall at one time sell less than a quart, without obtaining a license under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 3. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, to open, set up, or keep any ordinary, tavern or inn, nor any victualling house; cook shop or oyster house, nor any place at, or in which any spirituous or fermented liquor, shall be sold or bartered, in quantities less than a pint at any one time, without first obtaining a license in the manner, now provided by law: Provided nevertheles, that if the grand jury of any county court, or of the city court of Baltimore, shall signify to the county court, or city of Baltimore, (as the case may be,) their opinion that a license ought not to be granted to any individual or individuals named in the lists to be laid before them, under the provisions of this act, that the clerks of the said courts shall not be authorized to grant a license or licenses to any such individual or individuals, without the special direction of the court.

Sec. 4. And be it enacted, That a license to open, set up and keep an ordinary tavern or inn, or victualling house or cook shop or oyster house, or a place at or in which spirituous and fermented liquor may be sold or bartered in quantities less than a pint, at any one time, shall be granted by the clerk of any county court, or the clerk of Baltimore city court, to any person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, who shall produce and deliver such certificate as is hereinbefore required, and who shall at the time of applying for such license, pay therefor to such clerk the sum of twelve dollars for a license to keep a victualing house or cook shop, or an oyster house, eighteen dollars for every other license required by this section, for the use of the State, which license shall particularly describe the person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic may in virture thereof, open, set up and keep such ordinary, tavern, inn, victualling house, cook shop or oyster house, and fermented liquor as aforesaid; and it shall authorize the same only at the place so described therein, from the day of its date until the first day of May next thereafter, or until the same shall be suspended or revoked in the manner by law.

Sec. 5. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the sheriff of each county of this state, annually in the month of April, to make or cause to be made an alphabetical list of the names of all the persons, or bodies corporate or politic district of this county, and in the city of Baltimore, in each ward of said city, who shall be exercising or pursuing any business, or be doing any act or thing, or shall be in the use or occupation of any house or place, for any purpose for which a license is made necessary by this act, or any existing law of this State and to return such list or lists on Monday preceding the last Saturday in said month to the clerk of his county court, or to the clerk of Baltimore City court, as the case may require, and the sheriff of each county shall within the first week of the month last before mentioned, cause a written or printed notice to be set up, in at least six public places, in each of the election districts and wards in his county or city, cautioning all persons, and bodies corporate or politic whom it may concern to obtain a license or renew the same according to the provisions of this act, before the tenth day of May, then next ensuing, and each sheriff shall be entitled, to receive twenty five-cents for every license, obtained by any person whose name shall be contained in the list or lists so returned by him, to be deducted by the clerk from the money received for such license and paid over to said sheriff to give the public notice herein before directed, shall not be allowed to excuse any person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, who shall neglect to obtain license as required by this act, and returning, or cause to be made and returned on or before the Monday next preceding the last Saturday in every month, besides the month of April, in each and every year, a list of the names of all such persons, or bodies corporate or politic, as shall from time to time come to reside in each election, district in his county, or if in the city of Baltimore, then in each ward of said city, or whose names or titles of incorporation he shall discover to have been omitted in his annual and previous returns, who by any of the provisions of this act are required to obtain a license, and he shall be entitled to the same compensation out of all licenses, that may be obtained by them.

Sec. 6. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the clerks of the county courts of this state and of the clerk of Baltimore City court, to transmit to the Treasurer of the Western Shore of Maryland, semi annually; on or before the first Monday of May and November in every year hereafter lists and accounts of all licenses which shall be by them severally be granted in pursuance of this act, or any existing law of this State and to lay before every grand jury attending his court, on the first day of their attendance, the returns made to him by the sheriff of his county as herein before directed, and a list of all licenses granted by the clerk in virtue of this act, or any existing law of this State, and not by him before returned to any grand jury, and if any clerk or sheriff shall willingly omit to perform any duty required of him by this act, he shall on conviction thereof, be fined any sum not less than one hundred dollars, nor exceeding one thousand dollars. in the direction of the court, one half to the use of the informer, and the other half to the use of the state.

Sec. 7. And be it enacted, That if any person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic, shall sell or barter, or suffer to be sold or bartered in his, her, or their dwelling or other building, or at any place in his, her, or their occupation, by his, her or their agent or servant or other person whatsoever, with his, her, or their knowledge, any goods, wares or merchandize sprituous or fermented liquor without license first had and obtained as herein before provided, he, she, or they shall forfeit and pay the sum of fifty dollars, one half to the use of the informer, and the other half to be paid to the clerk of the county court, or city court as the case may be, to the use of the state, to be recovered in the name of the State of Maryland, by action of debt or indictment in the county court of the county where such offence shall have been committed, or in Baltimore city court, if the offence shall have been committed within the limits of said city.

Sec. 8. And be it enacted, That nothing herein contained, shall be so construed, as to prevent the Mayor or City Council of Baltimore, the corporation of Annapolis City or the corporation of Frederic, from imposing, levying and collecting any tax or duty which they are or shall be authorized by their respective charters, or any law of this state, to impose levy and collect.

Sec. 9. And be it enacted, That any person, or body corporate or politic, who shall be convicted of a breach of any of the provisions of this act, before any county court or before Baltimore City Court, shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and be fined or imprisoned or both, at the discretion of the court before whom he or she shall be thereof convicted: provided always, that if within ten days after the termination of any license herein before mentioned, the person or persons, body or bodies corporate or politic to whom the same was granted, shall apply for and obtain a further license, he, she or they shall not, merely on account of such delay, be considered as having violated any of the provisions of this act.

Sec. 10. And be it enacted, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed, as to permit any hawker or pedler to sell or barter any goods, wares or merchandize within this state without having obtained a license for that purpose, as heretofore required by law, nor to impair the privileges which are now secured to the Shad and Herring fisheries of this state.

Sec. 11. And be it enacted, That the clerks of the several counties, and the City Court of Baltimore, shall receive fifty cents for each and every license, in lieu of all other fees, except th five per cent allowed by the existing laws.

Sec. 12. And be it enacted, That so much of any act or acts of Assembly of this state as may be repugnant to, or inconsistent with the provisions of this act, shall cease to be of any force or effect, from and after the last day of April next. Provided nevertheless, that nothing herein cont ined. shall abate any prosecution that may then be pending under the laws of this state, and provided further, that all offences committed before that period, shall be and they are hereby directed to be proceeded against and punished in the same manner as they would have been proceeded against and punished if this act had not passed; Provided however that the said repeal shall not be construed to prevent the issuing of licenses under the said act or acts to be in force, until the first day of May next; and for which there shall be paid such sum of money for the time that such license is to continue as shall be in just proportion to the sum required by said act or acts for a license for an entire year.

Sec. 13. And be it enacted, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to any importer of goods, wares, and merchandize, who does not break packages, or sell the said imported goods, wares and merchandize in less quantity than the cask package or other form in which the same was imported.

PROSPECT OF CROPS.

Extract of a Letter to the Editor of the American Farmer, dated Jefferson county Va. Feb. 20, 1828.

I cannot lay down my pen without a word on the subject of our crops, to so distinguished a patron of agriculture as yourself; but the effort of my pen would be feeble to paint the brilliancy and beauty of our wheat fields, which, indeed, no pencil can rival; they are as verdant and luxuriant as generally in the vernal month of May. The winter has been throughout so astonishingly mild, that vegetation has scarcely sustained a check. Some farmers declare the intention of grazing their fields to repress the prematurity of their growth—in my opinion, a hazardous experiment, promising no possible good, and risking much probable injury. I think our prospects are flattering for a most abundant harvest. I wish there was a prospect of corresponding prices. The wind is now at north west, and the temperature as clement as April. All hope abandoned of getting any ice this winter, and much regret felt at the privation.

Yours, truly, T.

A List of Justices of the Peace of Somerset County—1828.

Wm. Williams	Wm. Newman
John Woolford	L. W. Ballard
Wm. Roach	J. H. Cohoon
Job Allen	Jesse Hughes
Isaac Kennerly	W. S. Disharoon
James Goslee	Levin Jones
James Denson	B. I. Dashiell, of Quantico
Wm. Boggs
Samuel James	Jas. W. Dashiell
Isaac Denson	Joseph Barkley
Joseph Morris	Philip Covington
Levin Ballard, of J.	John Hopkins
Wm. Evans, Devil's Island.	Isaac Newman
	Levin Crockett
Wm. Costen, sen.	Geo. M. Willing
Isaac M. Adams	Wm. White
Daniel Dakes	A. B. Bennett
T. D. Marshall	Geo. Malcomb
Wm. Coulbourne, of Wm.	W. Waters, of W.
	J. W. Bayley
Thos. Robertson	T. G. Dashiell
Benj. I. Jones	J. C. Wilson, jr.
Covington Cordery	John Leatherberry
Charles Rider	John H. Durham
J. C. Wilson, sen.	R. W. Swan
Levin Tyler	W. Whittington, of Wm.
L. D. Maddux
Alexander Jones	Tubman Lankford
Wm. Whayland	James Moore
J. H. Bell	Joseph Richards
Richard Waller	Levi Bishop
James Wilson	John Larmore
Geo. Hopkins of M.	James Donoho
Wm. Miles	John D. Brower
Jesse Walter	Levin Handy
B. Acworth	Selby Mills
I. L. Waller	John Farbush
George Rowe	J. A. Lankford
Thomas Handy	John Tyler, of Smith's island
John S. Hill
Wm. H. Curtis	Solomon Evans, do.
Shiles Crockett	Noal Rider
Daniel Ballard	Joseph Cantwell
R. J. Henry	Thomas Byrd
John Lowe	Burton Cannon

[COMMUNICATED.]

OBITUARY.

DIED, on the 2nd inst. at her residence in Washington Academy, Mrs. ANNA D. JONES, consort of Mr. Thos. Jones. in the 54th year of her age.

To the friends and acquaintance of Mrs. Jones it is unnecessary to offer any portrait of her character, as her social worth at least was founded on that constant and unaffected display of relative virtues which had so deservedly endeared her to the esteem and affection of all to whom she was personally known:—But, whilst it will be a source of rich consolation to her friends to reflect, it is one also of abundant interest to the Church generally to know, that, as a crowning ornament to her social excellence, varied and distributed as it was, to meet every claim of friendship, and every prayer of necessity, is justly to be added the humble but sincere faith she professed in the Saviour of the world. Mrs. Jones had been a member of the Methodist E. Church for many years, and during the whole time, sustained an exemplary and instructive character as a Christian both in private and in public life. It will be noted with tender regret upon the church record, that her place has become vacant in the house of God.

Her last illness was so violent and rapid as soon to deprive her of the power of speech, even before her friends seriously apprehended that the case would prove fatal; but, in testimony of her habitual and conscious acceptance with God, she remarked in conversation with a minister of the Gospel, who made her a religious visit but a few weeks before her death, that strong and abiding was her trust in Christ, and the promotion of his glory the dearest delight in her soul upon earth. The friends she has left will embalm her name in their tender est recollections, and especially with that name, with all its interesting associations of kindness and affection, be forever engraved in the bosom of her surviving and afflicted consort.—But her work was done, and at the appointed time she has been called from labour to reward. Attended by a numerous concourse of relatives and citizens, her remains were deposited, with appropriate rites of Christian burial, in the Episcopal church yard at Princess-Anne—there to rest in the peaceful silence of the grave till the morning of the resurrection.

Awhile in flesh disjoin'd,
  Our friends that went before,
We soon in Paradise shall find,
  And meet to part no more.

O what a mighty change
  Shall Jesus' sufferers know,
While o'er the happy plains they range
  Incapable of wo.

No slightest touch of pain,
  Nor sorrow's least alloy,
Can violate our rest, or stain
  Our purity of joy.

In that eternal day
  No clouds or tempests rise,
There gushing tears are wip'd away
  Forever from our eyes.

A letter from Constantinople dated Nov. 27, states, that the Wechabites, to the number of 50,000 men, are marching against the army of Mahomet Ali, which is only 14,000 strong.

MARRIED, on the 2th inst. by the Rev. W. M. Stone, Mr. John Langsdale to Mrs. Elizabeth Hopkins, all of this county.

On the same day, Mr. Levin Lowe to Miss Matilda Weatherly, both of this county.

Baltimore Prices Current.

BALTIMORE, FRIDAY, MARCH 7.

FLOUR, best family,		$6a6 25
Susquehanna,		4 62
WHEAT, best white, p. bu.		95a110
red	do	96
CORN,		34a36
RYE,		48a50
OATS,		21a23
WHITE BEANS,		80a100
PEAS,		45a50
CLOVER SEED,		4 75a5 25
FLAXSEED,		75a80
FEATHERS,	do	26a28

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY
OF
AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,
At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public, that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast & wrought Shares, with & without Coulters; Hillside, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs; a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows; Swingletrees, double & single; Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual, his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes; Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.

His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 3 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his implements, that he will continue to merit the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.

JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.

N. B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. FRUIT TREES will be furnished to orders. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders. March 11. tx

NOTICE.

WILL be sold at Public Sale, on Thursday the 20th inst. at 10 o'clock, A. M. on the premises, the following property, viz—3 head of horses, two yoke of oxen, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 2 desks, 1 walnut table, 1 cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat-fan, 150 bushels of corn, more or less; 14 stacks of fodder, more or less, and 8 hives with bees, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of Henry I. Riggin, to satisfy county levy and officers' fees for 1825, 1826, and 1827, and will be struck off to the highest and best bidder for cash.

ROBT. STEWART, late Shff. & Col.

March 3—4t

CAUTION.

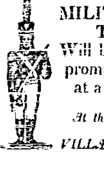
ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing, or taking any assignment, or transfer whatever, on a Note of Hand, which James Smith, of Somerset county, holds against me, dated 17th day of September, 1824, amounting to twelve hundred dollars, as the payment of said note will be disputed by the subscriber.

DAVID LANKFORD.

Feb. 11th—19. ktn

JUST RECEIVED
AND FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE, a number of

Methodist Hymn Books,
Wesley's Sermons, in 2 volumes.
Also, Scriptural Catechisms, intended for the use of the Methodist Societies. March 11—ac



MILITARY NOTICES,
Will be neatly and promptly printed, at a low price,
At the Office of the
VILLAGE HERALD

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

From the London "Forget-me-not."

FAIRY GAMBOLS.

Night's silver lamp ascends the skies,
By myriad splendid stars impearl'd,
And bids her midnight beauties rise,
To light and charm a wearied world.

Yon mouldering turrets time-worn form,
Her soft and trembling beams illume;
She smiles amidst the coming storm,
And brightens from surrounding gloom.

Now the fleet-footed fairies lave
Their spotless limbs in pearly dew,
Or sit beside the lucid wave,
Or deck the scene that Spencer drew.

On some gay flow'ret's emerald stem,
Perchance their magic feet alight,
Whose silvery sandals wear a gem,
Their mirror is the sleeping tide.

When morning opes her cloudless eye,
The fairies seek their mossy cell;
There in soft smiling slumbers lie,
Till waken'd by the evening bell.

EPITAPH.

To the memory of ELIZABETH WALBRIDGE, "The Dairyman's Daughter," who died May 3, 1801, aged 31 years.

"She being dead, yet speaketh."

Stranger! if e'er, by chance or feeling led,
Upon this hallowed turf thy footsteps tread,
Turn from the contemplation of this sod,
And think on her whose spirit rests with God.
Lowly her lot on earth,—but HE who bore
Tidings of grace, and blessings to the poor,
Gave her, His truth and faithfulness to prove,
The choicest treasures of his boundless love,
Faith, that dispelled affliction's darkest gloom,
Hope, that could cheer the passage to the tomb,
Peace, that not hell's dark legions could destroy,
And Love, that filled the soul with heavenly joy.
Death of its sting disarmed, she knew no fear;
But tasted heaven, e'en while she lingered here.
O! happy saint, may we like thee, be blest—
In life be faithful, & in death find rest.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

I wish, on this occasion, to address you upon the efficacy of prayer. Prayer is an expression of desire, addressed to the Divine Being. It is common, among men, to fly to God, for succour, in time of need—danger—sickness—or death—when no human aid can avail. At other times, men are too indifferent upon the subject of prayer. Many are taught in infancy to use the Lord's prayer, that pattern and model of all acceptable worship. It is brief, but compendious;—seems to contain every thing, that mortals need pray for. Its language is that of reverential confidence—filial affection and desire. It is the language of deep-toned piety, and exalted and Heavenly Faith and Hope. It cannot be too much admired—nor can it be too earnestly recommended to all who wish for direction "how to pray." It is said, that we "know not how to order our speech before God, by reason of darkness"—and God is so high that we can hardly venture to come nigh His exalted Majesty, especially when overwhelmed with a view of our guilt in His sight. But, we are not to despair of a gracious acceptance, if we come to Him through the Mediator, who is our Advocate with the Father He is "the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but for the sins of the whole world." For His sake God will be gracious to our unrighteousness, and will blot out our transgressions. The only hope of our salvation is the bestowment of divine mercy—and for this we must ask. "Ask and ye shall receive—seek and ye shall find." The efficacy of prayer is not matter of speculation, but of fact and experience. "I sought the Lord," said the Psalmist, "and He heard me and delivered me from all my fears." Again, it is said, "This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him." By prayer, the patriarch Jacob prevailed with God—and by prayer Daniel and others were delivered from imminent danger and death By prayer the Apostle Peter was miraculously delivered from prison—and by this means, a great deliverance was wrought for the Syrophenician woman. By prayer, Elijah shut the windows of Heaven for a long time together, and by the same means opened them that they gave rain By prayer, our Lord Jesus obtained for us the astonishing gift of the Holy Ghost, and the Church Universal is always realizing the efficacy of His Heavenly Intercession.

Whatsoever ye shall ask, in my name, in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.—And though he declares, not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of Heaven, to show that unless we do the will of His Father, and believe on Him, our prayer is useless, and but hypocrisy; yet still, He gives encouragement to the vilest of sinners—to those whose sins are as crimson, and red like scarlet, to ask forgiveness and eternal life, at His hands—and when obtained He says, go, and sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon thee. J. M.

Study indispensable to Greatness.

It is a fact well worthy the attention of young men, who have the misfortune to consider themselves as great geniuses, that nearly all the master spirits of the British parliament have been distinguished as scholars, before they became eminent as statesmen. If Sheridan is urged as an exception, let it be remarked, that only one Sheridan has ever been heard on the floor of St. Stephens; and that the splendid and terrible assailant of Warren Hastings, sunk at last into a mere writer of comedies, and manager of a play house. Chatham, and Pitt, and Fox, and Burke, and Canning, and Brougham with many others, whose names shine with a lustre only a little inferior to those above mentioned, were distinguished for their classical attainments. They laid the foundation of their future greatness in the cloisters of the university. Since the world began, genius has accomplished nothing without industry; and no error can be more fatal to the young aspirant after distinction and usefulness, than that indolent self-complacency which rests on the supposed possession of exalted genius.—Ep. Watchman.

Bouyancy of the Human Body.—An Author observes, on this subject, that the human body is so much lighter than water, that it naturally floats with a bulk of about half head above the water; and if the person is tranquil, the body can no more sink than a log of wood would do.—"Perhaps the whole of seventy passengers who were swallowed up by the sudden sinking of the Comet steam-boat might have been saved," the author adds, "had they known the truth that we are now explaining, since boats so soon came to their assistance." The reason that so many people are drowned, who might be saved, are the following:—"1st. Their not knowing that the body is really lighter than water.—2d. Their believing that continued exertion is necessary to keep the body from sinking: hence the position of a swimming man is generally assumed, in which the face is downwards, and the whole head must be kept out of the water to allow of breathing. Now, as a man cannot restrain this position without continued exertion, even if a swimmer, he is soon exhausted, and if not, the unskilful attempt will scarcely secure him a few respirations. A body raised for a moment above the natural level by exertion, sinks as far below when the exertion ceases; the plunge terrifies the unpractised individual, by appearing to be the commencement of a permanent sinking, and fear soon makes him an easy victim to his fate.—3d. Persons unaccustomed to the water, and in danger of drowning, in their struggle, generally attempt to keep their hands above the surface, from feeling as if their hands were tied below; but this act is most pernicious, because any part of the body kept out of the water in addition to the face which must remain above, requires effort to support it, which the individual is supposed incompetent to afford.—4th. Not having reflected, that when a log of wood or a human body is floating upright, with only a small portion above the surface, in a rough water as at sea, every wave must cover the head for a little time as it passes, but it will again leave it projecting in the interval. The practised swimmer chooses this interval for breathing.—5th Not knowing the importance of keeping the chest as full of air as possible, the doing which has the same effect as tying a bladder of air to the neck, and without other effort will cause nearly the whole head to float above the water. If the chest be once emptied, and if from the face being under water the person cannot inhale again, the body is then specified heavier than water, and will sink."

YOUNG NAPOLEON.

The young Napoleon is an interesting youth, beautifully formed, with the countenance and fine-cut lips of his father, and the blue eyes of his mother. One cannot see this blooming youth, with his inexpressible tint of melancholy and thoughtfulness, without a deep emotion. He has not that marked, plain and familiar ease of the Austrian Princes, who seem to be every where at home; but his demeanor is more dignified and noble in the extreme. He has an Arabian steed, which he strides with a nobleness which gives the promise of as good horsemanship as that for which his father was so celebrated. His escadron almost adore him; and he commands with a precision and a military eye, which prognosticate a future general. He is, by virtue of an imperial decree, proprietor of the eight domains of the Grand Duke of Toskana, in Bohemia, with an income of above 25,000*l* sterling: a greater revenue than is enjoyed by any of the imperial princes, the Archduke Charles excepted. His title is Duke of Reichstadt. He is addressed "Euer Durch-lautcht," (Voltre Altesse.) His rank is immediately after that of the princes of the reigning house; the Austrian family of Este and Toskana. His court establishment is the same with the imperial Princes; he has his obersthofmeister, his lord chamberlain, aids de camp, and a corresponding inferior household. In possession, as he is of a large fortune, his destination will depend on his talents and on his inclination.—Austria As It Is.

EARLY SOWING

Deane's N. E. Farmer states that "Oats cannot be sowed too early in the spring after the ground is thawed and become dry enough for sowing. The English farmers sow them sometimes in February."—Loudon says, "The season for sowing oats is from the last week in February to the end of April. About the middle of March is preferred by the best farmers." We believe, as a general rule, neither oats nor any other sort of spring grain can be sowed too early after the ground can be put in order to receive the seed in the spring. Early sowing spring wheat as well as oats is much less liable to blast than such as is put into the ground late in the season.

HEMP.—Gov. Clinton, in his recent message to the New York legislature, recommends the cultivation of hemp and flax. He says, "it is the opinion of good judges, if this interest is properly foistered, that twelve thousand tons of hemp, worth $2,000,000, may be annually raised in that state; and that within thirty years, the exportation of that article from the United States, will be equivalent in value to those of cotton."

STATISTICS OF EUROPE.

An authentic account of the statistical condition of the prinicipal European powers, extracted from the most recent statements of the European statistical writers, in the concise form of paragraphs.

The surface of territory in geographical square miles of the kingdom of France is 200,000. Her population 31,600,000. Her revenue, reckoned in dollars, 196,338,000, The capital of their public debt, (including 10,000,000 for the indemnity of the emigrants,) 729,000,00. The number of her standing army, 232,000. The number of her ships of war, 49 ships of the line, 31 frigates and 10 corvettes.

The territory and dimensions of the empire of Austria is 220,579 square miles. Its population, 29,700,000. Its revenue $64,000,000. The capital of its public debt $466,000,000.—The number of its standing army 276,000. Its marine a few frigates and gallies.

The like territory and dimensions of the United kingdom of Great Britain, [in Europe] 90,000 square miles. Her population 21.000,000. Her revenue $252,600,000. The capital of her public debt, $4,000,200,000,000 including her unfunded debt. The number of her standing army 86,000. The number of her ships of war; 28 three deckers, 85 two deckers, 172 frigates, 157 corvettes, and 25,000 seamen.

The like territory and dimensions of the Empire of Russia, [in Europe] 1,463,00 square miles: in Asia, 5,967,000 square miles. Her population in Asia four millions. Her revenue $62,000,000. The capital of her public debt, $268,000,000. The number of her standing army, 740,000. The number of her ships of war, 50 ships of the line, 30 frigates, 1 corvette, 48,000 seamen.

Contents of the American Farmer, dated Feb. 29th.

Report of the Committee on Manufactures, in the House of Representatives in Congress, concluded—Letter from Thomas Gold to J. W. Jeffreys, Esq. on Agricultural Societies; Manufacture of Cotton in the Souther States, No XVI—Letter from a Gentleman in Virginia to Mr. Thomas Massey, with Mr. Massy's Reply—Inquiries on the Culture of Hemp and Flax—Hemp proposed by Gov. Clinton to be cultivated, in New York—Author Young's Agriculture Experiments, continued; On Peas, Turnips, and Carrots, with observations by J. Buel—Answers to inquiries on getting out Clover and Orchard Grass Seed, R. Sinclair, and Experience—Wm. Prince Esq. on the Greville Rose and Scuppernong Grape—On American Grapes and Wine—On Dwelling Houses—The Jessamine, emblem of delicacy; the Wormwood, emblem of anguish—Pedigrees of Lath and Collector—Novel Undertaking—On Cutting out Haws, or Hooks—Produce of a Pointer Bitch—To preserve Gun Barrels—Size of Baltimore—Human Life—Burning to Death—Oyster Beds—Recipes—Editorial—Commercial Record—Advertisements.

TRUSTEE's SALE.

BY virtue of a decree of the honorable the Chancellor of Maryland, the subscriber as Trustee will sell on Saturday the fifth day of April next, on the premises, all that house and lot of ground in the village of White-Haven, which belonged to William Waters late of Somerset county, deceased.

The terms of sale are, that the purchaser shall pay to the Trustee, on the day of sale, one tenth part of the purchase money, and the balance at the end of twelve months from said day, giving bond with approved security for the same—and upon the payment of the whole of the purchase money, the trustee will in virtue of said decree execute to the purchaser, or his or her heirs or assigns, a good and sufficient deed in fee simple, free and clear of all incumbrances from any person or persons claiming under or through the deceased. The sale to be held between the hours of one and five o'clock in the afternoon.

THE CREDITORS OF WILLIAM WATERS are hereby notified to file their claims against the said estate, within six months from the day of sale aforesaid, in the proper office.

MARCELLUS JONES,
Feb. 29—M 4 ts Trustee.

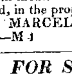
FOR SALE.



THE subscriber offers at private sale two handsomely built SCHOONERS, the materials of which will be warranted to be of the best quality. The one called Remedy, of 50 tons burden, is now completely rigged, and the other, of the same burden, will be ready, for sailing, about the middle of April.

FRANCIS D. NELSON.
Quantico, March 4. tf

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset County Court, and to me directed, at the suit of Henry Lankford, administrator of Pierce Riggin, against Henry I. Riggin, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—One negro man Jim, 1 woman Ann, 1 do. Nelly, 1 do. Easter, 1 boy Dave, 1 girl Margaret, 1 do. Case, 1 do. Jane, 1 do. Eliza, 3 head of horses, 2 yoke of oxen, 4 head of cattle, 20 head of hogs, 25 head of sheep, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 1 desk, 1 walnut table, 3 pine do. 1 stand, 1 lot of earthen ware, 1 dozen chairs, 1 safe, 2 trunks, 1 lot knives and forks, 1 grind stone, 1 hand mill, 1 cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat fan, 1 lot of casks, 1 cider mill. 1 cross-cut saw, 1 hand saw, 3 ploughs, 3 harrows, 3 axes, 1 lot of iron, 150 bushels of corn, 14 stacks of fodder. 1 lot of flax in the straw, 2 pair of andirons, 3 ox chains, 3 ox yokes, 6 hives with bees, 1 lot of tin ware, 1 lot of cooper's ware, 1 looking glass, 2 guns, 1 tract of land called and known by the name of Gray's Purchase, containing 100 acres more or less; Dudley, 50 acres; Rowley-Hill, 50 acres; part of a tract called Unity Enlarge, 42 acres; Pivilege, 30 acres; part of Privilege, 20 acres;—part of Philip's Conclusion, 200 acres; part of Friends Assistance, 90 acres; and part of Pasturage, 20 acres, which I shall proceed to sell at said Riggin's house, on Thursday the 20th of day of March next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 1 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
Feb. 26, 1828.

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias to me directed, will be sold at public sale, on Thursday the 20th day of March next, at 10 o'clock A. M. on the premises, the following property, viz: One negro man Jim, 12 head of hogs, 1 clock, 1 side board, 1 corner cupboard, 2 beds and furniture, 15 stacks of fodder, more or less, 100 bushels of corn, more or less, 6 chairs, 8 hives with bees, & 1 wheat fan, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of Henry I. Riggin, to satisfy the claims of Henry Lankford, Cottingham and Dickerson, Parker Dickerson, Isaac Pewsey, James Bloyd and William White, and will be struck off to the highest and best bidder for cash.

JOSEPH RICHARDS,
Feb. 26. Constable.

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber has taken out letters of administration on the estate of Elizabeth Bayly, deceased, and being a resident of the Western Shore of Maryland, is anxious to close it before he returns home. All persons having claims against the said deceased are therefore desired to exhibit them for payment by the 15th instant, as on that day, or as soon after as possible, he will leave the county.

M. B. CARROLL.
March 4. km

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Joshua Reace, in part, use of Edward Ballard, use of Jane Cottman, and in part use of William F. Gibbons against Hetty Ballard administratrix of William Ballard, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro woman Luah, one do. Betty, and one negro girl Silvy—Also one other writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to directed, at the suit of Henry White, against Hetty Ballard, adm'x. of James Ballard, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro girl Charlotte, and one woman Milly, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, on Tuesday the 25th instant, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writs.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 4. ck

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by Jacob W. Bayly, a Justice of the Peace for Somerset county, and to me directed at the suit of Joshua Hitch against Thomas Roberts, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit—Part of a tract of Land called Nelzy, containing fifteen acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises, on Wednesday the 26th instant, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 4. ck

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Thomas Goddard against Elijah Culver, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—A part of a tract of land called Morris's Lot, containing 120 acres, more or less, and I hereby give notice that on Tuesday the 18th March next, at the Court-House door, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock P. M. I shall proceed to sell the life estate of said Culver, in and to the above mentioned land, to the highest and best bidder for ready cash.

ROBERT STEWART,
Feb. 26 late Shff. S. C

District of Maryland, to wit:

[L. S.] Be It Remembered, That on the 17th day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the U. States of America, LITTLETON AIRES, of the said district, hath deposited in this office the title of a Book, the right whereof he claims as author in the words following, to wit:

"TABLES
OF
DISCOUNT OR INTEREST,
ON EVERY CENT,
From 1 to 100, from 1 month to 10 years;
AND
ON EVERY DOLLAR,
From One to One Thousand, and
ON
Every Hundred from 1 to 6 Thousand,
INCLUSIVE
From 1 Day to 10 Years.
The whole computed at Six per Cent.
Together with examples shewing in what manner, by means of the tables, to ascertain the interest at Five, Seven and Eight per Cent."

In conformity to the act of the Congress of the United States, entitled "An Act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such works during the times therein mentioned." And also to the act, entitled 'An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned,' and extending the benefits to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints. PHILIP MOORE.

Clerk of the District of Maryland.

☞ The above work is for sale at the stores of Mr. G. M. Willing, Mr. Wm. Done, and Messrs. Johnston & Sudler, Princess-Anne. Also at the Village Herald office.

March 4. Price $1.

A Candidate.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the citizens of Somerset county, that he is a Candidate to represent them in the next House of Delegates.

BRITTINHAM HULL.
Feb. 26, 1828. 4k

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of Samuel Darby are hereby notified to attend in Somerset County Court, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, if any they have, why the benefits of the insolvent laws of Maryland shall not be extended to him.

Feb. 26. ukp

BLANK BILLS OF SALE.
Printed on fine Paper,
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, PRINCESS-ANNE, SOMERSET COUNTY, MARYLAND.

VOL. I. TUESDAY, MARCH 18, 1828. NO. 51.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

WE think it necessary to remind our patrons, that the 52nd No. of this paper. (which will be issued on the 25th of next March,) will complete one year since the establishment of a printing office at Princess-Anne. After that period THE VILLAGE HERALD shall be considerably enlarged, and improved, by lengthening the columns and adding one to each page. This, we conceive, will be the most substantial token of gratitude we can offer those who, by their kind patronage, have enabled us to promise, with certainty, the contemplated alteration.

It may not be needless here to mention, we still remain decidedly of the opinion that the better way to conduct our paper, is, to keep without the arena of political controversy—exclusively devoting our columns to the chronicling of foreign and domestic intelligence, and the furtherance of instruction by giving a miscellany of usefully interesting and amusing matter

The importance of agricultural information is obvious to every one—though such knowledge, in this section of our country, is not duly appreciated. Where papers—devoted entirely to the farming interest—have been extensively circulated,—there these who till the soil have been incalculably benefited by placing a proper estimate on intelligence relative to their vocation. May not we then hope that the appropriation of a portion of our paper to the invaluable science of agriculture, will be acceptable to, and command the attention of, those who engage in its pursuit? Surely we may: And we shall therefore put in requisition every means within our reach to render this department of our paper worthy the notice of every practical farmer.

The advantages of economy—its absolute necessity in the present condition of our country—and its being more praise-worthy than prodigality, are simple facts, which need no support, because they are the dictates of common sense and receive the assent of the mind as soon as proposed.—And it would be contrary to the known principles which direct and influence men to good and beneficial actions, to suppose we should feel indifferent to that which concerns our individual interest—which tends to increase or diminish our property—to add to or take from our happiness:—Hence, considering the interests of our patrons, and our own convenience and profit, we shall on the enlargement of our paper (which will be on the 1st of next April adopt the following

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance, or $2 50 if paid within six months, or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued unless at the editor's discretion, until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement

☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

Note.—In order to obviate all misapprehensions, we would most distinctly state, that all our original subscribers will come under the above conditions immediately on the commencement of the next volume: And every one who subscribed since the commencement of the present volume, will come under the new terms on the expiration of the time for which his name was entered.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

 A gradually increasing circulation of the Herald enhances the advantages offered by it as an advertising medium, which, we trust, will be readily appreciated.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

Magistrates' Blanks
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis	par
Easton	par
Frederick	par
Frederick County Bank	par
Bank Westminster	par
Hager's Town	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co ($5 and upwards)	par
Elkton	1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley at Winchester	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	½
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	½
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	3½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	[illegible]
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	½
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

TRUSTEE's SALE.

BY virtue of a decree of the honorable the Chancellor of Maryland, the subscriber as Trustee will sell on Saturday the fifth day of April next, on the premises, all that house and lot of ground in the village of White-Haven, which belonged to William Waters late of Somerset county, deceased.

The terms of sale are, that the purchaser shall pay to the Trustee, on the day of sale, one tenth part of the purchase money, and the balance at the end of twelve months from said day, giving bond with approved security for the same—and upon the payment of the whole of the purchase money, the trustee will in virtue of said decree execute to the purchaser, or his or her heirs or assigns, a good and sufficient deed in fee simple, free and clear of all incumbrances from any person or persons claiming under or through the deceased. The sale to be held between the hours of one and five o'clock in the afternoon.

THE CREDITORS OF WILLIAM WATERS are hereby notified to file their claims against the said estate, within six months from the day of sale aforesaid, in the proper office.

MARCELLUS JONES,
Feb. 29—M 4 ts Trustee.

JOB PRINTING,
SUCH AS
Handbills, Cards, Blanks.
PAMPHLETS, &c.
Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,
At the Office of the Village Herald.

FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers at private sale two handsomely built SCHOONERS, the materials of which will be warranted to be of the best quality. The one called Remedy, of 50 tons burden, is now completely rigged, and the other, of the same burden, will be ready, for sailing, about the middle of April.

FRANCIS D. NELSON.
Quantico, March 4. tf

CONSTABLE's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias to me directed, will be sold at public sale, on Thursday the 20th day of March next, at 10 o'clock A. M. on the premises, the following property, viz: One negro man Jim, 12 head of hogs, 1 clock, 1 side board, 1 corner cupboard, 2 beds and furniture, 15 stacks of fodder, more or less, 100 bushels of corn, more or less, 6 chairs, 8 hives with bees, & 1 wheat fan, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of Henry I. Riggin, to satisfy the claims of Henry Lankford, Cottingham and Dickerson, Parker Dickerson, Isaac Pewsey, James Bloyd and William White, and will be struck off to the highest and best bidder for cash.

JOSEPH RICHARDS,
Feb. 26. Constable.

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Joshua Reace, in part, use of Edward Ballard, use of Jane Cottman, and in part use of William F. Gibbons against Hetty Ballard administratrix of William Ballard, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro woman Luah, one do. Betty, and one negro girl Silvy—Also one other writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to directed, at the suit of Henry White, against Hetty Ballard, adm'x. of James Ballard, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: one negro girl Charlotte, and one woman Milly, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, on Tuesday the 25th instant, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writs.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 4. ck

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued by Jacob W. Bayly, a Justice of the Peace for Somerset county, and to me directed at the suit of Joshua Hitch against Thomas Roberts, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit—Part of a tract of Land called Nelzy, containing fifteen acres, more or less, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises, on Wednesday the 26th instant, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder, for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 4. ck

NOTICE.

WILL be sold at Public Sale, on Thursday the 20th inst. at 10 o'clock A. M. on the premises, the following property, viz—4 head of horses, two yoke of oxen, 6 feather beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 clock, 1 sideboard, 2 desks, 1 walnut table, 1 cart, 1 carriage, 1 wheat-fan, 150 bushels of corn, more or less; 14 stacks of fodder, more or less, and 8 hives with bees, which I have seized and taken in execution as the property of Henry I. Riggin, to satisfy county levy and officers' fees for 1825, 1826, and 1827, and will be struck off to the highest and best bidder for cash.

ROBT STEWART, late
March 4—ts Shff. & Col.

A Candidate.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the citizens of Somerset county, that he is a Candidate to represent them in the next House of Delegates.

BRITTINHAM HULL.
Feb. 26, 1828. 2k

NOTICE.

THE Creditors of Samuel Darby are hereby notified to attend in Somerset County Court, on the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next, to shew cause, if any they have, why the benefits of the insolvent laws of Maryland shall not be extended to him.

Feb. 26. ukp

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC.

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor are the following:—

CERTIFICATE.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondriacal, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bottle of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER,
Princess Anne, Md.
Nov. 20, 1827.

T. L. DISHAROON,
HATTER,
SNOW HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, lined off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827 6m

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY
OF
AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public, that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast & wrought Shares, with & without Coulters; Hill-side, Substratum and Shovel Plough, a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows; Swingletrees, double & single; Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual, his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes; Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Grind Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.

His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 3 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his establishments, that he will continue to receive the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed, and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.

JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.

N. B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. FRUIT TREES will be furnished to order. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders. March 11. tx

District of Maryland, to wit:

[L. S.] Be It Remembered, That on the 17th day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the U. States of America, LITTLETON AIRES, of the said district, hath deposited in this office the title of a Book, the right whereof he claims as author in the words following, to wit:

"TABLES
OF
DISCOUNT OR INTEREST.
ON EVERY CENT,
From 1 to 100, from 1 month to 10 years,
AND
ON EVERY DOLLAR,
From One to One Thousand, and
ON
Every Hundred from 1 to 6 Thousand.
INCLUSIVE
From 1 Day to 10 Years.
The whole computed at Six per Cent.
Together with examples shewing in what manner, by means of the tables, to ascertain the interest at Five, Seven and Eight per Cent."

In conformity to the act of the Congress of the United States, entitled "An Act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such works during the times therein mentioned." And also to the act, entitled 'An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned,' and extending the benefits to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints. PHILIP MOORE.

Clerk of the District of Maryland

☞ The above work is for sale at the stores of Mr G. M. Willing, Mr. Wm. Done, and Messrs. Johnston & Sudler, Princess-Anne. Also at the Village Herald office.

March 4 Price $1.

NOTICE.

THE Levy Court will meet at Princess Anne on Tuesday the 8th day of April next, on which day between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, will be offerred to the lowest bidder, the removal of all the stakes remaining from the setting of wiers in Monokin river and each of its branches, in accordance with the late act of Assembly, making it the duty of said Court to have the same removed.—The work is to be accomplished on or before the 20th of June next.

JOHN WOOLFORD, Sen.
President L. C
Feb. 19, 1828. 5tm

BLANK BILLS OF SALE.
Printed on fine Paper.
FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, MARCH 18, 1828.

☞The Orphans Court of Somerset will sit on Tuesday next.

Annapolis, March 15.

There was every prospect of the session closing this day, provided the assessment bill had passed the Senate yesterday. It is probable now that the session will be extended some days, as there seems to be a decided majority in the House disposed to pass some measure for providing ways & means, and to refuse to authorize a loan without an adequate revenue.

The offices of Auditor General and of State's Agents for the Eastern and the Western Shores, have been abolished. The annual compensation of $500, has been withdrawn from the Adjutant General's office.

The bill for a general valuation of property within this state, and laying a tax thereon for the support of government, upon the success of which were predicated many of the votes for appropriations towards improvements &c. and upon which a committee at conference had been invited by the Senate and the propositions of that committee throughout agreed to by the house, has nevertheless been rejected by the Senate. The votes on its passage were 4 to 4. The house by a message adopted yesterday, ask the Senate to reconsider the vote, and express an indisposition to resort to loans for the current expenses of Government.

The bill appropriating $3,500 annually for the instruction of indigent Deaf and Dumb persons of this State, passed the house without a dissenting voice. The treasurer is authorized by the bill to pay to the Pennsylvania Institute for Deaf and Dumb, not exceeding the rate of $160 for each person received and educated from this State. The selections are to be made from every county, that reports thro their Levy Courts objects for the State patronage. It requires from 3 to 4 years to complete an education.

The bill authorizing the construc- of a rail-road between Baltimore and Washington, has passed both houses, and become a law.

The bill for the incorporation of a company for constructing a rail road between Elkton & Wilmington, which was rejected in the House of Delegates, that body resolved to reconsider, and it is probable will now pass The apprehensions that it will interfere materially with the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, seems to have subsided. The length of the road will be about 28 miles, and in that distance it passes by merchant mills, that manufacture about 800 barrels of flour a day, besides many paper mills, iron works, woollen and other factories, &c.—quite a manufacturing region. Nothing is asked of the state but the mere act of incorporation —Repub.

☞Since composing the above, we learn verbally that the Legislature broke up last Saturday night, in a riotous manner.

Hydrophobia.—We learn from different sources that several parts of this county are infested with mad dogs. Two dogs, supposed to be mad, were shot in this town on Friday last. It is to be hoped people will make it a general rule to kill immediately every dog bitten by a mad one—This will be the most certain way to avoid serious occurrences.

Would it not be a good thing if some persons in every county of this State would obtain from Mr. John S. Skinner, Editor of the American Farmer, Baltimore, some of the seed of the plant which is said to be a certain cure for hydrophobia? This seed was sent to Mr. Skinner, for distribution, by Horatic Jones, the interpreter at Gennesee, who obtained it from the Indians.

Washington, March 11.

A slight shock of an Earthquake was felt in this City, on Sunday evening last, between 10 and 11 o'clock. It was perceived by some more sensibly than by others, according to their actual position or occupation at the moment. It was strong enough to make the furniture rattle and glasses jingle. For the last eight and forty hours, we have had a remarkable hazy atmosphere, something like our dark but delightful Indian Summer days. Whether this circumstance has, or has not, any connexion with the Earthquake, we leave for the determination of those who are more skilled in such matters than we pretend to be.

From the Georgetown Columbian.

A slight shock of an earthquake was sensibly felt in this town on Sunday evening last, between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock, and lasted but for a few seconds. The shock was so great as to produce the rattling of the windows, and to those lying in bed, it seemed to cause a sudden trembling and rocking under them.—The atmosphere was quite thick and dull, and but here and there a single star could be seen, presenting a red and very uncommon appearance. As for ourselves, we anticipated something of the kind, and it was but a few minutes after we had retired that we felt the shock.

Since writing the above, we learn that a lady in Washington City, was thrown from her bed by the violence of the shock.

From the Baltimore Gazette.

About five minutes past eleven o'clock Sunday night two shocks of an Earthquake were distinctly felt by several respectable persons in the vicinity of Baltimore. The tremulous motion of the earth seemed to come from the westward and pass towards the east, and occasioned a very considerable shaking of doors and other substances easily agitated; the surrounding atmosphere at the time was hazy.

From the Fredricksburg Arena, of the 11th instant.

About 11 o'clock, on Sunday night last, our citizens were alarmed by an earthquake. It consisted of two distinct shocks, occupying something less than half a minute; the first much more severe than the second The houses rocked so violently that persons who had retired for the night, and were asleep, sprang terrified from their beds and were with difficulty persuaded to return to them. It was accompanied with a loud rumbling noise, not unlike that produced by the rapid passage of many carriages over a pavement. We have not heard of any mischief being done, except to the nerves of some of our sovereigns.

Chateaubriand's Travels in America and Italy, are published in England They contain an account of the author's interview with Gen. Washington, and his parallel of the American Patriot with the French Emperor—a description of the American Savages, with some classical letters on modern Italy.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Friend Zieber,

Thy paper of the 4th instant informed me that the committee to whom was referred the memorial of sundry citizens of Harford county, in this state, relative to negro slavery, could not "refrain from expressing their confidence that the time is fast approaching when we shall be relieved from this grievous national calamity," —and thy last paper contains "an act to regulate the issuing of licenses," by which it appeareth that after the first day of the fifth month of the present year, it will be unlawful "for any person or persons, within this state, other than the grower, maker, or manufacturer of the specific articles which shall be therein exposed for sale," to sell or barter any kinds of merchandize Now, as some of my acquaintance are concerned, I should be glad to know whether negroes are merchantable property—If they are, those who sell them will be obliged to take out licenses. If they are not, I would humbly ask, why are they bartered and sold? And may it not be possible the committee on the Harford county memorial had this act in perspective and supposed it would be, in some way, wonderfully conducive to effectuating the abolition of slavery, when they so confidently calculated that the period for that consummation was near at hand? The license law, like several other laws of the present legislature, has some glaring—shameful defects. I will close this epistle by taking the liberty of naming one thing, friend Zieber, which, I think, will not be disputed, viz:—The instrument that lacerates a body is seldom honored, or resorted to, as the means to heal the wound. OBADIAH.

Feb. 12, 1828.

From the Baltimore Patriot.

The session of the Legislature of Virginia just closed, cost the State according to a statement in the Whig, more than one hundred and ten thousand dollars, or more than a fifth of the revenue of the whole State! The Legislature was in session precisely three calendar months and passed about 150 acts of chiefly a local and personal nature. This is indeed costly legislation, especially for such unimportant objects.

Quere.—Could not the Legislative expenses of Maryland be very considably reduced and thus save the Committee of Ways and Means the trouble of hunting up further objects of taxation, as indicated in their recent report to make up "a permanent deficiency."

Baltimore, March 13.

Baltimore & Ohio Rail Road.—From the avidity of the present Stockholders in this magnificent work to increase their subscriptions, it is now evident that every share will be taken by them. The books have been open but four days and upwards of 7500 shares have already been taken, and it is not probable, according to present appearances that a single share will be left at the closing of the books which will be on the 1st of April, agreeably to the notice of the Directors. We stated on Tuesday, that in case the stock should not all be taken at the end of ten days, the books would be open to the public at large. In this we were mistaken—the subscription being confined exclusively to the present stockholders.

Monument of Gov. CLINTON.—A meeting was held at Buffalo on the 28th ult. to concert measures for the erection of Two Monuments to the Memory of De Witt Clinton, to be located at the extremities of Erie Canal at Buffalo and Albany; and to appoint a committee who shall act in concert with a like one of the city of Albany, in furtherance of the proposed measure.

The Green Mountain Tells.—We lately published, from a Vermont paper, a story of two men who alternately shot an apple, each from the head of the other. A further account of this exploit has been published, which entirely exempts the parties from the charge of fool-hardiness — It appears that the lad who so bravely supported the apple, was safely immured beneath an inverted potash kettle, and that the apple, which rested on his head; was protruded through a small hole in the kettle's bottom.

A CURE FOR INTEMPERANCE.

A simple remedy has been discovered, which effectually cures Habitual Drunkards and Tiplers, and renders them totally averse to ardent spirits in any way whatever; it is certainly calculated to arrest the destroyer.— Numbers who have obtained lasting benefit from its effects, are willing to attest the truth of what is here adverted to. It is prepared and sold by George Harper, on the Witlow-Grove turnpike road, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. To ensure a cure the price is three dollars; and if it does not cure, the money will be returned.

GEORGE HARPER.

Also, for sale by

JOHN F. CLARK, Druggist, sole Agent for Washington.

We have on our table a slip of paper manufactured from straw, at the mill of Col. Magaw, near Meadville. The specimen before us, though without sizing, may be written upon without the ink spreading in the least; it is somewhat rough but improvement may be expected to be made upon it. Should the expectations of its ingenious inventor not be wholly realized, should it not be capable of being manufactured into so delicate a paper as that we at present possess, he may nevertheless expect to obtain an abundant compensation for his labor and his pains, by making large quantities of wrapping paper.—Col. Magaw, we understand, is about applying for a patent for this discovery.

Harriburg Argus.

ECONOMY.—Some idea may be formed of the economy practised in this great city [London] from the following fact which my companion relates as having just come to his knowledge. About four hundred broken down cart and coach horses are slaughtered every week, and boiled for the cats and dogs in London. There are four licensed horse-butchers, who kill each about fifty per week, which they purchase at an average price of twenty five shillings a head. The skins are sold to the leather dressers; the shoes to the iron-mongers; the hair to the upholsterers; the bones to the button-makers, and the flesh after being boiled in huge kettles, to the retailers of cat's meat, who sell it out by the pound to their customers, as regularly as the bakers supply the family with bread?—Thus every thing is turned to account by this economical people.

The Scots Times of Nov. 30th mentions that Mr. Owen's Orbiston Establishment is on the decline. Of 300 inmates which it formerly contained only about 50 remain, and these have discarded the co-operative system, and returned to the selfish habits pursued by the rest of the world.

Perpetual Motion.—A Vermont paper speaking upon late publications on perpetual motion, says, that "when a man shall contrive to raise himself by pulling at the waistband of his breeches, we shall have a perpetual motion."

Leigh Hunt, the poet, announces "Lord Byron and his Contemporaries." This work, from the pen of Hunt, is said to promise a greater stock of information concerning that wretched nobleman, than any other publication of the kind. His opportunities of knowing Byron were very extensive; and it seems that, like many other of Byron's friends who were intimate with him, he means to publish a book, and by retailing every little anecdote concerning his deceased friend, turn his friendship to some account—to make it serviceable to him, though he be dead! So much for the friendship of this world!

WHEAT CROPS.—The Centreville (Md.) Times, speaks of the appearance of wheat for the season as remarkably fine.

A daughter of Mr. Roos, near Roes cross roads, Queen Anne's county, aged about 3 years, was burnt to death by her clothes taking fire a few days since.

A long Petition.—The Montreal Petition against the present Administration of the Province has 78,000 signatures; and is supposed to measure 900 yards in length.

TURKEY AND GREECE.

A letter from Symrna, dated Dec. 13, says—"An express, who arrived yesterday from Scio, to the Pacha, states that, in a sortie made by the Turkish Garrison on Friday last, the Greeks lost 2500 men, in killed and wounded. The Tartar sat out immediately for Constantinople, after delivering his despatches to the Pacha."

"The British and French Ambassadors are at Vourla, accompanied by many families of their nations. The Russian Ambassador has gone to Odessa."

A letter from the Mediterranean, dated Nov. 27, says—"The Pacha (Tahir Bey) who commanded the Turkish Fleet at Navarin, arrived at Constantinople on the 20th inst. and, in full Divan, gave an account of the Battle. The Sultan was furious, and, as we are informed, had issued orders to exterminate all the Franks in that capital; but revoked them fortunately."

Letters from RIO DE JANEIRO, under date of 6th January, speak of the injuries which continue to be inflicted on the Brazillian coasting trade, by the Buenos Ayrean privateers.— Markets were dull, and the currency depreciating. There was no political news. The Emperor was endeavouring to obtain a loan of a million, and although some offers had been made at the rate of 75 millreas for 100 in stock, bearing an annual interest of six per cent, yet it was doubtful whether the loan would be taken even at that rate.

Extract of a letter to the National Advocate, dated

Havana, February 10.

The African Slave Trade is prosecuted with great vigor and profit from the port of Havana, as many as one hundred and twenty-five or thirty vessels were employed in this infamous trafic the last year. Several vessels are now fitting out for that trade in this port, in which many American residents have shares. It is curious to observe how soon one loses his sensibility on this subject, and engages in a slave adventure, with the same feeling with which he would buy a lottery ticket at home. Inhuman and piratical, in fact and in law, as the Slave Trade is, the manner in which it is now prosecuted, renders it doubly infamous and especially to be shunned by all honest men. An African expedition is now a deliberate plan to rob and forcibly take possession of the cargoes of any vessel it can meet with. They are consequently fitted out with a heavy armament, and it not unfrequently occurs that a slave ship returns to port in a few months with a full cargo of slaves, cochineal and specie without having seen the coasts of Africa at all.

Thus they pirate upon each other, as well as upon the merchant flags of all nations. And how long shall the nations of the earth submit to such robberies? How long is Africa to be yearly, monthly, and daily drained of her native sons by those who set the laws of God and of man at defiance.

London, Jan. 13

Change of the Russian Ministry.

Intelligence had been just received in the city, that there has been a complete change in the Ministry in Russia. [Evening Post.

Of the change in the Russian Cabinet no particulars are known, but it is said to have arisen out of differences on the question of war with Turkey.

In the course of Thursday a courier arrived to the French government from St. Petersburg, and according to common report at Paris, the alteration in the Russian cabinet was owing almost entirely to a schism of opinion among its members, on the propriety of commencing active hostilities against Turkey. The Emperor himself is said to be in favor of war.

London, Jan. 14.

Nothing is yet known respecting the intended Ministerial arrangements except that the Duke of Wellington has certainly no commission to form an Ultra Government. The Duke has left town for Strathfieldsay, with Don Miguel. He will probably see the king at Windsor on his way to his seat; but it is believed that nothing will be arranged until his Grace's return to Windsor. Lord Wellesley did not see the king when he went to Windsor on Thursday. [Times.

Very Late From Gibraltar.—The New York Gazette has received by Bogota, Captain Sheffield, Gibraltar papers to the 30th of January inclusive. The only item of political intelligence, not before published, is the following, copied from the Chronicle of the 22d:—

PORTUGAL.—The Princess Regent opened the Session for 1828 on the 2d January, pursuant to the 12th article of the Constitutional Charter, Her Royal Highness chiefly reminded the Chambers, that a great deal remained to be done before the Political fabrick could be considered as completely consolidated; expressed a hope, that they would forward this great work without loss of time, and with the zeal and prudence of which they have already given many a proof; noticed the appointment of the infant Don Miguel to the Regency, and observed, that his Royal Highness' perfect coincurrence in the king's designs, the coincidence of the latter with political views of the Great Powers, and the measures adopted by Government, had put an end to party-spirit, and reestablished peace and quiet in the interior of the kingdom; bore testimony to the sincerity with which a neighboring nation opposed the attempts which continue to be made by restless spirits to disturb that tranquility, and, in conclusion, spoke, in confident terms, of the speedy restoration of the credit of the Bank; and promised, that Government would omit no means in its power to maintain the friendly relations now happily subsisting between Portugal and the other Powers.

Legislature of Maryland.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Thursday, March 6.

The resolution of the following tile was sent to the senate for concurrence, to wit:

A resolution for the suspension of proceedings on certain judgements obtained by the state against Charles Jones, late sheriff and collector of Somerset county, and his securities.

Mr. Dennis, having asked and obtained leave to introduce a bill to be entitled, An act to regulate the inspection of staves in this state; it was on his motion Ordered, That a select committee of three members be appointed to prepare and report the same.

Mr. Teackle from the committee on ways and means, reported a bill, entitled, An act to pay the civil list, and other expenses of civil government.

Mr. Teackle from the committee on ways and means, reported a bill, entitled, An act to appoint a state wharfinger in the city of Baltimore, and to authorize the collection of wharfage in certain cases, in the said city.

The report of the committee on ways and means, which was directed by an order of the house, to furnish each member thereof with a list of the gross amount of the levy lists of the several counties of the state, and the city of Baltimore, specifying each general charge of expenditure distinctly, and that the committee of claims provided for the printing thereof, delivered by Mr. Teackle on the 19th ultimo, was taken up for consideration and read the second time. The said report was concurred in, and the resolution therein contained, with an alteration of its date, was assented to, and sent to the senate for concurrence.

On motion by Mr. Donoho, the house proceeded to consider the bill, reported by him, entitled, An act to repeal part of an act of assembly therein mentioned; which was read the second time, passed without amendment, and sent to the senate for concurrence.

Friday, March 7.

An act for the relief of Levin Tyler, guardian of Samuel C. Broughton, Patty Anne Broughton, and Rebecca Broughton, infant children of a certain Ann Broughton, late of Somerset county, deceased; endorsed "will pass, with the proposed amendment." which amended was read the first time, and assented to.

THE POWER OF RUSSIA.

Under this title a New York Journal remarks.—"The eye of Russia has long been fixed on conquest, and yet what has she gained? What has she gained since the time of Catherine?" The first of these questions need hardly be answered. The effort of Peter to bring his empire within the sphere of European politics, developed her resources and lay the staple foundations of future power, have not only procured him the epithet of "Great," but have been rewarded in an unexampled manner. No empire has made such durable acquisitions, so consolidated or more advantageous to its views. When Catherine the Second, says a writer, mounted the throne, only twenty-two millions of people paid her homage. At the end of her reign of thirty-three years, they amounted to nearly thirty-six millions, principally acquired by partitions or conquest. As to the acquisitions of Russia since the time of Catherine, a glance at the map in Sir Robert Wilson's sketch on this subject, will shew the extension of the frontier during the reign of Alexander, comprehending what our writer calls "a little of Sweden" (but which is in fact all Finland, with many islands in the Gulf of Bothnia.) A "part of Poland," that is one half,—a Polish monarchy under the Russian crown; Georgia and Shirvan on the frontier of Persia, extending over five degrees of latitude and Besserabia, on that of Turkey, with Moldavia and Wallachia in fact regulated by her policy. Changes perhaps more auspicious to aggrandizement, than mere territorial extensions were accomplished during the reign of Alexander. As to commerce the ground on which Odessa stands, did not in 1794, contain a house: in 1817, that city contained a thousand stone houses; and forty thousand people. Eight hundred ships sailed annually from the port, and the corn trade promises to supply the Mediterranean. Astrance has obtained equal advantages by a former treaty with Persia, which gave to Russia the exclusive navigation of the Caspian. Petersburg has been so embellished, at an expense of five millions of roubles annually, as to have become the most magnificent in the world,—a magnificence of which an immense commerce lends its aid. Siberia itself is become fertile, inhabited by voluntary settlers; and its capital, Tobolsk, and even Irkutsk, nearly four thousand miles from Moscow, have become the seats of comfort and even luxury.— The population at the lowest calculation, is forty-two millions, the military force of the country has kept pace with enlargement and improvement. The disposable force, which in 1799 was only fifty thousand, in 1807, eighty thousand, in 1813, after years of preparation only three hundred thousand, was in 1817 six hundred and forty-two thousand, and this after guarding her frontiers.

The greatest captain, and the most comprehensive politician of his age, who was made by his own genius, and only conquered by fate, did not look on Russia with such views of her power. He sought to erect Poland into consequence, that the frontier of Europe might be farther removed from her centre. That frontier is virtually throwing farther back by the events succeeding his fall, and both Berlin and Vienna are placed more within the grasp of this northern giant, as well as Stockholm and Constantinople. In a government like Russia, much depends on the personal character of the sovereign. Nicholas may be moderate, and his resources may sleep; but it can hardly be doubted that they exist and are increased, and are increasing and may be wielded to purposes in less quiet hands.

William Cobbett, has addressed a long egotistical letter to the king of England, offering himself in earnest as Prime Minister, in the place of lord Goderich. He tells his majesty that he is the only person in the British realm that is fit for the station, and that he can save the country. But hear him in his own words:

COBBETT'S OFFER TO BECOME PREMIER.

(From the Register, 22d Dec.)

The office of Prime Minister of England, which was formerly too high, too great, too brilliant, and precious a prize for ordinary men to look at, now goes a begging! Such a state of things never existed before; and this was not anticipated by any human being, except myself. Your Majesty having, as it is reported really offered the Prime Ministership to, and received a rejection from, Dudley Ryder, now the Earl, I believe it is, of Harrowby, must, I presume it, be in great distress to find a minister.— Now, I myself, am just as much Your Majesty's subject as Dudly: I am not very far from being as old as he; and there is no one man in Your Majesty's dominions, who will not unhesitatingly declare, that I am a thousand times as fit to be your Minister, as he is, and that I am, at this moment, more fit for the office than any other man in the kingdom. If Your Majesty were to put your people to the vote, you would find a majority of twenty to one for the affirmative of this proposition. I therefore, by these presents, offer myself to your Majesty as Prime Minister of your kingdom, and particularly as minister of the money matters.

I do this in perfect seriousness; I put the offer upon record, in order that I may refer to it; and that others may refer to it; I tell your Majesty, that it is my opinion that a dreadful convulsion will arise; that destruction to property, and that dangers and sufferings such as I do not care to describe will take place in this kingdom unless the measures be adopted which I have in store for the occasion; and which no man living, as I know of, can carry into execution as well as myself

As to any advantage, private advantage to myself, none can possibly arise: seeing that I would not be rich if I could, and seeing that every part of high and fashionable life is hateful to me.—Your Majesty has nothing to give me that I would thank you for; and you have no post to put me in that I would accept of, if I were not sincerely persuaded, that the acceptance of it would be for the great good of my country.

From the Brooklyn (L. I.) Star.

REVOLUTIONARY RELIC.

A few weeks since the remains of a rifle were found in the Flatbush woods, about three miles from the village, on a part of the old battle ground of 1779. The rifle had been a very fine one, and the brass work and silver plate and sight were perfect. The plate was made of a coin on which 1746 is to be seen. The letters I. C. I. are rudely cut on it. The wood was entirely gone, and the iron much corroded. It was found to be loaded with ball. The rifle is now in possession of William Bigelow, of this village.

Washington, Feb'y. 16, 1828.—One of the most amusing members of the H. of Representatives is Mr. Crockett of Tennessee. He showed me a day since his coat of arms upon a seal, and characteristic enough truly they were of the owner, being a rifle, a butcher's knife, and a tomahawk, surmounting his name. "I don't know why," says Mr. C. "I should be afraid to rise and address the House of Representatives, for I can whip any man in it."—and his appearance promises a fulfilment of his words. This is the gentleman who sometime since boasted that he could wade the Mississippi, carry a steamboat on his back, and whip his weight in wild cats. A very clever fellow too, but, like Sir Hildebrand Osbaldiston, an enthusiast in field sports. He had lately a wager pending upon his skill with the rifle at a hundred yards, and staked a thousand dollars against five hundred that he would surpass his opponent in 12 shots, he firing without a rest, and allowing the other side to use one. His antagonist prudently paid forfeit, and Tennessee was triumphant'—Centinel.

Internal Commerce of Connecticut.— In reply to some jeering remarks of a Rhode Island editor in regard to the commercial resources of Connecticut, the Middlesex Gazette speaks in the following vein of pleasantry:— "Our trade in nutmegs, is confined exclusive to those which are made of sassafras. White oak and elm have long since been proscribed. As to wooden clocks, we have given over the manufacture of them, and are only desirous of disposing of those which we have on hand—we can accommodate him at a fair price. Horn flints and bass wood cucumber seed are in steady demand; but our manufactories are so extensive that we can supply Rhode Island."

An Independent Colony.—The New Hampshire Post says—

"A young man came into our office the other day from the village called Indian Stream. To an inquiry where this place was situated, he answered, "not any where." We believe it is situated near the source of the Connecticut river, on the west side, containing upwards of sixty inhabitants.— Those who emigrate to this place take up, as it is termed, 100 acres of land each, as their property. Not belonging to any Government, they are free from taxation, military duty &c.— They contemplate making an effort, at the next session of our Legislature, to be annexed to the state of N. Hampshire.

FORTUNE TELLING.

From the New York Courier.

Tillotson the conjurer was this morning placed at the bar of the Police Court and underwent a long examination. He stated that he came from Wilmington, Del., about six months ago, that he had been in the city only a short time, and that he gained his livelihood by curing the palsy and other complaints by giving his patients teas made from herbs.—It appeared however, that he occasionally dealt in a "wee bit o' magic" and that he was visited by ladies of the first respectability who went to him for the purpose of diving into "the depths of futurity." In thus working on the belief of the credulous, he has realized a pretty fair portion of the philosopher's stone, for those ladies who visited him if he communicated some pleasant intelligence, generally manifested their gratitude by the presentation of a ten dollar note. The names of these fair beings are known to us, and we refrain from publishing them from a feeling that we may in vain attempt to describe, and which we hope will always characterize us. But never were we so much astonished as when we found enrolled among the number of the credulous, those who had received the most liberal education, and whose intercourse with society should have taught them better than to visit the hovel of a negro imagining that he could "tell the event of things unacted," and anticipate that which is to come.

In this city there are about twenty of these fellows, who pretend to the art of divination, who daily sit enthroned at Chaldean sages; and who promulgate the favors of Fortune in the sand break in which her anathemas are sounded. These persons are supported principally by the ladies of our first families, and this being known to the lower orders of society, they are looked up to as super-human, and whatever they direct is generally accomplished. It is time that a stop should be put to this system; and the magistrates are determined to do so; for they informed Tillotson that he should go to prison, or find bail for his good behaviour. During his examination, he boasted of being the seventh son of the seventh son, and had learned how to doctor from the Indians and the Dutch. He denied ever having unfolded the hidden mysteries, though he admitted that his birth right entitled him to the honors of an oracle.

Should we be allowed an opinion upon such a theme, we should say that the Recorder is about as good a fortune teller as any wizard in the state.

Valuable Invention.—We have seen, at the store of Messrs. Tucker & Carter, the anchor recently invented by Thomas P. Plunkett, Esq. at the Sterling Works. This anchor requires no stock, and is secured by the chain-cable being fastened to three flukes, so dividing the strain as to give each fluke its proportion of the strain—and so support the back of the flukes in the ground, that it is hardly possible that any part of it can be broken or strained under any circumstances.— The weight of the anchor is 827 lbs., size of the chain, nine 16ths of an inch,—proof, 25 tons, by the hydraulic machine. It is well worthy the attention of nautical men, as it is undoubtedly an important improvement.

N. Y. Gazette.

There is a son of Mungo Park, waiting at Acra (on the Gold Coast,) for Eden by which he expects to receive some scientific instruments from Europe. This modern Telemachus is a midshipman belonging to the Sybille, and is on the point of setting out in quest of certain intelligence respecting his father's death. He has already gone a journey of about 90 miles into the interior, in order to feel his way; and he appears to like his further plan very much, having assurances of three hundred miles safe convoy. He goes habited like a black, with a cloth about his loins; oils his skin every day, and wears neither shoes nor stockings.—Literary Gaz.

Drifts of the Ocean.—A package somewhat larger than a candle box, enveloped in canvass and compactly nailed, drifted ashore on the beach near Willoughby's Point on Wednesday last. Upon being opened it was found to comprise two pieces of plank, about 16 inches long, on one of which was inscribed "U. S. shooner Shark, ashore on Cerberus Rock August, (day not remembered by our informant) 1827:" and on the other "U. S schooner Shark, off Cape Norman, Straits of Belle Isle, 25th Sept. 1827."

A Large black fish, of the Grampus species, dead drifted ashore about the same time and place, from which a barrel and a half of blubber was obtained.—Norfolk Beacon.

Masonry.—A convention has been held at Le Roy for the avowed object of revealing and publishing the higher degrees of Masonry, 19th inst. and adjourned on the 20th; to meet again at the same place on the 4th of July next. Leonard B. Rose, was chosen chairman. —Ontario N. Y. Repository.

IRVING'S LIFE OF COLUMBUS.

The life of Columbus by Washington Irving, is at length completed, and is said to be in the press both in England and in this country. G. & C. Carvill will publish it in this city early in March. The author has been employed for years on the work, with the most ample materials at hand, and the best opportunities for ascertaining the authenticity of every fact he has related. These advantages, together with the charm of the author's style and his power of happy arrangement, will no doubt make it one of the most interesting books of biography which have appeared in the present century. We could have wished no better fortune for the memoirs of the great discoverer of the new world than that they should be written by him whose works have diffused the fame of its literature in the old. [N. Y. Evening Post.

In the steam artillery which Mr. Perkins is constructing for the French government, he guarantees the ability to keep the steam up at any required temperature for any length of time, and its great economy. The piece of ordnance is to throw sixty balls of four pounds each, in a minute, with the correctness of the rifled musket, and to a proportionate distance.—A musket is also attached to the same generator for throwing a stream of lead from the bastion of a fort, and is made so far portable as to be capable of being moved from one bastion to another. This musket is to throw from one hundred to one thousand bullets per minute, as occasion may require, and that for any length of time.

Improved Printing Press.—An English pargraph in the Philadelphia papers, expresses great curiosity to learn the particulars of a new Printing Press invented in Paris, which can strike off 2,000 sheets in an hour. This is not so great a novelty with us. By the Napier machine, in use in this city, moved by a man, and supplied with paper by two boys, the ordinary rate of printing is 30 sheets per minute, wanting but little exertion to make 2,000 an hour. Another machine, that works two forms, a Boston invention, is tended by girls, and moved by steam or horse power. Another of New York origin, is in preparation, and we have no doubt will print both sides of a sheet at a time, feeding itself with paper and throwing it off, as rapidly as the sheets can pass the rollers.—Indeed we shall soon have printing machines as practicable as carding machines, requiring only a superintendent to watch for accidents, and the laborious work of a pressman will be in a great measure dispensed with.—New York Statesman.

Westchester, Pa. Feb. 26

The Bullock fed by Hadly Baldwin, Jr. of West Bradford, and purchased by Messrs. Osborne & Matlack, of this borough; was slaughtered on the 19th inst. and weighed on the morning of the 21st. The weight was as follows:—

The fore quarters,	1055 lbs.
Hind quarters,	797½
Total weight of Beef,	1852½
Rough fat,	286
Hide,	150

Making the entire wt. 2288½ lbs.

The beef neatly dressed, was exhibited on the shambles about sunrise on the morning of the 21st and by one o'clock of the same day, the whole, with the exception of some half a dozen refuse pieces, was sold at from 20 to 25 cents per pound. This is a specimen of the manner in which the enterprize of our farmers and graziers is reciprocated by the public spirited citizens of West Chester and its vicinity.

Mr. John Grigg, Bookseller of Philadelphia, has just published, in quarto, A New General Atlas, exhibiting the five great divisions of the Globe, with their subdivisions, all drawn and engraved particularly to illustrate Malte Brun's Universal Geography.— This atlas is one of the neatest, cheapest and most convenient which we have seen. It seems to have been prepared scientifically with due care; it is remarkably minute and distinct for the scale; well colored and bound; and altogether a good specimen of the great advancement which has been made among us in the execution of such works.—Phil. N. & L. Gazette.

The Legislature of North Carolina, at their late session, granted a charter to a company by the name of the "North Carolina Gold Mining Company," and an application has been made to our Legislature, for the grant of a charter by the same name, and for the same objects with a capital of $500,000.

Contents of the American Farmer, dated March 7th.

On the Effects of the Protecting System upon the Agricultural Interests, by Samuel Wyllys Pomeroy— Readings on the seventh volume of the American Farmer, On Lime as a Manure, and on Ploughing—Short Horned Cattle for sale—The Season —N. Herbemont on American Grapes and Wine—Product of Seeds—Memorial of the Maryland Commissioners on the Susquehanna Rail-road to the Legislature of Pennsylvania—On early Education of Children, Religious Habits—Pedigrees and Performances on the Turf of celebrated Blood Horses, Fag of Truce, and Virginian—Editorial. On the Economy and great Advantages of employing Mules; Letter from La Grange— Quinc'r Seed—Foreign News—Commercial Record Advertisement—Prices Current

HYMENEAL.

Oh you that keep the charge of love
Keep him in rosy bondage bound,
As in the fields of bliss above
He sits, with flow'rets fetter'd round:
Loose not a tie that round him clings,
Nor ever let him use his wings.

MARRIED, at Quantico, on Wednesday the 12th instant, Mr. THOMAS MITCHELL to Miss CLRINDA GALE, only daughter of Mr. Henry Gale.

On Thursday the 13th instant, by the Rev. W. Quinn, Mr. HENRY FISHER to Miss NANCY BREWINGTON, all of this county.

On Sunday the 16th by the Rev. Daniel Davis, Mr. LEVIN WILSON to Miss ANN MEZICK, all of this county.

At Black Lake, L. I. Mr. James Anderson, to Miss Anne Bread.

While toasts their lovely graces spread,
And fops around them flutter,
I'll be content with Anne Bread,
And won't have any but-her.

Baltimore Prices Current.

BALTIMORE, FRIDAY, MARCH 14.

FLOUR, best family,		$6a6 25
Susquehanna,		4 62
WHEAT, best white, p. bu.		85a95
red	do	80a85
CORN,		32a33
RYE,		48a50
OATS,		21a23
WHITE BEANS,		80a100
PEAS,		45a50
CLOVER SEED,		4 75a5 00
FLAXSEED,		75a80
FEATHERS,	do	26a28

SHERIFF's SALE.

By virtue of a writ of venditioni exponas issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Thomas Goddard against Elijah Culver, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—A part of a tract of land called Morris's Lot, containing 120 acres, more or less, and I hereby give notice that on Tuesday the 8th April next, at the Court House door, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock P. M. I shall proceed to sell the life estate of said Culver, in and to the above mentioned land, to the highest and best bidder for ready cash.

ROBERT STEWART.

March 18 Late Shff. S. C.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,

March 11, 1828.

[SEAL] ON application of Stephen Taylor, adm'tor. of Aaron Foxwell, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess Anne.

True copy. Test,

JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Aaron Foxwell— late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 30th day of September next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of March, 1828.

STEPHEN TAYLOR, Adm'r of A. Foxwell, dec'd.

March 18, 1828. k

NOTICE.

The Creditors of JOSIAH W. HEATH, late of Somerset County, deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit their claims with the vouchers thereof properly authenticated, with the Clerk of said County Court, on or before the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next.

BURTON CANNON,

Feb. 26. gk Trustee.

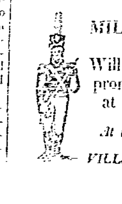
JUST RECEIVED

AND FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE, a number of

Methodist Hymn Books,

Wesley's Sermons, in 2 volumes.

Also, Scriptural Catechisms, intended for the use of the Methodist Societies March 11. a



MILITARY NOTICES.

Will be neatly and promptly printed, at a low price,

At the Office of the VILLAGE HERALD

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr. Editor,

Should you see proper to publish the following piece of poetry, you are at liberty to do so. Whether it is fact or fiction I need not tell—Doubtless some will say, 'tis the invention of a bachelor. One object of your paper is, to give a variety—so this piece will help to make up the olio, and will surely amuse some of your readers.

ALUMNUS.

Snowhill, March 12, 1828.

THE BEST OF WIVES.

A man had once a vicious wife,
(A most uncommon thing in life)—
His days & nights were spent in strife,
Unceasing.

Her tongue went glibly all day long,
Sweet contradiction still her song,
And all the poor man did was wrong,
And ill done.

A truce without doors or within,
From speeches long as statesmen spin,
Or rest from her eternal din,
He found not.

He every soothing art display'd;
Tried of what stuff her skin was made:
Failing in all, to heaven he pray d
To take her.

Once walking by the river's side,
In mournful terms, 'My dear,' he cried,
'No more let feuds our peace divide—
I'll end them.

Weary of life and quite resign'd,
To drown I have made up my mind,
So tie my hands as fast behind
As can be;

'Or nature may assert her reign—
My arms assist—my will restrain,
And swimming, I once more regain
My troubles.'

With eager haste, the dame complies,
While joy stands glistening in her eyes;
Already in her thoughts he dies
Before her.

'Yet when I view the rolling tide,
Nature revolts,' he said, 'beside,
I would not be a suicide,
And die thus.

It would be better far, I think,
While close I stand upon the brink,
You push me in—nay, never shrink,
But do it.'

To give the blow the more effect,
Some twenty yards she ran direct,
And did what she could least expect
She should do.

He slips aside himself to save,
So souse she dashes in the wave,
And gave (what ne'er before she gave)
Much pleasure!

'Dear husband, help! I sink!' she cried;
'Thou BEST OF WIVES!' the man replied
'I would—but you my hands have tied:
God help you!'

THE PLAY AT VENICE, OR RETORT COURTEOUS.

Some years since, a German prince, making a tour of Europe, stopped at Venice a short period. It was the close of summer; the Adriatic was calm, the nights were lovely, the Venetian women in the full enjoyment of those delicious spirits that in their climate rise and fall with the coming and the departure of this finest season of the year. Every day was given by the illustrious stranger to researches among the records and antiquities of this singular city, and every night to the parties on the Brenta or the sea. As the morning was nigh, it was the custom to return from the water to sup at some of the palaces of the nobility. In the commencement of his intercourse, all national distinctions were carefully suppressed, but as his intimacy increased he was forced to see the lurking vanity of the Italian breaking out. One of its most frequent exhibitions was in the dramas that wound up those stately festivities.—The wit was constantly sharpened by some contrast of the Italian and German, some slight aspersions on Teutonic rudeness, some remark on the history of a people, untouched by the elegance of southern manners. The sarcasm was conveyed with Italian grace, and the offence softened by its humor. It was obvious that the only retaliation must be humorous.—At length the prince, on the point of taking leave, invited his entertainers to take a farewell supper.—On this occasion he drew the conversation to the infinite superiority of the Italian, and above all the Venetians; acknowledged the darkness in which Germany had been destined to remain so long, and looked forward with infinite sorrow to the comparative opinion of posterity upon a country to which so little of its gratitude must be due.—"But my lords," said he, rising, "we are an emulous people, and an example like yours cannot be lost even upon a German. I have been charmed with your dramas, and have contrived a little arrangement to give one of our country, if you will condescend to follow me to the great hall." The company rose and followed him thro' the splendid suite of a Venetian villa, to the hall, which was fitted up as a German barn. The aspect of the theatre produced first, surprize, and next an universal smile. It had no resemblance to the gilded and sculptured interior of their own sumptuous little theatres. However, it was only so much the more Teutonic. The curtain drew up. The surprize rose into loud laughter, even among the Venetians, who have seldom been betrayed into any thing beyond a smile for generations together. The stage was a temporary erection, rude and uneven. The scene represented a wretched and irregular street, scarcely lighted by a few twinkling lamps, and looking the fit haunt of robbery and assassination. On a narrow view, some of the noble spectators began to think it had a kind of resemblance to an Italian street, and a few actually discovered in it one of the leading streets of their own famous city. But the play was founded on a German story, and they were under a German roof. The street was, notwithstanding its ill-omened similitude, of course, German. The street was solitary. At length, a traveller, a German, with pistols in a belt round his waist, and apparently exhausted by his journey, came heavily pacing along. He knocked at several of the doors, but could obtain no admission. He then wrapped himself up in his cloak, sat down on the fragment of a monument and soliloquized.—"Well here have I come, and this is my reception; all palaces, no inns; all nobles, and not a man to tell me where I can lie down in comfort or in safety. Well, it cannot be helped. A German does not much care; campaigning has hardened effeminacy among us.—Hunger and thirst, heat and cold, dangers of war and the roads, are not very formidable after what we have had to work through from father to son. Loneliness, however, is not so well, unless a man can labor or read. Read!—that's true—come out Zimmerman." He drew a volume from his pocket, moved nearer to a decaying lamp, and soon seemed to be absorbed. He had till now been the only object. Another soon shared the eyes of the spectators. A long, light figure came with a kind of visionary movement from behind the monument, surveyed the traveller with keen curiosity, listened with apparent astonishment to his words, and in another moment, had fixed itself gazing over his shoulder on the volume. The eyes of this singular being wandered rapidly over the page, and when it was turned they were lifted up to heaven with the strongest expression of wonder. The German was weary, his head soon dropped over his study, and he closed the book.—"What," said he, rising and stretching his limbs, "is there no one stirring in this comfortless place? Is it not near day?" He took out his repeater, and touched the pendant; it struck four. His mysterious attendant had watched him narrowly; the repeater was traversed over with an eager gaze; but when it struck, delight was mingled with the wonder that had till then filled his pale intelligent countenance.—"Four o'clock," said the German. "In my country, half the world would be thinking of going to the days work by this time. In another hour it will be sunrise. Well then, I will do you a service ye nation of sleepers, and make you open your eyes." He drew out one of his pistols, and fired it. The attendant form, still hovering behind him, had looked curiously upon the pistol, but on its going off, started back in terror, and with a loud cry, that made the traveller turn—"Who are you?" was his greeting to this strange intruder.—"I will not hurt you," was the answer. "Who cares about that? was the German's retort and he pulled out the other pistol.—"My friend," said the figure, "even that weapon of thunder and lightning cannot reach me now. But if you would know who I am, let me entreat you to satisfy my curiosity a moment. You seem to be a man of extraordinary powers." "Well then," said the German in a gentler tone, "if you come as a friend, I shall be glad to give you information; it is the custom in our country to deny nothing to those who will love or learn." The former sighed deeply, and murmured, and yet you are a Teuton! But you were just reading a little case of strange and yet most interesting figures; was it manuscript?" "No it was a printed book!"

"Printed, what is printing? I never heard but of writing."

"It is an art by which one man can give to the world in one day as much as three hundred could by writing, and in a character of superior clearness, correctness, and beauty; one by which books are made universal and literature eternal."

"Admirable, glorious art!" said the inquirer; "who was its illustrious inventor?"

"A GERMAN!"

"But another question. I saw you look at a most curious instrument traced with figures; it sparkled with diamonds; but its greater wonder was its sound. It gave the hour with miraculous exactness, and the strokes were followed by tones superior to the sweetest music of my day."

"That was a repeater!"

"How! when I had the luxuries of the earth at my command, I had nothing to tell the hour better than the clepsydra and the sun-dial. But this must be incomparably superior from its exactness. It must be an admirable guide even to higher knowledge. All depends upon the exactness of time. It may assist navigation and astronomy. What an invention!—Whose was it? he must be more than man!"

"He was a GERMAN!"

"What still a barbarian! I remember his nation, I once saw an auxiliary legion of them marching towards Rome. They were a brave and blue-eyed troop. The whole city poured out to see those northern warriors, but we looked upon them only as gallant savages. I have one more question, the most interesting of all. I saw you raise your hand with a small truncheon in it; in a moment something rushed out, that seemed a portion of the fire of the clouds. Were they thunder and lightning that I saw? Did they come by your command? Was that truncheon a talisman, and are you a mighty magician? 'Was it a spectre commanding the elements? Are you a god?"

The strange inquirer had drawn back gradually as feeling rose. Curiosity was now solemn wonder; he stood gazing upwards in an attitude that mingled awe with devotion. The German felt the sensation of a superior presence growing on himself as he looked on the fixed countenance of this mysterious being. It was in that misty blending of light and darkness which the moon leaves as it sinks just before morn. There was a single hue of pale gray in the east that touched its visage with a chill light, the moon resting broadly on the horizon was setting behind: the figure seemed as if it was standing in the orb. Its arms were lifted towards heaven, and the light came through its drapery with the mild splendour of a vision. But the German, habituated to the vicissitudes of "perils by flood and field," shook off his brief alarm, and proceeded calmly to explain the source of his miracle. He gave a slight detail of the machinery of the pistol, and alluded to the history of gun powder. "It must be a mighty instrument in the hands of man for either good or ill." said the form. "How much it must change the nature of war! how much it must influence the fates of nations! By whom was this wonderous secret revealed to the people of the earth?"

"A GERMAN!"

The form seemed suddenly to enlarge; its feebleness of voice was gone, its attitude was irresistibly noble. Before it had uttered a word, it looked as made to persuade and command. Its outer robe had been flung away; it now stood with an antique dress of brilliant white, gathered in many folds, and edged with a deep border of purple; a slight wreath of laurel, dazzlingly green was on its brow. It looked like the GENIUS OF ELOQUENCE.—"Stranger," it said, pointing to the Appenines, which were then beginning to be marked by the twilight, "eighteen hundred years have passed away since I was the glory of all beyond those mountains. Eighteen hundred years have passed into the great flood of eternity since I entered Rome in triumph, and was honored as the leading mind of the great intellectual empire of the world. But I knew nothing of these things which you have explained to me. I was a child to you; we were all children to the discoverers of these glorious potences. But has Italy not been still the mistress of mind? She was then first of the first; has she not kept her superiority? Show me her noble inventions. I must soon sink from the earth—let me learn still to love my country."

The listener started back: "who are you?" "I am a spirit. I was Cicero. Show me by the love of a patron, what Italy now sends out to enlighten mankind."

The German looked embarrassed; but in a moment after, he heard the sound of a pipe and tabor. He pointed in silence to the narrow street from which the interruption came. A ragged figure tottered out with a barrel-organ at his back, a frame of puppets in his hand, a hurdy gurdy round his neck, and a string of dancing dogs in his train. Cicero uttered but one sigh, "Is this Italy?" The German bowed his head. The showman began his cry—"Raree-show, fine raree show against de wall. Fine madame Catarian dance upon the ground! who come for see the gallantee show." The organ struck up, the dogs danced, the Italian capered round them. Cicero raised his broad gaze to Heaven:—"Are these the men of my country—these the orators, the poets the patriots of mankind? What scorn and curse of Providence can have fallen upon them!" As he gazed, tears suddenly suffused his eyes: the first sunbeam struck across the spot where he stood, a purple mist rose round him, and he was gone! * * *

The Venetians with one accord, started from their seats, and rushed out of the hall. The prince and his suite had previously arranged every thing for leaving the city, and they were beyond the Venetian territory by sunrise. Another night at Venice, and they would have been on their way to the other world.

From the American Farmer.

OF MULES.

Occasion has been taken heretofore to urge the economy and great advantages of employing mules, to a greater extent and in a greater variety of agricultural operations than has been hitherto done. It is well known that in Spain and Portugal, and in their colonial settlements, the mule continues to be used not only as a beast of burden and drudgery, but for the saddle and for light draft, in the coaches of the grandees and the royal families.

A singular evidence of the estimation in which they have long been held in a country which boasts its splendid Andalusian horses, may be found in the following cedula, by Ferdinand of Spain, granting to Christopher Columbus, the extraordinary privilege of riding a mule, in consideration of sickness and bodily infirmity.

"By the king. Whereas I am informed that you, the admiral Don Christopher Columbus, are indisposed in body, by reason of certain infirmities, which you have had and now have, and that you cannot ride on horse back without great prejudice to your health; therefore in consideration of the foregoing, and of your age, by these presents I give you permission to ride a mule with saddle and bridle, in whatsoever parts of these kingdoms and seignories you choose or deem meet, notwithstanding the decree making disposition therein. And I command the justices in whatsoever parts of the said kingdoms and seignories, not to make or consent to making any impediment respecting the same, under penalty of 10,000 maravedies for the chamber, against whoever does the contrary. Dated at Toro, February 23d, 1505."

But our purpose is to introduce the following extract, to shew that mules are now beginning to be brought into actual use in the mail stage of our own country.

Portsmouth, Ohio, Nov. 21, 1827

Mr. Skinner.

Sir,—A friend of mine having it in contemplation to engage in the business of raising mules, wishes me to obtain for him the best information, as to the probable profits that would arise from such an undertaking; and also as the kind of jacks most suitable to raise from, the price at which one of the best could be purchased, where to be obtained, &c. Knowing you to feel a deep interest for the agricultural prosperity of our county, and that your information is general on every subject connected with it, I have taken the liberty to address you, for the purpose of obtaining the necessary information and advice. Owing to the low price of every kind of produce raised in this section of country, the farmer is compelled to resort to some other mode of agriculture, or become ruined. The raising of corn at 12½ cents per bushel, will not do; to engage in raising wool, is thought to be dangerous; that of pork has been already found ruinous, and this country, and those adjoining, are not altogether suitable for cattle. Several farmers of my acquaintance have proposed raising horses, but I have given it as my opinion, that mules would yield the most profit. Many of the farmers, however, have taken up the whimsical notion, that mares will never more breed colts after having foaled a mule,* and indeed, they know little of the value of mules, or the price they will command in market. The gentleman, Mr. John H. Thornton, for whose benefit, particularly, I seek information at this time, has had some trial of them. He has a pair at this time, the finest that I ever have seen bred from the common jacks. He runs them regularly in the stage from this place to Chillicothe, (about forty five miles,) three times a week, over the worst of roads, and he thinks they are able to perform more than the service, (at that kind of business,) of two pair of horses.

Yours respectfully,

J. A. BINGHAM.

*A gross error.

Lord Norbury.—This every ready-witted nobleman was applied to the other day by the collector of one of the local taxes for the amount of tax.—His lordship said he had already paid it, and on looking to his file, discovered a receipt signed by the same collector who then applied for it. The tax-man confounded, apologized in the best manner he could, stating his regret that he did not recollect it. "I dare say," said my lord, "you are very sorry you did not re-collect it."—[Dublin Morn. Post.

Curious Clock.—In the long room of the public library at Geneva, is a clock in the form of a temple, on the doom of which stands the figure of a bird "whose lofty and shrill sounding throat awakes the god of day." The mechanism being wound up, chanticleer flaps his wings and crows lustily, whereupon twelve figures, representing the apostles, dance to the music of chimes, round a peristile. Still lower down the mimic structure, is a balcony, in which the virgin Mary sits enthroned; to her out of a door on the right, comes a winged figure, representing the angel of the annunciation. Presently after, from another door on the left hand side, a skeleton, as the image of Death, advances and falls prostrate at the feet of the virgin. At that moment a personage in the centre of the dome, behind "Our Ladye," opens a third door, and strikes upon a bell the time of the day. On this whimsical piece of horology the date of 1650 is inscribed.

LITERARY ANECDOTE.

A curious literary anecdote has reached us, of the times of Henry VIII. Tonstall, Bishop of London, whose extreme moderation, of which he was accused at the time, preferred burning books to burning authors, which was then getting into practice, to testify his abhorrence of Tindal's principles, who had printed a translation of the New Testament, a sealed book for the multitude, thought of purchasing all the copies of Tindal's translation, and annihilating them in one common flame. This occurred to him when passing through Antwerp, in 1529, then a place of residence for the Tindalists. He employed an English merchant there for this business, who happened to be a secret follower of Tindal, and acquainted him with the Bishop's intention.—Tindal was extremely glad to hear of the project, for he was desirous of printing a more correct edition of his version, but the first impression still hung on his hands, and he was too poor to make a new one. He furnished the English merchant with all his unsold copies, which the Bishop as eagerly bought, and had them all publicly burned in Cheapside; which the people not only declared was "a burning of the Word of GOD," but it so influenced the desire of reading that volume, that the second edition was sought after at any price, and when one of the Tindalists, who was sent here to sell them, was promised by the lord Chancellor, in a private examination, that he should not suffer if he would reveal who encouraged and supported his party at Antwerp, the Tindalist immediately accepted the offer, and assured the lord Chancellor that the greatest encouragement they had was from Tonstall, Bishop of London, who had bought up half the first impression, and enabled them to produce a second!

Substitute for Hemp and flax.—The Hibiscus Roseus Thore, A plant which grows abundantly in the marshes of Italy, and reaches the height of 7 and 12 feet, is applicable to all the uses of Hemp and flax. A specimen of the cord and paper made from it, accompanied by a quantity of the seed, has been sent by Signor Barbieri, Curator of the Botanic Garden of Mantua, to the Philadelphia Society for promoting Agriculture. As the plant requires neither annual sowing, nor the same attention nor manuring as hemp or flax, it may claim some exclusive advantages over them. There are several species of the Hibiscus in this country.—The Roseus is not among them; but it is, it appears, a variety of the Hepalustris, which grows abundantly in the lower parts of New Jersey, whose farmers have found it a good substitute for hemp, for cords, plough lines, &c. The Hibiscus was used by the ancients as a rod, and to make baskets.—Balt. American.

Cultivation of Sugar.—Sugar, it is thought, may be every where cultivated south of latitude 33 deg. The business is healthy, the labor less than in the cotton crop, and the cane as easily cultivated as corn after it is planted. Like corn, the crop is finished early in June, and there is little to do during the heat of summer, or till October or November, when they cut, grind and boil the cane. This last takes four weeks or more, and is looked on rather as a frolic than a labor. It is said to be a very erroneous opinion that it takes much capital or many hands to make sugar. The cane is a hardier plant, too, than corn or cotton, and is not injured by spring frosts, as it does not begin to joint till May. These are the opinions expressed in a letter in the Mobile Register, as we find them collected in the Philadelphia Freeman's Journal.

FROM ZION'S HERALD.

THE CHOICE.

'Choose you this day whom you will serve.'

There is a cup of endless joy,
Unmix'd with care or sin's alloy—
Who tastes it ne'er shall thirst again.
Nor sorrow feel, nor care nor pain.—
This cup of joy is drank in heaven,
By all whose sins have been forgiven.

There is a cup of endless wo,
Who tastes it never more shall know
One hour of hope or peace again;
But weep and wail in endless pain.—
This cup of wo—O, mark me well—
This cup of wo is drank in hell.

Come, then, and make your choice today,
For 'tis destruction to delay:
In view of all the joys of heaven
Say, will you have your sins forgiven?
In view of sin and endless wo,
"Say will you come to Christ or no?"

S. D.

Error is never so fatal as when 'tis clothed in the garb of consistency.

Mar 25

#52

Village Herald.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY MORNING, BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

VOL. II. PRINCESS-ANNE, MD. TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 1, 1828. NO. 1.

A LETTER,

By the Honorable WILLIAM B. GILES,

Governor of the State of Virginia.

TO THE PUBLIC.

In regard to Mr. ADAMS—

1st. I believe Mr. Adams not to be a republican, either in principle or practice. I believe he is not attached to the written Constitution of his country; but prefers a government founded upon the unlimited will of the governors. I believe that he claims and exercises powers for the General Government, derived from sources paramount the Constitution; and that, even in his interpretation of the Constitution itself, he renders all its restraining provisions inoperative and unavailing. These restraining provisions, I believe, afford the only security to the American people against the usurpations of General Government. Mr. Adams having placed himself above those Constitutional restraints, I consider him a civil usurper, and that "in present party politics," these doctrines are "so frightful on the part of the administration," as to justify a change under any circumstances. The gain may consist in the preservation of our present written Constitution, instead of the substitution of a government of unlimited powers. Is it possible that there could be a greater gain? Is not this consideration of itself of sufficient magnitude to outweigh all countervailing considerations? Acting under these convictions, I presume that a majority of the "Anti-Jackson Convention," and the chairman amongst them, would prefer a change, even in favor of General Jackson, provided they all believed of him as I do—that he would cause the government to be administered, as far as he could, upon a fair, candid, and correct interpretation of the written Constitution. I cannot concur in the wisdom recommended by "the Anti-Jackson Convention," of taking sanctuary in the arms of a cool, deliberate, systematic civil usurper, as a protection against the fears of a Military Chieftain—when, too, this terrific Military Chieftain turns out, upon examination, to be an ideal vision—a miserable, delusive ignis fatuus—the unsubstantial spectre of frightened imaginations—an unreal ghost, raw-headed-and-bloody-bones, conjured up by the friends of unlimited government, to frighten timid and unthinking republicans.

2d. I believe Mr. Adams does not possess the necessary practical talents for administering any government whatever; and Gen. Jackson's talents for that object are incomparably greater than Mr. Adams'—whilst I am willing to admit that Mr. Adams may be more than Gen. Jackson the poet born, and more the scholar made. I believe Mr. Adams not to be a wise man; that he possesses very few of the attributes of wisdom. I must stick to my definition of terms. I believe Mr. Adams is not wise in conduct—not wise in actions. I believe he is not blessed with the happy talent of choosing the best measures, nor the best means of carrying his chosen measures into effect.

To be in the fashion with "the Anti-Jackson Convention," I must coin a word to convey my ideas of Mr. Adams in this respect,—I believe Mr. Adams to be an anti-wise man. The whole history of his political life will prove the correctness of these convictions; but I will specify a few cases in demonstration. His letters to the committee before quoted, grounded, I think, upon fallacious misrepresentations, extending even to a point of incredibility.—His various essays in various papers, but particularly in his first message to Congress, to derive powers to the general government from sources paramount the constitution, or from his own peculiarly eccentric interpretation of the constitution—His conduct in the whole of his intercourse with Great Britain, by which we have not only lost the West India trade, but diminished the rest of our British trade, and hazarded the whole—a trade amounting to more than one half of our Foreign trade, and thus introducing a state of impoverishment in the U. States, unknown heretofore. I think Mr. Adams has been particularly anti-wise in all his most important diplomatic negotiations; particularly so in his treaties of limits, both with Spain and G. Britain. In the one, he lost the Texas; in the other, he has reduced us to the disgraceful arbitrament of a foreign power for a territory on our North-Eastern boundary, equal, perhaps greater, in extent, than the whole State of New-Hampshire. I conceive Mr. Adams particularly anti-wise, in his claims to Executive powers, especially in relation to his competency to originate foreign missions without the consent of the Senate; particularly so, when that question was settled in his own person [illegible] such right, about the close of Mr. Jefferson's administration. Virtual imaguing, at this time, the policy of his Panama Mission, and one of the reasons he assigned for it, the most anti-wise that could have entered into the imagination of man—to liberalize the South American Catholic, on the score of religion. This most eccentric notion has perhaps tended more than any thing else, to deprive us of the favor of the South American Republics. This catalogue of anti-wise measures must suffice, although it is but just begun.

3d. I have no confidence in Mr. Adams' political integrity or candor. I believe him to be neither an honest, nor incorruptible politician. Although many instances might be given of this great and inexcusable defect in Mr. Adams' political character, I will here only mention two: the first shall be taken from his reply to the committee appointed to inform him of his election to the Presidency. According to my invariable habit in stating facts, when practicable, in the words of the writer, I give them here in Mr. Adams' own words:

Extract from Mr. Adams' reply to the committee appointed to inform him of his election:

"It has been my fortune to be placed by the division of sentiment prevailing among our countrymen, on this occasion, in competition friendly and honorable with three of my fellow-citizens, all justly enjoying, in eminent degrees the public favor, and of whose worth, talents and services, no one entertains a higher and more respectful sense than myself. The names of two of them were, in the fulfilment of the provisions of the constitution, presented to the selection of the House, in concurrence with my own; names closely associated with the glory of the nation; and one of them farther recommended by a larger minority of the primary electoral suffrages than mine.

"In this state of things, could my refusal to accept the trust thus delegated to me, give an immediate opportunity to the people to form and to express, with a nearer approach to unanimity, the object of their preference, I should not hesitate to decline the acceptance of this eminent charge, and to submit the decision of this momentous question again to their determination.— But the Constitution itself has not so disposed of the contingency, which would arise in the event of my refusal; I shall, therefore, repair to the post assigned me by the call of my country, signified through her constitutional organs," &c.

Here, Mr. Adams positively and unequivocally asserts, in substance, that in consequence of all his predecessors in the high station to which the selection of the House had called him, having had a majority of the votes of the primary electoral suffrages, that it had fallen to his lot to have a minority of votes; and still worse, one of his competitors for the office having had a greater minority than himself—he should not hesitate to decline the acceptance of the eminent charge, & to submit the decision of this momentous question again to the determination of the people, provided his refusal to accept the trust delegated to him, would give an immediate opportunity to the people to form, and to express, with a nearer approach to unanimity, the object of their preference. I put it to the Anti-Jackson Convention in candor and in honor to say, is not this solemn declaration, taking into consideration, the circumstances under which it was made, not absolutely incredible? Whether [illegible] believe it? If they do not believe it, can any one of those high-minded honorable gentlemen, reconcile it to himself, to vote for any human being for President, who is capable of making a cool, deliberate misrepresentation of his views to the whole American people upon the most solemn occasion? Suppose all the American people were called upon to give their votes for the next President upon the consideration of this question alone: [illegible] conscientiously believe the solemn declaration, made to you by Mr. Adams? to wit: That he was desirous of submitting his election again to the people? How many votes could he get in the United States? Let [illegible] answer this question for himself. It is not possible to conceive, [illegible] could be brought to vote for one for their President, under the conviction that such one had deliberately misrepresented his own [illegible] through a most solemn occasion? I, for one, must beg to be in[illegible] this occasion—and, for one, will not vote for Mr. Adams. [illegible] what circumstances, too, was this solemn declaration made? At a [illegible] when Mr. Adams was making overtures, as is asserted, to the Federalists, for their votes, to make him President. I say nothing about his understanding with Mr. Clay, notwithstanding Mr. Clay's contradicted declaration, that he knew Mr. Adams' opinions upon the Pennsylvania policy, in time to make it a reason with him for voting for Mr. Adams. That point will be undisturbed here, because it is disputed;—whilst Mr. Adams' overture to the Federalists, through Mr. Webster, stands yet uncontradicted by Mr. Webster as far as I know. I therefore take that fact for granted, and it is impossible to conceive, that at the same moment Mr. Adams was stooping to intrigue with the Federalists for the Presidential office, (per fas aut nefas,) he would not hesitate to call for another election from the people, especially when there was every reason to believe, in that case, he would not be elected. Now, let us see the relations in which Mr. Adams stood to this same Federal party, at the moment of making this overture. It is known, and universally admitted, that, during the session of Congress of 1807, 1808, Mr. Adams, most unexpectedly, but avowedly, made a complete political somerset from the Federal to the Republican party. At that time, the canvass for the Presidential election was actually cast; and no Federal candidate was offered. The contest was settled down between Mr. Madison and Governor Clinton. Mr. Adams therefore found himself cut off from all hope of personal aggrandizement from his old friends, the Federalists, for eight years at least—and, in all probability, for ever; certainly under their old designation of Federal party. It was at this moment, eventually, so auspicious to his hopes of personal aggrandizement, that this somerset was most adroitly performed. How was this done? It was first done by a most solemn communication to myself, and afterwards to Mr. Jefferson, as I am well informed. Previously to this time, Mr. Adams' conduct towards Mr. Jefferson had been such as to prevent the annunciation to him, in the first instance of his intended desertion from the Federal party; and this is probably the true cause of his devolving the disclosure upon me.— This disclosure was first made, during the session of Congress, commencing 26th October, 1807. During the next session, it became my duty in consequence thereof, to defend Mr. Adams, against several violent attacks made upon him, on account of his wonderful political somerset, by Mr. Pickering, his former colleague in the Senate. In 1808, I disclosed as much of Mr. Adams' communication to me as I thought was then required to justify his conduct against Mr. Pickering's attacks. The following is an extract taken from a speech delivered in the Senate on the 2d December, 1808, which leaves no possible doubt of the fact, that during the preceding session, Mr. Adams did make a most solemn communication to me, of his intended desertion from the Federal party.

Extract from Speech.

"I had hoped Mr. President, that the gentleman (Mr. Pickering) would have so far restrained his feelings, as to have permitted, this gentleman's retirement, (Mr. Adams) to have shielded him from these unmerited reproaches; but it seems that no delicacy of situation can procure an exemption from the inveteracy of the gentleman's passions. This cruel attack has imposed upon me an indispensable obligation to defend this absent gentleman; and it has been principally this circumstance, which has driven me again, most reluctantly into this debate. Sir, I can attest, and now do attest, with great pleasure, the disinterestedness and purity of the motives which dictated that gentleman's (Mr. Adams') late political conduct. As to its wisdom, that is a matter of opinion, and now in a course of experiment; but as to his exemption from all views of personal promotion, or aggrandizement, There assert that fact upon my own knowledge and upon my own responsibility, as far as can be warranted by the most explicit and unequivocal assurances from the gentleman himself; given, too, under circumstances which render their sincerity unquestionable." Every impartial, intelligent man must see at the first blush, that Mr. Adams' communication must have been made to me in the most solemn and impressive manner, to justify this positive pledge on my part, in behalf of Mr. Adams, grounded upon his own most explicit and unequivocal assurances; given, too, under circumstances which render their sincerity unquestionable.

At the time Mr. Adams made the disclosure to me, he imposed no injunction of secrecy whatever. He spoke of the occasion, however, as one of awful magnitude. Nothing less than hazarding the severance of the Union. The course of conduct which I have heretofore pursued respecting it, was dictated solely by my views, of the character of the communication. In 1808, I disclosed as much as I thought the then occasion called for. I did not think proper, then to disclose more; but I do not now, nor did I ever think, that any obligation whatever was imposed upon me, growing out of the peculiar character of the disclosure, not to make it known, under extraordinary contingencies, which might occur. I think, too, that wonderful events arising from that eventful transaction, have since occurred, which would justify such disclosure; but I have at all times preferred, as I now prefer, that Mr. Adams should make the disclosure himself. I have three times, heretofore, publicly called on Mr. Adams to make the disclosure himself. These calls did appear in the Richmond Enquirer, January 7th, February 14th and March 17th, 1816.

But since the publication of Mr. [illegible] letter addressed to me, dated 26th December, 1825—this subject [illegible] within a very narrow compass. By comparing the statement [illegible] my speech just quoted, with Mr. Jefferson's letter, and marking the proper deductions from them, taken in context with each other, very few points respecting that most eventful transaction will require to be disclosed, so as to give the public a fair view of the whole ground, and thus enable the people to form a just estimate of Mr. Adams' object for his pretended political conversation; and to stamp the true character upon this wonderful transaction. In my speech delivered in the Senate, 2d December, 1808, I assert, "but as to his (Mr. Adams) exemption from all views of personal promotion, or aggrandizement—I here assert that fact upon my own knowledge; and upon my own responsibility—as far as can be warranted by the most explicit and unequivocal assurances from the gentleman himself; given, too, under circumstances, which render their sincerity unquestionable." Mr. Adams having approved, and, indeed, having been highly gratified with the defence made for him, at the time as I have been often informed, cannot now deny the fact of his having made this communication to me; nor the solemn and imposing circumstances under which it was made. Since that time, in consequence of a call from me upon Mr. Jefferson, for his recollection of the transaction, and for his views of the propriety of giving it publicity under existing circumstances, I received from Mr. Jefferson the following statement.

"You ask my opinions of the propriety of giving publicity to what is stated in your letter, as having passed between Mr. John Q. Adams, and yourself.—Of this, no one can judge but yourself. It is one of those questions which belong to the forum of feeling. This alone can decide on the degree of confidence, implied in the disclosure. Whether under no circumstances, it was to be communicable to others. It does not seem to be of that character or at all to wear that aspect. They are historical facts, which belong to the present as well as future times. I doubt, whether a single fact known to the world, will carry as clear a conviction to it, of the correctness of our knowledge of the treasonable views of the federal party of that day as that, disclosed by this most nefarious and daring attempt to dissever the Union, of which the Hartford Convention was a subsequent chapter, and both of these having failed, consolidation becomes the first book of their history." Mr. Jefferson here states;—"I doubt whether a single fact known to the world, will carry as clear a conviction to it, of the correctness of our knowledge of treasonable views of the federal party of that day (1807,) as that disclosed by this, (disclosure made by Mr. Adams of that day—1807,) most nefarious and daring attempt to dissever the Union—of which the Hartford Convention, (1814,) was the subsequent chapter." Hence the following facts evidently appear: That Mr. Adams made the disclosure to me, of his intending to desert the Federal party the winter in 1807, 1808—to the best of my recollection, it was a short time previous to the first embargo. That it was made under the most solemn assurances of his patriotism and disinterestedness, and of an entire exemption from all views of personal promotion by the party, to which he had proselyted. Mr. Jefferson states the grounds of this charge, as communicated by Mr. Adams himself to be the treasonable views of the federal party, and that these treasonable views extended to disunion. All that now remains to be disclosed to the public, to give a full view of the whole ground of this eventful transaction is, to [illegible] spiracy on the part of the federalists of that day, 1807, which did induce Mr. Adams to charge them, according to Mr. Jefferson's statement, with treasonable views to dissever the Union; the particular foreign agents with whom it was carried on, the particular circumstances, which gave rise to it, and the particular portions of the federalists implicated in the treasonable negotiations then on foot—Mr. Adams can state these facts to the public if he should think proper to do so; or if, which I suppose impossible, he should deny them; then ought he to tell, what other political sins the federal party had committed in so heinous a character as to justify his open, formal and sudden abandonment of them in their utmost need; and his adhesion to their opponents—indeed, in the true spirit of proselytism, his going to the uttermost extremes in supporting his newly chosen associates, and his fulsome flatteries of Mr. Jefferson, through his extravagant commendation of this measure, and that too, not long after he had heaped upon Mr. Jefferson all kinds of abuse, and even called doggrel verse, as is said, to his aid for the purpose. Now, suppose it should turn out, that no such conspiracy did exist, and that no such treasonable negotiations were carrying on, nor such treasonable views were entertained by the federalists at that time, 1807— What must the world think of such treacherous charges against his old friends, for his own personal promotion and aggrandizement, as is now rendered evident directly against his own solemn avowals at the time?—However deluded at the time by Mr. Adams' solemn asseverations—and I acknowledge I was deluded into a perfect confidence in his disclosures—I now sincerely believe, that the whole of these charges against the federalists were unfounded, and consisted only in Mr. Adams' own mental misgivings and poetic licenses. For me, this conviction is sufficient; and I shall not vote for Mr. Adams for my President. Others, of course, will also act as they think best.

4th. I do not believe Mr. Adams to be a patriot, nor a hero. His whole political history proves that he has at all times advanced his own personal aggrandizement and pecuniary emoluments at the expense of his country—so much so, that he has raised his own fortune and his own greatness, first upon his own party's, and then upon his country's ruin. His heroism is truly sui generis. I do not know of his ever having made but one attempt to display his courage. That was done during his most unaccountable electioneering visit to Baltimore. It appeared in the form of a toast with an explanation—"Ebony and Topaz," implying his triumphant joy at the militia-man's bullet being sped to General Ross's heart!!! O! miserable puerl! In this wonderful display of heroism, Mr. Adams' courage did not begin to crow until thirteen years after the battle was ended; and then, indeed, it triumphantly crowed over the hallowed dust of a gallant fallen foe: slain by the hands of another, whose courage loudest crowed in the battle's front. So, Gen Jackson's courage always loudest crows in the battle's front. Yes, in the face and eyes of his gallant, hostile, embattled combattants. I would vote against Mr. Adams for this anti-wise, unfeeling act alone; revolting, as I think, to every honorable sentiment of the human heart; proving at once Mr. Adams' own destitution of refined sensibilities, and an utter ignorance of the true impulses of human nature. It casts a stain over the generous sensibilities of the American nation, so far as its character is associated with the character of its Chief Magistrate. If tended still farther to irritate the patriotic feelings of a gallant foreign nation, too much irritated before, by wanton provocations in his anti-wise diplomatic negotiations; and at the same time, could not avoid inflicting a wanton cruel wound upon the feelings of an amiable bereaved family. It would require strong countervailing considerations to induce me to overlook this single inexcusable act of Mr. Adams; and I know not of one single countervailing consideration in his favor.

5th. I do not believe Mr. Adams to be a military chieftain. No: nor a citizen soldier—and since the Anti-Jackson Conventionists seem to plume themselves upon Mr. Adams' destitution of all military pretensions—military principle—military skill, and military prowess, I am willing to allow to them the whole; and yet, I think, Mr. Adams will not make the better President, in consequence of this boasted destitution. Will he, thereby, be better qualified to discharge the high constitutional military duties of the President? Most assuredly, I think not. In relation to the discharge of the high military functions of the President, Gen. Jackson certainly is greatly to be preferred.

Whether, therefore, in regard to the discharge of the civil, or military functions of the President, I think Gen. Jackson incomparably preferable to Mr. Adams, as President of the United States. Upon these reasons chiefly, although many others might be added, I place myself in voting for General Jackson, in preference to Mr. Adams; and I know, that I stand perfectly justified to my own conscience, for doing so; and I trust to my God and my country.

WM. B GILES.

February 28, 1828.

Note,—"To liberalize the South America Catholics, on the scale of religion." A rumor is afloat, that in the late negotiation between the U. States and Sweden, our negotiator was instructed to make a formal demand of the Swedish negotiator, that the heading of our formed treaties with Sweden should be changed. The treaties heretofore ran, in substance, "In the name of the Holy and undivided Trinity." Our minister, it is now said, was instructed to have those words stricken out. This demand, if made, would have the effect of converting a ceremony into a principle—It was upon that ground rejected, perhaps laughed at, by the Swedish minister. The Senate can tell. Ought not the people to know it? If the rumor be true, is not this an anti-wise diplomacy? Could Mr. Adams' Unitarian creed have dictated this instruction?

JACKSON'S AMBITION.

The friends of the administration are continually talking about General Jackson's ambition and love of power: and that should he obtain possession of the Presidential chair, he will be likely to make use of undue means to retain it. What means it is supposed he will resort to in order to affect this object, we have not been permitted to hear, for none of them, we believe, have ever ventured to accuse him of having used or desiring to use the public money to subserve his individual purposes. The history of his life proves he has always been willing to make individual sacrifices, and has made such, for the interests of the country; and has in no instances, taken, unjustly, a cent from the public purse, to put into his own pocket, or to pervert it to improper purposes; while Mr. Adams has always grasped at all he could get, to put in his own pocket; and has basely made use of the public patronage and money to promote his own ends.

But how stands the matter with regard to Jackson's ambition, and love of power? By adverting to a few facts this matter may be placed in a proper light. General Jackson went into the western country poor, but his industry, talents and excellent deportment, soon raised him to eminence in the practice of law; was appointed Attorney-General by General Washington, and afterwards Chief Justice of one of the state courts.—This office he could have retained for life; but preferring the retirement of his farm, free from the noise and turmoil of public life, he resigned, and commenced the cultivation of the soil. Was this done like an ambitious man? Here he was found when an Indian war broke out; when at the call of his country, he left his plough, turned the share of it into a sword, buckled on his armour, and marched forth into the wilderness, to quell the foe, and give peace and security to our frontier inhabitants. This he effected: and again retired, like Cincinnatus, to his farm. Was this done like an ambitious man? Here again he was found when our war with Great Britain broke out.—Hull had surrendered on our frontier.—Washington had been sacked. Baltimore had been attacked, and defeat and dismay on every hand. The British flushed with their European victories, sent their conquerors of conquerors to attack New Orleans, and carry the war into our western country, when Jackson was again called to defend the country; and he obeyed the call. A few raw militia men were hastily assembled, and by forced marches they reached New Orleans just in time to save the city. The British had arrived in the vicinity, and were making preparation for an attack. This was an awful moment. But a part of his undisciplined troops had arrived; treason was abroad in the city; the British flag was waving at a short distance, over an army that had been accustomed to conquer, and dreamed not of defeat; and not a moment to be lost. Not a moment was lost. His arrangements were immediately made; and on the night of the 22d of December, he attacked the foe in his tent, with his whole force, so suddenly and with such skill and success, that the enemy, supposing that such an attack could not have been made by a body of men without being backed by a greater force, was driven back; and time was gained to throw up the works of defence, which enabled Jackson to gain the victory which is not surpassed, if indeed it is equalled, by any in the annals of our history. Our eagle, whose wings had drooped, raised her crest; and the names of JACKSON and NEW ORLEANS were pronounced with joy and exultation, from Georgia to Maine, and from the shores of the Atlantic to the farthest verge of our frontier settlements. And how did Jackson afterwards conduct himself?—Did he march with his triumphant army to Washington, drive the poor, trembling members, of the cabinet from their stations, lay hold upon the coffers of the nation, and place himself in office, and assume the ensigns of power? Far from it. Did he desire to remain at the head of his army, that he might receive the emoluments arising from the office? No.— He had lost a thousand dollars in the shape of a fine for adopting the necessary measures of defence, which went perhaps, to pay Mr. Adams' outrageous bills; he had subsisted on acorns for the want of better food; he had sustained appalling trials, and surmounted huge difficulties; but he asked for no remuneration. [illegible] measures for [illegible] son exclaimed "proceed, sir, the same arm that defended the country against the attack of our enemies, shall protect this court, or perish in the attempt!"—Did that savor of an unhallowed ambition? Jackson was fined a thousand dollars, and paid it from his own purse, notwithstanding the money was offered him with which to discharge it. Did that look like ambition? Peace having soon after been proclaimed, he resigned his commission, and again retired to his farm. Did that look like ambition, and a fondness for office and power? Truly it did not. Had there been such a military chieftain at the head of our Northern army, when Hull surrendered it to the British, our affairs in that quarter would have worn another aspect. Had there been such a military chieftain at Washington when it was attacked, our cabinet would not have been seen flying before the enemy, and the capital would not have been burned; nor would the attack upon Baltimore have been made; nor perhaps, again would John Quincy Adams have said that the "government was WEAK and PENURIOUS," and that "the Enemy would CRUSH us at a BLOW."

Jackson was quietly cultivating his soil when the purchase of Florida was made; and Mr. Monroe appointed him Governor of the territory with almost unlimited powers. Did Mr. Monroe think him no statesman? If so, he acted very improperly. Jackson accepted the office, and performed the duties. He organized the government of it; prevented the Spanish Governor carrying away the public documents which embraced the titles to land in the district; put affairs in a proper train, and then resigned his commission, remarking at the same time, that the power which had been placed in his hands was too great for any man to exercise; and again he retired to his farm!—Did that display a man of aspiring ambition and fondness of power? From such ambition we have nothing to fear.

Again, when the Emperor Iturbide had seated himself on a throne in Mexico, Jackson was offered the appointment of minister at that court, for which he could have received $9000 outfit, and $9000 salary; but he declined it, alleging for his reason that Iturbide was a usurper, and he would not lend his aid to him in his ill-gotten power. Does that look like an unbounded ambition? We think not. When did John Quincy Adams refuse a good office with a good salary attached to it? NEVER, and we may rely upon it he never will, let it be in what country or under what circumstances it may.

If Jackson be an ambitious man truly he has an odd way of showing it. If he be a military chieftain, then is a military chieftain a very harmless, and, at the same time, a very useful man to his country; and we only wish that we had a few more of them.

From the Baltimore Republican.

MERCHANTS AND FARMERS LOOK AT THIS!

In consequence of our Administration's not acknowledging the receipt of the French Ordinance opening the ports of Martinique and Guadaloupe, and opening our ports on the same terms to French vessels, which the other nations did; our merchants have been debarred from a lucrative trade, which they might have been enjoying for two years.

The President had the power, by an act of Congress 1824, (drafted by himself) in the event of any nation passing such an Ordinance as that which the French Government did pass in February 1826, to open our ports to their vessels free from our alien duties. In this case he did not—it was neglected—the French Ordinance was thrown by into the Secretary of State's desk, and the Administration gave themselves up to electioneering. What was the consequence? Two French vessels arrived from one of those colonies, (Martinique and Guadaloupe,) under the full impression, that we had reciprocated the liberal Act of the French Government; but on arriving in our ports, were charged the alien duties. The French Consul General remonstrated with our government, and by order of Mr. Adams, the alien duties were remitted;—but not until after the vessels had sailed on their return home. The owners, no doubt, informed the Governor of the Island, when their vessels returned, of this charge—the Governor, of course, informed the French Government—and in consequence thereof, as we are informed, discriminating, duties amounting to PROHIBITION, have been laid in the Island of Martinique and Guadaloupe, on our vessels only. Thus has this administration lost another valuable branch of Commerce, enjoyed by all other nations in the world.

We would here ask, by what authority, Mr. Adams remitted the alien duties on the two French vessels, which we have mentioned? He had a right to open our ports to them, free from those duties but there is no law in existence, authorizing him to remit them, after they had been levied.

There can be no doubt that our merchants have lost an immense deal by the course of the administration in this business. A merchant of this city, of our acquaintance, as soon as the Ordinance of the French Government was dragged from the Secretary of State's desk by a Resolution of the Senate, and made public, commenced loading a vessel with corn, rice, and other of the articles enumerated in the Ordinance, with the intention of sending her to one of those ports. ☞ But now that she is nearly ready to sail, he learns, that in consequence of our not having reciprocated the French act, heavy discriminating duties are levied in those ports on our vessels.☜

The British and French colonial Trades, both lost! and that too, by the wretched blundering and most culpable negligence of an Administration, whose head, (Mr. Adams) his friends in this city, tell us, "has been the intelligent and faithful guardian of our Commerce!!"

We ask the FARMERS to attend to this bungling, this negligence, by which the price of their CORN has been kept down.

We ask the SHIP OWNERS to mark the opportunity, of which they have been deprived, to get FREIGHTS for their vessels.

JOHN Q. ADAMS' opinion of Gen. Jackson.—In this letter signifying his acceptance of the office of President, John Q. Adams said, General Jackson justly enjoyed, in an eminent degree, the public favor, and of his worthy, talents, and services, no one entertained a higher or more respectful opinion than himself.

Mr. MONROE, in his late letter to Judge Brook, declining to serve on the Virginia Adams electoral ticket, says:—His friendship for General Jackson, and the strong proofs of confidence and regard he had given him while President, forbid his taking any part against him, in the ensuing Presidential election.

Mr. MADISON, also, in his letter to the same individual, also declining the nomination as an Adams elector, says—A recollection of the public relations in which he stood to Gen. Jackson while President, and the proofs given to him of the high estimation in which he was held by him, was one of the reasons of his resignation.

Mr. JEFFERSON, declared that General Jackson was a clear headed, strong minded man—and had more of the Roman in him than any man now living.

DE WITT CLINTON, was the warm and undeviating advocate of Gen. Jackson's election to the Presidency. And

THE PEOPLE manifested their high opinion of General Jackson, by giving him at the last election 15 more votes than they gave Mr. Adams—more than twice the number they gave Mr. Crawford—and more than three times the number they gave Mr. Clay.

And yet the office holders tell us it is a mark of insanity for one to support such a man as General Jackson.—Tren. Emp.

☞ At the risk of being considered troublesome, we must ask our Ad-[illegible] when Mr. Adams recommended the protection of Domestic [illegible] we hope, if we again tell them, that [illegible] protection, and challenge them to

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, APRIL 1, 1828.

On this day we commence the second volume of the Village Herald.—The public will perceive that the enlargement before announced has actually taken place. It is useless for us to make any observations relative to the manner in which it will be conducted. It will answer for itself. The character which it has maintained, we believe, is respectable, and on this point will only say, that as the experience and judgement of man ripen in proportion to his advancement in years, it must necessarily follow that a business which depends upon those qualifications can never fall lower in reputation, but must rise higher in respect, if impartially judged.

We had thought it the better way not to meddle with the grand political dispute now pending in the U. States. Our reasons for thinking so were plain and obvious—We wished the good opinion of both parties. But who can look through the vista of futurity, and discover the workings of distant events, or even those in embryo ready to burst forth. The mind of man may dwell in contemplation—in surmise; but the scene which he thus contemplates or surmises is changed in an instant, and lo! he is astonished at the appearance of a thing, strange in the extreme, and foreign to his mind.

Although, in printing the first volume of the Village Herald, we maintained a strict neutrality, yet our opinion was firmly established. It was founded on a basis which could never be shaken by the studied eloquence or polished lore of any individual closeted for the purpose of digesting schemes, and working plans, to the perversion of a distinguished personage. But the restraint is now removed, the flame bursts forth, and we voluntarily attach ourselves to that corps which has the real interests of our country at heart—which struggles to wrest from a designing coalition the government of a People, who would ever wish to be free. We assert ourselves friendly to Gen. JACKSON—friendly to the interests of the People. We glory in this assertion—prohibition is removed, and we can view those with an eye of contempt who labored so zealously to injure us. Yes! to injure us. And for what? Because we dared to differ from them in opinion!

On the night before our last paper went to press, we concluded to [illegible] the second paragraph of [illegible] tus for this volume, by [illegible] leaving ourselves at liber[ty] [illegible] ing the chains of restrai[nt] [illegible] at all times disagreeable. [illegible] not say that we would adv[ocate] [illegible] particular party. We wished to reserve to ourself the privilege of conducting our own business according to our own views and pleasure;—And if contingencies at any time had urged us to act in accordance to our own opinion, then our hands would have been free; if those contingencies had never happened, there would have been no propelling power to drive us to action. But because we retained to ourself that liberty which the law of nature gave to man, and which has never been restricted by municipal law in any country where despots and despotism are strangers—the Adams men said they would no longer be considered as subscribers, until they positively and definitely knew what course we intended to pursue. Thus prompted by jealousy, a passion prominent in extremes, they wished to awe us into silence, to stop the freedom of the Press, the liberty of speech, by withdrawing their patronage. Will a free people tolerate such conduct?—Can they reflect on the motives which thus induce men to act, without tracing them to their origin? No! Meditation on the subject will give rise to a mess of ideas that savor strongly—strongly of anti-republicanism. When things arrive at such a stage, it is evident that men fear an impartial exposition of Truth. Why fear? Because there is CORRUPTION afloat.—Corruption so glaring in its nature, so injurious in its composition, that if once exhibited to public view and thoroughly understood, will be shunned like the fang of a viper—being equally fatal to a politic body, as that poisonous member is to the human system. More hereafter.

*We were led to this because it appeared to us that the administration man here were acting in concert with their brethren in Boston, who resolved, that, "the feelings of the individuals whom they honor, IMPERIOUSLY demand, that they support no man whose feelings, principles, and objects, are not in unison with their own."

The Administration papers have been busy in trumpeting forth the substance of a letter which Mr. Crawford is SAID to have written to Mr. Clay, (in the interval between Mr. Clay's pamphlet and the Kentucky investigation,) acquitting him of any sin in voting for Mr. Adams, and that he would have done so himself. The following extract from a late W. Telegraph shows plainly that, if such were the opinion of Mr. Crawford at that time, it is not now:

Extract of a letter from the Hon. Wm. H. Crawford, dated
Wood-Lawn, 6th March, 1828.

"I think with you, that the people have determined who should be President, and I should be the last man in the U. S. who would wish to unsettle that determination; for I am one of the people, and approve their choice."

To whom will they now go? or where will they place their trust next? Mr. Madison and Mr. Monroe have declined being placed on the Electoral Ticket formed by the Virginia Convention—and Mr. Crawford's heart is with the People's Candidate—ANDREW JACKSON.

Since we put the above in type we received the Washington Telegraph of last Tuesday, which says:

We have now before us a letter written to a gentleman of the first standing in society, who has been for years an intimate and confidential friend of Mr. Crawford, and who, upon hearing what was said of Mr. Crawford's letter to Mr. Clay, wrote to him on the Presidential election. The gentleman is one of Gen. Jackson's most ardent supporters, and is well known in this District, and to Mr. Crawford, to be one of the most decided opponents to Mr. Adams. He has politely permitted us to copy from the letter of Mr. Crawford, which is dated the 6th instant, the following. Mr. Crawford says:

"You do me justice in supposing I am with you in the struggle now making in relation to the Presidential Election. Though I am informed, by letters from Washington, that I have written a letter to Mr. Clay, approving of Mr. Adams' Administration, but I am confident his name is mentioned but once in the letter, and then, only to say he is destined to undergo the fate that befel his father. Yet, I am informed that Mr. Storrs represents that I approve of Mr. Adams' Administration, in preference to that which is to succeed it."

Such we repeat is the language of Mr. Crawford. What then are we to think of Mr. Clay & Mr Storrs? Have they, for political effect, circulated a falsehood in relation to Mr. Crawford? We repeat, that the gentleman, to whom Mr. Crawford has written the letter now before us, is highly respectable, and has authorized us to refer Mr. Storrs or any other person to [illegible], when he will personally confirm [wha]t we have here stated.

[ST]ATE LAWS.—Among the acts [pass]ed at the late session of the Le[gisla]ture of Maryland, the following [ar]e of interest to our readers, or are important to be known.

An Additional Supplement to the "act concerning Crimes and Punishments," passed December session 1818, chapter 157. The first section of this supplemental act provides, that if any free person shall entice or assist any slave or servant to run away, knowing him to be such, and the slave actually run away or if he harbour such slave, he shall be liable to indictment in the County Court, or Baltimore City Court, and shall on conviction, undergo confinement in the Penitentiary not exceeding six years. The second section provides that any slave enticing any other slave or servant to run away, knowing him to be such, shall, on conviction before a justice of the peace, be sentenced to thirty-nine lashes.

An Additional Supplement to the "Act concerning Crimes and Punishments passed at November Session, 1809." The 1st Section of the supplemental act provides, that any person who may knowingly pass within the State any forged or counterfeit notes, whether of State Banks, or of the United States Bank, shall be sentenced, on conviction, to not less than five, nor more than ten years' confinement in the Penitentiary. By 2d Section, a second conviction prolongs the confinement to not less than ten, nor more than twenty years.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

By the arrival of the ship Bashaw at Boston, news one day later from London, has been received. We observe that "the three Powers have granted to the Porte a further delay of two months, to effect, during that time, the pacification of Greece, on the basis of the convention of the 6th of July."

The brig Rhine also arrived at Boston, from Havre, brings papers to the 20th February. The Royal Ordinance has been published in France, establishing a superior council of war, to be under the presidency of the Dauphin, for establishing the military legislation of the land forces.—This council consists of the secretary of war, 8 marshals, the Duke of Belluno, the Duke of Ragusa, and Count Molitor, and twelve other members. An extract of a letter, dated Smyrna, Feb. 21, 1828, says:

"The Grand Sultan has issued a proclamation in which he refuses to acknowledge the independence of Greece, and calls upon his subjects, civil and religious to defend their rights and their country!" Still we do not believe there will be war!

RUSSIAN ACQUISITIONS IN ASIA.

—The acquisitions of the former power on the side of Persia, have not been made without a color of excuse, which indeed, ambition is never without. The province of Crusia formed out of the ancient Georgia, has at least under the Russian administration, the blessings of quiet and security, which it was far from boasting while it was yet independent. The safety of her territory in that quarter, will always furnish a convenient excuse to Russia for further encroachments, which, if they make her more formidable to her neighbors, are fortunately of immediate benefit to those that she takes under her wing. With her wide territory, it is objects of commerce rather than of territorial aggrandizement, that she contemplates in her movements in the East. She may prosecute either however, we are persuaded, pretty much at her pleasure in that direction.

In consequence of the Christian religion being professed in Georgia, it was always exposed to be ravaged with equal fury by the Persians and the Turks. An alliance with one, always entailed on it a war with the other; and general poverty and despair increased daily. The expedient of becoming a dependency of Russia, has certainly produced more protection to property, a milder and more equal taxation, and a regular administration of justice, instead of that lawless rule under color of which the native princes plundered and robbed their vassals. Formerly, the roads were insecure and impracticable, trade harrassed and depressed, and the country beset with robbers, of whom the native princes were the chief.—Tifflis, the capital, of which we should form a very inaccurate idea if we drew it from Collins's Oriental Eclogues, was buried in mud, and made up of narrow and filthy streets, and filthier hovels. At present, modern houses, paved streets, and well planned squares, mark the Russian rule in the metropolis; while in country trade flourishing, and many considerable commercial houses carry on a trade, or did before the war, with Austrachan and Persia.—Such was formerly the disorder of state of the country, that though it is abundant in corn, yet the Russian government was obliged to draw supplies from Austrachan—Newcorn is bought in sufficient quantity on the spot.

Georgia lies in about our latitude, and when we recollect the admirable ness of its soil and climate, it can hardly be without pleasure that we see it subjected to something like a civilized government, however arbitrary according to our notions. The climate has the attribute of a sunshine that scarcely ever fails; but this is on the testimony of a Russian, who may praise other countries, as an indigenous Englishman does, by comparison with the gloom of his own. In February however, the fields are covered with grass, and the almond trees are in full bloom. The gardens are chiefly mere vineyards, the produce of which is a light wine, resembling a good French vin du pays; but, like the Greeks, the inhabitants spoil it by their mode of preserving it. When kept in jars; it is said to be excellent, and some of it resembles champagne.

It is here in the neighborhood of Tifflis, that is settled the colony of Germans from Wurtemburg, which is said to have suffered in the late disturbances. The soil is remarkably rich, yielding, if even slightly harrowed, thirty for one, and more. Fruit is abundant, and grapes may be had nearly the whole year. The dominions of the Turks in this quarter as in Europe, are equally fertile and agreeable; and though the Holy Alliance may find it somewhat difficult to obtain a pretence consistent with their principles, for wresting the European part from its indolent and half barbarous possessors; it is certainly very much to be wished that countries so abounding in all the materials of subsistence and commerce, were thrown open to commercial enterprise by falling into more civilized and industrious hands. It is of these countries that Constantinople would then be the key and the mart. The road opened by the Russian government across the tremendous chain of Caucasus into Georgia, under the superintendence of Colonel Daniloff, is a prodigious work, worthy of that gigantic empire. It has broken down the barrier to Asia on that side.

A VICTORY.

Mr. Joseph Beverly, with two other young men of this place were engaged, on the afternoon of Wednesday last in cutting wood on Oak Hill, about one mile North of the College Chapel. They had felled a large hollow tree, and the companions of Mr. Beverly proceeded to the top and commenced cutting off the branches, while he remained near the stump. Casting a glance into the cavity of the tree he discovered something that had the appearance of a living animal, though from the obscurity of the place, he could not tell exactly what it was, but supposed it to be a Raccoon, which animals are frequently found in similar situations. He immediately divested himself of coat, hat, &c. and crawled into the cavity with the intention of making a prize of whatever it might be. He had however advanced but a short distance, when his progress was obstructed by the animal, and the pressure became so great that he was forced to a hasty retreat which he effected in a short time; almost simultaneously with his own [exit] from the [tree he] perceived [issuing] a Bear of [illegible] great [dimen]sions. The [illegible] formidable appearance [illegible] a moment [the an]tagonist [illegible] ers of Mr. B[everly] [illegible] once thought [illegible] stood near him [illegible] something must be done, and it [was] important to do whatever was [done] quickly. Bruin though he seemed [illegible] displeased at having his bivouac [so sud]denly broken, appeared disposed to settle the affair in an amicable manner, and by a retreat leave Mr. B. undisturbed master of his late residence. [He] was proceeding to put in practice this [illegible] plan, when his assailant [illegible] ously grappled him around [the] [illegible] Bruin seemed not to like this mode of treatment, and taking advantage of his antagonist's unguarded situation, by a dexterous movement of one of his fore-paws freed himself from his grasp & notwithstanding the uncourtly treatment he had received, still seemed willing to leave the field, without further controversy, and in pursuance of his intentions commenced his march, at double quick time in a North Western direction. Mr. B. soon recovering his fall, and nothing daunted at being foiled in his first trial, immediately pursued and overtook him at about two rods distant from the place where the strife commenced, and again threw his arms around him, in order if possible to detain him till a further explanation could be had. Just at this juncture the two companions of Mr. Beverly, getting a hint that something uncommon was going forward, left their work and advanced to the scene of action, when one of them instantly levelled a blow at the Bear, with an axe, which as it was given suddenly, brought him to the ground, [and] finding he was mortally wounded, they immediately despatched him and took off his scalp. He had every appearance of being a good liver, and weighed between two and three hundred pounds. Mr. Beverly received several wounds in the contest, but we believe they are not of a dangerous nature.—American (Williamstown) Advocate.

Contents of the American Farmer, dated March 21st.

The Wellesley Arabian, with a Portrait and an Essay on the Breeding &c. of that race of Horses—On the Improvement of Pastures, by J. Buel, Esq.—On Water rotting Flax—New Gypseous Earth in Virginia—Inquiry on Irish Potatoes—Inquiries on a Worm destructive to corn—Early Vegetation in Alabama—On the Cultivation of the Cochineal in the Southern states; account of its introduction into Malta—On the Scuppernong Grape—Cultivation of the Vine, Silk, the Almond, &c. in Alabama and Mississippi—Rail-roads from Elkton to Wilmington, and from Frenchtown to New Castle—The Susquehanna Trade—Memoirs and Correspondence of Admiral lord Collingwood with his Daughters—Races in Charleston—Pedigree of Sweeper; Shooting Match—Panther Hunt—Trout Fishing—Cure for Scratches or Selenders in Horses—Steam Engines, Inquiry—Mail Establishment—General Lafayette in Cincinnatti—Recipe, To Destroy Rats, Perfume Linen—Editorial—Valuable Compliment to H. N[iles] Esq.—Prices Current of Market and Country Produce.

☞The Orphans Court of Somerset will sit on Tuesday next.

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of [Fieri] Facias issued out of Somerset c[ounty] court and to me directed at the [suit of] Elijah Christopher, Trustee [illegible] sale of the real estate of W[illegible] [S]anford, against Tubman Nel[son] [have] seized and taken in exe[cution the] following property, to wit: [part of a] tract of land called Newberry [illegible] land that said Nelson bo[ught of the] Sanford heirs—also, part of [a tract called] Monmouth, containing [illegible] [mo]re or less, one negro [man] [illegible] Joe, 1 do. Clement, [1 do.] Jim, 1 do. Jack, 1 do. Ge[orge,] [1 do.] Charles, 1 do. David, 1 do. [illegible] Nancy, 1 do. Lucy, 1 d[o.] [illegible] 1 do. Leah, and 1 do. An[illegible] [prop]erty of Francis D. Nelson [illegible] negro man Jim, 1 do. Henry [1 do.] Matilda, the property of [illegible] Nelson, which I shall proceed [to sell] on the premises on Friday th[e] [illegible] April, at Tubman Nelson's, [at] [illegible] of 10 o'clock A. M. at F[rancis D.] Nelson's the same day at 1 o['clock] P. M. and at Cyrus Nelson's th[e] [same day] at 3 o'clock P. M. to the h[ighest and] best bidders for cash, to [satisfy the] above mentioned writs.
JOSHUA BRATTAN, [Shff.]
March 27th—Ap. 1

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs [of Venditioni] Exponas issued by the [clerk of] Somerset county court, and to [me di]rected, Elijah Christopher, tr[ustee for] the sale of the real estate of [illegible] Sanford, against Tubman N[elson,] Francis D. Nelson, and Cyrus [Nelson,] [wi]ll be sold at public sale, or [the] 25th of April next, the [following p]roperty, to wit: Part of [a tract of land] called Newberry, being [the land] said Tubman bought of S[anford heirs;] two head of horses, tw[o] [illegible] 6 head of cattle, [illegible] 2 beds and furniture, [illegible] and worm, which will be so[ld to the] highest and best bidder [for cash] and satisfy the above [mentioned] writs of Venditioni Expon[as.] [Sale to] commence at 10 o'clock A. [M. on the] premises of said Tubman [Nelson.]
ROBERT STE[WART,]
Late Shff. o[f S. C.]
March 27th, 1828.

Arrival of lord Cochrane in England.—The Hampshire Telegraph, states that lord Cochrane arrived in his private schr. the Unicorn, from Poros, one of the Grecian isles in the Archipelago, in 28 days. His reason for returning, he asserts to be that the Turks have not a ship of any description on the sea, and that therefore the Greeks no longer require his aid. The Hellas frigate and the corvettes had been laid up at Hydria; the smaller vessels of the Greek navy are cruising for the suppression of piracy. Lord Cochrane thinks that piracy can be effectually suppressed but in two ways, either the active use of well appointed gun boats, or an inducement held out to the Greeks, who engage in this petty and destructive warfare, by a regular and firm government, to obtain a subsistence of honest and industrious exertions. He states that the Egyptians are retiring from the contest in the Morea with all possible celerity.

Soon after the battle of the Navarin they commenced collecting all the vessels they could, both Egyptian and Turkish, and embarked in them 15,000 of their troops, who sailed for Alexandria, leaving 8000 in the fortified places, in the most destitute and wretched condition. It is estimated that 10,000 must have perished since Sir Edward Codrington's statement of the battle was made, either by the sword, disease or famine. Lord Cochrane had set off for London. The system of retaliation, which on the onset was provoked by Turkish Cruelty, is now continued by necessity, and the establishment of a better government, and order of things in Greece, is the best cure for it. His lordship had expressed his willingness to return to Greece, to assist in the suppression of piracy by means of armed steam boats.

It appears from the papers before us, that on the 21st December, the supplementary treaty was concluded at London, between England, France and Russia, to secure the execution of the measures relative to the pacification of the East. Of this treaty, the Ausburg Gazette gives the following outline:

"The Protocol of the conferences upon the question of the intervention between the Ministers of England, France and Russia, was definitely resolved on, on the 21st December, and the measures to be taken, so that the work of restoring peace in the East might not be deferred, were agreed on. The stipulations of the new treaty are as follows:—All the efforts employed to induce the Porte to accede to the intervention of the three powers having been fruitless, the contracting powers will make use of the means that are at their disposal to require with vigor of the Porte that it would at length occupy itself with the propositions made to it for the good of humanity, and the security of the commerce of all nations. Although military operations by sea and land may probably become necessary (says the Protocol,) to accomplish this object, the manner of proceeding shall nevertheless be in the sense of the treaty of July 6, and none of the contracting parties shall have a right, under any pretext whatever, to seek an aggrandizement of territory, or other advantages of any kind. The expense occasioned by the measures for executing the treaty shall be subjected to a common estimation, and the nature of the indemnities shall be stipulated."

DISTRESSING SHIPWRECK.

The American brig Lydia, Capt. Sylvia, sailed from Cork, (Ireland) for N. York, Oct. 13th, and after experiencing repeated gales in which she lost masts, sails, rigging, provisions &c. and the vessels had become a perfect wreck, and most of the crew was exhausted by fatigue, privations and sufferings; had been several times supplied with bread and water, and once been refused assistance by the ship Corinthian; and after subsisting some time on one ounce of bread per day, and for three days upon a dog, and afterwards upon those who had terminated their existence, were fallen in with Nov. 28th by the French ship Jean Baptiste Capt. Aubert, from Charleston for Havre! The crew and passengers consisting of men women and children amounted at this time to 36, and presented a most heartrending spectacle of human suffering. The French captain took the females on board but having little spare room or provision declined taking the others, when a scene of horror and despair ensued at the prospect of mothers and children, brothers and sisters being separated, which so effected the humane feeling of the French Captain and crew that they took them all on board and divided their scanty supplies with the poor ship wrecked sufferers until they all safely arrived at Havre December 16th; where the sufferers published a card gratefully acknowledging the attention and humanity of Capt. Aubert and crew, to whose generous devotedness they say they owe their existence. It does not appear from the account how many persons died on the wreck.

Fair at Boston.—The amount of domestic manufactures sold at the great annual Fair, held at Boston last week, is estimated at about a million of dollars. The improvement in the printed cotton goods, and dressing of the woollens, was very apparent, and many of the patterns were much admired for their beauty. There were numerous buyers from all parts of the United States, and the sales on the whole proved quite satisfactory to the manufacturers, not withstanding the great scarcity of money.—N. Y. Post.

Destructive Fire.—We learn from the Utica Sentinel, that the Oneida cotton factory, at Whitesborough, was burnt down on the night of Thursday last. The loss is estimated at about $25,000, of which $15,000 is covered by a policy of insurance. This was the oldest cotton factory in the county of Oneida, and had been for a long time in very successful operation. It is understood that arrangements will be immediately made to rebuild it.

In the house of Commons, on the 12th ult. Mr. Hume said—

"He was glad to hear from a naval officer, who had been recently travelling in the United States, that their navy was not to be weighed for a moment in the balance against the British. They had only had one line of battle-ship, the Delaware. They had four frigates of 64 guns, of the first class, and two frigates of the second class; they had nine sloops of the first class, eight of the second, and four rowboats to attend on those sloops, making in all 28 ships and no more."

How glad the whole Parliament must have been, on receiving this authentic information!

Resolution to abilities is what the powder is to the shot. The shot does the execution—but the powder gives the impetus.

Baltimore Prices Current.

BALTIMORE, FRIDAY, MARCH 21

FLOUR, best family,	$6a6 25
Susquehanna,	4 62
WHEAT, best white, p. bu.	85a95
red do	80a85
CORN,	33a34
RYE,	48a50
OATS,	21a23
BARLEY,	60a62
WHITE BEANS,	80a100
PEAS,	45a50
CLOVER SEED,	4 75a5 00
TIMOTHY SEED,	2 50a3
FLAXSEED,	75a80
FEATHERS, do	26a28
BEES-WAX, per pound	26a27

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
March 25th, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of William Stewart, Admin'r. of Robert Hitch, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Robert Hitch, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th of October next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand, this 25th day of March, 1828.

WILLIAM STEWART, Adm'r. of R. Hitch, dec'd.
April 1, 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
March 25th, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Michael B. Carroll, Adm'r. c. w. a. of Betsey Bayly, late of Somerset county, dec'd., it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' court of said county in Maryland; letters of administration on the personal estate of Betsey Bayly—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of October next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of March, 1828.

MICHAEL B. CARROLL, Adm'r. of B. Bayly, dec'd.
April 1. k

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Waters & Howard against John Crockett, I have taken in execution the following property, viz: Two horses, one colt, two yoke oxen, one wain cart, 10 head of sheep, 10 head of cattle, 3 stacks fodder, 2 ploughs, 2 harrows, and 2 beds and furniture, which will be sold to the highest and best bidder for cash, at the Court-House door, in Princess-Anne, on the 15th day of April next, between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock, P. M. to satisfy the above writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
April 1, 1828.

JOB PRINTING,

SUCH AS

Handbills, Cards, Blanks,

PAMPHLETS, &c.

Thankfully received and neatly printed, on moderate terms,

At the Office of the Village Herald.

TRUSTEE's SALE.

BY virtue of a decree of the honorable the Chancellor of Maryland, the subscriber as Trustee will sell on Saturday the fifth day of April next, on the premises, all that house and lot of ground in the village of White-Haven, which belonged to William Waters late of Somerset county, deceased.

The terms of sale are, that the purchaser shall pay to the Trustee, on the day of sale, one tenth part of the purchase money, and the balance at the end of twelve months from said day, giving bond with approved security for the same—and upon the payment of the whole of the purchase money, the trustee will in virtue of said decree execute to the purchaser, or his or her heirs or assigns, a good and sufficient deed in fee simple, free and clear of all incumbrances from any person or persons claiming under or through the deceased. The sale to be held between the hours of one and five o'clock in the afternoon.

MARCELLUS JONES, Trustee.
Feb. 29—M4 ts

☞The above sale is postponed until Saturday the 26th instant.

April 1, 1828. wkw

PUBLIC VENDUE.

BY virtue of an order from the honorable the Orphans Court of Somerset county, will be exposed to public sale, on Wednesday the 16th instant, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. at the late residence of WM. BOUNDS, (of Jas.) deceased, all the PERSONAL PROPERTY of said deceased, (negroes excepted,) consisting of a great variety of household and kitchen furniture; horses, oxen, cows, sheep and swine, with a lot of farming utensils.

Among the above property is one half of the SCHOONER Mary-Anne, lately built, of good materials, and well rigged—Burden about 70 tons.

Terms of sale—A credit of 6 months will be allowed upon all sums of, or over, five dollars, upon the purchasers giving notes with approved security, bearing interest from the day of sale. For sums under that amount the cash will be required.

ZIPPORAH BOUNDS, Ex'x.
JOHN BOUNDS, Ex'tor.
March 26—ap1

SHERIFF's SALE.

By virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed at the suit of Handy H. Irving (Trustee,) against Jonathan Waller and James Weatherly, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: Part of a tract of land called Gilliss's Lot, containing 237 acres more or less, 1 negro man Charles, 1 do. Charles, 1 woman Sarah, 5 head of horses, 1 yoke of oxen and 6 head of cattle, seized and taken as the property of George Waller. Also, part of a tract of land called Waile's Retreat; containing 198½ acres more or less, 1 negro man Elias, 3 head of horses and 7 head of cattle seized and taken as the property of James Weatherly, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, on Tuesday the 29th day of April next, between the hours of 1 and 4 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash, to satisfy the above writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 26—Ap. 1

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri F[acias] issued out of Somerset county [court] and to me directed, at the suit o[f] George Maddux and Elizabeth Byrd, Executrix of Thos. Byrd, against M[o]ses C. Smith, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: part of a tract of land called Pembleton's Goodwill, containing 14 acres, more or less, with all the improvements thereto belonging, lying and being in the town of Salisbury, and occupied by Elijah Christopher, which I shall proceed to sell, on the premises, on Saturday the 26th of April next at the hour of 3 o'clock P.M. to the highest and best bidder to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 28—Ap. 1 1C

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
March 25th, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Sarah Walter, Executrix of James Walter, late of Somerset county, dec'd. it is ordered by the Court, that she give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of James Walter—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 7th of October next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th of March, 1828.

SARAH WALTER, Ex'trix. of J. Walter, dec'd.
April 1. YY

BLANK BILLS OF SALE,

Printed on fine Paper,

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

PROPOSALS BY BENJ. EDES, FOR PUBLISHING IN BALTIMORE,

THE EMERALD,

And Baltimore Literary Gazette.

The Emerald and Baltimore Literary Gazette will be published every Saturday, in quarto form, super-royal sheet, with new long primer type, and in superior style—the editorial department to be under the direction of several gentlemen of acknowledged talents.

The want of a paper of the nature proposed, will be allowed by every citizen of this metropolis; nor has the proprietor, in his efforts, been so much prompted by a desire of gain, as by a hope of encouraging literature throughout this section of the Union. Confident of the approbation of all persons of taste, he therefore proposes the publication of the Argus, and pledges himself that no effort shall be wanting on his part to please the pulibc in general.

The Emerald shall contain the choicest selections of miscellaneous literature, from the most esteemed periodicals of this country and Europe; and the strictest attention shall be observed as to their moral tendency. Its contents shall be—Tales, original and selected; moral, humorous and scientific Essays; original and selected Poetry; Biographical Sketches of distinguished worthies; Anecdotes, &c.—The original matter will be furnished by individuals who have through the medium of our best literary productions, established themselves in public favor. Also, interesting items of foreign and domestic intelligence; critical notices of passing events; the drama, new publications, and a correct description of the prevailing fashions, both abroad and at home.

It may be worthy of notice, that the Emerald shall be in no way whatever connected with either of the great political parties; and that no communication that has a tendency, either directly or indirectly, to invade the sanctuary of domestic retirement, shall find admission into its columns; though they will always be open to an honest discussion of any question that does not tend to inflame personal or party animosity.

TERMS.—Price of subscription four dollars per annum, one half to be paid on delivery of the first number, and the balance at the expiration of six months. Postmasters and other persons of the inland towns, procuring six subscribers and becoming responsible for the payment, will be entitled to one copy gratis. When 400 Subscribers are obtained the Emerald will be issued.

☞Subscribers will be received at the Office of the Village Herald.

March 25 eeo

TRUSTEE's SALE.

BY virtue of a decree of Somerset County Court, in this case, the subscriber will offer at public sale, to the highest and best bidder, on the premises, on Thursday the 17th of April next, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. one third part of a tract of land called Shadwell's Chance or Shadwell's Supposed, situated in the county aforesaid, on the south-east side of Nanticoke river, containing one hundred and fifty acres, more or less, with the improvements and appurtenances thereto belonging—The terms of sale will be, a credit of twelve months, with interest [from the] day of sale, to be secured by [b]onds given to the Trustee, [with g]ood security, upon the payment [of wh]ich and ratification of the sale, [the Trus]tee is directed by the said [decree to] execute to the purchaser or purchasers, his, her or their heirs, a deed for the aforesaid property, conveying the title of the complainants and defendant in the premises.

THOS. JONES, (of John,) Trustee.
March 25 a

NOTICE.

The Creditors of JOSIAH W. HEATH, late of Somerset County, deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit their claims with the vouchers thereof properly authenticated, with the Clerk of said County Court, on or before the first Saturday after the third Monday of May Term next.

BURTON CANNON, Trustee
Feb. 26. gk

VILLAGE HERALD.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance; or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

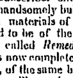
Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis	par
Easton	par
Frederick	par
Frederick County Bank	par
Bank Westminster	par
Hager's Town	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co	par
Elkton	1
($5 and upwards)
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley Winchester at	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	½
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	5
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	3
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

NOTICE.

THE Levy Court will meet at Princess-Anne on Tuesday the 8th day of April next, on which day between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, will be offerred to the lowest bidder, the removal of all the stakes remaining from the setting of wiers in Monokin river and each of its branches, in accordance with the late act of Assembly, making it the duty of said Court to have the same removed.—The work is to be accomplished on or before the 20th of June next.

JOHN WOOLFORD, Sen.
President L. C.
Feb. 19, 1828. ktw

FOR SALE.



THE subscriber offers at private sale two handsomely built SCHOONERS, the materials of which will be warranted to be of the best quality. The one called Remedy, of 50 tons burden, is now completely rigged, and the other, of the same burden, will be ready, for sailing, about the middle of April.

FRANCIS D. NELSON.
Quantico, March 4. tf

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
March 11, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Stephen Taylor, adm'tor. of Aaron Foxwell, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Aaron Foxwell—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 30th day of September next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of March, 1828.

STEPHEN TAYLOR, Adm'r. of A. Foxwell, dec'd.
March 18, 1828. k

SHERIFF's SALE.

By virtue of a writ of venditioni exponas issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Thomas Goddard against Elijah Culver, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—A part of a tract of land called Morris's Lot, containing 126 acres, more or less, and I hereby give notice that on Tuesday the 8th April next, at the Court-House door, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock P. M. I shall proceed to sell the life estate of said Culver, in and to the above mentioned land, to the highest and best bidder for ready cash.

ROBERT STEWART, late Shff. S. C.
March 18

JUST RECEIVED

AND FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE, a number of

Methodist Hymn Books,
Wesley's Sermons, in 2 volumes.

Also, Scriptural Catechisms, intended for the use of the Methodist Societies. March 11—a

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an anodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER, Princess-Anne, Md.
Nov. 20, 1827.

T. L. DISHAROON,

HATTER,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping, has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. kt§

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY [illegible] the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him.—JOB.

Tho' wide in sorrow's gloomy paths I stray,
Tho' fearful thoughts should darken all my way;
Tho' o'er my head the rising billows roll,
And floods of grief o'erflow my sinking soul:
Yet I will bow to Heaven's Almighty will,
And though he slay me, I will trust him still.

Though stern, unpitying mortals on me frown,
And cast my every weak endeavour down,
At which my broken heart has often bled,
To see my efforts numbered with the dead:
Yet still I bow to my Creator's will,
And though he slay me, I will trust him still.

Yet still I know he is a gracious God—
Him will I love and humbly kiss his rod;
His power revere, his Providence I'll trust;
In all my sorrows I will own him Just,
And calmly bow to his unerring will,
And though he slay me, I will trust him still.

'Tis His—Almighty Power all things to sway;
His to prescribe, mine only to obey.
Though from my heart my dearest joys be rent,
Bless'd be His name, he takes but what he lent.
Then, O my soul! no more resist His will,
But, though He slay thee, trust His goodness still.

X. Y.

Snow-Hill, March 25, 1828.

To the Editor of the Village Herald.

Sir,—It is just three years since the circumstance which occasioned what follows took place—yet it is still fresh in my memory; probably, on account of the charming manner in which 'Feramorz' has treated it: "My heart (said he,) beat gaily, as I approached the house where I was to meet one I loved even dearer than myself. I entered the room; but, alas! there was not a chair empty near my beloved Susan, and I had to seat myself in one from which it was impossible to observe her. The beautiful Eliza, who sat by my side, kept chatting away very pleasantly, although at the same time she maliciously kept herself so as to prevent my catching one glance at the corner, which was as a loadstone to attract my heart and eyes. I determined to move, and as a seat by the fire would give me a view of what I so much desired, I plead a sensation of cold, for an excuse to Eliza, who instantly replied, looking at me and at Susan with a significant smile, "I have been sensible, for a long time, that I have been casting a shadow on you; however I hope it has not given you a chill." Having been from youth a dabbler in poetics, I produced the following impromptu, which I presented

TO ELIZA.

The brightest cloud seen floating high
So beautiful along the sky,
With golden rim and snowy breast,
So heavenly pure, that it might be
A spot where infant souls might rest,
Above the world's impurity:

Where they, as yet not ripe for heaven,
And yet too pure for earth to keep,
Might float, by zephyrs gently driven,
Along the blue etherial deep.

Though never yet to mortal's sight
Appear'd a cloud more fair, more bright,
Yet, when before the sun it past,
A shadow to the earth it cast.

The brightest flower that decks the field,
The sweetest that the gardens yield,
The smallest flutterer of the groves,
That gaily thro' the sunshine moves,
The leaf that quivers on the spray,
All cast a shadow to the ray
That the bright sun emits by day.

Then do not wonder, lovely maid,
That thou thyself should'st cast a shade,
When between me and my heart's sun,
Thou shroud'st her sparkling eyes, from one
Who only seems to live to see
Those orbs which shine so lovingly.

FERAMORZ."

The following Song, by Tannahill, a Scottish poet, and author of "Jessie of Dumblane," "Gloomy Winter," &c. we believe has but once appeared in print before, in this country.

THE MAID OF ARUTINA.

Forlorn among the Highland hills,
'Midst nature's wildest grandeur,
'Mid rocky dens and wooden glens,
With weary steps I wander.
The langsome way the darksome day,
The mountain mist sae rainy
Are naught to me when gaun to thee,
Sweet maid of Arutina.

Yon mossy rose bud down the howe,
Just opening fresh and bonny,
Blooms fresh beneath the hazle bough,
And scarcely seen by ony;
But fairer, 'mid her native dale,
Obscurely blooms my Jeannie,
More fair than day or rosy May
[illegible]

High on the mountain's lofty brow,
I view the distant ocean,
Where avarice courts her bounden prow,
Ambition courts promotion;
Let fortune pour her golden store,
Her laurell'd favours many;
Give me but this, my soul's first wish,
The maid of Arutina.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

KING DAVID.

The king and sweet singer of Israel was the devoutest of men, and His Exalted Majesty, who rules over heaven and earth with a sceptre of righteousness and mercy, received the warmest effusions of his sanctified heart and holy lips. The spirit of inspiration bedewed his soul with its choicest influence, and animated his thoughts with the sublimest conceptions of divine things. The powers of his mind were, if we may venture the expression, wrought in the finest mould of the Mighty Maker, and his bold Genius consecrated its best efforts to the praise of Jehovah. The lamp of Divine Truth yielded him some of its brightest rays, and the reflection of these rays, while they kindled up in his soul the warmest flow of love, of admiration and of gratitude, present him enveloped, as it were, with glory, before he had shaken off this mortal and put on immortality. Bright with their blaze, he shines in the beauties of holiness, tho' his glories were sometimes eclipsed by the temporary prevalence of sin and sorrow. In his studies of Nature he never forgot her Author, and rose to the height of his great theme with utmost ease and familiarity. The sun, moon, and stars—the highest and most magnificent of Jehovah's works, were surveyed with the eye, not of philosophic pride, but with the eye of reverence, of profound astonishment, and entranced devotion. While, "what is man that Thou art mindful of him," was the inference from the lofty survey. Not content with the works of Creation, he examines assiduously the records of inspiration, the choicest volumes in his library—and thence he draws divine lessons. The holy page lies ever open before him, and by the rays of noon, or the midnight lamp, he examines its thrice-blessed contents.

A monarch on earth he knew was a subject to the skies, and while wielding a sceptre over extensive empires, not the less bound to acknowledge the supremacy of the Lord. He felt, while adorned with the purple of royalty, that he was 'naked and open' to the eyes of the Great God, and he consulted, while framing the laws which should regulate his empire, those infallible statutes which bore upon them the evident impress of divinity. He rested his claims to the blessedness of pardon and adoption not upon slender evidence, but upon the testimony of God, and he was ever anxious to make his heart the abode of the spirit of holiness. Nothing that he possessed had half the value in his eye of the Word of God, and his royal revenues of gold dust and finest silver, were, when laid in the balance, counted as nothing and less than nothing and vanity. The more he felt his sins, the closer he pressed the holy volume to his bosom, and the fiercer the blaze of persecution, the more he sought the shelter of Jehovah's promises. In the meridian of his glory this was his sun—in the night of adversity this was his lamp. In the tempest, here he found anchor—and the billows never swept his feet from this rock. The shafts of calumny fell harmless at his feet, for God was his shield—and the power of the destroyer wasted its vain fury against the tower of salvation, in which he lay hid. Serene in death, he finally received the crown of righteousness which God had laid up for His chosen—The man after God's own heart slept with his fathers—and his flesh now rests in hope.

The best legacy, in his gift, he bequeaths to his son, Solomon, and the Word of God so pure, so sweet, and so valuable, that monarch transmitted in turn to his son—till in the series of ages, we have fallen heirs to it all. "Thanks be unto God for the unspeakable gift."

J.

From the New Monthly Magazine.

"Horas non numero nisi serenas."

Save when the sun's resplendent ray
May gild the passing hour,
To mark the minutes on their way
I lose the ready power.

So only can that time be blest,
And call'd by man his own,
In which the sunbeam of the breast,
The conscience may have shone.

Horas non numero nisi serenas—is the motto of a sun dial near Venice. There is a softness and harmony in the words, and the thought is unparalleled. Of all conceits it is surely the most classical.—"I count only the hours that are unclouded." What a bland and care dispelling feeling! How the shadows seem to fade on the dial plate, as the sky lours, and time presents only a blank, unless its progress is marked by what is joyous, and all that is not happy sinks into oblivion! What a fine lesson is conveyed to the mind, —to take no note of time but by its benefits; to watch only the smiles, and neglect the frowns of fate, to compose our lives of bright and gentle moments, turning always to the sunny side of things, and [illegible]ting the rest slip from our imaginations unheeded or forgotten! How different from the common art of tormenting! For myself, as I rode along the Brenta, while the sun shone hot upon its sluggish, slimy waves, my sensations were far from comfortable; but the reading of this inscription on the side of a glaring wall in an instant restored me to myself; and still when I think of and repeat it, it has the power of wafting me into the region of pure and blissful abstraction. I cannot help fancying it to be a legend of Popish superstition. Some monk of the dark ages must have invented and bequeathed it to us, who loitering in trim gardens, and watching the silent march of time, as his fruits ripened in the sun, or his flowers scented the balmy air, felt a mild languor pervade his senses, and having little to do, or to care for, determined (in imitation of his sun dial) to efface that little from his thoughts, or draw a veil over it, making of his life one long dream of quiet: Horas non numero nisi serenas, he might repeat when the heavens were overcast, and the gathering storm scattered the falling leaves, and turn to his books, and wrap himself in his golden studies! Out of some such mood of mind, indolent, elegant, thoughtful, this exquisite devise (speaking volumes) must have originated.

The following extract is from an eloquent speech, made in the Senate of the United States, by Mr. Woodbury, on the bill for the relief of the surviving officers of the Revolutionary Army:

History and tradition must convince all, that through defeat as well as victory, they clung to our fortunes to the uttermost moment of the struggle. They were actually by spirit and intelligence, the surest guarantees of fidelity. Most of them had investigated, and well understood, the principles in dispute, and to defeat them, had flown to the field of battle, on the first alarm of war, with all the ardour of a Scottish gathering, at the summons of the fiery cross. And it is not poetry, that one of my own relatives, an officer, long since no more, when the alarm was given at Lexington, left for the tented field, the corpse of his father unburied:

"One look he cast upon the bier, Dashed from his eye the gathering tear," and hastened to devote his own life to the salvation of his country. In the same duty—in performing their part of the compact, to serve faithfully to the close of the war, these petitioners endured the frosts of winter often half sheltered, badly, badly clothed, and badly paid. God forbid that I should exaggerate. The naked truth is stronger than any coloring of fancy. We have the authority of their commander, they were, at times, in such a condition as to be unable and ashamed to receive their friends; but never, I believe, loth to face their enemies.—Their paths were sometimes marked by their blood—their courage and constancy tried by frequent alarms, by ambuscade and the pitched battle; but they never faultered; and when towards the close of the war, neglect on the part of Congress, as to the monthly wages, might have justified, under most circumstances, disquiet, and distrust, and, when at Newburg, they were tempted with the insidious taunt, that if, relinquishing their arms and retiring home, with the promises made them unfulfilled, they would "go, starve and be forgot," yet they disbanded in peace, and expressed their "unshaken confidence in the justice of Congress."

PRINCESS-ANNE, MD.

TUESDAY, April 1, 1828.

Agreeably to promise we here open a kind of rural repository, to lay up articles on scientific and practical agriculture; domestic economy and gardening, with useful recipes, &c.

There is at this time nothing of the kind published on this shore—nothing to incite to emulation—nothing to rouse the morbid capacities of the farming community into energetic action. But we do not believe ourselves to be competent to the task. Far from it. Yet it behooves us to do something.

In the prosecution of our design we shall often be obliged to present the discoveries made in other parts of the world, and thus render the labors of others subservient to our own use.

Persons who make improvements in agriculture or mechanics—in raising or fattening stock, or other objects of general utility, are respectfully solicited to send accounts thereof to the Editor for publication. Many useful things, now comparatively lost, may thus be brought before, and benefit, the public.

If any one have queries to propose, doubts to be solved, or difficulties to be explained, we will gladly publish them for those to answer who may feel competent. "Many hints," says one, "which if circulated through the community, might lead to results highly useful to the world, are suffered to sink into oblivion. Many queries, the answers to which, might be obtained and be of immense advantage to the querist, are now for want of opportunity, suppressed."

The following communication will serve as a further illustration of what is advanced above:

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Mr. Editor,

A gentleman of Potato-Neck is desirous to acquaint the readers of the Herald, by way of caution, with a circumstance which may be the means of preserving many a valuable horse. Some time last autumn, he permitted his horse to be turned loose into a cornfield where a quantity of Peas remained ungathered. The horse appeared to relish them, and ate a considerable quantity; but immediately he became sick, and in spite of every exertion that could possibly be made, died in a very short time. Upon examination it was found that the Peas had swollen and sprouted to such a magnitude, that no doubt remained of their having been the cause of the horse's death.

One of the above gentleman's neighbours met with a similar loss some time previous to that just related.

Yours, W. X.

March 26, 1828.

POTATOES.

Judge Buel, of Albany, one of the most scientific practical agriculturists in the United States, has published the following remarks on potatoes.

"A practice has been recommended to me to prevent the deterioration of this crop, a misfortune which seems to follow planting, successively, seed raised on the same farm. Two years experience has tended to satisfy me of its utility.—The recommendation is, to select seed of good size, to cut off and throw away a slice from the seed end and cut the residue into two, three or four pieces, according to the remaining number of the eyes.—Its utility is based upon the supposition, and I may say the fact, that where the several stocks grow close together, the vegetable will be of a diminutive size; and that the discarded slice which has from three to six eyes, may be correctly compared to the tips and buts of the ear of the seed corn which are rejected as useless because they produce invariably sickly plants. The best potato soil is one which is cool, moist, and light, such as is afforded by swamps abounding in vegetable alluvion and well drained. The seeds should not be planted so deep, nor the plants earthed so high, as to exclude the influence of air and light; but frequent stirrings of the ground with the plough or cultivator are highly material."

This statement of Judge Buel is corroborated by a communication published in the New England Farmer, vol. 1, p. 53, with the signature 'J. W. Ryegate, Vermont.' The gentleman observed that he took a quantity of middling large potatoes and cut off the but and top ends from each and cut the middle pieces into quarters and planted a row with buts, another with tops, and the third with middles, and placed five pieces in each hill throughout the whole. I did not weigh nor measure the produce but found that the middle pieces produced much the largest crop. The produce of the two rows was about equal, by which it appears that to reject both ends, and plant the middle only, will produce much the best crop.

There is an objection against cutting potatoes when planted. It is said that part of the juice of the root will exude or issue from the wound. But this may be avoided, and the growth of the plant hastened by rolling the slips or roots in pulverised plaster of Paris. Some of the plaster will adhere to the parts of the roots which have been cut; and thus prevent the loss of the juice of the potato, which nature intended for the nourishment of the young plant. The 'Farmers Assistant' says "it has been found that wetting potatoes, and then rolling in gypsum, immediately before planting, greatly assists the growth of the crop." Mr. London says, "the time for cutting the sets should always be some days before the planting, that the wounds may dry up; but no harm will result from performing this operation several weeks or months before hand, provided the sets are not exposed too much to the drought so as to deprive them of their natural moisture."

WATER ROTTING FLAX.

It will be our object to show that flax water-rotted is superior to that which is dew-rotted. 1st. It is more durable. To ascertain this, Mr. Goodsell placed on the ground a quantity of flax that had been sufficiently water-rotted for dressing by the side of an equal quantity of unrotted flax, and turned them once in three days, until the new flax was sufficiently rotted for dressing also; and, upon examination, he found that that which had been previously water rotted had lost none of its strength: both parcels were suffered to remain on the ground, until the dew rotted became worthless, while the water-rotted was found to be still strong and good. The same gentleman states that he repeated the experiment with dressed flax, and with the plant, and found the result the same. 2d. It will yield a greater quantity of fibre from a given quantity of the plant. The same gentleman states that dew-rotted flax averaged from 12 to 16 pounds of fibre only, while the water rotted gave from 16 to 25 pounds.

In Ireland, Holland, and France, flax is invariably water rotted; and it is stated by the manufacturers of canvass, that 100 pounds of Dutch flax will yield 72 pounds of clean flax, Irish 65 pounds, while the like quantity of American dew-rotted will yield only 40 pounds. No reason can be discerned why the American flax should yield so much less than the Dutch, unless it be in the process of rotting, dressing, and preparing it for market. It is worth more: while the American dew-rotted flax brings in market but 9 cents per pound, and in that proportion.

To water rot flax, let it be totally immersed in water, and the surface covered with board, straw, or any thing else, to exclude the rays of the sun. In summer, when the weather and water were both warm it has been known to rot in seven days; in colder weather a longer time will be required. When taken from the water, it must be spread to dry. [Hamp. Sentinel.

"Sophocles being asked what harm he would wish his enemy? answered that he might love where he is not liked."

From the Philadelphia Saturday Bulletin.

SILK WORMS.

A society has been formed in this city for the purpose of promoting the cultivation of the mulberry tree, with reference to furnishing food for the silk worm, and thus ministering directly to a great means of domestic economy and national wealth. The experiment is not now to be tried whether silk can be produced in the United States; Georgia and Connecticut, almost the two extremities of the Union, have most successfully proved the feasibility of the plan. The objects in view, by the Society, is to place the food for the worms immediately within the reach of all, at the lowest possible price, so that more than the cost of gathering them will not be incurred. At present the mulberry is scarce, and any extensive production of worms would be attended with the almost entire stripping of the trees, and then perhaps a failure, in feeding the glutonous spinners, for of all things perhaps a silk worm, when attaining its greatest size, may be considered as possessing the greatest appetite.

The means which this society will possess by the respectability of its members, and the diffusion of their correspondence for attaining information relative to the proper treatment of the different kinds of worms, the mode of feeding them, the amount to give them at the various stages of their existence, how to provide for their eggs, how best to preserve them from insects, how much heat or cold, and all the etceteras of silk growing, highly interesting to those who mean to turn their attention to this means of profit, or to posses or provide for a few as a matter of curiosity.

In this city, last year, scarcely a family was without a certain number of silk worms, who left in their place of deposit, thousands of eggs to multiply their species this season. Last summer whole schools of children were occupied in winding silk from the cocoons, rather perhaps as a matter of curiosity or amusement than of convenience and profit; yet the success which attended those first essays, will, we are confident, induce many more persons this season to prosecute the work for profit, and we shall look for a large amount of Philadelphia silk before the close of the approaching season.

Much valuable information has been given relative to the cultivation of the eggs, the feeding of the worms, the preparation of the leaves, attention to the cocoons, care of the fly or miller, &c. We shall take a seasonable opportunity to present a condensed view of their value, that our readers may give the attention to this growing families, that the industry and profit of its busy members really deserve.—Meantime, we hint as a caution, that the eggs and the worms be kept carefully from the approach of little red ants that frequently infest our houses; that the eggs be kept from the heat, lest they hatch too early, that is, before food can be produced—when the worms have come to life, they must be fed with caution for a few days, with the tenderest part of mulberry leaves; and after some five or six days they may be permitted to gormandize at their pleasure.

Of Rain as produced by Lightning and Thunder.

By accurate experiment it is proved that water is a composition of two elastic airs, or gases, called oxygen and hydrogen. In 100 parts of water there are 88 and one-fourth of oxygen and 11 and three-fourths of hydrogen. Pass a succession of electric sparks through water by means of a proper apparatus, and the two gasses are produced in the proportion above.

To decompose water by galvanism, take a narrow glass tube three or four inches long, fit each end with a cork penetrated by a piece of slender iron wire, and fill the tube with water.—Let the ends of the two wires within the tube be distant from each other about three quarters of an inch, and let one be made to communicate with the top, the other with the bottom of a galvanic pill, in action. On making this communication, bubbles of air will be formed, and ascend to the top of the tube, the water decreasing as it is decomposed.

The oxygen and hydrogen formed by this experiment, may be re-composed into the same weight of water. Take any quantity of the oxygen and hydrogen gasses in the proportion above mentioned; ignite them by the electric spark, & they produce a quantity of water equal in weight to the gases employed. Thus, water is converted into air, and air re-converted into water again.

Now, to show how lightning produce rain in the cloud, the electric spark or matter of lightning passes through the atmosphere, ignites and decomposes the oxygen and hydrogen; which exploded, and the water which was formed of these two falls down in the form of rain. Now the flash, the clap and the formation of rain take place all in the same moment, the lightning we see instantly, the clap we hear sooner or later according to the distance of the cloud from us; rain travels still more slowly, and will be seen sooner or later, according to the weight of the drops and the distance of the cloud.

A poor man in Paris being very hungry, staid so long near a cook's shop, where they were dressing meat, that his stomach was actually satisfied by the smell of it. The choleric cook demanded payment for his breakfast; the poor man refused; and the controversy was referred to the first man who should pass by. On the relation of the cause, he gravely decreed, that the man should jingle his money between two plates as long as he had staid, and thus pay the cook's score for the benefit [illegible] had received.

A few difficulties for people to leave off old habits, and to change opinions which have been taught them from their childhood. A gentleman met a man going to mill with a bag of grain on his back, and another bag tied to the former and hanging down before. Seeing that the latter had scarcely any thing in it, he asked the man what he had there so heavy, as to balance the grain. Stones, sir. And what are you going to do with the stones? Nothing; but they save me the trouble of holding the grain bag with my hands. But would not it do as well to put half the grain in front, and to throw away the stones? The man objected that he was used to the other way, but he was persuaded to make the experiment. Next week, however, he was met again with the stones in the bag and said that he found it easier to carry the grain as his father carried it before him.

To the publishers of Papers and Periodical Works throughout the United States.

It is intended before, or certainly by the first of May next, in a Pamphlet with other statistical matters, to notice all the Newspapers and Periodicals in the United States, and the city or towns where published, by whom, and the conditions of publication, &c. A copy containing the above shall be faithfully forwarded to each of you, who will insert this notice once and forward a paper or a copy of the work you publish to Philadelphia, directed to

"THE TRAVELLER."

Philadelphia, Feb. 22, 1828.

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY OF

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

At No. 36, Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public, that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast & wrought Shares, with & without Coulters; Hill side, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs; a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows, Swingletrees, double & single; Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual, his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes, Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.

His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 3 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his implements, that he will continue to merit the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.

JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.

N. B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. FRUIT TREES will be furnished to orders. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders. March 11. 4x

District of Maryland, to wit:

[L. S.] Be It Remembered, That on the 17th day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the United States of America, LITTLETON AIRES, of the said district, hath deposited in this office the title of a Book, the right whereof he claims as author in the words following, to wit:

"TABLES OF DISCOUNT OR INTEREST,

ON EVERY CENT,

From 1 to 100, from 1 month to 10 years,

AND

ON EVERY DOLLAR,

From One to One Thousand, and

ON

Every Hundred from 1 to 6 Thousand INCLUSIVE.

From 1 Day to 10 Years.

The whole computed at Six per Cent.

Together with examples showing in what manner, by means of the tables to ascertain the interest at Five, Seven and Eight per Cent."

In conformity to the act of the Congress of the United States, entitled "An Act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned." And also to the act, entitled "An act for the encouragement of learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned; and extending the benefits to the arts of designing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints."

PHILIP MOORE,
Clerk of the District of Maryland.

☞ The above work is for sale at the stores of Mr. G. M. Willing, Mr. Wm. Done, and Messrs. Johnston & Sudler, Princess-Anne. Also at the Village Herald office.

March 4. Price $1.

A Candidate.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the citizens of Somerset county, that he is a Candidate to represent them in the next House of Delegates.

BRITTINGHAM HULL.

Feb. 26, 1828. 1x

Village Herald.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY MORNING, BY JOHN S. ZIE[illegible] EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

VOL. II. PRINCESS-ANNE, MD. TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 8, 1828. NO. 2.

VILLAGE HERALD.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Two Dollars a year, if paid in advance, or $2 50 if paid within six months; or $3 if not paid within six months.

☞ Subscriptions paid within 30 days after delivering the first number, (of the year subscribed for,) will be considered in advance.

No subscription will hereafter be taken for less than one year.

No paper will be discontinued (unless at the editor's discretion,) until all arrearages are paid off; and a failure to notify a discontinuance, previous to the expiration of the term subscribed for, will be invariably considered as a new engagement.

☞ Papers sent by mail will be subject to postage, to be paid by the subscribers.

ADVERTISEMENTS, not exceeding a square, will be inserted three times for $1, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion: those exceeding a square in the same proportion.

☞ Advertisements, if handed in by Monday night at 10 o'clock, shall appear in the paper next morning.

☞ Persons advertising must limit the time of insertion, otherwise their advertisements will be continued and charged accordingly.

☞ All communications addressed to the editor must come POST PAID.

[SELECTED.]

The following curious Anagram, being the finest and happiest of any extant, is so very remarkable, that we think it's insertion must give pleasure to every Christian reader.

(Let it be observed, that an Anagram is a transposition of the letters of some name, or set of words, whereby a new name, or a new set of words is formed from the same letters, either to the advantage or disadvantage of the person or thing to which the name belongs.)

REMARKABLE ANAGRAM.

In the xviiith chapter of John's gospel, verse 38, Pilate saith unto Jesus, What is Truth? which question in the Latin language runs thus: Quid est Veritas? These letters, transposed, make the justest and best answer that could possibly be given to the inquirer, who did not think proper to wait for another, viz. Est vir qui adest; i. e. It is the man who is present.

This anagram will appear still more remarkable, when it is considered, that the Lord came into the world particularly as divine truth; and the first words which he uttered after the question was put to him, were the following in the 16th chapter, verse 5, viz. Behold the man.

Note: In the English translation these words are by mistake put into the mouth of Pilate: but in the original they are manifestly the words of Jesus, after the crown of thorns was placed on his head, and in the internal sense signify, Behold how the Jewish nation has falsified the Divine Truth of the Word.

Recollections of Philadelphia.

We have been told by an old and highly respectable citizen of this place, that about 80 years since there was a large spring of pure water in a spot near what is now the corner of Second and Union streets. It was well known by the name "Bathsheba's Spring," and parties not unfrequently went out from the city to take tea on its banks. In digging the cellars under those new stores on the west side of Second street below Spruce street, much difficulty was experienced in consequence of meeting with a considerable stream of water, which was supposed to have its source in the spring. From the same individual we have the following anecdote relative to a spring of another description. Many years ago a well was dug and a pump placed in the yard belonging to the house at the north east corner of Sixth and Chestnut streets, now the residence of P. S. Duponceau, Esq. The water brought up was found to be of an unusual kind, being highly colored and having a very peculiar flavor. It was examined by several physicians, and finally pronounced to possess many valuable medicinal properties. Such was the eagerness with which this water was sought after, that the owner of the property, finding himself likely to be put to great inconvenience, had a spout fixed to convey the water outside of his yard. At this "health restoring fount" an old woman attended who dealt out the nectar to the multitude, for a slight compensation. Several weeks passed on; the pump handle was kept moving; people drank the water and the old woman pocketed the money. When lo! a change came o'er the nature of the well—and this wonderful Catholicon began by degrees to look and taste for all the world like pump water. The doctors now looked blank, and the topers began to "smell a rat." The mystery was soon unravelled. On this spot had stood the first distillery which was erected in Philadelphia. A large cellar of water was dug, (and afterwards filled up and forgotten) into which all the refuse and offal of the departed spirits had been thrown. The hard drinkers thought it was awful enough!

MATAMORAS.—This is the name of a town in the neighbouring Mexican province of Texas, which has occasionally met our eye in the newspapers, but of which we have not seen any description until now. It is situated on Rio del Norte, a short distance from its mouth, and is of so recent establishment that it is laid down but on few maps. Its proximity to New Orleans, and the intercourse which is kept up by coasting vessels, have doubtless contributed much towards its rapid growth. Under date of January 25, a friend now resident there writes as follows:—

"Matamoras, 25th Jan. 1828.

"About seven or eight years ago, a few of the country people sat themselves down on the Rio Grande and from time to time, others would flee hither for protection from the Indians, who were kept off by the people uniting these forces; hence its old name Refugeto, a place of refuge. It increased rapidly, and in a short time because a place of considerable trade, from its many foreigners flocking to it, and it now contains about 10,000 inhabitants. It is situated about 30 miles from the mouth of the Rio Grande, and 50 from the Brazos Santiago, which is the port of entry (the river not being of sufficient depth for vessels even of a small class,) whence goods are transported hither at an expense of about $1 per 100 lbs.

There are a few good brick houses here, built by foreigners, but the greater part consists of huts one story high, built of reeds or logs placed perpendicularly, thatched with reeds, straw or palmetto leaves and plastered inside with mud, and having clay floors. Some of the principal people live in these kind of houses. The streets are unpaved, and very bad in rainy weather. The climate is as healthy, perhaps, as any part of the world.

The men are generally well made, and some of them well looking. The common dress is a jacket and wide pantaloons, or calzones, opened from the knee down, and ornamented with gold or silver lace, and a great many buttons; underneath which the wide white drawers are visible. Many wear blankets, some of which are beautiful, and cost as high as $30 each, thrown over the shoulder. However, in consequence of so much intercourse with the Americans, some of them have adopted our costume. They are good horsemen, and take much pride in their saddles, bridles, housings, &c. which are sometimes rich and costly.

Although most of the ladies have handsome features, they are not to be compared with our own being generally short, of bad forms, and round shouldered: this latter deformity I attribute to their not wearing stays or corsets. They have, however, beautiful eyes and feet; they are fond of finery, and wear a great many ornaments, although, according to my notion they do not dress with taste. The dress of the better class consists of a high colored silk or satin slip trimmed with ribbon or lace, short sleeves and waist, and cut very low in front. The neck is decorated with a string of gold beads, clasped in front, with a large ornament. Their arms and hands are suffered to go bare, and they wear rich silk stockings and prunelle or satin shoes. There are but few who ever wear a bonnet, more make use of a Canton crape shawl, which, when they enter a house, they suffer to fall from the head to the neck. They are easy and affable in their manners.

I was invited the other night to a public ball, and saw a display of the beauty of the place, but was much surprised to find both ladies and gentlemen smoking in the ball room, even whilst engaged in dancing.

The people do not pay much attention to the Sabbath, but carry on business, &c. as if there was no such day. Immorality and dissoluteness prevail to a great degree. Gambling is the principal evil, and I have seen women and children round the tables, in the streets, betting away their little money; yet notwithstanding all this, they are temperate as respects the use of ardent spirits, and I have scarcely seen a person intoxicated since I have been here.

I was much disappointed in the bull fights, as the beasts were too tame and the Toreadors afraid of them. All they did was to enrage the animals enough to pursue them, when they display a good deal of agility in avoiding them. I saw one person, however, thrown about ten feet over the bull's head, but he did not receive much injury. The theatre consists of a shed, fitted up in the corner of a large square, capable of containing upwards of 2000 people. The performance is as bad as the edifice, but what could be expected from two reals? The prompter, who is always visible, reads each person's part for him, and can be heard nearly as distinctly as the performers themselves.

We do not live very well here, as there are no vegetables whatever, except beans and a few miserable sweet potatoes. Our diet consists principally of beef cooked in different ways, now and then an armadillo, rabbit, fowls, &c. and but little wheat bread, as flower is now $30 per barrel. They make a kind of bread in small cakes, called tortillas, of corn, ground by wetting and rubbing it between two stones. It is to me singular that our corn meal will not answer well to make them.

The country people are generally hospitable, and if they were more industrious and enterprizing, might raise almost all kinds of produce, the soil being rich and although there is but little rain here, they might manage to water their farms from the river, whence they procure nearly all the water they use.—They have no such things as carriages, all travelling being done on horses—which are plenty and a very good one can be bought for from 10 to 15 dollars."

MARINE TELEGRAPH.—We learn that a project is now on foot to establish a Marine Telegraph, for the purpose of furnishing more early and certain information of the approach of vessels to Baltimore. One part of the design, we understand, is the location of a telegraph at the mouth of the Patapsco, either at the Bodkin or North Point.—Both of these stations afford an uninterrupted view of the Chesapeake Bay, as far down as a telescope can reach; and intelligence of the approach of a vessel can thus be communicated in a few moments to the city, long before she arrives at the mouth of the river. It is proposed, also we believe, that each vessel shall carry a distinguishing number in her foretop-sail, as a more certain means of making her out, than by the private signal flags now in use. As soon as the plan is matured, we presume it will be submitted to those more immediately interested, for their sanction and co-operation,—and these, we have no doubt, will be already extended towards so desirable an improvement.

Baltimore American.

The Greensburgh Gazette contains the following account of a circular hunt, held on the 7th ultimo—these are for the sake of safety, conducted without the use of fire arms.

"The balls rang their merry peals—a thousand horns sounded ten thousand discordant notes—rattles, boys, men, women and children were in motion—and at 8 o'clock on Friday last, the hunt commenced.—Every thing proceeded well, and about 1 o'clock the [illegible] of Isaac Shuster, 2 miles north of this town. Many foxes were enclosed, and the business of death and destruction was soon begun and ended. Ten foxes were taken in the ring—12 were taken (as we are informed,) from under the barn on the ground, after the multitude had retired—3 were caught under a haystack, and 3 in an old log—and 8 or 9 concealed themselves in a log pile. With those that were killed previous to the formation of the outer circle, it is supposed that the number killed and taken prisoners in the ranks of poor reynard, was little short of 40. There was much fun, more grog, and some bloody noses."

The Present Administration.

The Coalition papers constantly ask—what faults has the present administration been guilty of?—we answer, many, very many—and first, it has been PRODIGAL OF THE PEOPLE'S MONEY. In proof of this we cite sundry passages from the speech of Mr. Rives of Virginia, delivered in the House of Representatives on the 5th ult. on the subject of Retrenchment. He says—"during Mr. Jefferson's administration in 1802, the whole expenditures of the government exclusive of the payments to the public debt, amounted to $3,737,079; while the same class of expenditures during the year 1826, (under Mr. Adams' administration,) according to the last Treasury report, amounted to $13,062,316—Here then we have increase of expenditure equal to 350 per cent, in less than 25 years."

It will be said, and justly, that the expenses of government, have necessarily grown with the growth of the nation. But the nation has not grown in this proportion—far from it. Let us take, however, a view of the expenditures during the three last years of Mr. Monroe's administration, viz. 1822, 1823, and 1824, and compare them with the expenses of the three first years of Mr. Adams' administration, viz. 1825, 1826, and 1827, and see what will be the result.

We find that the contingent expenses of the State, Treasury, War, and Navy Departments, and that for Foreign Intercourse and Foreign Missions, under Mr. Monroe in 1822, 3, 4, was $738,871—and the same expenses under Mr. Adams, for 1825, 6, and 7, was $1,045,444; presenting an increase of almost 50 per cent. During this period of six years, the circumstances of the country in its foreign relations were as similar as they well could be—and the excess can only be attributable to the system of court patronage—the prodigal scattering of money for electioneering purposes; such as is instanced in the case of Mr. Pleasants, who was paid nearly $2000 for services never performed by him under cover of a pretended mission to South America; and the payment of $1,000 to a son of Mr. Clay for carrying despatches in the same vessel, and the same destination, with the minister who was to receive them. Mere gratuities given to thick and thin adherents, to keep them faithful; or family affairs, simply.—$300,000 is easily expended in this way. It is not a very great sum—but it is the money of the people.

But the present administration have not drawn on the CONTINGENT FUND ONLY, to answer their particular ends. We will continue this comparison between the expenses of the present administration and that which immediately preceded it, by extracting one paragraph entire from the speech before alluded to. Mr. Rives says:—"The aggregate expenditures of the government have notoriously increased. I speak here of its ordinary current expenditures, by which I mean all expenditures, except payments on account of the public debt, and demands arising from treaties with foreign nations. Those expenditures in 1822, were $9,827,642; in 1823, $9,784,152; in 1824, $10,448,779; making a total sum, during the three last years of the last administration of $30,060,573. In 1825, the same class of expenditures amounted to $11,416,582; in 1826, to $13,062,316; in 1827, to $12,285,530; making a total sum, during the three years of the present administration of $36,764,428. The increase of the ordinary expenditures of the government, under the present administration, compared with a corresponding period of the last administration, has amounted then, to an annual sum of $2,234,618."

Thus we have this plan and simple result—It has cost Messrs. Adams and Clay Six millions six hundred and seventy three thousand eight hundred and 54 dollars more to manage the government during the [illegible] years they have had it in charge, than it cost Mr. Monroe during the three years immediately preceding! A sum of money absolutely wasted by this administration—how, nobody knows but themselves, though a glance at their array of hired editors, their host of retainers, and pensioned writers, and the floods of printed libels against Jackson, sent abroad in the country, will go far to explain it—A sum of money, we say, that would have schooled half a million of poor children—made half a dozen such Canals as that proposed between the Delaware and Raritan, or reduced the public debt more than seven millions of dollars! And yet we are asked what fault lies at the door of this administration!—and by the men, too, who have been sharing this splendid plunder!!—B. Rep.

From the Penn. Democratic Eagle.

PRESIDENT ADAMS.

Article II—Section I—Clause VIII. of the constitution of the U. States, declares that the President shall swear or affirm that he will "faithfully execute the office of President of the United States."——

Article II—Section III—enjoins upon the President to "recommend to the consideration of Congress such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient."

Mr. Adams in his last message does not recommend a revision of the Tariff; he does not recommend any measure for the encouragement of Domestic Manufactures: he does not recommend any measure for the encouragement of Wool Growers: he does not recommend the American System: he does not say one word on the subject of the Tariff—or, domestic manufactures—or, wool—or the American System.

The Case then stands thus:—Mr. Adams under the obligation of an oath, to "recommend to the consideration of Congress such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient"—does not recommend the American System—a tariff—the encouragement of domestic manufactures, or the growth of wool.

On his oath, then, he does not consider the encouragement of domestic manufactures—wool—a tariff—or the American system "necessary and expedient."

The Friends of General Jackson far from charging Mr. Adams with the heinous crime of violating his oath, are perfectly willing that entire credit be given him, for the utmost sincerity; and only complain, that certain designing politicians, have craftily imposed upon a number of patriotic and honest citizens, and induced them to believe, that he is in favor of what, on his oath, he virtually disavows.

Doubt on this subject can no longer exist. Every man can now, wide awake, take his side.

General Jackson has repeatedly and publicly—in Congress by his votes—and out of Congress as a citizen, manifested his friendship for the American System; Mr. Adams—Never—but in the public discharge of an imperious and all important duty, Mr. Adams, in effect, proclaims to the whole nation that he does not consider the American system "necessary and expedient."

To Perfume Linen.

Rose leaves dried in the shade, cloves beat to a powder, and mace scraped; mix them together, and put the composition into little bags.

From the Boston Statesman.

THE CONTRAST.

On the 16th of November, 1814, Mr. John Q. Adams, then our minister at Ghent, wrote to Mr. Leavitt Harris in Russia, a letter from which the following are extracts: "The defence of "Baltimore has given us little more "to be proud of than the demon-"stration against it has afforded to "our enemy. Prevost's retreat from "Plattsburg has been more disgrace-"ful to them than honorable to us, "and Wellington's veterans, the fire "eater Brisbane and the fire brand "Cockburn, have kept the rawest of "our militia in countenance, by their "expertness in the art of running a-"way. The general issue of the cam-"paign is yet to come, and there is "too much reason to apprehend that "it will be unfavorable to our side." "Divided among ourselves, more in "passions than interests, with half "the nation sold by their prejudices "and their ignorance to our enemy, "with a feeble and penurious govern-"ment, with five frigates for a navy, "and scarcely five efficient regiments "for an army, how can it be expect-"ed that we should resist the mass of "force which that gigantic power has "collected to crush us at a blow." It was in that discouraging language, and such flings against our "feeble and penurious government," that Mr. Adams indulged, in a day when every true patriot would have nerved himself the firmer in the service and defence of his country—and it was in that day, when disasters, according to this terrorist, was so impending over our homes, that he charged our "feeble and penurious government" with sixty two thousand six hundred and forty four dollars for two years' services.

Mark the contrast! Andrew Jackson, in that day of peril, instead of grasping every possible cent, and more than every legal cent, from the reduced coffers of the country, expended all his personal funds, and pledged his private fortune, towards raising the means of defending his country. Instead of accusing his government of feebleness and penurity, and holding out the desponding and disgraceful language of fear and submission, he raised the banner of his country, invited to its defence, by the most elevated examples of constancy, devotion and courage, the brave volunteers of the west; showing himself at every point of danger; exciting all to the noble discharge of their duty; passing days of fatigue and exertion and sleepless nights, in preparing for the gallant resistance which the invader afterwards met with at his hands and the hands of his undaunted compatriots; and appearing, in the midst of the conflict, in that eventful and trying hour, at the head of his troops; holding to all the encouraging and animating language: "Remember that our watchword is victory or death; our country must and shall be defended: we will enjoy our liberty or perish in the last ditch."

Such is the language, and such the deeds, of the man, who is now hunted down by the friends of the diplomatic candidate with every epithet, and charged with every crime, that scurrility or malignity can invent. Let the country choose between them.

From the Baltimore Republican.

VISITERS OF WEST POINT.

It was but a few days ago when we published a Report from the Secretary of War, by which it appeared, that Mr. Adams' Secretary spent in THREE years on Visiters to West point, FOUR THOUSAND ONE HUNDRED AND FOUR DOLLARS more than Mr. Monroe's Secretary expended in six years for the same object, that we expressed our regret, that the Senate had not called for a statement showing the sum paid to each Visiter. We are glad to find, that they have since obtained such a statement, and a curious state of things it developes.

We make the following extract from the table of expenses of Visiters for the year 1827:

Hon. Jos. Ritner, of Penn.	$200 00
Hon. R. C. Mallary, of Vt.	40 00
Hon. Jos. Vance, of Ohio,	300 00
Hon. John Barney of Md.	90 00
Hon. Tho. B. Reed, of Miss.	200 00
Professor T. C. Levins, of N. Y.	30 00
Hon. A. H. Powel of Va.	120 00
George C. Washington, of Md.	100 00
A. H. Tracy of New York,	150 00
Hon George Blake, of Mass.	90 00
L. Condict of New Jersey,	15 00

Now, this does appear to us to be a very curious document. Here we have a long list of Honorables, making, as we think, very dis-honorable charges on the government. Do these Visiters charge by the day, or by the mile, or do they charge by both? Is there no general rule of the War Department on the subject, or does each Visiter charge just what he pleases?

The Honorable Mr. Reed, lives in Mississippi, at least five hundred miles further than the Honorable Mr. Vance, of Ohio, lives from West Point; yet while Mr. Reed charges $200, Mr. Vance charges $300.—Mr. Tracy, of New York charges $150, while Professor Levins, of the same State, only charges $30. Mr. Barney of Maryland, charges $90, while Mr. Condict, of New Jersey, charges only $15. We presume, therefore, that the Visiters do not regulate their charges by the distance which they have to travel. If they do, we are utterly unable to account for the immense disproportion of their charges. The sums paid these Visiters too, are independent of their expenses while at West Point; for while there, they live at the expense of Government.—The different sums which are stated in the above extract from the Report, are paid for travelling expenses only. Now, a gentleman may go from Baltimore to West Point and back to Baltimore, for $30; but our worthy representative, the Hon. John Barny, who told us, in the debate on Chilton's Resolutions, that he gave his per diem to his constituents, charitable institutions, churches, &c., charges the Government $90—being $60 more than, we believe, are the actual travelling expenses of a trip from here to West Point and back. We suppose the surplus 60 was to remunerate him for the science and literature, which he expended in the examination of the Cadets.

Mr. Ritner of Pennsylvania, another "scientifice and literary" gentleman, charges $200; which must have been four times as much as his travelling expenses.

Mr. Vance, of Ohio, a man totally illiterate and unfit for such an office, is another of these Visiters; and if he knows nothing of Mathematicks, he can't be accused of total ignorance of Arithmetic; for he comes in with a charge of $300 being more than it costs ourselves to go from here to New Orleans and back.

How did it happen to cost Mr. Condict of New Jersey, only $15? We suppose he charged the Government what it really cost him to travel to [illegible] suspect, that these [illegible] ers who charged so much, visited Saratoga, the Lakes, Montreal, Niagara, and the other fashionable places, at the public expense.

It is very hard, that these members of Congress should be travelling about at the cost of the people, while Mr. Clay, Mr. Barbour and Mr. Southard have to make all their electioneering tours at their own private expenses. Their cases ought to be provided for, and we are surprised, that they hav'nt asked for an appropriation to pay the expenses of their trips to Kentucky, N. Jersey, Virginia, Bedford, &c.

We hope after all these great men are properly provided for, Congress will do something for old Revolutionary Soldiers.

Extract of a letter to the Charleston Mercury, dated Washington, March 13, 1828.

The Bill for the relief of the surviving Officers of the Revolution, has at length been brought to a decisive vote in the Senate, and I am sorry to say there now remains no hope that any thing will be done for the relief of those venerable benefactors of their country. The grant proposed by the Committee of one million one hundred thousand dollars, was rejected on Tuesday, only twelve Senators voting for it. The motion to fill the blank with $800,000, was lost by a vote of 19 to 25; and the motion to fill the blank with $500,000, was likewise lost, 20 to 25. As this was the very lowest sum which would have afforded any substantial assistance to the Revolutionary officers, (as it would have amounted only to about $2000 on an average to each,) the vote rejecting this amount is considered as conclusive against the claim. The refusal of the Senate immediately afterwards, to postpone (by a majority of one vote) the bill indefinitely, only manifests the reluctance of that body to acknowledge, that nothing can be done for the Officers. Their fate, however, has unquestionably been sealed, and the Bill has been laid upon the table, not again to be called up during the present session; and I regret to be constrained to add as my decisive opinion, that with this Bill, has perished all hope that Congress will ever do any thing for those Officers. It was very well ascertained, that unless a decided majority of the Senate, could be induced to support the measure, there was no prospect of success in the other house. The decisive majority against the measure in the Senate, puts an end, for several years at least, to the agitation of the question there; and in a few years, none of these venerable men will survive to tell the story of their sacrifices, their sufferings and their wants. Among the visitors at the Capital on the occasion, was the gallant veteran Gen. Reed, of Maryland; and if the decision of the question could have been influenced by feeling, most certainly the sight of that venerable patriot and soldier (moving thro' the Senate Chamber on his crutches—his white locks and furrowed cheeks telling a tale of other times,) would have made an irresistible appeal to the hearts of all. It is useless, however, to indulge in vain regrets. The battle has been lost, and the defeated veterans have 'lost all except their honor.' Their consolation will be found in the reflection, that if their country has done little for them, they have done every thing for their country.

PRO PATRIA LIBERTATIS.

THE VILLAGE HERALD.

Princess-Anne, Md.

TUESDAY, APRIL 8, 1828.

"We have the POWER in our hands, and it should be firmly and efficiently used."—ADAMS PRESS.

We cannot picture to ourself an observation which carries with it a stronger indication of the smothered anti-republican principles of the Adams party, than the one just quoted. We presume there is not an unbiassed individual in this country who is acquainted with the present state of our government, that can contemplate this sentence without feeling a secret dread for our liberties when trusted to persons actuated by such motives. It is a doctrine that is exclusive of all liberality, all merit, all laudable emulation. It is one that pierces the vital parts of our Constitution, and threatens that degeneracy of our political system, along since surmised by its enemies, into the settled calm of despotism. That such should ever be the case—God forbid. It may at present seem highly improbable, but to provide for future contingences is a mark of wisdom and discretion. Is it not the duty of us, as children of those who fought and bled to establish our freedom, to rise up against men who utter such exclamations, and hoot them, not only from our cabinet, but from our meridian? Most assuredly it is.—Let us wrest the power from their hands, and never give them nor their children an opportunity to wield a sceptre over our country. How would the patriotic souls of Washington and Franklin (could they again visit us in their corporal nature) weep over the ruins of America, and even now they lie, ruled by men whose watchword is POWER, and whose desire is to use that POWER firmly and efficiently. We wish our readers to consider maturely that sentence which gave rise to these observations, and which is extracted from a paper that is the gratuitous organ of the Adams party by which they endeavor to charm the people.

SIX MONTHS AGO.

"The hopes of Jackson's adherents have been declining for the last six months past."—An Ebony Press.

"Now, sir, (says a writer in the last E. Star,) six months ago, the city and state of N. York were believed to be both in favour of the apostate federalist; since that time they have both given decided majorities in favor of Jackson.—And the New York Legislature, a short time ago, by a considerable majority, agreed to support Gen. Jackson for the Presidency. Six months ago the city Baltimore was claimed by the coalition men—but that city, since that time, returned Jackson delegates. Six months ago, there were only four Jackson members of Congress from Kentucky; now there are EIGHT. Six months ago neither party believed that a Jackson speaker could be elected in Congress; now a majority of both houses are in favor of his election to the Presidency!"—Yet an Adams paper has the effrontery to say the hopes of Jackson's adherents are declining. Now, we ask, when did the like occur before? Even the elder Adams, odious and disgusting as his administration had become, still retained a small majority in both houses of Congress, till the very last. But why all this distrust and dissatisfaction which are now prevailing throout the Union? The thing is obvious—our Chief Magistrate assumes powers not vested in him by the Constitution: He has appointed a man to the first office in his cabinet, who with his vote and influence made him the President—He has, through negligence or ignorance, lost the colonial trade, which was extremely important to the agricultural interests of our country—Under his administration the ordinary expenses of our goverment have increased $2,234,618 annually!! And the patronage of the present incumbent amounts to the enormous sum of EIGHT MILLIONS OF DOLLARS ANNUALLY, which is FOUR TIMES as great as it was in the reign of the elder Adams. Where is the genuine Republican who can meditate these facts without exclaiming—Avaunt corruption!

Newspapers, says the N. Y. Evening Post, are justly regarded as indications of public feeling in the neighbourhood in which they are published. The changes taking place in the conduct of papers in the interior of this state are a convincing proof of the progress of sound [illegible]. The Buffalo & Black [illegible] Gazette has passed into the hands of Mr. Weed; and from a zealous advocate of the present administration, has become a supporter of Gen. Jackson.—The Sullivan Whig, a print hitherto neutral, has avowed its determination to advocate the cause of Jackson.

A new paper, entitled Jeffersonian Republican, has made its appearance at Lynchburg, Virginia. It is devoted to the cause of Andrew Jackson.

We learn that the Bond of Union, printed at Belle-Air, Md. has forsaken the administration cause, and now supports the Hero.

Another triumph in Pennsylvania!

On Friday the 28th ult. an election was held in Harrisburg, Pa. for Burgess, Council-men, and Constables, which resulted in the success of the whole Jackson ticket. It is acknowledged on all hands, says the Penn'a. Reporter, that a more desperate effort was never made by any party, than by the Ebony men on this occasion to carry their ticket. But 'twas all in vain—their declarations that Harrisburg contained a "large majority" for Adams, has turned out like all their prognostications, a miserable hoax.

ELECTION RETURNS.

Borough of Harrisburg.

JACKSON.		ADAMS.
Chief Burgess.		Chief Burgess.
J. Brooks	211	W. Graydon	122
Assistant Burg.		Assistant Burg.
A. Bombaugh	208	F. Heisley	120

The majorities for council-men and constables were, with little variation, in the same proportion.

JACKSON MEETING.

One of the most numerous and highly respectable political meetings ever got up in Chester county, Pa. was held by the friends of Gen. Jackson, [illegible] house of Levi M'Cormick, in Cochranville, on Friday the 28th of March. We should despise incurring the charge of exaggerating numbers, to make a sound, and are certainly within bounds when we say, there were not twenty persons short of Four Hundred present. [Ind. Journal.

NORTH CAROLINA.

We learn from the Western Carolinian that the friends of Jackson and Calhoun held a District Convention at Lexington, N. C., on the 18th ult. for the purpose of nominating an Electoral Candidate. Charles Fisher, Chairman, and F. Martin, Secretary, John Giles, Esq. of Rowan, was unanimously selected.

The same paper says:

Not much to brag of.—Somebody writes from Hartford county, in this state, that the cause of the administration is gaining ground in that quarter—exults in the belief that the people there will be about equally divided; and concludes with expressing his opinion that "said county can poll 110 votes!" Terrible! "A tempest in a tea-pot!" Why, the Jackson majority that will be polled in the town of Salisbury alone, we may venture to say will be more than enough to neutralize the Adams votes that will be given in a half a dozen such counties.

In Captain Fogleman's company, at Holt's store, in Orange county, on the 23d ult. a vote on the Presidency resulted in 94 for Jackson.
8 for Adams.

At a muster in Milton, Caswell county on the 18th ult. the company voted for a President:

For Andrew Jackson, 85
For John Quincy Adams, 5.

The London Observer says, "Our Sovereign has, within this twelvemonth been made to feel most bitterly, that there is little or no public opinion to which he can appeal and that the Aristocracy can compel him to employ any servant, and to purchase any policy they choose to dictate. In France, an able Minister is ignominiously driven from power by the whole nation, on account of his illiberal principles—in England, an Administration is dissolved on the ground of its liberal policy. In France the king cannot form a Cabinet without making it more liberal than the preceding; in England, the king finds he cannot form a Cabinet without an almost total exclusion of liberal men. In France under an almost absolute Government, the new Cabinet is comprised of plebeians who have raised themselves by their talents; in England under a free Government, the Cabinet does not contain a single Minister, except Mr. Huskisson, whose talents have exclusively raised him from poverty to eminence: of course we except the law; the servile drudgery of its study always implies that its chief officers must be selected from the industrious and talented poor."

What we stated on the 25th ultimo, relative to a duel, was precisely that which was communicated to us as fact, else it would have received no notice at our hands—And hence we are as far from apprehending evil to ourself, as we were from meditating the ruin of another.

From the Eastern Argus.

"STRIKE—BUT HEAR ME."

If there is a spot upon the broad and luminous disk of the immortal Jefferson's biography, more bright and lucid than the rest; or if there is, in his official doings, either in the cabinet of the nation or in the presidency, one act more prominently happy and more distinctly marked with political wisdom and foresight, than the rest, it most assuredly may be found in the acquisition of Louisiana—that fertile region—that great western world, where millions and millions of freemen are coming forward in rapid succession, to increase the wealth, the strength and the glory of our common country, and to enjoy the high privileges of freedom, popular liberty, and republican institutions. Yet, in going back to those days, when this great good fortune was acquired to us, we find that John Quincy Adams! our present Chief Magistrate!! and the man who now calls upon the friends, and followers, and defenders of Jefferson, for favor and support, rejected and opposed it, inch by inch, in every shape, under every circumstance, and BY EVERY MEANS WITHIN HIS POWER!!!

Have REPUBLICANS forgotten this? Shade of the departed JEFFERSON! speak from the cold and silent tenement which thou once inhabited, and which now lies mouldering in the lonely grave, or, for a while, descend from thy high and lofty pavillion above, to refresh the memories of thy once active and devoted followers concerning days now past, when the proud and determined Adams, who has since been suffered to succeed thee in the highest honor of our country, arrayed himself in hostile armour against thee, thy friends and our happy government. Say, can those days be forgotten? Shall they be overlooked?—It cannot be; it must not be, it ought never to be so. Then listen, reader, a moment, and hear what report they bear of the artful apostate, who is at the same time filling his pockets with gold, and gratifying his selfish ambition, at the expense of a too lenient and unsuspecting people.

By a treaty concluded at Paris on the 30th April 1803, the territory of Louisiana was ceded to the United States. On the 20th of the October following the treaty was ratified by the Senate. This was before J. Q. Adams had taken his seat in that body.

On the 30th of October, 1803, Mr. Adams took his seat in the Senate.—On the 26th of the same month, the question, whether our government would take possession of the ceded territory or not, was brought forward, and although, the government had pledged itself to pay FIFTEEN MILLIONS OF DOLLARS for the lands, yet John Quincy Adams voted against taking possession of it! (See vol. 3d Journal of Congress, page 201--2--4.) But thanks to the wisdom and perseverence of the republican friends and supporters of Mr. Jefferson and his ever memorable administration, Mr. Adams here found himself in a lean minority. Still it was not enough. The measure was yet to be brought forward in another shape. He afterwards, on the 31*st* January, 1804, voted against the necessary and all important provision for extending the laws of the United States over the purchased territory! Had he succeeded in this, the object of the purchase would have been completely defeated. But here again he found himself in a lean minority of only 3! See same vol. of Journal. Nor did here his opposition end.

Mr. Jefferson thought it necessary and advisable to call out a proportion of the Tennessee militia, which he ordered on to Natchez, to aid in the taking possession of the purchased territory. When a resolve, or bill, was introduced providing a compensation to the militia men who thus were employed in the service of the United States, for the time and service they thus actually spent, Mr. Adams voted against it! But even this opposition did not render Mr. Jefferson's administration unpopular. And with this opposition, therefore the patriotic Senator was not satisfied.

In order that the territory might pay for itself, without calling upon the national treasury, it was necessary that a portion of it should be surveyed for sale; and a provision was accordingly offered in the Senate for that purpose. But Mr. Adams again voted against extending power to the Surveyor General of the United States to survey any portion of the territory, and against surveying it at all. Had he not failed in this, the whole country, together with the 15,000,000 of dollars purchase money, must have laid a useless wilderness, or yielded a support to only the savage, and worse than savage foes of our country.

For the more convenient government of such a wide and extensive territory, it was indispensably necessary to divide it into two governments. But Mr. Adams on the 18th of February 1804, voted against the purchase in this shape again, though joined by only four members of the Senate! "Had he succeeded in this opposition," says a writer, "the citizens of upper Louisiana must have made trips by water, of about 1200 miles, in flats and keels, or a land journey of nearly 1000 miles through the Indian nation, in order to attend to their ordinary government business!" Under such circumstances, of what value could the country have been to citizens of the United States?—Can Mr. Adams, or his partizans, call to mind these solemn facts, which speak volumes against him, and require an age of the most humble contrition, without feeling shame, yea, indignation towards their own selves?

But even this was not enough to persuade him to abandon the siege he had commenced upon a measure so highly calculated to give splendor and lasting renown to the administration of his father's successful competitor. Though convinced, as he must have been, that his and his little faction's opposition was ineffectual and useless, and rather betrayed the inveteracy of his feelings, than a want of judgement, still he persisted in it, that he might at least embarrass & throw obstacles in the way of the government, if he could not cripple and curtail its prosperity. And accordingly he advocated, and on the 10th of February, 1804, voted in favor of the following arbitrary, aristocratic and anti-republican amendment to the bill then under discussion; for the regulation and government of Louisiana, to wit—"no person shall be elegible, or qualified to act, as a representative, unless he shall have previously resided three years within the limits of said territory, and shall likewise hold in his own right in fee simple, ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND, or in like manner, possess a House and lot in the city of New Orleans—Provided also, that a freehold of FIFTY ACRES of land in the territory, and a residence within its limits for one year previous to its formation shall be necessary to QUALIFY a man as an elector of a representative."

I copy this to show the aristocratic feelings and disposition of the man, as well as at the same time to call to the recollection of the reader, the history and doings of his past life. Such proofs need no comment. One more instance of no less revolting despotism will be all that is necessary to delineate the determined opposition of Mr. Adams to the administration of Mr. Jefferson, and the cause of republicanism and equal rights. To the same bill just referred to, he also voted in favor of the following amendment, investing one single man with unlimited power, in exact conformity with the theory of his father, prescribed for the adoption of "Common People, laborers, husbandmen, mechanics, and merchants in general!" It was as follows—

"All bills having passed by a majority in the House of Representatives and by a majority in the Council, shall be referred to the Governor for his assent; BUT NO BILL, OR LEGISLATIVE ACT WHATEVER, SHALL BE OF ANY FORCE, WITHOUT HIS CONSENT. THE GOVERNOR shall have power to CONVENE, PROROGUE, AND DISSOLVE, the general assembly, when, IN HIS OPINION, it shall be expedient." (Yeas 5, nays 19. See Journal of Congress, vol. 3. p. 364.)

But the whole tenor of his political life, and every instance where the man has acted, inclines to the same point, and is in favor of a consolidated and unlimited power in governmental officers.

Am I told that he has renounced and abandoned his old creed—that he has turned democrat? Where is the evidence of it? It is true he voted in favor of Mr. Jefferson's embargo. And is that all that is required of him as amends for his past heretical doctrines and injunctions? Even that act ought to blast his political reputation. How much it ought to be respected, and in what light it ought to be regarded, by the republican party, I will endeavor hereafter to show, by the circumstances and facts connected with it. But what says Mr. Adams about his conduct in regard to the great Louisiana question? Has he ever disowned it, or repented of it, or renounced the principles he then advocated? No. As late as in 1822—mark the fact—as late as in 1822, he thus spoke of the question, in a letter addressed to the constituents of Alexander Smyth, to wit:

"Every act of Legislation by the Congress of the United States over the People of Louisiana, distinct from that of taking possession of the Territory, was unconstitutional, and AN ACT OF USURPED AUTHORITY"!!!

Thus at the same time justifying all his past conduct in relation to that measure, in opposition to Mr. Jefferson, his administration, friends and supporters, and denouncing the republican Congress of 1803 and 4, as USURPERS!

Fellow-citizens, will you hear it told that John Quincy Adams has renounced his old political creed or forgotten any of his old prejudices? Tell it to the winds, but not to enlightened freemen who are capable of penetrating the ambitious designs of a political aspirant, whose whole life presents not one solitary speck of disinterested patriotism, or the mark of one day of deprivation and suffering in behalf of our country, like unto the many that stand forth, to the high admiration of every generous bosom, in the lives of WASHINGTON, MONROE, JACKSON and others each of whom labored, as well in body upon the battle ground, at the call of our government, as in mind amidst her councils and upon the floor of Congress. LEONIDAS.

MORE PROSCRIPTION!!

We published an article yesterday from the Bond of Union, on the subject of the appointments made by the Governor and Council in Harford county, and to-day we publish the following communication made by a citizen of Montgomery to the Editors of the U. S. Telegraph, giving an account of the petty doings of Messrs. Kent and Company in that county. Rep.

"To the Editors of the United States Telegraph.

Gentlemen: I hasten to communicate the information to you (that the fact may be known to the public) of the high handed and unprincipled course pursued by the governor and council of Maryland, in the appointment of officers of the Orphans and Levy Courts, for Montgomery county. To signalize their devotion to the cause of the cinking administration, they have thought proper to wreake their vengeance upon some of the best public officers and purest patriots in the county, whose only fault was an honest difference of political sentiments. The Orphans Court was composed of three gentlemen who are in favor of the election of General Jackson, and who [illegible] filled this station with honor to themselves and advantage to the country. [illegible] their opposition to the re-election of Mr. Adams was sufficient to exclude them from this trust. Two of the gentlemen composing this court are advanced in years, and one of them by a series of misfortune, made the office an object of great importance to him, yet notwithstanding this fact, he has been denied the small pittance arising from it.

To trace this malignant spirit still farther in the appointing power, they have removed from the Levy Court, Samuel Griffith, and Joshua Dorsey. Mr. Griffith is an old revolutionary soldier, who shouldered his musket and marched in defence of his country's independence at that eventful period "which "tried men's souls," and amidst all the bloody scenes of that day, and of suffering, toil and danger, he acquitted himself with the greatest honor; and probably no man now living sustains a more enviable character. He is universally esteemed by all who know him. Mr. Dorsey was no less esteemed than his friend.

It now rests with the people to say whether they will silently acquiesce in this new system of uncalled for, or unheard of proscription.

From the New-York Enquirer.

FROM A CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, 17th March.

The Adams party, now congregated within the boundaries of the ten miles square, have lost more animal spirits within the last few weeks, than would supply a dozen tribes of Indians on the qui vive for a war-dance, or two dozen Roman saturnalia in the time of the Cæsars—What did I say, animal spirits have they lost? They never had any such article; I made a mistake. Ever since Adams nodded to Clay, and Clay nodded to Webster, and Webster nodded to Adams, and the great triumvirate all nodded assent together, they and their party have only felt the lowest species of bodily spirits—that sort of equivocal glow, which titilates the mind without removing the censoriousness that it had used strange arts to reach its purpose. Ever since this first famous American, unholy, dark, doubtful, and equivocal triumvirate triumphed over the will and the feelings of a free people, suspicion and uncertainty have haunted their minds night and day. But now the "unholy alliance" begin to suspect and to check each other's movements. Mr. Webster is anxious and loud for the English embassy; this you may rely upon. The principal obstacles to his wishes in the cabinet are Mr. Clay's views—the Premier says that he shall not have the mission. He is afraid it would be rejected by the Senate; he is fearful it would seal the charge of bargain; he is afraid of Webster himself; and he has an idea, that the mission to England would furnish a hole, through which he himself could retreat, when the indignation of the people shall raise to its heighth next summer. Amiable men! Are they not to be pitied? Do they not deserve the commisseration of every man in the community?

From the Pennsylvania Reporter.

PROSPECTS IN OHIO.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of high standing, a judge of one of the courts in Ohio, to his friend in the legislature of this state, dated Moore's Salt Works, Feb. 20, 1828.

"I can now tell you most certainly to put this state down for Jackson. There is no doubt of it. Jefferson county will give him 600 of a majority—Columbianna 1000, which is galling indeed, to the administration here.—The seat of our senator, Mr. Levitt, was contested, and there was but ONE vote against him in senate. This is truly a matter of rejoicing to us, and is "gall and wormwood" to Wright, Wilson and Co. The truth is, great political developements are making daily; which must prostrate the administration party in this state before the election."

GENERAL JACKSON.

This much calumniated man seems to gain new friends with every fresh attack, and to rise with greater honor from every struggle for his hard earned reputation. The system pursued by his opponents has been one of deliberate and unblushing calumny; it has been one of violence and bitterness, unprecedented in our history, and abounding with instances of malignity scarcely to be conceived.

Instead of magnanimously allowing his merit, and honoring his services; instead of placing the presidential controversy upon the fair ground of unfitness, the friends of Mr. Adams have carried on a war of extermination; and in the face of history, of experience, and public opinion, have attempted utterly to prostrate and destroy, not only the political but the private reputation of General Jackson.

Surely it is not a crime in this country, for any man to become the candidate of his fellow-citizens. The constitution does not confine the honors of the nation to the enjoyment of a self-created and accidental aristocracy. There is no exclusive set of men, who alone are privileged to fill the offices of government. If there is, if custom has hitherto despotically sustained such a state of things, we thank Heaven, that the people of this country will no longer submit to it.

A revolution no less important to this country than that of '76 is about to take place which will cleanse the national "bosom of its perilous stuff," and restore to the people, an equality of rights.

Andrew Jackson is the instrument of this desirable change; the man who is to achieve a victory more splendid than any won by deeds of arms; and his opponents themselves, under the influence of political desperation, are indirectly aiding the cause they would overturn. Besides, a large portion of the United States wish Jackson President, from sentiments of gratitude; a large portion, from a sentiment of respect for his talents, and a thorough love of his honesty—while a crowd of his friends have taken up his cause to protect him [illegible]. All these causes have aided his progress in the hearts of the people, and have rendered certain, the triumph of the man of their choice.—Signs of the Times.

MARRIED, on the 3d inst. by the Rev. J. Denson, Mr. William Bradley to Miss Sally Jackson, all of this county.

On the same day, by the Rev. F. Waters, Mr. John Milligan, of Virginia, to Miss Louisa H. Callen.

By the Rev. D. Davis, Henry Dishroon, to Miss Charlotte Pollitt.

In Newfield Mr. John Mansfield of Brownfield, to Miss Martha Wakefield, of Medfield. [Mercy on us, what a party of fields: we hope they will raise a crop.]—U. States Gazette.

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
March 25th, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of William Stewart, Admin'r. of Robert Hitch, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Robert Hitch, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th of October next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of March, 1828.

WILLIAM STEWART, Adm'r. of R. Hitch, dec'd.
April 1, 1828. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
March 25th, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Michael B. Carroll, Adm'r. c. w. a. of Betsey Bayly, late of Somerset county, dec'd, it is ordered, that he give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans' court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Betsey Bayly, late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of October next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of March, 1828.

MICHAEL B. CARROLL, Adm'r. of B. Bayly, dec'd.
April 1. k

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Waters & Howard against John Crockett, I have taken in execution the following property, viz: Two horses, one colt, two yoke oxen, one wain cart, 10 head of sheep, 10 head of cattle, 8 stacks fodder, 2 ploughs, 2 harrows, and 2 beds and furniture, which will be sold to the highest and best bidder for cash, at the Court-House door, in Princess-Anne, on the 15th day of April next, between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock, P. M. to satisfy the above writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
April 1, 1828.

District of Maryland, to wit:

[L. S.] Be It Remembered, That on the 17th day of October, in the 51st year of the Independence of the U. States of America, LITTLETON AIRES, of the said district, hath deposited in this office the title of a Book, the right whereof he claims as author in the words following, to wit:

"TABLES OF DISCOUNT OR INTEREST, ON EVERY CENT, From 1 to 100, from 1 month to 10 years; AND ON EVERY DOLLAR, From One to One Thousand, and ON Every Hundred from 1 to 6 Thousand, INCLUSIVE From 1 Day to 10 Years. The whole computed at Six per Cent. Together with examples shewing in what manner, by means of the tables, to ascertain the interest at Five, Seven and Eight per Cent."

☞The above work is for sale at the stores of Mr. G. M. Willing, Mr. Wm. Done, and Messrs. Johnston & Sudler, Princess-Anne. Also at the Village Herald office.

March 4. Price $1.

Baltimore Prices Current.

BALTIMORE, FRIDAY, APRIL 4.

FLOUR, best family,	$6a6 25
Susquehanna,	4 62
WHEAT, best white, p. bu.	85a95
red do	80a85
CORN,	35a37
RYE,	48a50
OATS,	21a23
BARLEY,	60a62
WHITE BEANS,	80a100
PEAS,	45a50
CLOVER SEED,	4 75a5 00
TIMOTHY SEED,	2 50a3
FLAXSEED,	75a80
FEATHERS, do	26a28
BEES-WAX, per pound	26a27

Timbered Land For Sale.

I am requested by John H. Bayly, Esq. to offer for sale a tract of land commonly called "Pine Pole," situated about two miles from Princess-Anne. This tract of land is valuable for the excellent timber now standing on it, and its contiguity to navigation. For terms apply to

GEO. HANDY.
April 8, 1828. §

MARSHAL's SALE.

By virtue of two writs of Venditioni Exponas issued out of the Circuit Court of the United States, in and for Maryland District, and to me directed, at the suit of John H. Bayly against George Jones of Robt. I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: One tract of land called Dashiell's Lot, containing 600 acres, more or less—Also one other tract of land called Workington, containing 500 acres, more or less, and I shall proceed to sell to the highest and best bidder, for cash, the above mentioned property, on Tuesday the 29th of April, (inst.) at the Court House door in Princess-Anne, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M. to satisfy the above mentioned writs.

HUMPHREY HUMPHREYS, Dep. Marshal for Som. county.
April 5, 1828—8j

MARSHAL's SALE.

BY virtue of two writs of Fieri Facias issued out of the Circuit Court of the United States, in and for Maryland District, and to me directed at the suit of John H. Bayly against George Jones of Robt. and Robert Jones, executor of Charles Jones, I have seized and taken in execution the following property to wit—One tract of land called Old Berry, containing 387 acres, more or less, and shall proceed to sell to the highest and best bidder, for cash, the above mentioned property, on Tuesday the 29th of April, at the Court-House door, in Princess-Anne, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M. to satisfy the aforesaid writs.

HUMPHREY HUMPHREYS, Dep. Marshal for Som. county.
April 5th—8j

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of John Turner against Priscilla Travers, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit—One hundred acres of land called Stausway, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises, on Wednesday the 30th of April next, at the hour of 11 A. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 31—ap 8

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of 2 writs of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suits of John Horsey use of Eleanor Collier against Francis D. Nelson, and John J. Davis use of Marcellus Jones against Francis D. Nelson, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: One schooner Remedy, burden about 53 tons, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises of said Nelson, on Friday the 2nd of May, to the highest and best bidder for cash to satisfy the above writs and costs. Sale to commence at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
April 8

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed at the suit of Elijah Christopher, Trustee for the sale of the real estate of William Stanford against Tubman Nelson, Cyrus Nelson and Francis D. Nelson, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: Part of a tract of land called Newberry, being the land that said Nelson bought of Stanfords heirs—also, part of Chance, part of Monmouth, containing 215 acres, more or less, one negro man Levin, 1 do. Joe, 1 do. Clement, 1 do. Joshua, 1 do. Jack, 1 do. George 1 do. Charles, 1 do. David, 1 do. Jim, 1 woman Nancy, 1 do. Lucy, 1 do. Esther, 1 do. Leah, and 1 do. Ann, the property of Francis D. Nelson—also, 1 negro man Jim, 1 do. Henry and 1 girl Matilda, the property of Cyrus Nelson, which I shall proceed to sell on the premises on Friday the 25th of April, at Tubman Nelson's, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. at Francis D. Nelson's the same day at 1 o'clock P. M. and at Cyrus Nelson's the same day at 3 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidders for cash, to satisfy the above mentioned writs.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 27th—Ap. 1 2

A Candidate.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the citizens of Somerset county, that he is a Candidate to represent them in the next House of Delegates.

BRITTINHAM HULL.
Feb. 26, 1828. 4k

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Venditioni Exponas, issued out of Somerset county court, and to me directed, at the suit of Charles Jones, use of Greenbury Toole, use of William Done against Matthias Wingate, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—Four head of cattle, 9 head of hogs, 3 beds and furniture, 1 corner cupboard, 1 bureau, 1 pine table, one walnut table, 1 horse, bridle and saddle, and 9½ acres of land called 'Hazzard,' which I shall proceed to sell at public sale, on Saturday the 3d day of May next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M and 3 o'clock P. M. on the premises, to the highest and best bidder for cash, to satisfy the aforesaid writ.

GEO. DASHIELL, late Sff.
April 8. fjk

LIST OF LETTERS,

Remaining in the Post-Office at Princess-Anne, Md. on the 1st day of April, 1828.

A—Johnston Allen, Mrs Elizabeth Adams
B—Mrs Ann Beauchamp, Washington Bennet, Miss Margaret Boston, Capt Joseph Barkley, William Birkhead, Nany Seven Babed.
C—Henry R K Coston
D—Thomas E Dashiell, James W Dashiell, Littleton Dennis, sen.
E—Miss Sarah Elzey
F—John Fountain, Horatio Fishburn
G—Salathiel Griffith
H—Stephen Hersey, Adam Horsey, Littleton Harris, Rev. John Henry
J—Tabitha Jones, Doct Matthias Jones 2, Robert Jones of Robt. Alexander Jones, Mrs Louisa James, Mr Johnson
K—Henry R I H King, Planner King Mrs Sarah & Jane King
L—Levin K Leatherbury 2, Littleton Lankford
M—Mrs Mary Miles 2
O—Benjn Ogle
P—Mary Ann Powell, Stephen Parks
S—Secretary Somerset Lodge 6, Thomas Sudler
T—Mrs Gatty Turner, Littleton D. Teackle 2
W—George W. Wintz, John Watson, Rev Alward White

SAM'L. BROWN, Post Master.
April 8 jk

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court, April 1st, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Esther Ballard, Adm'x. of William Ballard, late of Somerset County, deceased, it is ordered that she give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber, of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of Somerset county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of William Ballard, late of said county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th of October next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of the said estate. Given under my hand this 1st day of April 1828

ESTHER BALLARD, Adm'x. of W. Ballard, dec'd.
April 8. k

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court. April 1th 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Esther Ballard, Adm'x. of James Ballard, late of Somerset county dec'd, it is ordered, that she give the notice required by law for creditors to exhibit their claims against the said deceased, and that the same be published once in each week, for the space of three successive weeks, in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy, Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans court of said county in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of James Ballard late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of October next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 1st day of April, 1828.

ESTHER BALLARD, Adm'x. of J. Ballard dec'd.
April 1828. k

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of sundry writs of Venditioni Exponas issued by the Clerk of Somerset county court, and to me directed, Elijah Christopher, trustee for the sale of the real estate of Wm. Standford, against Tubman Nelson, will be sold at public sale on Friday the 25th of April next, the following property, to wit: Part of a tract of land called Newberry, being the land the said Tubman bought of Sandford's heirs, two head of horse, two yoke of oxen, 6 head of cattle, 15 head of hogs, 2 beds and furniture, 1 still cap and worm, which will be sold to the highest and best bidder for cash, to pay and satisfy the above mentioned writs of Venditioni Exponas, Sale to commence at 10 o'clock A. M. on the premises of said T. Nelson.

ROBERT STEWART, Late Shff. of Som. Cy.
March 27th, 1828.

TRUSTEE's SALE.

BY virtue of a decree of the honorable the Chancellor of Maryland, the subscriber as Trustee will sell on Saturday the fifth day of April next, on the premises, all that house and lot of ground in the village of White-Haven, which belonged to William Waters late of Somerset county, deceased.

The terms of sale are, that the purchaser shall pay to the Trustee, on the day of sale, one tenth part of the purchase money, and the balance at the end of twelve months from said day, giving bond with approved security for the same—and upon the payment of the whole of the purchase money, the trustee will in virtue of said decree execute to the purchaser, or his or her heirs or assigns, a good and sufficient deed in fee simple, free and clear of all incumbrances from any person or persons claiming under or through the deceased. The sale to be held between the hours of one and five o'clock in the afternoon.

MARCELLUS JONES.
Feb. 29—M 4 ts Trustee.

☞The above sale is postponed until Saturday the 26th instant.

April 1, 1828. wkw

PUBLIC VENDUE.

BY virtue of an order from the honorable the Orphans Court of Somerset county, will be exposed to public sale, on Wednesday the 16th instant, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. at the late residence of WM. BOUNDS, (of Jas.) deceased, all the PERSONAL PROPERTY of said deceased, (negroes excepted,) consisting of a great variety of household and kitchen furniture; horses, oxen, cows, sheep and swine, with a lot of farming utensils.

Among the above property is one half of the SCHOONER Mary-Anne, lately built, of good materials, and well rigged—Burden about 70 tons.

Terms of sale—A credit of 6 months will be allowed upon all sums of, or over, five dollars, upon the purchasers giving notes with approved security, bearing interest from the day of sale. For sums under that amount the cash will be required.

ZIPPORAH BOUNDS, Ex'x.
JOHN BOUNDS, Ex'tor.
March 25—ap1

SHERIFF's SALE.

By virtue of sundry writs of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed at the suit of Handy H. Irving (Trustee,) against George Waller, Jonathan Waller, and James Weatherly, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: Part of a tract of land called Gilliss's Lot, containing 237 acres more or less, 1 negro man Charles, 1 do. Charles, 1 woman Sarah, 5 head of horses, 1 yoke of oxen and 6 head of cattle, seized and taken as the property of George Waller. Also, part of a tract of land called Waile's Retreat, containing 198¼ acres more or less, 1 negro man Elias, 3 head of horses and 7 head of cattle seized and taken as the property of James Weatherly, which I shall proceed to sell at the Court-House door, on Tuesday the 29th day of April next, between the hours of 1 and 4 o'clock P. M. to the highest and best bidder for cash, to satisfy the above writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 26—Ap. 1 13C

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of George Maddux and Elizabeth Byrd, Executrix of Thos. Byrd, against Moses C. Smith, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit: part of a tract of land called Pembleton's Goodwill, containing 1½ acres, more or less, with all the improvements thereto belonging, lying and being in the town of Salisbury, and occupied by Elijah Christopher, which I shall proceed to sell, on the premises, on Saturday the 26th of April next at the hour of 3 o'clock P.M. to the highest and best bidder to satisfy the above mentioned writ.

JOSHUA BRATTAN, Shff.
March 28—Ap. 1 1C

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court,
March 25th, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Sarah Walter, Executrix of James Walter, late of Somerset county, dec'd. it is ordered by the Court, that she give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test,
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of James Walter—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 7th of October next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th of March, 1828.

SARAH WALTER, Ex'trix. of J. Walter, dec'd.
April 1. vy

BLANK BILLS OF SALE, Printed on fine Paper, FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

TRUSTEE's SALE.

BY virtue of a decree of Somerset County Court, in this case, the subscriber will offer at public sale; to the highest and best bidder, on the premises, on Thursday the 17th of April next, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. one third part of a tract of land called Shadwell's Chance or Shadwell's Supposed, situated in the county aforesaid, on the south-east side of Nanticoke river, containing one hundred and fifty acres, more or less, with the improvements and appurtenances thereto belonging.—The terms of sale will be, a credit of twelve months, with interest from the day of sale, to be secured by a bond or bonds given to the Trustee, with good security, upon the payment of which and ratification of the sale, the Trustee is directed by the said decree to execute to the purchaser or purchasers, his, her or their heirs, a deed for the aforesaid property, conveying the title of the complainants and defendant in the premises.

THOS. JONES, (of John,)
March 25 m Trustee.

PROPOSALS BY BENJ. EDES,

FOR PUBLISHING IN BALTIMORE,

THE EMERALD,

And Baltimore Literary Gazette.

The Emerald and Baltimore Literary Gazette will be published every Saturday, in quarto form, super-royal sheet, with new long primer type, and in superior style—the editorial department to be under the direction of several gentlemen of acknowledged talents.

The want of a paper of the nature proposed, will be allowed by every citizen of this metropolis; nor has the proprietor, in his efforts, been so much prompted by a desire of gain, as by a hope of encouraging literature thro'-out this section of the Union. Confident of the approbation of all persons of taste, he therefore proposes the publication of the Argus, and pledges himself that no effort shall be wanting on his part to please the pulibe in general.

The Emerald shall contain the choicest selections of miscellaneous literature, from the most esteemed periodicals of this country and Europe; and the strictest attention shall be observed as to their moral tendency. Its contents shall be—Tales, original and selected; moral, humorous and scientific Essays; original and selected Poetry; Biographical Sketches of distinguished worthies; Anecdotes, &c.—The original matter will be furnished by individuals who have through the medium of our best literary productions, established themselves in public favor. Also, interesting items of foreign and domestic intelligence; critical notices of passing events; the drama, new publications, and a correct description of the prevailing fashions, both abroad and at home.

It may be worthy of notice, that the Emerald shall be in no way whatever connected with either of the great political parties; and that no communication that has a tendency, either directly or indirectly, to invade the sanctuary of domestic retirement, shall find admission into its columns; though they will always be open to an honest discussion of any question that does not tend to inflame personal or party animosity.

TERMS.—Price of subscription four dollars per annum, one half to be paid on delivery of the first number, and the balance at the expiration of six months. Postmasters and other persons of the inland towns, procuring six subscribers and becoming responsible for the payment, will be entitled to one copy gratis. When 400 Subscribers are obtained the Emerald will be issued.

☞Subscribers will be received at the Office of the Village Herald.

March 25 m

EASTMAN'S MANUFACTORY OF AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

At No. 36 Pratt street, opposite the United Hotel, Baltimore.

THE subscriber would inform the public, that he has on hand a large assortment of Gideon Davis' Improved Patent PLOUGHS of cast & wrought Shares, with & without Coulters; Hillside, Substratum and Shovel Ploughs; a large stock of Cultivators of superior quality; Harrows; Swingletrees, double & single: Cornshellers and Washing Machines. Also on hand as usual, his Patent Cylindrical Straw Cutters, which have given universal satisfaction, and Brown's Vertical Wool Spinners; Cast-steel Axes; Grubbing Hoes; Picks and Mattocks, which he warrants of superior quality; very superior Oil Stones, saturated with oil—all of which will be sold at reasonable prices for cash or acceptances in this city.

His very extensive sales of the above articles for the last 3 years is an evidence of the general satisfaction he has given to his numerous customers, and he flatters himself that with the increased pains he has taken in selecting his timber and other materials this season, and also to improve as much as possible on the workmanship of his implements, that he will continue to merit the public patronage which has been so liberally bestowed and for which he takes this opportunity to express his grateful thanks.

Orders by mail (post paid) will receive prompt attention.

JONATHAN S. EASTMAN.

N.B. On hand, 9 bushels good MILLET SEED, which will be sold low. FRUIT TREES will be furnished to orders. Implements ordered by any customers which I do not keep on hand will be carefully selected and furnished to the orders. March 11. tx

BANK NOTE EXCHANGE,

Corrected agreeably to the latest Baltimore papers.

Bank of the U. S. and Branches	par
MARYLAND.
Baltimore Banks	par
Annapolis ($5 and upwards)	par
Easton ($5 and upwards)	par
Frederick ($5 and upwards)	par
Frederick County Bank ($5 and upwards)	par
Bank Westminster ($5 and upwards)	par
Hager's Town ($5 and upwards)	par
Planters' Bk. P. G. Co ($5 and upwards)	par
Elkton	1
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Bank of Columbia	20
Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Georgetown	par
Union Bank Georgetown	par
Bank of Washington	par
Bank of the metropolis	par
Patriotic Bank	par
Bank of Alexandria	par
Farmers' Bank of Alexandria	par
Bank of Potomack	par
Mechanics Bank of Alexandria	par
VIRGINIA.
Bank of Virginia & Branches	par
Farmers Bank of Virginia and Branches	par
Bank of the Valley Winchester at	par
Do at Charlestown	par
Do at Leesburg	par
Do at Romney	½
Lynchburg Branches	½
Western Bank of Virginia at Wheeling	3½
DELAWARE
Bank of Delaware	½
Farmers' Bank	½
Wilmington & Brandywine	½
Commercial Bank of Smyrna	½
Branch Bank of Milford	4
PENNSYLVANIA
Philadelphia City Banks	par
York Bank	par
Carlisle Bank	par
Chambersburg Bank	par
Gettysburg Bank	par
Lancaster Bank	½
Harrisburg Bank	½
Chester County Bank	½
Germantown Bank	½
Farmers' Bank of Lancaster	½
NEW-YORK
City Banks	par
Albany Banks	1
NORTH-CAROLINA
Newbern Bank	5
Cape Fear Bank	5
State Bank and Branches	5
SOUTH-CAROLINA
Charleston Banks	2
GEORGIA
Bank of Savannah	2½
Bank of Augusta	2½
Bank of Darien	30
NEW JERSEY
New Brunswick Bank	1½
Trenton Banking Company	1½
Newark Bank	1½
State Bank at Camden	1½
Do Elizabethtown	1½
Do Trenton	no sale
Do Morristown	1½
Do New Brunswick	1½
Salem Banking Company	3
People's Bank at Patterson	1½

NOTICE.

THE Levy Court will meet at Princess-Anne on Tuesday the 8th day of April next, on which day between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, will be offered to the lowest bidder, the removal of all the stakes remaining from the setting of wiers in Monokin river and each of its branches, in accordance with the late act of Assembly, making it the duty of said Court to have the same removed.—The work is to be accomplished on or before the 20th of June next.

JOHN WOOLFORD, Sen. President L. C.
Feb. 19, 1828. ktw

FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers at private sale two handsomely built SCHOONERS, the materials of which will be warranted to be of the best quality. The one called Remedy, of 50 tons burden, is now completely rigged, and the other, of the same burden, will be ready, for sailing, about the middle of April.

FRANCIS D. NELSON.
Quantico, March 4. te

State of Maryland, sc.

Somerset County Orphans Court.
March 11, 1828.

§§SEAL.§§ ON application of Stephen Taylor, adm'tor. of Aaron Foxwell, late of Somerset county, deceased, it is ordered by the Court that he give the notice required by law, for creditors to exhibit their claims against the estate of the said deceased, and that the same be published once a week for three successive weeks in the paper printed at Princess-Anne.

True copy. Test.
JAMES POLK, Register of Wills for Somerset county.

In compliance with the above Order,

Notice is hereby given,

THAT the subscriber of Somerset county, hath obtained from the Orphans Court of said county, in Maryland, letters of administration on the personal estate of Aaron Foxwell—late of Somerset county, deceased. All persons having claims against the said deceased, are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof to the subscriber on or before the 30th day of September next, they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of March, 1828.

STEPHEN TAYLOR, Adm'r. of A. Foxwell, dec'd.
March 18, 1828. k

SHERIFF's SALE.

BY virtue of a writ of venditioni exponas issued out of Somerset county court and to me directed, at the suit of Thomas Goddard against Elijah Culver, I have seized and taken in execution the following property, to wit:—A part of a tract of land called Morris's Lot, containing 120 acres, more or less, and I hereby give notice, that on Tuesday the 8th April next, at the Court-House door, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock P. M. I shall proceed to sell the life estate of said Culver, in and to the above mentioned land, to the highest and best bidder for ready cash.

ROBERT STEWART,
March 18 late Shff. S. C.

JUST RECEIVED

AND FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE, a number of

Methodist Hymn Books,
Wesley's Sermons, in 2 volumes.
Also, Scriptural Catechisms, intended for the use of the Methodist Societies. March 11—m

Consumptions, Coughs, &c.

BUTLER'S VEGETABLE INDIAN SPECIFIC,

For the Cure of Colds, Coughs, Consumptions, Spitting Blood, Asthmas, and all Disorders of the Breast and Lungs.

The Vegetable Indian Specific, has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of coughs, colds, asthmas, and all diseases of the breast and lungs, leading to consumption.

Among the numerous testimonials in the possession of the proprietor, is the following:—

CERTIFICATE.

10th May, 1827.

I, Samuel Moore, do hereby certify that for upwards of a year, I was severely afflicted with a pain in my breast, accompanied with a very bad cough, and shortness of breath, and every indication (in the opinion of a physician) of approaching consumption. After passing through a course of medicine, and finding no relief, I was induced to make trial of Butler's Vegetable Indian Specific, and the use of one and a half bottles, completely restored me to health, and I have remained so ever since, being upwards of a year.

(Signed) S. MOORE.

The celebrated Dr. Cullen has taught us that "our first attention should be employed in watching the approach of disease and preventing its proceeding to an incurable state—and in persons of a consumptive habit, especially those born of consumptive parents, the symptoms of an approaching consumption at the consumptive period of life ought carefully be attended to."

The Specific is obtained by extraction from herbs, roots, flowers, plants, &c. when in perfection. In consequence of a happy combination of the most valuable herbs, &c. it becomes a balsam of superior value. It heals the injured parts, opens the pores and composes the disturbed nerves, after the manner of an annodyne; consequently the obstruction of the chest and the lungs which constitute the disease, particularly need its use. It promotes expectoration, which is so constantly called for; and whilst it cleanses and heals, it also gives strength to the tender lungs. In this manner it removes the hectic fever, improves digestion, gives strength to the nerves, repairs the appetite and improves the spirits. This Specific may always be given in safety—it is mild, pleasant to the taste, and is found particularly useful in hypochondrical, nervous and hysterical diseases.

Each bill of directions contains a detailed account of this disease in all its different stages, and will be accompanied with the signature of the proprietor, in red ink. It is offered for sale by

JOHNSTON & SUDLER, Princess-Anne, Md.
Nov. 20, 1827.

T. L. DISHAROON,

HATTER,

SNOW-HILL, MD.

RETURNS his thanks to his friends in Somerset county, who have heretofore favoured him with their custom, and informs them and the gentlemen generally of this and the adjoining counties, that he has on hand, and intends keeping in his shop at Snow-Hill, a general assortment of

Water Proof Hats,

Made of the very best materials, the Philadelphia and New York markets afford, and in the most fashionable style, tip'd off with genuine fur. Although he has it not in his power to style his manufactory an "Old establishment," he is proud to acknowledge it a new one. In all new concerns, it is admitted that something new—something fashionable may be expected. Novelty has become the order of the day—an unfashionable hat on the head of any man is an odd sight—a very ugly one. The subscriber, well aware of the fact, notwithstanding he has not been long napping has made it his study to discover the knack of making Hats in the Bon Ton style. He confidently asserts that those who favour him with their custom shall have their favours supplied, on as cheap terms as can be obtained on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, or any other shore in the United States.

A reasonable deduction will be made on Hats bought, by merchants, to sell again.

Sept. 25, 1827. kt§

THE PARTERRE.

VARIETY instils into the mind a relish for the useful and the sweet.

BOTANICAL EMBLEMS.

The attentive reader will recollect that we extracted from The N. Y. Morning Courier, a few months since, an article under the above heading.—The following pieces are a continuation of the subject, taken from the same paper, which we recommend to the attention of our readers:

It was in the true spirit of poetry—not of romance but of nature, that the idea was conceived of likening the various creations of the vegetable world to the feelings, character, and attributes of humanity; to the ever-varying sensations of the corporeal frame, and even to the almost inscrutable workings of the mind; the heart insensibly yields to the truth of these emblematic allusions, because it traces in them a continuation of that beautiful symmetry of connexion which pervades the wonderous mysteries of nature.

How exquisitely has a kindred thought been expanded by the pen of one who never touches the lyre without thrilling the bosom of sensibility with its tones:

"'Twas a lovely thought to mark the hours,
As they floated in light away,
By the opening and folding flowers
That laugh to the summer's day."
Mrs. Hemans.

But the whole poem cannot but live in the memory of all who worship nature, or render homage to genius; and therefore we return to the subject of this number.

The Jessamine—Emblem of Delicacy.

What a beautiful similitude! One of the most captivating traits of the human mind and persons is typically characterized by a comparison with the sweetest ornament of the flower garden: the delicious perfume of the jessamine is truly illustrative of that "breathing emanation of the soul," that purity of thought, and word, and action, which constitutes the peculiar charm of delicacy. This beautiful shrub, with its slender branches, its delicate flowers, and its fragrant odours, loading the air with sweetness, is a most appropriate emblem of a young and lovely female just entering upon the enjoyments of the world, when life is but a fairy dream, and all around her breathe the atmosphere of delicacy—

"And old that the world had no picture but this—
That all the bright forms which have gilded life's hours,
Might rove through its bowers and taste of its bliss,
Yet still be as pure as the jessamine flower."

The Wormwood—Emblem of Anguish.

The peculiar qualities of the wormwood plant are proverbially well known, and have established it as the ensign of bitter sorrow, of anguish—deep piercing anguish. In this sense it has been used by an old writer, thus modernized.

"For what shall banish heartfelt sorrow,
Or sweeten wormwood's bitter pill?
Where shall affliction comfort borrow,
To bid the anguish throbs be still?"

Medicinal virtues have been ascribed to the decoction of wormwood, and many a thrifty housewife has brought its qualities to the test in her domestic pharmacy. A wine produced from this plant in a proper state of preparation, has been found of infinite service in arresting the progress of pulmonary affections; and thus is the wormwood, whose bitter distillation affords relief to the attenuated frame of the invalid, like many of the bitter afflictions of the world that "ministers to a mind diseased," and have a tendency to restore it to "a pristine health."

The Olive—Emblem of Peace.

In Old Rome, every new married couple were crowned with the garlands of the olive, to represent that quiet and peace which attend or rather which ought to attend the hymeneal union. The victory at the Olympic games was honored with an olive crown—Noah's dove is represented with an olive branch in its beak, as bringing the promise of peace to a desolate world. The bird of the American banner has its branch in one talon, and arrows in the other, as if offering either peace or war to the nations of the earth. The olive was consecrated to Pallas, and was the favorite tree of the virgin goddess. When the god of the trident quarrelled with her for the honor of giving a name to the city of Athens, their peers resolved that the one who sould give the most useful present to mankind, should name the city. Neptune dashed his trident on the sea shore, and instantly the war horse arose with flashing eyes and streaming mane; Minerva touched the earth with her spear, and the gentle olive raised its mild head above the earth; the goddess was triumphant.

The Orange Tree—Emblem of Genius

This is the prince of trees. It bears at the same time blossoms and fruit. Its leaves are evergreen, and as it increases in age and size, it increases in beauty and fruitfulness. Its flowers load the air with the richest perfume, and its fruit is the most delicious and exquisite on earth. This superiority over all the trees, and these inestimable qualities, render it a happy emblem of genius, that magnificent and [illegible] of nature, which like this tree, is evergreen, and which grows more and more beautiful beneath the hand of time. Thus genius surpasses every other attribute of mind, and is continually producing new blossoms while it is loaded with mature fruit.

The orange tree has always been considered typical of the passion of love, because although its fruit be golden, its odours exquisite, and its taste delicious, its rind is bitter. Perhaps none can understand the emblem, except those who are so lucky or unlucky (as the case may be) as to be caught in the gossamer web of the capricious little god. When the young wife of Provence plights her faith and affections before the sacred altar, her waist and her brow are enwreathed with a chaplet of orange flowers which is called "chapeau de la Mariee."

TIME'S SONG.

O'er the level plain where mountains
Greet me as I go;
O'er the dreary waste where fountains
At my bidding flow;
On the boundless beam by day,
On the cloud by night,
I am rushing, hence, away.
Who shall claim my flight?

War his weary watch was keeping,
I have crushed his spear;
Grief within her bower was weeping,
I have dried her tear;
Pleasure caught a moment's hold
And I hurried by,
Leaving all her banquet cold,
And her goblet dry—

Power had won a throne of glory,
Where is now his fame?
Genius said "I live in story,"
Who hath heard his name?
Love beneath a myrtle bough,
Whispered "Why so fast?"
And the roses on his brow,
Withered as I past—

I have seen the heifer lowing
O'er the wild waves' bed;
I have seen the billow flowing
Where the cattle fed;
Where began my wanderings?
Memory will not stay,
Where will rest my weary wings?
Science turns away—

LADIES' BEST QUALITIES.

Ladies should be fully sensible that no beauty has any lasting and permanent charms, but the inward one of the mind. And that gracefulness of manners is far more engaging than beauty of person. They should consider, that intelligence, meekness, modesty and sensibility are true and lasting charms. That contentment, industry and economy are amiable and useful qualities. That virtue is an invaluable treasure, the universal charm, and should not be parted with upon any consideration. And that Piety, sweet celestial visitant, is at once, a most useful charming and happifying ornament.

They who have these, are qualified as they ought to be, for usefulness in society and the domestic circle, for the management of families, for the education of children, for pure and lasting affection for their husbands, and for submitting cheerfully to a prudent mode of living. Such females are admired, respected and beloved, because they are truly amiable and lovely, and contribute so much to utility and felicity. They are no revealers of secrets, tattlers or slanderers; but are true to their trust, say nothing but what is proper to be said, and speak well of the absent.

In a word, they are industrious, economical, sincere, cheerful, discreet, modest, virtuous, and pious.—Tel. & Mis.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL REVERIE.

"Nature is greatest in her smallest works," says Pliny. Crowds flock together to admire the agility of a Circus performer; he stands on his head, they are astonished; he jumps over a rope some six feet high, they are thunderstruck. And yet the performance of the man is infinitely inferior to that of the flea. The most active biped cannot jump further than twenty feet, not four times his length; while a flea will clear at one bound a distance equal to a thousand times his length, and yet gain no credit by the exploit.

Why are little men so generally ashamed of their Zaccheism? Why should they repine because their neighbors command a horizon a little wider than theirs? The difference is all to their advantage—physiology and history unite in flattering their pride and their vanity. Nine-tenths of the great men of the world have been little men. Little men lead vast armies—little men write great books—little men achieve colossal reputations. And why? Because the vital principle, like steam, is more energetic, the more its sphere of activity is narrowed—in little men it acts on the high pressure principle, sending them through life with power and impetuosity. Large men are slower in all their operations, mental and material—their blood circulates less rapidly, and is longer in its journey from the heart to head—their pulse is less prompt. Whilst large men are deliberating, little men act; for they decide with more quickness, and execute with more rapidity. Some author has finely remarked, that a talkative, stirring, active little man, "labors to recover in time what he has lost in space." The reverse holds good with regard to men of great stature.

But let not the tall and corpulent reader take this grievously to heart. We have comfort in store for him. Tho' he has less activity, he has more happiness; the pinguitude which deprives him of excitability is his shield against evils. He suffers less from contract with the world, physically and morally. His ribs and his sensibilities alike are better protected. If his movements are slow, his desires are moderate—if he does not dash impetuously forward with ambition, he jogs quietly along with contentment. He does not keep the world in an uproar—he does not gallop on war-horses and drive triumphal chariots. He is methodical, consistent and amiable—every one is his friend, and he preserves his character. A little man might as well make up his mind to lose his reputation, wherever he may go, and whatever he may do. He is always in hot water—always abused and vilified. His activity and enterprize raise a hornets' nest about his ears—people stare at his exploits, and become envious of his powers—and before he has reached the halfway house of life, his character is gone.

A leading politician of this state once compared one of his antagonists (who was a very little man) to a "hen with her head cut off." The comparison was meant as a sneer—it was in reality a compliment. A hen with her head cut off, shows, for a time, far more activity than she ever exhibits previously to decapitation.—And what is activity but animation—the less active we are, the less is our vital principle, and complete inactivity is death.
Morning Courier.

FOR THE VILLAGE HERALD.

A brief review of the strongest features in the character of

ALEXANDER HAMILTON.

It is the declaration of an eminent compeer of Gen. Hamilton, one who was intimately acquainted with his life and principles, that whoever would give a faithful delineation of Hamilton's character would merit the distinction of a "publick benefactor."—If we look around us and contemplate the requisites of a "publick benefactor," we will find that a degree of compounded virtue, talents and patriotism, by no means ordinary, must predominate in that personage. A benefactor implies an object as well as an agent; and, if that object be not laudable, that appellation cannot be merited. An accurate and faithful account of Gen. Hamilton's character is, then, a publick beneficence. But why is this so? Is it because his life is closely interwoven into our national existence—into the establishment of our well constructed government?—This is not probable, altho' our principal knowledge of him is in the station of a statesman and soldier: for many there are, who were employed in the same cause, but, by his side, dwindle into a kind of nonentity. It is the rare union of such admirable native qualities, improved to high perfection, and devoted to the good of mankind, which distinguishes this 'primus inter pares.'

It is somewhat remarkable, that not a single entire oration of this real orator remains preserved. The venerable witnesses of his powers of eloquence represent him as a skillful master of the persuasive art. We do not find him pre-eminent in that characteristick vehemence of the demagogue. It is very evident that he did not assume the Greek orator as his paragon of eloquence. That compulsive vehemence, however it may be a dernier resort in urgent extremities, is very badly adapted to the situation of a deliberative council of freemen. Hamilton's profound judgment pointed out to him this particular, and he carefully avoided it. His style was nervous, simple and bold, smooth and easy, without any of those violent digressions or unnatural flights, which, indeed, resemble the changing of the wind, appearing to rage, more violent ly merely from its successive changes. He is said to have possessed such a degree of blended ingenuity and pathos as to be able to touch the most obdurate prejudice and disperse the darkest malignity. He never studied the doctrine of sounds—he spoke by the impulse of feeling, and, when the subject inspired it, with glowing enthusiasm. Some writers are fond of comparing eloquence with musick: but there could not be found a comparison, in many respects, more remote from the merit of the subject: for polite musick is a superficial art, the merit of which is, not at all, diminished by luxurious and perpetual variety, by fastidious transitions. But an oration, as all confess, should be free, easy and natural, and whoever violates these principles is allowed to be devoid, not only, of oratory, but of what is worse, of common judgment.

An enlightened politician of our country tells us, that the brightest order of human intellect is that which appears in action: the next in speaking: the last in writing. However some may object to this order of arranging the qualities, all must concede that they are the three grand principles and constituents, of human distinction. If the whole of these qualifications were ever found in one man, Alexander Hamilton must have been very nearly allied to him. If, by action, the author meant brilliant examples of military achievement, we find him furnishing those examples during seven years' war. If we look over his life for proofs of his ability in speaking, we find numerous instances of his superior capacity in various departments of the art. The eminent station which he held in the army of his beloved adopted country required considerable literary accomplishments, and here we have examples of his dexterous promptitude and elegance in writing. Should we desire further exemplification of his abilities, we may call to mind that his first appearance in the world was as an author, supporting the claims of America at the age of seventeen. But his skill of writing appears more conspicuously over the signature of Publius, wherein he exhibits the most masterly qualifications of rhetorick, judgment and patriotism.

When we view the character of a distinguished individual whose life is adorned by a series of precedents in genius and integrity, the mind is struck with wonder and admiration. But when we discover, at the close of that man's career, one dark deed which casts a deep shadow over his former actions, the mind is, secretly, affected, as when we behold a fair portrait, polished with consummate art, but disfigured by an unlucky scrawl in the most delicate part of the execution.—It must be gratifying to human nature and pride, for man (whether his life may have been a continued scene of atrocity or a picture of perfect purity) to have the last action of his life his most glorious: for as one false—finishing stroke of the pencil may mar the portrait, one bold touch of sublimity may perfect its grandeur. Here the opinion of the extraordinary judgment and probity of this remarkable man must begin to waver. The grave, the dignified Alexander Hamilton condescends to risk his life at a corrupted court of honour, and that with a man who only wanted time to show himself a traitor. Did not his penetrating mind anticipate the example which would be set forth to the world, by such conduct from a man like him, who, by such an action, would virtually recommend a practice which he had ever decryed? He says, when he is languishing under the wound "whose mortal taste brought death," that he had no intention of injuring his combatant—that his fighting was a mere self-defence. But it would have been no loss of honour had he rejected the challenge. So far is this virtual murder from gallantry, that it is its actual reverse; for the man exposes his life merely to avoid the stigma of cowardice—this is negative and not real intrepidity. It is well known that some of the bravest men that ever lived have treated such false honour with insignificant contempt. Who ever reprobated the magnanimity of *Sir Walter Raleigh, the illustrious Gaston or the Viscount of Turrenne?

The depraved part of mankind will not consider the penitence which Gen. Hamilton manifested for this last deed of his life—they will not consider the avowal which he made of his intention of not injuring Col. Burr—nor will they ever allow that it was a momentary ebullition of feeling which induced him to act in such a manner. But they allege and maintain that a man of Hamilton's stamp does not act without premeditation and design—that such a rare counterpoise of virtue and genius is seldom to be found—that the conduct of such a man is sufficient to sanction almost any practice. Thus it is that this, truly, great man has, by the last act of his life, set an example to community as pernicious as his former conduct was beneficial and exemplary. It certainly must be deplored by every ingenuous heart, that this character, fair in its rise, brilliant in its progress and splendid at its acme, should be thus deeply shaded by so inauspicious a cloud.
FABIAN.

* Sir Walter Raleigh, having received a challenge from a young "man of honour" rejected it, when the challenger, thinking to take advantage of his pusillanimity, spit upon his face. The conscientious nobleman replied, as he wiped off the indignity—"Young man if I could as easily wipe your blood from my conscience, as I can this injury from my face, I would this moment take away your life." The "man of honour" fell on his knees and begged pardon.

The marquis Gaston, celebrated as a soldier and Christian, received a challenge from an officer in the French army, but refused it from principle, assigning his reasons and even, afterwards, asking pardon. When the officer perceived Gaston's determination not to fight, he attacked him as he accidentally met him, a short time after. Gaston, although taken on surprise, wounded and disabled his enemy; but such was his greatness of soul, that, instead of killing him, he carried him to his tent and treated him with the greatest kindness.

At the eve of an important battle, the Viscount of Turrenne received no less than twelve challenges, but made a most judicious disposal of them. He wrote a note to each of his adversaries, telling them, that since courage was the end of duelling, they would see in the ensuing engagement, whether he or they had the most of it, and encouraging them to exert themselves. Which party acted with more bravery?

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

A Mother's Love—how sweet the name!
What is a Mother's Love?
A noble, pure and tender flame,
Enkindled from above;
To bless a heart of earthly mould;
The warmest love that can grow cold;
This is a Mother's Love.

To bring a helpless babe to light,
Then while it lies forlorn,
To gaze upon that dearest sight,
And feel herself new-born;
In its existence lose her own,
And live and breathe in it alone;
This is a Mother's Love.

Its weakness in her arms to bear;
To cherish on her breast.
Feed it from Love's own fountain there,
And lull it there to rest;
Then while it slumbers watch its breath,
As if to guard from instant death;
This is a Mother's Love.

To mark its growth from day to day,
Its opening charms admire;
Catch from its eye the earliest ray
Of intellectual fire,
To smile and listen when it talks
And lend a finger when it walks
This is a Mother's Love.

EPIGRAM.

I am unable, yonder beggar cries,
To stand or go. If he says true he lies.

PRINCESS-ANNE, MD.
TUESDAY, April 8, 1828.

Wheat Crops.—We continue to receive from different states, and from several counties in this state, the most cheering accounts of the prospect of good crops of wheat. As far as we have been able to learn, we can state for the gratification of our distant readers, that there has seldom been a better prospect for a good crop of wheat in this county than at present. The fields are uncommonly verdant and promising.

We presume the following statement of a truly important discovery will not be unacceptable to our readers. It was made by M. Sage, as stated, in a memoir read to the National Institute at Paris—showing the efficacies of flour volatile alkali, [spirits of hartshorn] in cases of severe apoplexy.

"For at least 40 years," says he, "I have had opportunities of witnessing the efficacy of volatile alkali, taken internally, as an immediate remedy for the apoplexy, if employed on the first appearance of the disease. One of the keepers of my cabinet, aged 72 years, robust though thin, and very sedate, was seized while fasting with an apoplexy. He fell down deprived of sense. When raised up he had the rattles in his throat, his eyes were closed, his face pallid, and his teeth fixed together. I drew out his under lip to answer the purpose of a spout, into which was poured a spoonful of water, containing 25 or 30 drops of fluor volatile alkali. At the same time two slips of paper, the edges of which were wetted with volatile alkali, were introduced into his nostrils. The teeth were speedily separated and the eyes opened. A second dose of alkali, was instantly poured down the throat. The rattles ceased; speech and recollection returned. In the course of an hour the patient recovered sufficient strength to proceed about 300 paces to his own chamber. In another hour he got up, asked for something to eat, and has since experienced no return of the disorder." He reports another instance in the person of one of his friends, who was a great eater, and was struck with the apoplexy while at table. "The volatile alkali excited a vomiting; and after that had abated, the patient took 20 drops of volatile alkali in half a glass of wine. His senses returned, and in two hours he was able to walk in his garden."

From the American Farmer.

THE BLOODED HORSE.

Most respectfully inscribed to the Amateur, Breeder, Sportsman and Trainer of the American Race-Horse.

How to choose a race-horse by his external appearance, and to be a judge of his symmetry by angular demonstration: RULES.

1st. Draw a base line from the stifle joint along the bottom of the chest to the extreme point of the elbow, and the shoulder blade joint.

2dly. Draw a line from the curb or hock by the hip joint above the back, to an imaginary point.

3dly. Draw another line from the point of the shoulder, ranging with the shoulder and passing above the back until it intersects the line at the imaginary point.

4thly. Draw a line from the intersecting point of the shoulders, giving the same declension until it intersects the base line.

5thly. From the stifle to the point of the buttock, thence to the hip joint, thence declining to the stifle.

6thly. Draw a line from the hip to the base line, right angular declension, then to the shoulder up to the crest.

7thly. Then draw a straight line, regardless of the curve of the back, to a straight line intersected at the shoulder at the beginning of the crest.

8thly. Then take a line from the point of the shoulder, and angular degree, ranging with the shoulder blade to the top of the crest.

9thly. Then, regardless of the rising of the crest, draw a straight line from the top of the shoulder-blade to intersect with the point of the former line.

Thus, the real symmetry of a grand and beautiful horse, possessed with muscular powers and strength, is formed by a right angled triangle—and the farther from it a race horse's form is, the less pretensions that horse has to beauty, speed, bottom or lastingness, ability to carry weight or activity.

A thick upright shoulder, is a very certain mark of a "stumbler," and is fit for no use whatever but the slow draught.

A low coupling in the back, is a true mark of weakness; it denotes want of strength, lastingness, ability to carry weight, or speed.

A low loin is a certain mark of weakness, and a weakly, and washy constitution.

But a rising loin, of ability to carry weight, speed activity and lastingness, and a good constitution, symmetry, beauty, and muscular strength.

A race-horse's legs cannot be too short.

A great declivity, and thin shoulder, denotes speed.

A narrow breast, weakness.

A horse's breast bone, formed like that of the rabbit, denotes also speed, and is the best form for a race-horse.

A short, broad hock denotes strength; a broad stifle, well let down to the curb or hock, denotes bottom or lastingness, strength and activity.

There are not two race-horses in five hundred, properly formed in the knees; which should be small, divested of superfluous appendages, and strong, they denote activity and strength.

A lax, pending pastern, denotes also speed; a long horse is preferable to a short one, because he can cover a great deal of ground, and can bear pressing better and longer.

The race-horse, upon the whole, whose form in general, is composed of the essential properties of the following animals, viz. the rabbit, greyhound, and ostrich—is the best.

December 6, 1827. GOZWOOD.

(From the N. England Farmer.)

Scratches or Selenders in Horses.—I have been induced to make public, through the medium of your useful paper, the results of my own practice or experience, relating to scratches, or selenders in horses.

This disorder, or difficulty, is too well known to all who own these noble animals, or deal in them, to need a particular description of mine. The remedy is simple, safe and certain, in all cases which have come to my knowledge, however inveterate. It is only to mix white lead and linseed oil, in such proportions as will render the application convenient; and I have never known more than two, or three applications necessary, completely to effect a cure. A FARMER.

Sheep.—It is stated as a fact that a farm in Poughkeepsie N. Y., of about 300 acres, was managed till within the last few years without sheep.—Since then 500 sheep have been kept on it by the same farmer, who admits that he can keep the sheep and raise as much grain yearly as he did without them. The product of these sheep, therefore, in lambs and wool, deducting the interest on their cost and the trouble of taking care of them, is so much clear profit to the farmer. It is remarked of sheep, they enrich the soil so much by the manure which they scatter over the ground, that barren fields have been thus, in a few years restored to a high state of fertility.

Improved Plough.—Mr. Charles Howard, of Hingham in Massachusetts, has invented, and obtained a Patent for, a valuable improvement in the construction of this highly important implement of agriculture. By the application of "friction rollers," as they are called, which "produce a "self-governing principle, and operate in such a manner as to render "the plough completely subservient "to them, they keep the plough close "to the work without the aid or assistance of a ploughman, and it does "the work in a more regular manner "than can possibly be done in any "other way; and the improvement "makes the saving of one man in the "labor of ploughing. The aparatus "may be attached to any common "plough, and put on and taken off "at pleasure, and the plough used either way."

At the last Brighton Show, the inventer received from the Massachusetts Agricultural Society, a premium for his improvement, on an inspection of its work in competition with our ploughs. A perfect model of this Plough may be seen at the Patent Office.

Method of making Transparent Soap.

Tallow is the basis of all soap for the toilette, known by the name of Windsor, because olive oil forms a paste too difficult to melt, and having an odour too powerful for mixing with perfumes.

Tallow-soap dissolved with heat in alcohol, returns to its solid state on cooling. It is this fact which has led to the discovery of transparent soap. When well prepared, this soap should have the appearance of fine white sugar-candy. It may also be colored, and vegetable colors are for this purpose preferable to minerals. Any person can make the soap by putting into a thin glass phial a brick of Windsor soap, filling the phial half full of alcohol, and placing it near the fire till the soap is dissolved. This mixture put to cool in a mould, gives the transparent soap. [Archives des Decouvertes et des inventions nouvelles.

Black Dye & Ink prepared with Logwood.—The following is a process for the preparation of a black dye, for which a patent was taken out at Vienna, by Mr. Honig. Logwood is to be boiled several times in water, and a little subcarbonate of potash to be added to the decoction, the quantity being so moderated that it shall not change the color to blue; the stuff to be dyed is then to be plunged into this bath. This stuff may be either animal or vegetable. When it is well impregnated with coloring matter, it is to be withdrawn, and, without being exposed to air, is to be introduced into a solution of green vitriol, and left there until it has obtained the desired black hue. In preparing the ink, the decoction of logwood is used in place of the infusion of galls. [Quarterly Journal.

Magnetic Influence in the Solar Rays.

Mr. Christie has ascertained, that a magnetic needle comes to rest more quickly when vibrated and exposed to the rays of the sun, than when vibrated in the shade, and this entirely independent of any mere effect of change of temperature. When the needle was shaded, he could easily make the fiftieth vibration; when it was exposed, he could not distinguish beyond the fortieth. [Quarterly Journal.

Cultivation of Plants in Moss.—Mr. Street has ascertained, that many plants thrive better if planted in common moss, than in garden mould. The mosses used are various species of Hypnum, collected with the decaying stalks and leaves which are found amongst them. They are pressed closely into the pot, and the plants are put into them as if into mould. [Quart. Journal.

Village Herald.

TRUTH WITHOUT RESERVE—JUSTICE WITHOUT PARTIALITY.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY MORNING, BY JOHN S. ZIEBER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

VOL. II. PRINCESS-ANNE, MD. TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 15, 1828. NO. 3.

CONSTRUCTIVE JOURNIES AND DOUBLE SALARIES.

The attention of our readers is directed to the pregnant statement of the hon. T. P. Moore, relative to the payments to Mr. President Adams, out of the public treasury, with which we occupy this day's paper. It is plain and clear, and requires no illustration at our hands; nor do the facts, which are abundantly strong, require a word of comment. And even if they do, it is the province of the people to make them. Mr. Moore was in 1824, as he is now, an able and respected member of congress. In all the last presidential contest (except in the closing scene) he was the warm personal and political friend of Mr. Clay.—When Mr. C. under the sudden arrangements which associated his political fortunes with those of Mr. Adams, disregarded the instructions of his constituents and the clearly expressed voice of the people of his state, Mr. Moore declined to act with him, and avowed his preference, in accordance with the will of the electors of his district and of the general assembly of Kentucky, for Gen Jackson. That he understood and followed their wishes, is sufficiently indicated by the renewal of their confidence, in his re-election. [Albany Argus.

[From the Kentucky Watch Tower.]

Washington City, Jan. 25, 1828.

To the Editor: Sir—In pursuance of your request, I have taken pains to inform myself, so far as it can be done from public documents, of the accuracy of the statements contained in the newspapers last summer, relative to Mr. Adams' accounts. To satisfy you, and that portion of my constituents who are readers of your paper, on the subject, I shall give literal extracts from the document now before me, accompanied with such explanatory remarks as the subject may seem to require. You will recollect, that when Mr. Adams was appointed to aid in negotiating the treaty of peace, he was Minister of the United States at the Court of St. Petersburg, where he had been ever since 1809. It appears by the public documents, that his duties as Minister to negotiate the peace commenced 29th April, 1813, and ended the 27th February, 1815—having continued one year and ten months.

In the contingent account of Mr. Adams, laid before the House, February 21st, 1825, and printed in document, 79, page 108, 2d volume public documents, 1824—5, are the following items:

"1814, June 30th, Expenses of a journey from St. Petersburg to Ghent,	$ 886 86
"Sept. Expenses at Ghent,	1037 36
"Dec. 31, do.	1384 65
"1815, January, do.	640 00

Here we have $3,062 01 for Mr. Adams' expenses at Ghent, for only three months. What was the nature of these expenses, has never been disclosed. But let us return to the document.

"This sum allowed for his expenses, back to St. Petersburg, equal to the sum allowed on his journey from St. Petersburg to Ghent, $886 86." This journey back to St Petersburg, Mr. Adams never travelled. He went from Ghent to Paris, and thence to London, where he remained about two years as minister, and then returned to the United States. This statement in the document, taken I presume from the books of the Treasury, is wholly deceptive—not as to the payment of the money, for Mr. Adams took care to secure that, but as to the services for which it was paid. So far as I can learn, the true history of this item is as follows. When Mr. Adams went to Ghent, he left his family in Russia, and after the close of that negotiation, they joined him at Ghent, and travelled to Paris. The travelling expenses of his family, from St. Petersburg to Paris, he charged to the United States; but the accounting officers of the Treasury could find no law which would justify or palliate the payment of this item. Whether the idea first occurred to them or Mr. Adams, I know not; but so it was, that inasmuch as Mr. Adams might have gone back to St. Petersburg, although in fact he did not, it was considered, that the travelling expenses of his family from St. Petersburg to Paris, might be paid under cover of this pretended journey back, and neither Congress nor the people would be the wiser for it! So Mr. Adams received the money, under this false pretence.—The accounting officers make a false corresponding entry upon the public books, and the consideration for which the money was paid, is wholly concealed in the report made to Congress; and the people, as well as their representatives, are deceived in relation to the real objects for which their money is paid. But let us again return to the document. The next item is as follows:

"This sum paid him for his travelling expenses from "St. Petersburg to Amsterdam, from thence to Ghent, "Paris, and Havre, seeking a passage to the United "States; it being impossible to embark from any port in "the Baltic, in consequence of war, $1,000."

Here is another journey paid for by the good people which requires explanation. It has been said, and probably with truth, that such a journey was performed by the Secretary of Legation, Wm. S. Smith, Mr. Adams' nephew. There is no law authorizing the allowance of travelling expenses to Secretaries of Legation; but Mr. Adams being Secretary of State, procured this extraordinary allowance, which is also disguised upon the books in the manner I have stated.

The next item reads thus: "This sum allowed him for "his expenses at Paris waiting the answer of the British "Government to a proposition to treat on commerce, and "the instructions of his own Government on this subject, $880 19."

These expenses were incurred at Paris, at the very time when Mr. Adams is supposed, in a previous and subsequent item of the account, to be travelling back to St. Petersburg, but the dates of these items are carefully omitted in the report to Congress. Had they been given, it would have appeared on the face of the document, that Mr. Adams was travelling back to St. Petersburg, and residing in Paris at the same time, and charging the government with both the expenses of his journey, and the expenses of his residence in Paris! It would seem, that the dates could have been omitted only to conceal the falsehood of the pretences under which some of the items were allowed! It should be here remarked that Mr. Adams was allowed an outfit of $9,000 on his appointment to England; and that his salary for that mission commenced, on the 28th February, 1815, whereby he was receiving not only expense for travelling back to St. Petersburg, and expense for detention in Paris, but his salary as Minister to London, all at the same time!! The next item reads thus:

"This sum being the amount heretofore suspended "from two contingent accounts, but which, on further "explanation and consideration, is admitted, $99 35."

Of this I know nothing. But now comes a very extraordinary item:

"This sum, allowed him as equivalent to his expenses "from Ghent to St. Petersburg, after the conclusion of the "treaty of peace with Great Britain, he being accredited "and considered Minister at the Russian Court until "the receipt of his appointment to that of Great Britain, $1,566 54."

"Deduct this sum, allowed him for this object, for re"port No. 282, under an impression that the same sums "charged by him for the journey from St. Petersburg to "Ghent, would be equal to the expenses of his return, but "which now appears would not have been the case, as "that journey was made chiefly by water, but his return "must have been by land, and by the same route as that "taken by Messrs. Gallatin and Bayard, and equally ex"pensive, 886 86, $679 68."

Here is another allowance for the journey back from Ghent to St. Petersburg, accompanied by the most disgusting & disgraceful falsehoods. As far as I can learn, the grounds of this second allowance were as follows: The travelling expenses of Mr. Adams' family, from St. Petersburg to Paris, were charged at the sum of 1,600 dollars, so that the first allowance of 886 dollars 86 cents made to him under pretence of a journey from Ghent to St. Petersburg, was not sufficient to cover them. After the first allowance was made, Mr. Adams discovered that Messrs. Bayard, and perhaps Gallatin, had charged and received 1,566 dollars 54 cents each, for the expenses of their journey from St. Petersburg to Ghent, and he forthwith puts in a further claim to an equal allowance for his pretended journey, in order to cover his family's travelling expenses! This also is allowed, deducting the previous allowance.—Mark the false reasons given for this additional allowance. It is said Mr. Adams' journey from St. Petersburg to Ghent was made chiefly by water, "but his return must have been by land," when, in fact he never returned at all. It is added, "and by the same route as that taken by Messrs. Gallatin and Bayard, and equally expensive." A mere pretext for obtaining 679 dollars 68 cents more than it had cost him, by his own account for travelling over the same ground! From which it appears that the allowance of 886 dollars 86 cents, originally made under false pretences, was afterwards enlarged to 1566 dollars 54 cents, under accumulated fictions! He finally gets, under pretence of a direct journey back to St. Petersburg from Ghent, which he never performed, as much as Mr. Bayard got for a circuitous journey from St. Petersburg by Ghent to London. How Mr. Adams could descend to procure from the public Treasury his family's travelling [illegible] which he knew could not be le[illegible] records of his country with gr[illegible] ments, I leave to his supporters to expl[illegible]

When Mr. Adams was appo[illegible] the treaty of peace in April 18[illegible] to him $18,500; 4,500 dollars o[illegible] Minister to Russia, and 9,000 dollars as an outfit for the peace mission. Afterwards the President asked an appropriation by Congress to cover this outfit; but as the finances of the country were exhausted and embarrassed by the war, and 9,000 dollars outfit was considered rather extravagant for a Minister already in Europe, that body appropriated only $4,500 for Mr. Adams' outfit & he was directed to enter a credit on his account in favor of the government, equal to the other $4500, the balance of the $9000 sent him by the President. This he refused to do, complaining bitterly of Congress for their penuriousness, and declaring that they had as much right to confiscate his private property as to require him to refund any portion of the money which had been sent to him by the Government. He never did refund the money, or enter a credit for it, and he stood charged with it on the books of the Treasury until 1822. To compel defaulters to settle up their arrears with Government, Congress passed an act prohibiting the payment of any salary or compensation to any officer of the United States who was in arrears with the Government. Mr. Adams was then Secretary of State, and in obedience to law, the Treasury officers refused to pay him his salary until he accounted for this 4,500 dollars, which he had received in 1813. He now reiterated his complaints, and appealed to the President, who referred the subject to the Attorney General. That officer gave an opinion, that the President had a right to give the money, and Mr. Adams to keep it, in despite of the authority of Congress, and without an appropriation, although the Constitution says expressly, "no money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law," &c.

Mr. Adams retained the money and received the credit, although no appropriation has been made to this day.—Thus it was, that he realized an outfit of 9,000 dollars, when sent upon the peace mission. The peace mission commenced the 29th of April, 1813, and ended the 27th of February, 1815, having continued one year and ten months. Mr. Adams was then appointed Minister to Great Britain, and his mission commenced 28th February, 1815. Upon this appointment he claimed another outfit of 9,000 dollars. The Government hesitated at making the allowance, because there was an act of Congress which declared "that it shall not be lawful in any case for the President to allow a Minister Plenipotentiary or Charge d' Affaires on going from the United States to any other foreign country, an outfit which shall exceed one year's salary." It was doubted whether any outfit could be lawfully allowed to a Minister who had been actually fitted out, and was already in a foreign country, upon a transfer from one court to another. But it was finally decided that this law did not bar an outfit in such a case, and Mr. Adams received another 9,000 dollars on being transferred from Ghent to London. Thus did he receive, within two years two outfits of 9,000 dollars each, making 18,000 dollars.

It has been said, that during the Ghent mission, Mr. Adams charged and received a double salary; viz. 9,000 dollars per year as Minister to Ghent, and 9,000 dollars per year as Minister to Russia. The document on which this charge is predicated is now before me. It originated as follows: in April, 1822, the House of Representatives adopted a resolution, calling on the Secretary of State, who was none other than Mr. Adams himself, for a statement exhibiting the amount paid for outfit, return, salaries, and contingent expenses, to each Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, and Charge des Affaires, from the United States, to the respective foreign courts, from 1st January, 1801, to 31st December, 1821." Mr. Adams called on the Register of the Treasury to make out the document, which he accordingly did, and communicated it to Mr. Adams, by whom it was sent to the House of Representatives. This document contains the following account of the amount paid to Mr. Adams, as Minister to the several courts therein mentioned, which I have exactly copied:

	Outfit.	Return.	Salary.	Contingencies.	Total.
To GREAT BRITAIN.
John Q. Adams, from 28th February, 1815, to the 10th June, 1817.	$9,000	2,250	20,546 00	3,005 62	34,801 62
To GHENT.
John Q. Adams, from 29th April, 1813, to 27th February, 1815.	9,000		20,299 91	6,945 60	15,354 60
To RUSSIA.
John Q. Adams, from 5th August, 1809, to 27th February, 1815.	9,000		50,104 00	5,153 54	64,657 54
To PRUSSIA.
John Q. Adams, from 1st January, 1801, to 26th April, 1801.		2,250	2,860 27		5,118 27
Recapitulation.
John Q. Adams, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Prussia, from 1st January to 26th April, 1801. John Q. Adams, Envoy Extraordinary & Minister Plenipotentiary, from 5th August, 1809, to 10th June, 1817: To Russia, $9,000; To Ghent, 9,000; To Great Britain, 9,000	27,000	4,500	78,510 27	14,904 26	119,515 03

I have copied all of this paper, just as it is printed in document No. 120, vol. 7, of public documents for 1821, 22. It will be perceived that the missions to Russia and Ghent are represented as ending at the same time, viz. 27th of Feb. 1815; that in the column of salary is placed a full salary as minister to Ghent. If these statements be accurate, Mr. Adams did receive a double salary. But truth compels me to say, that this document, like others relating to Mr. Adams' accounts, is very inaccurate, if not materially false. In the main document, the totals do not correspond with the items, and the recapitulation does not with either the totals or the aggregate of the items in that document. I cannot therefore assert, positively, that Mr. Adams did receive a double salary, or that he did not; but when I reflect that this document, which seems contrived rather to conceal than develope the truth, came through his own hands, and must have passed his inspection, there seems to be reason to infer, that the worst representation it makes is the real truth of the case. Take this document coming through Mr. Adams himself, [illegible]

[illegible] on Mission to Great Britain,	9,000 00
Salary of Russian and Brit. Mission,	18,000 00
	$62,644 90

If this document be correct in the amount of Salary set to each Mission, Mr. Adams must have charged and received this sum for services and expenses between the 29th of April, 1813, and the 29th April, 1815, besides some contingencies at London. If indeed he did not receive any salary as Minister to Ghent, then the amount paid to him for the two years was 42,345 60. That he did actually receive this latter sum, much of it under false pretences and contrary to law, there is no room to doubt. What agency Mr. Adams had in settling his own accounts and directing the allowances to himself, I know not. Certain it is, that the Secretary of State is the chief agent in making all extraordinary allowances to foreign Ministers.—Mr. Adams was Secretary of State from 1817 to 1825, and his accounts must have been settled after his return home. He at least did not object to the extravagant allowances made to him, some of them for services and journeys not performed, for he pocketed the money.

I have now given you all the information I can collect from the public documents upon the subject of your inquiry. You may rely upon it as accurate in the manner and to the extent I have stated.

I cannot forbear to mention that in this investigation I have met with a key to the feelings which dictated the letter of Mr. Adams to Levitt Harris, in which he pronounces our Government feeble and penurious. Congress had refused to allow him a full outfit of 9000 dollars. In a letter to him from Mr Monroe, then Secretary of State; dated June 23d, 1814, he is informed of this fact in the following words:

"It is necessary to apprize you, that although a full "outfit was transmitted by the Neptune, and intended to "be allowed you by the Executive as a member of the ex"tra mission at St. Petersburg, yet the Legislature, on a "referrence of the subject to them for an appropriation, "decided the principle, by the amount appropriated and "the discussion which took place at the time, that an out"fit only could be allowed to a Minister under circumstan"ces applicable to your case. In your drafts on the "bankers, and in your future accounts, you will be pleas"ed to keep this deduction in view."

But the Minister had the money, and although the Government was almost bankrupt, the army naked and starving, and the enemy relieved from war in Europe, was preparing to carry fire and sword through our country, and did soon after take this city, and burn the public buildings, he had no conception of relinquishing his hold upon the cash he had received. To Mr Monroe's letter he returned an answer dated Ghent, 23d August, 1814, characterized by a tone and temper ill becoming a representative of his country in that day of her greatest want and peril. Among other things of a like character he says:

"I allege, that by an act of the Executive, perfectly "conformable to the constitution and the law, the sum "which I am now required to deduct from my accounts "and my drafts, was my property as much as the dwel"ling house of any member of the legislature was his, "and that the principle which Congress would settle, by "an ultimate refusal to allow the appropriation, could be "no other than a principle, to confiscate, without any "alleged offence not half the outfit of a minister under "circumstances applicable to my case, but so much of "my individual property."

If I had more time I would give the whole letter, from which you would not fail to perceive that Mr. Adams thought more of filling his own pockets at that period, than he did of the wants of his bleeding country.

His famous letter to Levitt Harris is dated Ghent, 16th November, 1814. Among other things not very creditable to his patriotism, he says:

"Divided among ourselves, more in passions than interests with half the nation sold by their prejudices and "their ignorance to our enemy, with a feeble and penurious government, with five frigates for a navy, and "scarcely five efficient regiments for an army, how can "it be expected that we should resist the mass of force "which that gigantic power has collected to crush us at "a blow." You will recollect, Sir, the events of that period. Our treasury was empty and the capital in ruins, while Mr. Adams was grasping at outfits, salaries, travelling expenses and contingencies, without reason or limit, and abusing the Government as penurious, because it would not yield to all his extravagant demands! Mr. Monroe at Washington, and General Jackson at New Orleans, were borrowing on their own credit, and hazarding every dollar they possessed in the world, to save their suffering country. In November 1814, when the letter to Harris was written, General Jackson was driving the British from Florida, and opening his way to New Orleans. On the 1st of December he arrived at that City, and used to the people a language which I beg you to contrast with that of Mr. Adams. He declared "that who is not for us is against us;" he informed those whom he commanded or was to defend, "to remember that our watchword is victory or death: our country must and shall be defended. We will enjoy our liberty, or perish in the last ditch."

Your obedient servant, T. P. MOORE.

NEW YORK.—The exultation of the friends of Mr. Adams at the demise of the great Clinton, which they have expressed in violation of all decorum, good breeding and humane feeling—is not to be taken as an evidence that the friends of that illustrious statesman will ever so far outrage their respect and reverence for his memory, as to prove recreant to the cause of Jackson and the People. This is so remote from truth, that the very contrary effect will be produced. The friends of Clinton now feel an increased desire to prostrate a usurping central power, and elect a candidate of the people, from the people. One of the great, and most laudable objects of Clinton's life, was to restore the right of selection of candidates, and election of Presidents to the people; and to give to the states the full share and weight of their sovereignty. Mr. Clinton's friends were his friends on principle; and notwithstanding his great spirit has fled to higher and purer regions, they still cling to his principles with as much tenacity as they cling to life; and take pride in evincing their veneration for his memory by their unshaken devotion to Andrew Jackson; whose election, and we speak from actual knowledge on this point—was an object nearest the heart of that great and good man. Wherever may exist a friend of De Witt Clinton, he will to the end prove a friend to the election of Jackson, and feel himself bound by all the noblest feelings that can actuate and influence the mind, to exert his utmost power to carry into execution this, the nearest and dearest wish of Clinton's heart:—a heart that never formed an impure wish, and a judgement that never erred in its calculations of proper and competent means by which to secure the public good. The Clintonians of New York, and throughout the Union, will present a solid phalanx in support of the Hero of New Orleans.

Here we will pause a moment to avow a conviction, which the coalition dare not meet in argument, and never could overthrow by reasoning, or sophistry. No man was better—or so well qualified to judge of the competency of a candidate for the Presidential chair, as De Witt Clinton. In his selection and support of Jackson for five years, he pronounced him able and competent for the station! And who shall gainsay the opinion of Clinton?—Philadelphia Mercury.

FROM THE RICHMOND ENQUIRER.

After the recesses of the domestic circle have been violated, and Mrs. Jackson has been rudely attacked and basely calumniated—after forgery and fabrication have been employed to blacken the character of Jackson, we need not be surprised at any thing. Every engine is to be put in requisition to prop the tottering cause of the Administration. The private conversation of distinguished men are to be eagerly caught up, and scattered thro' the nation. Never was an effort, so unblushingly made as it is at this time, for carrying every thing through by the weight of great names. A free people are not to think for themselves—but they are to look to A, B, and C, to think for them.—Mr. Adams' ticket is not to succeed by its own merits, but the credit of his endorsers.—His partisans have shown more zeal than discretion in hunting up names in his behalf. They called up "spirits from the vasty deep; but they came not, when they did call them." They appealed to Jefferson, to Madison, to Monroe, to Crawford for succour—but they appealed in vain—and now they have dragged the private conversations of Mr. Marshall into the public papers. The "Baltimore Marylander" of the 22d ultimo, puts forth the following paragraph:

"We hear that JUDGE MARSHALL, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, a few days since, in conversation with a gentleman, observed, "I have not voted for twenty years; but I shall consider it a solemn duty I owe my country to go to the polls and vote at the next presidential election—for," added he in his impressive manner, "should Jackson be elected, I shall look upon the government as virtually dissolved."

The Coalition prints have pounced upon this paragraph—and among them, one in this City—which has called forth, from the Chief Justice, the following card:

"March 29, 1828.

"Sir: I perceive in your paper of to-day a quotation from the Marylander, of certain expressions ascribed to me respecting the pending election for the Presidency of the United States, which I think it my duty to disavow. Holding the situation I do under the government of the United States, I have thought it right to abstain from any public declarations on the election; and were it otherwise, I should abstain from a conviction that my opinions would have no weight.

I admit having said in private that though I had not voted since the establishment of the general ticket system, and had believed that I never should vote during its continuance, I might probably depart from my resolution in this instance, from the strong sense I felt of the injustice of the charge of corruption against the President & Secretary of State: I never did use the other expression ascribed to me.

I request you to say that you are authorized to declare that the Marylander has been misinformed.

Very respectfully, your obedient J. MARSHAL."
John H. Pleasants, Esq."

As to the "charge of corruption," we know that very different opinions are entertained. Mr. M. does not believe in it. There are many who did not originally believe it—But circumstances have transpired, which have called up the strongest suspicions—and with some, the strongest belief. The negotiation between Messrs. Adams & Webster cannot be denied. If Mr. A. could do the one, would he not stoop to the other? Mr. Clay has not met the accusation in a way to remove suspicion. His pamphlet blinks the charge. His evidence rests upon special pleading, His friend, Mr. Watkins, confines

